T. C. TWEEDY, farmer, P. O. Harts Mill, was born in Shelby County, Ind., 1828, but was raised near Terre Haute. In 1852, learned engineering and followed this business until 1862, when he engaged in the mercantile business, continuing in this until 1874; he sold out and migrated to Kansas, locating in Benton County. At the end of two and one-half years located a claim in Chautauqua County on Section 35, Town 23, Range 11, on the Big Caney River, and at once commenced to improve. The place consists of 160 acres with 100 acres fenced, forty-five acres in cultivation, a good orchard, good buildings, and has been engaged in stock-raising the most of the time since he settled there He was among the early settlers of that part of the county and was forty-five miles from a railroad when he secured his claim, and for the first two years it cost all the produce was worth to get it to market. Served as Justice of the Peace of Harrison Township, during 1876-79 and 1880. In 1850, was married to Miss Elizabeth Propst, of Indiana. They have four children, viz.: F. M., B. A., S. J. and S. C. Mr. T. is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

J. W. WALLACE, farmer, P. O. Cedar Vale, was born in Clay County, Mo., in 1849; when three years of age, his parents settled in Iowa, where they remained until he was seven, thence to Platte County, Mo., and were there two years, going from there to Audrain County, Mo., and remained till 1864, thence to Illinois where he remained until the fall of 1869, when he emigrated to Kansas, locating in Butler County; after remaining there until 1872, he settled in Howard County, and engaged in working on a farm. In 1877, he engaged in farming for himself, and also bought a few cattle and commenced stock-raising. In 1882, he bought a farm on Section 35, Town 33, Range 8, consisting of 160 acres on the Caney River, seventy acres of which are under cultivation, and the entire place is enclosed with fence. He has a good orchard, plenty of timber and water, and has a fine stock farm. He handles about fifty head of cattle per annum, and although he had no money to start with has succeeded much better than many who had plenty of money when they came. Mr. Wallace is a good manager and thoroughly reliable, and has many warm friends. In 1878, he was married to Miss Mary J. Waters, of Harrison Township. They have three children—Mark, Emma and Sadie.

WYANDOTTE COUNTY.

NATURAL FEATURES.

WYANDOTTE county, the smallest in the State, lies mostly between the Kansas and Missouri Rivers, as they approach each other to make a juncture at the city of Wyandotte. With the exception of Shawnee Township, which lies south of the Kaw River, the county is in the general shape of a triangle, bounded west and north by Leavenworth County, northeast by the Missouri, and southeast by the Kansas River. Johnson County lies to the south of Shawnee Township. Wyandotte County contains an area of but 153 square miles. Its surface is undulating and bluffy, being watered by small branches of the great rivers, which form most of its boundary line. Flowing into the Missouri westerly from the mouth of the Kaw, are Jersey Creek, which passes through Wyandotte City; Coal Creek, Marshall Creek, near Pomeroy, and Connor's Creek, Honey Creek and Fifth Island Creek, near Connor's. Running into the Kansas River from the north, and commencing at its mouth are Splitlog's Run, where the old saw-mill was built; Muncie Creek, Mill Creek, Little Turkey Creek, Deep Creek, Mission Creek, Deep Hollow Creek, Necoshecon, a branch of Wolf Creek and named after the Delaware chief, and Wolf Creek itself. Entering from the south are Turkey Creek and Davis Creek. Several spring branches rise in the bluffs of Shawnee Township, and running into the wide bottoms, lose themselves in the sandy soil before reaching the river. The river bottoms along the Kansas average about one mile in width, the bluffs along both rivers rising from 100 to 200 feet above the surface.

The eastern portion of the county was formerly heavily timbered, and cottonwood, hickory, oak, walnut and other varieties still abound to a greater or less extent throughout the county, along the banks of the rivers and streams. The face of the country is divided, according to the last biennial report of the State Board of Agriculture as follows: Bottom land, twenty per cent; upland, eighty per cent; forest (Government survey) twenty-five per cent; prairie, seventy five per cent. The average width of bottoms is from one to two miles. Springs abound throughout the county, and good water is obtained at a depth of from twenty to fifty feet. The soil is of a rich, sandy loam, and especially adapted to fruit-raising, Wyandotte being considered the "banner" section of the State. Garden products are raised also to an enormous extent. The county is also rich in mineral wealth, fine quarries of white magnesian limestone extending for five miles along the Kansas River, and a good blue limestone being found along the Missouri River. Coal has been reached at a depth of 300 feet in the southern part of the county, at Rosedale, the vein now being worked being twenty inches in thickness. For details in regard to the natural and developed wealth of the county, especially as regards its agricultural products, the reader is referred to succeeding pages.

FIRST SETTLEMENTS.

By general consent, Moses Grinter is awarded the priority among the early settlers of Wyandotte County. He located near where the station of Secundine afterward stood, in 1831, and lived there up to the time of his death, which occurred June 12, 1878.

The next white man to stop within the limits of Wyandotte County was Rev. Thomas Johnson, a Methodist minister, who established a mission school among the Delaware Indians, near "the white church."

In April, 1837, Rev. John G. Pratt located upon Section 10, Town 30, Range 23, about sixteen miles west of Wyandotte City, where he still resides. He established a Baptist mission among the Delawares, published several hymn books in their language, and one of his sons married a daughter of Charles Journeycakes, a well-known chief. He is now the oldest settler in the county, and the following account which he gives of the tribe, is therefore of more than usual interest and value:

"That part of the country on the north side of the Kansas River was first settled by the Delawares in 1829. They came from Ohio, and brought with them a knowledge of agriculture, and many of them habits of industry. They opened farms, built houses and cut out roads along the ridges and divides, also erecting a frame church at what is now the village of White Church. The south side of the Kansas River was settled by the Shawnee Indians in 1828. They also afterward came from Ohio, and were about as much advanced in civilization as the Delawares. They had a Methodist mission about three miles from Westport, a long time, it being presided over by Rev. Mr. Johnson; also a Quaker mission about two miles west of that. The population of the Delaware tribe when it first settled in Kansas, was 1,000. It was afterward reduced to 800. This was in consequence of contact with the wilder tribes, who were as hostile to the short-haired Indians as they were to the whites. Still the Delawares would venture out hunting buffalo and beaver, to be inevitably overcome and destroyed. Government finally forbade their leaving the reservation. The effect of this order was soon apparent in the steady increase of the tribe, so that when they removed in 1867, they numbered 1,160. The ruling chiefs from 1829 to 1867, were Ne-con-he-con, Qui-sha-to-wha (Capt. John Ketchum), Nah-ko-mund (Capt. Anderson), Kock-a-to-wha (Sar-cox-ie), Charles Journeycakes, Qua-con-now-ha (James Sacondine or Secundine), Ah-cah-chick (James Connor) and Capt. John Connor."

Capt. John Ketchum, one of the most noted chiefs of the Delawares, died in August, 1857. He lived near White Church on the Lawrence road, and at the time of his death, which occurred at an advanced age, he was almost helpless. His funeral was attended by a large number of Indians, who came in their colored blankets and painted faces, carrying their guns. They were mounted on horseback, and as the procession slowly followed the remains of their chief along the windings of the forest road, they seemed truly the sorrowful survivors of a once powerful race

THE WYANDOT NATION.

The facts which go to make up the early history of Wyandotte County form the singular spectacle of a nation of Indians, brought to a high state of intelligence through the faithful labors of missionaries, joined to their own innate brightness of perception, leading the van of civilization in a community, and first giving to the whites, who succeeded them, the blessings of religious instruction and the privileges of a free education. Descendants of the great Iroquois family, they were driven from their old home in the wars with the Six Nations, more than two centuries ago. After various migrations, the principal one of which was to the shores of Lake Huron after the war of 1812, the majority of those who had remained faithful citizens of the United States occupied the reservation which was granted to them, on the waters of the Upper Sandusky, Ohio. Then commenced the labors of the missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church. First came Rev. John Stewart, a colored minister from Marietta, in 1817. He claims to have had a vision, or a divine call, to teach and preach among the Wyandots. Among the Indians at that time, were some sincere Catholics, who would not accept the Protestant version until William Walker had compared the two and pronounced them the same in effect. In 1819, Dr. Charles Elliott was appointed by the Ohio conference as the first regular missionary of the Wyandots. He commenced reducing their language to writing. From 1820 to the fall of 1828, James B. Finley was Presiding Elder, and John C. Brooks, James Gilruth and Russell Bigelow, the father of Mrs. Lucy B. Armstrong, missionaries. From 1828 to 1832, Mr. Bigelow was Presiding Elder, and Rev. Thomas Thompson missionary and teacher. Mr. Thompson remained three years, Mr. Simms one year, Rev. S. P. Shaw, from 1836 to the fall of 1837, and Rev. S. M. Allen from that time until Rev. James Wheeler assumed the charge, shortly before the Wyandots emigrated to Kansas. Rev. Henry O. Sheldon was Presiding Elder from 1833 to the fall of 1834; J. H. Power, until 1838; Adam Poe, a descendant of the poet, from 1838 to the fall of 1840, and L. B. Gurley, from 1840–42.

The wives of the missionaries were generally women who had a reputation as housekeepers and motherly, refined women the country over, and their influence had much weight in smoothing to a civilized plane the wild habits of the Indians. At first, and within the memory of those now living, the women of the nation rode their steeds in manly fashion, and the nation decked itself in all the flaming colors and fashions of the semi-civilized savage. But within a dozen years, feminine influence and that great civilizing weapon called the needle changed all this, and the Wyandot women were transformed into neat, generally intelligent and often well educated members of society; the men, with the exceptions of course found even in white communities, into industrious workmen, most of them farmers, and some of them noted for their refinement and eloquence, especially in their chosen field of religion; particularly was this true of Manoncue, a hereditary chief. Henry Clay was one in attendance upon the general conference, which met at Baltimore in 1824. After listening to Manoncue, and observing his gestures and general bearing upon the platform, he pronounced him the greatest orator in the United States. His personal appearance was magnificent, and those who were able to understand him, pronounce his eloquence of language equal to his eloquence of bearing.

The reservation of the Wyandots, which was 10x12 miles, was highly improved, an estimate having been made, that previous to their departure for their lands at the junction of the Missouri and Kaw Rivers, in 1843, over $120,000 had been expended upon the Upper Sandusky Reservation. Col. Kirby was appointed a Commissioner to appraise the value of the improvements on the part of the United States, and John Walker on the part of the Wyandot nation. Previous to their departure for the West, the Wyandots had received but $20,000. The treaty by which they sold their lands in the Upper Sandusky district for lands which they understood were awaiting them on the Kansas River was made in 1842. It was found, however, that there was no land in the vicinity in which they desired to locate, which did not belong to some of the tribes which had previously been removed, and the land ceded to them forever. There was a tract in the bottom at the junction of the rivers, but that was reserved for a fort.

The Wyandot nation was originally divided into ten tribes, but soon after their emigration to Wyandotte, two of them became extinct. Those who emigrated from Upper Sandusky in 1843, were 700 strong. They were governed by a council consisting of one head chief and six councilmen. At the time of their coming West, Francis A. Hicks was head chief. Besides the council and the families of the missionaries, there were members of the nation not of full Indian blood, who had much influence and were respected perhaps even more than if they had been lineal descendants of the Wyandots. Of these may be mentioned such men as William Walker, afterward Provisional Governor of Kansas; the Armstrongs—Silas and J. M.; George I. Clark, H. M. Northrup and Mrs. L. B. Armstrong, wife of J. M. When a small boy, Robert A., the father of J. M. Armstrong, was taken temporarily into the family of a man who had no children of his own, and he was stolen by the Indians. He is said to have been a very beautiful boy, and although he was made to run the gantlet, his captors made it a point to put on their lashes very lightly, and he was admitted into full fellowship with the tribe (being adopted) and marrying into a royal family when he had reached the age of eighteen. His wife proved a vixen; the young husband went away in search of his civilized family, and never returned to his "first love." He afterward married Sallie Zane, whose father was English and mother French and Wyandot, and from this union, solemnized in the Christian form, have descended the Armstrongs. George I. Clark and the Walkers were also enough tinctured with Indian blood to be acceptable to the nation, but had so much of the white blood as to be looked up to by the Wyandots more than if they had been lineal descendants.

Mrs. Armstrong, the daughter of Russell Bigelow, the venerable missionary, married J. M. Armstrong, in Mansfield, Ohio, in 1838, and was adopted into the nation. H. M. Northrup, the hardy and enterprising New Yorker who has done so much for Kansas City, married Margaret Clark, the daughter of Thomas Clark, a chief, in 1845, and was also adopted. This, of course, was after the Wyandots had left the Upper Sandusky Reservation. So much for preface.

In May, 1843, Silas Armstrong and George Clark, with their families, and Miss Jane Tilles (now Mrs. William Cook) who had been reared by Mrs. Sarah Armstrong, came to this section to select a reservation for the Wyandots, but more particularly to establish a trading store for the nation. This Mr. Armstrong did, renting a building in Westport. All being in readiness there, two boats having been chartered at Cincinnati, the members of the nation journeyed by team and on horseback to their starting point. Here Matthew Walker selected a reliable band of young men, who, with himself, started for the great West by land, having all the horses in their charge. It had been agreed between the captain and his crew that the first payments of fare should be made at Louisville Falls, the second at St. Louis, and the third at Lexington, Mo. The most of the Wyandots came on the large steamer Nodaway, and all went smoothly until the boat passed Louisville, and the first payment had been made. The boat was nicely furnished, and the voyageurs were well treated up to that point. The Captain seemed then to become possessed with the apprehension that the Wyandots would ruin his furnishings. He, therefore, ripped up the carpets and packed them away, put his patrons on short allowance, and otherwise imposed upon them, and made them uncomfortable. The worst of it, however, is yet to come. On July 31, the second, or large boat, arrived at the intersection of the west line of the State of Missouri with the Missouri River. The small boat arrived on the 28th. The sun was down, and a heavy dew was on the grass. There was only one small house which could be occupied, and the captain was requested to allow his passengers to remain on the boat over night. He replied that he must get to St. Joe that night, and the Wyandots were turned out like sheep by a heartless shepherd. There was only a small spot, which was treeless, and here the men, women and children huddled together over night, Mr. Garrett and his family, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Armstrong, and a few others occupying the house. The horse cavalcade had not yet arrived, nor did it for several weeks. Early in the morning, the boat was still at the landing, the "hands" having spent much of the night in putting down the carpets again, and "putting things to rights." It is little wonder that when the tired and faint and sick band of travelers perceived this additional harsh treatment, the Captain and his boat were privately and publicly anathematized. It so happened, as fate would have it, that the Nodaway was wrecked during the very next year, and it may be that a little gleam of this feeling shot up in the breasts of some of the nation—"outraged justice satisfied." Their camping ground, from the last of July until October, 1843, consisted of the land then owned by the United States, and reserved for a fort, between the west line of the State of Missouri and the Kansas River, the Missouri River being on the north, and the Shawnee Reserve on the south. For their religious meetings, which they faithfully upheld, they selected the first elevation south of the Missouri River. A few of the Wyandots who could afford them, and were fortunate enough to obtain them, such as the Walkers, the Clarks and the Armstrongs, rented houses in the town or neighborhood of Westport. On December 14, 1843, a purchase of 23,040 acres of land was made from the Delawares. This tract included the present site of Wyandotte* City. It consisted of thirty-six sections, lying between the Kansas and Missouri, and the Delawares presented the new-comers with three sections, next to the confluence of these rivers.

J. M. Armstrong, the United States interpreter, of whom mention has previously been made, had, with his family, become the happy occupant of a little log hut sixteen feet square, near the corner of Wawas and Fifth streets, a short distance southeast of the present residence of his widow. The Armstrongs moved into their house December 10, 1843, and then and there occupied the first house ever erected on the present site of the city. One week from that time, Mrs. Catharine Long and her family moved into their cabin on the north side of Jersey Creek. John W. Grayeyes was at this time building a hewed log house on the west side of what is now Third street, which afterward became part of the residence of Joel Walker. Dr. Gray-Eyes built a cabin on the opposite side of the road. Robert Robitaille built and resided on the same side, near the corner of Nebraska avenue and Third street. The United States blacksmith to the Wyandots, Charles Graham, came during that winter and selected a place for the shop and his residence near the northwest corner of the same streets. A company store, in which most of the leading Wyandots had shares, was located between Kansas and Minnesota avenues, west of Third street. It was a long, log building, divided into two departments—the store room and a back room, used in part for a council house. Joel Walker, who had the management of the store, was clerk to the council. On the hill, on Kansas avenue, opposite Dunning's present hall, Henry Jaques, a chief, built his residence, which he afterward sold to the nation for a jail house, and by which a jail was put up. Jaques built his second house where Dunning's hall now stands. From May, 1845, to the spring af 1849, this was occupied as a United States agency. Silas Armstrong built two cabins near the location of McGrew's slaughter house, and resided there until 1846, when he removed them to a location west of Fifth street, near Kansas avenue, and in 1848, built his brick residence, afterward known as the Eldridge House, which burned in the summer of 1864. Francis Driver built on the Kansas River bluffs, near the ferry, and Sanahas, father of John Sanahas, and Charles Splitlogs settled in the same neighborhood. Matthias Splitlogs was with Jaques, and in 1845, married his great niece, Eliza Barnett. William Walker built a double hewed log house on the north side of Jersey Creek, entering one end of it May, 1844. He and a young man from New York who helped him do the work, camped there during the winter of 1843–44, Mr. Walker naming the creek. Just west of Walker's house was the Methodist Episcopal parsonage, completed in July, 1844. The same month the first school was opened in the new building on the east side of Fourth street, between Kansas and Nebraska avenues.

Returning, however, strictly to the winter of 1843–44. As perceived, it was only those of the wealthier Wyandots who built houses. The winter, fortunately, was mild, as many of them, from lack of means, were obliged to live in camps. It was the expectation of the Wyandots, based upon governmental promises, that an appropriation of $100,000 would be granted them during this session of Congress. The chiefs divided the town called Wyandotte into acre lots, upon which they intended to build, their farming lands being out of town. But the remainder of the improvement fund was not paid over then, nor until October, 1846, and they did not even then obtain this sum until after three delegations had gone to Washington to plead their cause. But from the time the Wyandots purchased the Delaware lands, they paid $4,000 annually out of their annuity fund. Thus it came about, because of this scarcity of funds, and doubt as to the future, that the town of Wyandotte did not improve rapidly. Disease was also busy in the midst of the nation. The cause of it—the great flood of 1844—is thus described by V. J. Lane, of the Herald, in an article on the early history of Wyandotte City: "The spring of 1844 was warm and very dry until in May, when it began to rain, and continued for six weeks, rain falling every day. The result was the Kaw River rose so high that what is now Kansas City, Kan., and West Kansas City, Mo., were covered with fourteen feet of water; the Missouri backed up to the mouth of Line Creek; Jersey Creek was backed up to the crossing on the Parallel road. The long, continued rains were succeeded by dry and hot weather, and the overflowed vegetable matter decomposing, caused much sickness among the Wyandots, and by the 1st of November, 100 of them were dead—being-one seventh of the whole number who had come to the county only fifteen months before." The species of sickness which prevailed the most, and made the most havoc in the nation, were chills and fever, and bloody flux. It is stated that there was not a single well person in the nation by the latter part of the fall of 1844. The town of Wyandotte, having these discouragements of poverty and sickness to contend with, could not be expected to grow—neither did it. But while the bulk of the Wyandots were still living in tents, Rev. Esquire Gray-Eyes, "wishing first to have a house for his soul," prevailed upon his people to build a church. This was done, and occupied in April, 1844.

*This town was incorporated with the spelling Wyandott, though the name of the tribe has never had more than one t. Later, the French form of the name, Wyandotte, was adopted for the city and county, and is now in general use by the inhabitants, the press, and other authorities in the State of Kansas and elsewhere.

A parsonage, situated about half a mile from the confluence of the Kansas and Missouri Rivers, was completed soon afterward at a cost of $1,500. It was a two-story frame structure, the first in the county, and was paid for from the proceeds of the Upper Sandusky improvement fund. In July a school building was completed free to all—the first free school in the Territory of Kansas.

Mrs. Armstrong gives the following account of the building of the first church ever erected by the people of Kansas: "At the close of a meeting in January, 1844, Rev. Esq. Gray-Eyes proposed that the brethren should come together soon and cut down trees, hew logs, make puncheons and clapboards and build a church. 'Why,' answered one of them, 'you have no house for yourself.' 'True,' said Gray-Eyes, 'but I want a house for my soul first.' So while they were all busy building their own houses, clearing ground and making rails to enclose their fields preparatory to spring planting, they set apart a day now and then to build the church So faithfully did they labor that they worshiped in it the next April, the preacher standing on one tier of the puncheon floor which was laid, and the congregation sitting on the uncovered sleepers. That was a very pleasant and happy day, never to be forgotten." This first church built by the people themselves in Kansas, was a good hewed-log house, about 30x40 feet, located about three miles from the confluence of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers. It was completed before the return of the missionary Wheeler in May, 1844, and their first quarterly meeting for the year was held in it the first Saturday and Sunday in June, at which time he baptized all infants born to the Wyandots during his absence. A parsonage built about half a mile from the confluence of the said rivers, was nearly completed. This was a two-story frame house costing about $1,500, a part of the proceeds of the mission farm improvements, at Upper Sandusky, Ohio—one result of the labors of the old missionaries, Finley, Gilruth, Bigelow and their successors. The United States Government paid $5,000 for the mission farm improvements, and all but about the $1,500 which this parsonage cost, went into the treasury of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This parsonage was unjustly alienated from the Methodist Episcopal Church by the Wyandot treaty of 1855, George W. Manypenny Commissioner on the part of the United States.

J. M. Armstrong taught the first free school in the Territory, which was opened July 1, 1844. The building was a frame one, with double doors, which but a few years since stood on the east side of Fourth street, between Kansas and Nebraska avenues, Wyandotte City. It was sometimes, but erroneously, called the Council House. J. M. Armstrong contracted to build it, and commenced teaching on the date named. The Council of the nation met in it during vacations, or at night. The expenses of building the school were met out of the fund secured by the Wyandot treaty of March, 1842. The school was managed by directors appointed by the Council, the members of which were elected annually by the people. White children were admitted free. Mr. Armstrong taught until 1845, when he went to Washington as the legal representative of the nation, to prosecute their claims. Rev. Mr. Cramer, of Indiana, succeeded him; then Robert Robitaille, chief of the nation; next Rev. R. Parrott, Indiana; Mrs. Armstrong, December, 1847, to March, 1848; Miss Anna H. Ladd, who came with the Wyandots in 1843, and Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong. She was teaching the school at the time of her husband's death, which occurred at Mansfield, Ohio, while on his way to Washington to prosecute Indian claims, April, 1852. The school was closed in the old building April 16, 1852; resumed in Mrs. Armstrong's dining-room; removed the next winter to the Methodist Episcopal Church, three-quarters of a mile west of her house, and left without a home when that structure was burned by incendiaries, April 8, 1856. That is the correct history of the first free school ever taught in Kansas.

Soon after the first school opened, a schoolhouse was built near M Mudeater's farm, and Mr. Armstrong, Mrs. S. P. Ladd and others taught it

In November, 1845, there occurred an event in the Methodist Episcopal parsonage, which was of importance to the Wyandot Nation in more ways than one—it being no more nor less than the first marriage in the county, between Hiram N. Northrup and Margaret Clark, daughter of Thomas Clark, the Wyandot Chief. He became a trusted member of the nation, acting as their financial agent for many years. In 1858, he was selected to go to Washington and collect $53,000—the balance of the $185,000 still due them from the Government; was not required to give bond or security of any kind; creditably transacted the business, and charged nothing for his services.

The Wyandot nation continued to improve their lands, so that they would be a credit to the most skillful of "white agriculturists." In fact, every missionary who came among them expressed his surprise at their skill in this direction. Matthew Mudeater, James Charloe and George I. Clark were especially distinguished for the energy manifested in making improvements, planting orchards, etc. Silas and John M. Armstrong planted the first fruit trees in March, 1845. Notwithstanding this encouraging feature of their settlement, a serious cause of dissention had been increasing for a number of years, since their departure from Ohio. The conflict between the Pro-slavery and the Free State parties raged in the Wyandot nation six years before it did in the Territory of Kansas. While the Rev. James Wheeler, their beloved missionary, was absent at his new appointment (from the fall of 1843 to the spring of 1844), the Rev. J. C. Berryman, Superintendent of the Shawnee Manual Labor School, and the Rev. E. T. Peery, missionary to the Delaware Indians, talked eloquently against slavery. That they emancipated their own slaves seemed to prove beyond a doubt the sincerity of their eloquence. It was somewhat a surprise to the nation, four years later, after Mr. Peery had become their missionary, to observe him so active in the organization of a "Church South" in their midst—that church, supported by the most pronounced Pro-slavery advocates.

In October, 1846, when the nation received the bulk of the money for the improvements made on their Ohio homes, Mr. Peery proposed that they build a larger and better church. James Big-Tree opposed it, expressing the fear that it would fall into the hands of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Mr. Peery said that the building would belong to the majority, and the majority would go with the Methodist Episcopal Church, should a split occur. The next year a brick church was built; the conference met and continued Mr. Peery in the Wyandot charge, and in October, 1848, the Methodist Episcopal Church South was organized by him. A majority did refuse to join the new organization, and were very bitter in their feelings toward Mr. Peery. Bishop Andrews, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, had preached in the Methodist Episcopal Church building, but Mr. Peery refused to recognize Dr. Still, the Methodist Episcopal Presiding Elder of the District. Rev. James Gurley, of the Ohio Conference, was called to the mission by the Methodist Episcopal Church, but as the building was stoned (supposably with the full consent of the Church South), the building was vacated and services held in a private dwelling. He was finally ordered to leave the Territory by the United States Indian Agent, Dr. Richard Hewett, who was a strong Pro-slavery man. From June until October, 1849, the church held services in a grove, and the hostility between the two churches continued to be the hostility between the Free State and the Pro-slavery parties. A log church was erected about two miles from the brick structure; soon after Rev. T. B. Markham became missionary, in August, 1849, and both churches were burned by incendiaries during the excited times of the spring of 1856.

The following bears so forcibly upon these topics, the extract being from an address by Mrs. Armstrong, at Bismarck Grove, Kan., that it is herewith presented:

> I think that I, of all who are assembled here this morning, have the most reason to be proud. When a discussion was held among the people of the Wyandot nation, during all of one night in 1848, in reference to the stand they should make on the slavery question, George I. Clark said: "Let us hold on in our opposition to the slave power, and in fifty years we will be proud of it." They did hold on, and this morning I am proud of it. The Wyandots brought themselves to the Territory; and as the United States government failed to furnish them lands, they bought land and provisions for themselves, Silas Armstrong being their contractor. There were among them 200 church members, in a population of 700. Where else has been the colony in which there were so large a proportion of church members? They bought the land for their new home in October, 1843, and in April, 1844, they built and occupied their first church, the first church built by the people in the Territory. Brother Speer, in the Kansas City Times of September 7, says that the first Free-State school ever established in the Territory was established in Lawrence, in January, 1855. The first school established in the Territory was at Wyandotte, and my husband, J. M. Armstrong, was contractor for the school house, and taught the first school in it, commencing July 1, 1844. He was a lawyer, but could not practice law then, the Territory not being organized. The school was free—white children in the neighborhood were permitted to attend. The Wyandots were the first in the Territory, except a few of our Baptist brethren, to oppose slavery. In the winter of 1843–44, the Wyandot council enacted a law forbidding the introduction of slaves into their nation. We had our border ruffian war before you had yours. We were mobbed; and after my husband's death, the ruffians would sometimes shoot into my yard and call us Abolitionists. More than three-fourths of the Wyandots were anti-slavery. Those who were Pro-slavery were descendants of Virginians, who had been taken prisoners. The Wyandots sympathized with you in your struggle, and a Wyandot was the messenger that warned Lawrence of the invaders in December, 1855. In May, 1856, when Lawrence was besieged, the border ruffians in our neighborhood were elated and encouraged in their persecution of Free-State people. That day I started to Ohio, and the next day one of them came to my house and asked for that —— Abolitionist. He was answered that I had started to Ohio. Doubting it, he searched the premises, but not finding me, returned to the house, and as he passed out of the door through which he had first entered, he stabbed the wall next the door three times, saying, with an oath, that if that Abolitionist were there, he "would run her through that way." God preserved my life by leading me to start to Ohio the day before.

In 1848, while the conflict between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South, or between slavery and freedom, was the hottest, disorder and especially drunkenness increased to a great extent among the Wyandots. A temperance society was organized as early as the winter of 1844–45, it having its origin substantially in this wise: During December, 1844, a prominent member of the nation moved his household goods over from Westport. There being no bridge, he loaded them onto a flat-boat at Kansas City, and engaged a number of the Wyandots to bring them up the river and land them at Wyandotte. It happened they were under the influence of liquor, and having propelled the boat to the mouth of Turkey Creek, left it there to float away and "dump" overboard all his goods. This misfortune suggested the formation of a temperance organization—the first in the Territory. But although the temperance society was strong and influential, a sterner remedy for the increasing evil was found necessary, and a log jail was accordingly built, in the fall of 1846, across the way from the schoolhouse. True enough, its first occupant, a man, was locked up for being drunk. Afterward, a Wyandot man got hold of a Mormon Bible, and induced another woman to live with him when he already had a wife. For this both he and his "second wife" were locked up together.

In June, 1851, the Wyandot nation held a national convention, composed of all men over eighteen years of age who were the legally qualified voters. The national convention, in turn, elected thirteen delegates, who formed a constitutional convention to revise the laws of the nation. This convention sat several weeks, and the constitution, as drafted by John M. Armstrong, Secretary, was unanimously adopted. Having received his legal education in Ohio, Mr. Armstrong had in his possession the laws of that State, and the principal features of the constitution were drawn from that source. By its provisions the Council was divided into one head chief, four councilmen, two Sheriffs and a Secretary, all the officers being elected by the people. The next important political movement made by the nation was the agitation of a territorial organization. Most of the influential members favored it, especially those whose ancestors were of white blood. This resulted in the final calling of an election for the selection of a delegate to Congress, October 12, 1852. Abelard Guthrie, the candidate, was connected by marriage with a noted chief of the Canadian Wyandots. His wife's mother was a Shawnee, and her uncle the last hereditary chief of the Shawnees. Mr. Guthrie was a man of ability and honesty, and popular both because of his inherent worth and his high family connections. He was, therefore, unanimously elected to the Thirty-second Congress by the following voters: Charles B. Garrett, Isaac Baker, Jose Antonio Pieto, Henry C. Norton, Abelard Guthrie (himself—not following the practice of modest modern politicians and voting for somebody else), Henry C. Long, Cyrus Garrett, Francis Cotter, Edward B. Hand, Francis A. Hicks, Russell Garrett, Samuel Rankin, Nicholas Cotter, Joel W. Garrett, Isaac Long, Thomas Coon-Hawk, James Charloe, William Walker, George I. Clark, Benjamin N. C. Anderson, Matthew R. Walker, Samuel Priestley, Henry Garrett, William Gibson, Priestly Muir, Joel Walker, Isaac Brown, James Long, John Lynch, William Trowbridge, John W. Ladd, Daniel McNeal, Edward Fifer, Peter D. Clark and Henry W. Porter—thirty-five voters in all, who cast their ballots in the order named. Mr. Guthrie went to Washington, but it is not known that he returned the richer except in honor. The next step in the political progress of the Wyandot nation which appears on the face to be quite a stride, but is in reality of not much importance, is the holding of the convention on the spot where Dunning Hall now stands. A few people from Fort Leavenworth, officers and others, thought it would be a good thing to get together at some place where there were the most "heads"—the Wyandots were not yet citizens—and form a provincial government—choose officers who might call elections for deciding upon territorial organizations. Some careless historians speak of "delegates to this convention," but if there were any delegates, no notice was ever given for caucuses to select them. It was really an impromptu gathering, and the Wyandots who were most in favor of becoming citizens of the new Territory were most prominent in its deliberations. William Walker, a chief, was chosen Provisional Governor, and George I. Clark Secretary, and the elections were duly called. The statement often made that Matthew Walker was appointed Probate Judge by this so-called "convention" is a blunder. He became Probate Judge under the "bogus laws."

By the treaty of January 31, 1855, the majority of the Wyandot nation received the rights of citizenship. It was signed by George W. Manypenny, United States Indian Commissioner, and on the part of the nation by Silas Armstrong, George I. Clark, Tan-roo-mee, Matthew Mudeater, John Hicks and Joel Walker.

After the Wyandots obtained their rights of citizenship, the next "important event" which occurred, was the landing of Gen. Calhoun and the Surveyor General's office, on the 10th of September, 1855. It was opened in the double log house, opposite where Dunning's Hall now stands, and was engineered here until the following spring, when it was removed to Leavenworth by Robert Ream, father of Vinnie Ream, the sculptress, Chief Clerk, Samuel Parsons, Chief Clerk of the Indian Department, Edwin T. Vedder, Robert Ream, Jr., and Pennymaker, Clerks. Across the way was Isaac Brown's hotel, subsequently dubbed the "Cat-fish Hotel."

The leading chiefs from the time the Wyandots settled here until they became citizens in 1855 were: Francis A. Hicks, Gau-roome, James Bigtree, James Washington, Sarrahass, the father of John Sarrahass, George Armstrong, John Gibson, John W. Gray-Eyes, Henry Jaques, William Walker, Silas Armstrong, George I. Clark, Matthew Mudeater and James G. Clarke.

The first United States Agent to the Wyandots in Kansas was Maj. Phillips, of Columbus, Ohio; interpreters, John M. Armstrong and George I. Clark. The second United States agent was Dr. Richard M. Hewitt; the third, and last exclusively for the Wyandots, Maj. Moseley. William Walker and Silas Armstrong were interpreters from 1849 to the close of the agency.

As a fitting close to this chapter on the Wyandot Nation, the following interesting information is given of some of the best known members, from notes furnished by D. B. Hadley, of Wyandotte: "The Wyandots were much more advanced in civilization than either the Delawares or Shawnees. They cultivated farms, built houses and barns, planted orchards and opened roads. They owned and worked a ferry over the Kansas River, near its mouth. Several of the more advanced in civilization and learning engaged in mercantile business in Kansas City and Wyandotte. Among these were Joel Walker, Isaiah Walker and Henry Garrett. One of their number, John M. Armstrong, was a lawyer, having studied and practiced in Ohio before coming here. Silas Armstrong, his brother, was more than half white, well educated, intelligent and wealthy. William Walker, among strangers, would be taken for a full white man. He was educated, had been Postmaster in Ohio, and wrote interestingly for newspapers, and frequently delivered lectures of much interest. He was Provisional Governor, and a member of the Territorial Legislature after it was organized. Besides the Indian language, he spoke English and French. A perfect gentleman in bearing, he lived here until 1875, when he died at the home of a friend in Kansas City. Matthew Walker, his brother, lived on his farm in the northern part of Wyandotte City. His brick residence stood upon an eminence north of Jersey Creek, corresponding to Splitlog's Hill, south of Jersey Creek. He died in 1860. Joel Walker, another brother, died in the fall of 1857. George I. Clark lived in Quindaro Township, and died in 1857. Francis Hicks lived about a mile northwest of the mouth of the Kaw, and died in 1855. His father, John Hicks, lived one mile further west, and died in 1852. Half a mile west of John Hicks was Jacob Whitecrow, who lived there until he emigrated to the Indian Territory in 1871. A little southeast of Whitecrow lived Robert Robitaille, who went to the Indian Territory with the tribe. He was at one time County Treasurer. Noah E. Zane lived about seven miles west of the mouth of the Kaw, and was chiefly noted for the excellent fruit which he raised. He died in 1867. Charles B. Garrett lived just north of Jersey Creek, and half a mile west of the Missouri River. He died in 1868. Esquire Gray-Eyes, the unschooled but learned and eloquent exhorter of the Wyandots, lived between George I. Clark's and Francis Hicks. His son John was well educated, and often acted as interpreter, going to the Indian Territory with his tribe. Abelard Guthrie, the delegate to the Thirty-second Congress, was a white man, but married Quindaro Brown, was adopted into the tribe, and lived with her until 1868, when he went to Washington, where he died about the year 1873. Matthew Mudeater lived two miles west of the mouth of the Kaw, and had an excellent orchard. Of the Delaware Indians who still live in the county, may be mentioned Lewis Ketchum, about ten miles west of Wyandotte; Isaac Journeycakes, lived ten miles west of Wyandotte, till he moved to the Indian Territory with his tribe in 1867. He was employed by Gen. Fremont, with twelve others, to pilot the party of explorers over the Rocky Mountains. Being a very warm friend of the 'Pathfinder,' when the war began, he raised a company of thirty Delaware braves, and joined Gen. Fremont. But when his friend was removed, Journeycakes refused to follow his successor, disbanded his troops and went home. From that time, he took no part in the war. He was assassinated in the Indian Territory in 1875. Charles Journeycakes, his brother, lived at the edge of the timber, where the prairie begins, fifteen miles west of Wyandotte. His place was a stage station on the route between Wyandotte and Leavenworth in 1858."

Since the above was written, Mrs. Zelinda Armstrong, one of the mothers of the Wyandot nation, has passed away. She had been ill for a number of months, but her great vitality had sustained her to such a degree that her most intimate friends did not suspect her end to be so near. Much of her early life has already been given in the history of the Indian nation into which, by marriage, she was adopted, and many members of which she so justly admired. The funeral services of the beloved and beautiful woman were held at her house, February 14, 1883, and her remains now rest by the side of her husband in the Wyandot Indian Cemetery in Huron Place. The salient facts in her life history are thus presented in a home print:

> Zelinda M. Hunter was born December 7, 1820, in Fairfield County, Ohio. Her father moved his family to the western part of Crawford County, now Wyandotte County, while she was very young. There she was deprived of the advantages for education, very much to her regret in after life. She was naturally very intelligent, and in her youth exceedingly bright and beautiful. October, 1842, she was married to Silas Armstrong in Little Sandusky, Ohio. They removed to Westport, Mo., in the spring of 1843, where they remained one year, when they came to this city, where she has lived ever since.
>
> A protracted meeting was held in the Methodist Episcopal Church formerly west of the city, on the site of Mrs. Greenrod's present residence, February, 1848. She attended, was converted and joined the church. In October, 1848, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized, and she went with her husband into that organization, in which she remained until her death, with the exception of a few months during the late war, when she and her husband united with the Presbyterian Church. Her mother was a Presbyterian, and an excellent woman.
>
> Her husband was prominent in the Wyandot nation, was elected Head Chief, and went to the great Indian Council at Fort Gibson September, 1865, was prostrated with severe fever there, and, though he recovered so as to get home, never regained his usual health, and died December 14, 1865, leaving her a good property, which she has carefully preserved, though she always provided well for her family and aided some of her step-children, for by her marriage to Mr. Armstrong she took upon herself the care of his five motherless children. She became the mother of seven children, two of whom preceded her to the spirit land.

QUINDARO.

Why one town should live and another die; why one should flourish continually and another's glory fade in a day are problems which often vex the wisest. Back of Quindaro were such men as Ex-Gov. Robinson, Abelard Guthrie, Joel Walker and S. N. Simpson, at first, and it had as a foundation a rocky channel for a permanent harbor and the united efforts of a host of Free-State men. During the reign of terror of 1856, when Kansas City, Leavenworth, Delaware City and Atchison were closed to Free-State men, several fugitives had, at different times, by the assistance of Mr. Guthrie, who owned much of the land in the vicinity, embarked from this point and passed down the river in safety. Probably this fact induced Ex-Gov. Robinson and his friends to select the site of Quindaro. Several localities were examined, but the rocky channel of the river at Quindaro, and the warm support given the project by Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie, finally decided the matter. Principally through the negotiations of Mrs. Guthrie, a Wyandot lady of royal blood, whose father was chief of the Canadian Wyandots, land was purchased by the company from several members of the tribe, and in December, 1856, was surveyed by O. A. Bassett. The town was named Quindaro, in honor of Mrs. Guthrie, whose maiden name was Quindaro Brown. The town officers chosen were: Joel Walker, President; A. Guthrie, Vice President; C. Robinson, Treasurer; S. N. Simpson, Secretary. On January 1, 1857, ground was first broken on the town site, but little building was done until spring. Three or four buildings, however, were erected by April 1, among others the Quindaro House, the second largest hotel in the Territory—four stories, 60x80 feet. It was opened in February, 1857, being the first hotel in the county. In May, a considerable force of men was put to work grading the ground near the wharf and Kansas avenue, the main street running south from the river. The Chin-do-wan made its appearance on the 13th of that month, and in its first issue showed its happy faculty of advertising a new town in the way such business should be done to make an impression. Professional men already were swarming into Quindaro. Real estate and land agents were plenty. There were R. P. Gray, Charles Chadwick, H. J. Bliss, M.

B. Newman, R. M. Ainsworth, and Blood, Bassett & Brackett, Charles Robinson (agent for the Boston Land Trust). Dr. George E. Budington advertised as a physician; F. Johnson and George W. Veale as dealers in general merchandise; William J. McCown and Ed. D. Buck, ditto; H. M. Simpson, O. H. Macauly, J. Grover and S. C. Smith, forwarding and commission merchants; Charles B. Ellis, civil engineer and surveyor; Ireland & M'Corkle, carpenters and joiners; Fred Klaus, who had a quarry a short distance from town, stone cutter and mason; A. C. Strock & Co., drugs and medicines, Dr. J. B. Welborn having an office in the same building; William Shepherd and D. D. Henry, hardware. The largest saw-mill in Kansas, subsequently erected, and started by A. J. Rowell in the fall, was talked of; a large ferry-boat, one of the largest on the Missouri River, and actually put in operation by Capt. Otis Webb in the summer, was building; Messrs. Robinson, Gray, Johnson, Webb and others were rushing around for subscriptions to build the Quindaro, Parkville & Burlington Railroad, to obtain connection with the Hannibal & St. Joe; the Methodist Church was built; Hon. Henry Wilson, who arrived May 24 on the steamer New Lucy, was furnished with rooms at the Quindaro House, and made a little speech to the citizens before he continued on to Lawrence; shares of the town company were going clear out of sight of the $100 from from which they started, and, all in all, the spectacle was presented of a town wild with hope, and riding, apparently, on to success. Everyone was everybody's friend. Gold circulated as freely as water, and in the spring and summer of 1857, few thought it necessary to take security of any kind. The significance of the meaning of the word Quindaro Chin-do-wan, as explained by Messrs. Walden & Babb, its proprietors, seemed about to be gloriously realized. Chin-do-wan is a Wyandot word, meaning leader, and Quindaro appeared to be taking the lead in everything. Quindaro is also a Wyandot word, and, freely translated, signified "In union there is strength"—and certainly all the citizens in Quindaro were pulling together. Quindaro was a temperance town, the lots having been deeded with the stipulation that they should not be occupied by liquor dealers. Some groggeries had crept in, however, by June, 1857, and the women petitioned and the men acted, and cleaned them out on the 17th of that month and year. By July, the ferry-boat, 100 feet long, with a 26-foot beam, was running between Quindaro and Parkville; the road to Lawrence was in prime condition, and Messrs. Robinson & Walker were operating a daily line of stages. The next grand triumph was the completion of the saw-mill in October, which cut 15,000 feet of lumber daily. Building continued; there was no end of public confidence in the grand future of Quindaro. She was a rival of Kansas City, Leavenworth, Atchison and Wyandotte. By June, 1858, she boasted 100 buildings on her town site, many of them of a substantial, metropolitan appearance. The Chin-do-wan kept up its trumpeting, and was taken possession of by V. J. Lane (who had been an energetic Quindaroan since the spring of 1857), G. W. Veale and Alfred Gray. They also published the Kansas Tribune in the fall and winter of 1858–59. The publication was continued for the benefit of the town company until 1861, when it was removed to Olathe. But the glory of Quindaro was already fading, and when the Second Cavalry, under Col. Davis, quartered themselves there at the commencement of the war, and handled the city so roughly, she gave up the ghost and is no more. The half a dozen buildings comprising the station of Quindaro are so desolate that they hardly could be honored with the name of settlement. In 1871–72, the old town site was vacated—first the western and then the eastern portion.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

The first election held in Wyandotte County was that of June, 1857, for a delegate to the Lecompton Constitution. The polls were protected by soldiers, and the votes were deposited in a "candle box," the candle box buried in a wood pile in Lecompton, afterward unearthed, and made infamous in history. In October, the county came into notice again, politically, by the stuffing of a ballot box and other frauds, perpetrated at the Delaware crossing, eight miles west of Wyandotte. It is said that many of the names found on the poll list could also be found, verbatim, in a New York City directory, which some enterprising Pro-slavery man happened to have in his possession at the time. Properly, however, the political history of Wyandotte County commences with its formation by the Legislature which convened in January, 1859. The act was passed and approved by Gov. Medary, on the 29th of that month, to create the county of Wyandotte. Its boundaries included that portion of Leavenworth and Johnson counties, within the following limits: "Commencing at a point in the middle of the channel of the Missouri River, where the north line of the Delaware Reserve intersects the same, running thence west on said reserve line to the line between ranges 22 and 23, south on said range line to the south boundary of Leavenworth County, thence easterly on said boundary to the main channel of the Missouri, thence northwesterly with said main channel to place of beginning."

The first meeting of the commissioners—George Russell and George W. Veale (Mr. Veale acting in place of Alfred Gray)—was held at the Eldridge House, February 25, 1859. George Russell was appointed Chairman, and Myron J. Pratt, acting Secretary. Proceeding to canvass the votes cast at the election for officers held on February 22, certificates of election were ordered to be given to the following: Probate Judge, Jacques W. Johnson; Sheriff, Samuel E. Forsythe; Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, Marshall A. Garrett; Register of Deeds, Vincent J. Lane; County Attorney, William L. McMath; Treasurer, Robert Robetaille; Surveyor, Cyrus L. Gordon; Coroner, George B. Wood; Superintendent of common schools, Jacob H. Welborn. At the next meeting Mr. Gray was present, and it was resolved to lease the room on the corner of Nebraska Avenue and Third street, from S. D. McDonald for the county officers. The County Attorney was then established in a room over the post office. At the meeting held June 15, the salary of the Clerk was fixed at $400, of the Probate Judge at $500, and County Attorney $800. Of course the salaries of the county officials have changed since then. The commissioners declared Barzillar Gray elected to the office of Probate Judge (J. W. Johnson having died,) at their meeting held September 2, 1859.

September 20, Messrs. Russell and Gray resolved that the "County Attorney is hereby instructed to strictly enforce the requirements of the act to restrain dram shops and taverns, and regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, approved February 11, 1859; and he is hereby directed to indict at the next term of the District Court those persons who fail to take out license, and in other respects neglect to comply with the provisions of said law." In October, the taxes levied on the Quindaro Town Company, were remitted upon the petition of Charles Robinson, that said company "did not own any personal property subject to taxation during the year 1858." In April, 1860, William McKay was elected Chairman of the new Board, which consisted of himself, J. E. Bennett and S. E. Forsythe. After talking "jail" for a number of months, in July, 1860, the plan for a jail was adopted, the building to be twenty feet square, two stories, the first story to be divided into five cells, and the upper story into three rooms, approached by an outside stairway, the whole structure to be built of planks laid and spiked together. J. L. Hall was awarded the contract for $2,000. In the meantime claims were being allowed Luther H. Wood for subsisting and guarding prisoners.

RAILROADS, ETC.

As soon as the white settlers commenced to come into the county in any great numbers, they began to lay out roads, establish ferries, build bridges, and, finally, railroads. Among the earliest and best of these roads, was the one from Quindaro to Lawrence, in good order in 1857. During that year a ferry was also established at Quindaro, and one in Wyandotte, by Silas Armstrong, during the next year. The first bridge in the county, was built in 1858, by private subscription. It cost $15,000, and was located three miles above Wyandotte. In 1860, a tornado took out one span, and the balance of the structure soon disappeared. When Quindaro was at the height of its growth, in the summer of 1857, "the Quindaro, Parkville & Burlington railroad," to connect Quindaro with the Hannibal & St. Joe road, was a subject much broached, but the first actual survey of a road in the county, was made from Quindaro to Lawrence, under the charter of the Missouri River & Rocky Mountain railroad. The first actual grading for a road was done at Wyandotte, on the Kansas Valley line, in 1859. James R. Parr, then Mayor of the city, was a prime mover in the enterprise. The grade was about twenty feet higher than the present road-bed of the Kansas Pacific. Before this road was put in operation, in 1863, a number of territorial thoroughfares had been established, under the act approved in February, 1859. In June, one was located from Wyandotte via Quindaro, Leavenworth and Atchison to Elwood, Doniphan County; the Santa Fé road in this county, October, 1859; the road from Quindaro to Salina via Lawrence and Topeka (fifteen miles in Wyandotte County), in August, 1859, etc., etc. During the next summer the Shawnee & Kansas City, or State Line road, was also repaired, straightened and regulated. Besides this activity manifested in obtaining good means of communication with their neighbors, the people of Wyandotte County put their hands in their pockets, as private individuals, and helped along the good work. In 1863, the Kansas Pacific Road was put in operation through the county, along the north bank of the Kaw, and the Missouri Pacific, in 1866, through the eastern and northeastern portions of the county. At the time the Kansas Pacific road was being pushed up the valley of the Kaw, its value was uncertain, as Missouri was then in the embraces of the war, and its strong rebel element prevented much sympathy being felt for the railroad enterprises of Kansas. The line seemed to have no grip, either East or West. Samuel Hallett, the contractor, was assassinated in the streets of Wyandotte, during August, 1864, and the work passed into the hands of St. Louis capitalists shortly before the war. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, and the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf railroads, give the districts of the county lying south of the Kaw, the necessary means of communication. The stations on the Missouri Pacific, in this county, are Connor's, Pomeroy, Nearman, Quindaro and Wyandotte; on the Kansas Pacific division of the Union Pacific, Muncie, Edwardsville, Tiblow and Loring; on the A., T. & S. F., Argentine, Turner, and Kaw Valley; on the Fort Scott road, Rosedale.

In 1867, the fine wooden bridge across the Kaw, two miles above Armstrong, was constructed. An iron bridge, connecting Kansas City and Wyandotte, was constructed, at a cost of $62,000. The street railway connecting the two places was built in 1873.

The first term of court was held in Constitution Hall, June 6, 1859, Joseph Williams, Associate Justice, presiding; James A. Cruise, Clerk; W. L. McMath, Prosecuting Attorney; S. E. Forsythe, Sheriff. The court was held on the second floor—the eastern portion being partitioned off for the Probate Court, and the western for the District. The Legislature of 1859–60 remodeled the Judicial Districts, Wyandotte County being transferred from the Fort Scott to the Leavenworth District. John Petit, Chief Justice, held the May term of court in Wyandotte.

After leaving Constitution Hall, the county officers moved into Byron Judd's building on Minnesota avenue. They changed around several times. At present (September, 1882) a fine two-story brick Court House, to cost $45,000, is being erected on the northwest corner of Minnesota avenue and Seventh street. The site was purchased from H. M. Northrup for $6,000. The county poor farm is situated about twelve miles west of Wyandotte City.

Among some of the best known residents of the county who have held public positions, may be mentioned, B. Gray, Probate Judge in 1860; Byron Judd, County Treasurer in 1863, and Senator in 1872, 1874 and 1876; V. J. Lane, Register of Deeds in 1859 and 1860, Representative to the Legislature in 1867 and 1869; Isaac Walker, Representative in 1865; Thomas J. Barker, Representative in 1866; Isaac B. Sharp, Senator in 1866, and Probate Judge in 1868 and 1870; John T. McKay, Representative in 1869; W. T. Roberts, Representative in 1860; R. E. Cable, present Mayor of the city, Representative in 1870; W. B. Bowman, Probate Judge in 1863 and 1866; M. B. Newman, County Attorney in 1864, and Clerk in 1865; Silas Armstrong, Sheriff in 1867; James A. Cruise, Clerk of the District Court or Register of Deeds for nearly the whole period between 1861 and 1872; R. B. Taylor, Representative in 1873; W. W. Dickinson, Superintendent of Public Instruction in 1872, and Fred. Speck in 1862; George B. Wood, Commissioner in 1869; Robert Robetaille, Treasurer in 1859 and 1860; W. J. Buchan, Representative in 1872 and 1874, and Senator in 1877; N. McAlpine, Treasurer in 1873 and 1876; D. R. Churchill, Probate Judge in 1873 and 1874; H. W. Cook, Representative in 1875 and 1876; W. H. Ryus, Sheriff in 1875, 1876, 1877 and 1878; J. S. Clark, Register of Deeds in 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880 and 1881.

The county officers elected for 1882 were as follows: Probate Judge, Rufus E. Cable; Sheriff, Thomas B. Bowling; Treasurer, William Albright; Register of Deeds, William H. Bridgens; County Clerk, David R. Emmons; Surveyor, Walter Hale; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Daniel B. Hiatt; Superintendent of County Asylum, John Kern; Coroner, Dr. Thomas C. Baird; Attorney, James S. Gibson; Commissioners, James P. Johnson, Hiram Malott and J. William Wahlenmaier.

STATISTICS.

From the latest figures of the Town Assessors, prepared in August, 1882, it is found that the value of all taxable lands in Wyandotte County is $1,861,336, those of Wyandotte City being placed at $115,935, and of Kansas City, Kan., at $402,180; Shawnee Township, $376,783; Wyandotte Township, $414,164; Quindaro Township, $207,595; Prairie Township, $169,994; Delaware Township, $174,685. Of the 91,053 acres of land, 53,074 acres are under cultivation, and 37,979 acres are not. In Wyandotte City the value of town lots is $894,198, in Kansas City, Kan., $185,692; Shawnee Township, $138,945; other townships, $65,855. The personal property throughout the county is valued at $372,473, of which sum $123,578 is accredited to Wyandotte City, $110,148 to Kansas City, Kan., and the balance to the remaining townships. The railroad property is valued at $550,356.69. Total value of all kinds of property, $4,083,855.69, divided as follows: Wyandotte City, $1,143,906.86; Kansas City, Kan., $730,210.06; Shawnee Township, $718,921.14; Wyandotte Township, $659,576.29; Quindaro Township, $337,800.13; Prairie Township, $225,722.47; Delaware Township, $278,018.75. During the season of 1882, 2,384 acres of wheat were harvested in Wyandotte Township, 1,771 in Shawnee, 1,725 in Quindaro, 1,899 in Prairie, and 2,153 in Delaware. Corn was planted: In Wyandotte Township, 3,281 acres; Shawnee Township, 3,065 acres; Quindaro Township, 1,876 acres; Prairie Township, 3,953 acres; Delaware Township, 3,681 acres. In the county, 4,341 acres of oats were harvested, 3,080 acres of Irish potatoes planted in 1882, garden products marketed in 1881 to the value of $58,811, and 86,334 pounds of butter manufactured. There are 2,095 horses in the county, 1,840 milch cows, and 7,398 swine. The value of animals slaughtered was $128,951.

According to the latest returns made in 1882, the population of Wyandotte County is 23,336, distributed as follows: Wyandotte City, 8,677; Kansas City, Kan., 4,390; Shawnee Township, 2,083; Wyandotte Township, 3,627; Quindaro Township, 1,586; Prairie Township, 1,198; Delaware Township, 1,165. In 1860, the population of the county was 2,609; 1870, 10,015; 1880, 21,342; 1882, 23,336.

The county is divided into forty school districts, seventy-five teachers being employed. Of the 24,000 population which the county contains, 8,000 are of school age. It costs about $30,000 to maintain the district school system of Wyandotte County, the value of school property being $130,000.

WYANDOTTE CITY.

The history of the earliest settlement of the town of Wyandotte is identical with that of the early Indian residents of the county, the Wyandot tribe, elsewhere given in full. The present city is located on the site of the Indian village. In the sketch of the Wyandot Indians, the reader has already found mention of the first beginnings of what is now the handsome and prosperous city of Wyandotte.

EARLY HISTORY.

The majority of the Wyandot nation having become citizens, the time was ripe for a union with any white settlers who might make their appearance. They could now transact any business on equal terms, and their opportunity soon arrived. Dr. J. P. Root, still an honored citizen of Wyandotte, and formerly United States Minister to Chili, states that in December, 1856, he and Thomas B. Eldridge came from Lawrence to Wyandotte, on the north side of the Kansas River, for the purpose of selecting a good town site for a company of Eastern friends and capitalists, who were anxious to invest their money to advantage. All but these two remained in Kansas City. Messrs. Root and Eldridge were entertained over night at the house of Silas Armstrong, and in the morning looked over the ground. They found that Isaiah Walker was busy running a variety store and post office, on the north side of Nebraska avenue, between Third and Fourth streets—the same building afterward used as a court house, and now (with piazzas added) occupied as a private dwelling house. Thomas Barker was then salesman; Maj. Overton was a partner of Silas Armstrong. The bottom between Wyandotte and Kansas City was then nearly covered with a heavy growth of timber, except a few small dwellings near the State line and near the mouth of the river. There was also a small opening amid the heavy growth of thickets made, years ago, when the Government thought of locating the Fort at Wyandotte, instead of Leavenworth. The mouth of the Kaw was nearly one-quarter of a mile further east than it is now, owing to the washing away of the Missouri River. Well, the ground was looked over, and the scouts returned to their friends on the Missouri side the next night and made arrangements to form a town company, the members of which were J. P. Root, T. B. Eldridge, S. W. Eldridge, W. Y. Roberts, Thomas H. Swope, Robert Morrow, Daniel Killen, Gaius Jenkins, John McAlpine and James M. Winchell. Messrs. Roberts, McAlpine, Swope and Jenkins were appointed a committee to go to Wyandotte and see what could be done toward inducing certain former members of the nation to join the company. The members of the town organization on the Missouri side waited some days for the committee to report; became uneasy, and came to investigate; discovered that their agents had formed a company with Isaiah Walker, Joel Walker and Silas Armstrong, among the most influential members of the former Wyandot nation, who were owners of the site. There was naturally some high talk between the two town companies, but a compromise was effected, according to Dr. Root, by which there was to be an equal division of profits. To avoid a long explanation, however, it is generally stated that the town company consisted of these four white men and the three Wyandot Indians. In March, 1857, the town site was surveyed by John H. Miller, of Girard, Penn., who, upon his maps makes the following statement: "The present city company is formed of seven original stockholders, three of whom are Wyandots. They purchased the lands forming the town site from the Wyandot owners, who are to receive patents for these lands as soon as they can be issued. The Government Commissioners completed the assignment to these Wyandots on the town site, only in February, 1857." Upon the organization of the town company, Silas Armstrong became President; W. Y. Roberts, Secretary; Isaiah Walker, Treasurer, and John McAlpine, Trustee, to receive conveyances of the lands bought, and on sale of lots, to convey to purchasers. There were about 400 shares, ten lots to the share. Sales began in March, 1857, when the survey had been completed, and brought $500 a share. There were laid out four avenues, each 100 feet wide, running from the Missouri River two miles west through the heart of the city. These were to be the great thoroughfares of commerce. Of public grounds, there were the levee, extending from the northern boundary of the "Ferry Tract" to the northern boundary of the town, and from the front lots to the river. "Oakland Park" was bounded by Washington avenue on the north, Eleventh street on the west, Kansas avenue on the south and Tenth street on the east—650x628 feet. The rush of immigration to the new town was immense, and almost instantaneous. Houses could not be built fast enough to shelter the comers; carpenters readily obtained $5 a day in gold; lumber was in hot demand; saw-mills went up as if by magic. Collins & Rogers built at the foot of the bluffs, north of Judge Walker's; Armstrong & Overton had a mill in Wyandotte City. Strangers from all parts of the country, and some from Europe, were here to invest their money, many of them purely for speculative purposes. Goods were piled up on the levee and people lived in tents until they could get houses erected. Shares of the company sold so rapidly at $500 that they were advanced to $750, when about 200 of them had already been sold. The avenues were graded as far west from the levee as Fourth street; Second, Third and Fourth streets were also graded. After selling a short time at $750, the shares were advanced to $1,000 apiece. The prospect now was that the entire town site would be bought out of the company's hands, and the balance of the shares were accordingly withdrawn from the market. Delay in making conveyances to the swarm of settlers, who almost threatened the very existence of the town company caused much hard feeling and positive threats of violence against the members. But the matter was finally re-adjusted. Roads were now being laid out from Wyandotte in all directions; but the year 1857 may be considered her season of greatest business activity. The bulk of her trade was then transacted on Nebraska and Washington avenues, east of Fourth street. Besides the quite extensive array of business houses, two newspapers were being published, to advertise the town—the Telegraph, by M. W. Delahay, and the Democrat, by Mr. Abbott. The physicians were represented by J. C. Bennett, F. Speck, J. Speck and J. P. Root; the attorneys by Bartlett & Glick, Davis & Post, J. W. Johnson, B. Gray and D. B. Hadley. At this time the population of Wyandotte was about 400, and the inhabitants were wild with enthusiasm, and almost splitting with (not suppressed) laughter at the attempt of Gov. Robinson and his Free State friends to found the town of Quindaro, four miles above. But a short time thereafter their despised rival gave them good reason to fear that their laughter would have to be turned to tears.

On June 8, 1858, B. Gray, A. B. Bartlett, Daniel Killen et al, petitioned G. W. Gardner, then Probate Judge of Leavenworth County, of which Wyandotte was then a portion, for a town government. The request was granted, William McKay, George Russell, Daniel Gillen, Charles W. Glick and William F. Simpson being appointed trustees. It was incorporated under the name and style of "The Inhabitants of the Town of Wyandotte." The trustees held their first meeting, June 12, 1858, all being present, being sworn into office by William L. McMath, Justice of the Peace. William McKay was chosen chairman; Joseph W. H. Watson, Clerk; Charles W. Patterson, Assessor; Walter N. Canfield, Collector; Samuel E. Forsythe, Constable.

The town was created a city January 29, 1859, and the first election held in February, 1859. The population was then 1,259. When Wyandotte became a city, the town was $1,500 in debt, which was assumed by the municipal organization.

The first officers of the city of Wyandotte were James R. Parr, Mayor; Aldermen, W. P. Overton, J. N. White, B. Judd, D. Killen, Isaiah Walker and H. McDowell; Clerk, E. T. Vedder; Assessor, David Kirkbride; Treasurer, J. H. Harris; Attorney, W. L. McMath, Marshal, N. A. Kirk; Engineer, W. Miller; Street Commissioner, H. Burgard. George Russell was Mayor of the city the next two terms, then followed in succession S. A. Cobb (1862), J. M. Funk (1863-64), I. B. Sharp (1865-66), J. McGrew (1867), S. A. Cobb (1868), Byron Judd (1869), J. S. Stockton (1870-71-72), James McGrew (1873), G. B. Wood (1874), C. Hains (1875-76), Fred. Speck (1877-78), J. S. Stockton (1879-80), R. E. Cable (1881-82). The present city officers are: Mayor, R. E. Cable; Clerk, Edward H. Sager; Police Judge, F. B. Anderson; City Attorney, H. McGrew; City Treasurer, Chris. Bernhard; City Engineer, Walter Hale; City Marshal, H. T. Harris. There is also a Board of Education, established in 1877. The city is divided into six wards—two councilmen from each ward.

The indebtedness of the city is $152,679.82. For the quarter ending June 15, the salaries of officers amounted to $1,600.40; work on streets, $1,432.86, and total expenses for maintaining the municipal government, $6,140.49.

The first post office was opened by Thomas J. Barker, in the spring of 1857. He held forth in the old court house building, on Nebraska avenue, where he and Isaiah Walker were keeping store. The Postmaster brought the mail from Kansas City on horseback. William Chick, of the banking firm Northrup (H. M.) & Chick, maintaining the service in that city for the first year, out of his own pocket. The Wyandots were great readers, as a rule, and it was as much to accommodate them, as for any other reason, that the post office in Kansas City was established. In 1863, Mr. Barker was succeeded as Postmaster by R. B. Taylor, who held the office three years. E. T. Vedder, who followed him in 1866, remained but a short time, being succeeded by A. D. Downs, who remained until 1881, when George B. Reichenecker, the present incumbent, was appointed.

In closing this chapter of the early history of Wyandotte, it is interesting to trace the seven members of the town company, generally spoken of as the original members. Isaiah Walker lives in Seneca, Indian Territory; Thomas H. Swope in Kansas City; Joel Walker died at Leavenworth, in the summer of 1857; Gaius Jenkins was shot by Gen. Lane, at Lawrence, in the summer of 1858; Silas Armstrong died in December, 1865, at Wyandotte; John McAlpine was killed by the cars in Pittsburgh, and W. Y. Roberts died in Lawrence, a few years ago.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

The meeting of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention, which took place at Constitutional Hall, Wyandotte, July 5, 1859, is more a State event than one of local interest, and is treated as such in its proper place. Suffice it to say, however, that the present constitution of the State was adopted on the 29th of that month, and, locally treated, the subject will be disposed of, by an extract from an article by William A. Phillips, who thus describes the place of meeting: "The lower floor of the block where it was held, was mostly unoccupied; that block now exists no longer. It suffered from too great economy in brick and mortar; the water from the bluff was permitted to undermine its foundation. Like another building named in Holy Writ, it ultimately fell, and great was the fall thereof. In the second story during the session of the convention was a saloon. In the center of the large, unplastered room, on one side, a bar was hastily improvised. A broad plank resting upon a couple of empty barrels constituted the counter. Behind was a narrow plank or shelf, resting on two other barrels, evidently not empty; at least, a faucet was inserted in each near the base. On the top of each barrel was a small blue keg, each of which had another faucet. Scattered along this shelf were decanters and long-necked, dark-complexioned bottles. On one end of the shelf was an open box of raisins, perched longitudinally, and, with a few boxes of cigars, a piece of cheese, a box of crackers, and a box of plug tobacco, constituted the saloon. A few tumblers and lemons, with a bowl of sugar, lemon squeezer, and a flaring tin cup in which to shake up punches, completed the outfit. The floor was covered with sawdust to avoid annoyance to the solons above, and also to absorb rejected quids of tobacco. The fine arts were represented by a picture of the 'Bird of America' cut from an old hand bill and tacked to the wall. Over all, presided the smiling and genial Boggs. Another flight of stairs carried you into the room where the solons were at work. It was about twenty-five feet wide, and eighty long. It was not plastered, but extended from front to rear of block. There were three windows in front, and three in rear. It was ten feet high. The roof was of composition, called patent. The President's seat was on the south side of the room, near the center, it was on a raised platform; seats, tables and desks were provided by the citizens of Wyandotte for members, clerks and reporters. An official look was procured by tacking on black muslin. There was also a railing, to either keep spectators out, or hold the members in. The 'flag of our country' was draped on the wall, in the rear of the President's chair."

THE WAR.

The space at command will not allow a detailed account of the part taken by citizens of Wyandotte, in the war. Most of her soldiers joined the Kansas First and Second Infantry. In April, 1861, a Rebel flag was raised in Kansas City, and a number of Southern sympathizers in Wyandotte proposed to do the same, but their proposal was met with John A. Dix's spirit, if not his words—the idea was, "Anyone who attempts to raise a Rebel flag, shoot him on the spot." In May, 1861, Capt. W. Y. Roberts organized the Kansas Mounted Riflemen, the members coming from Quindaro and Wyandotte. In May, members of the Second regiment were quartered in Constitutional Hall, the gathering-place, already described, of the Convention. By June, Capts. J. H. Harris and A. C. Davis had raised two volunteer companies, the latter of cavalry. Early that month, the Second Regiment received marching orders, and, accordingly, at about nine o'clock in the morning, marched out to the southern bridge. Luke Havens, the First Lieutenant of Capt. Harris's company, remained behind to swear in nineteen recruits. While they were waiting for him, the four-story building fell, and not a brick was left upon another. Though it took some hours before the men were all dug out, no serious injuries resulted beyond the breaking of a leg by a son of Thomas Ryan. The escape of all was wonderful. The hall was never rebuilt. The building had been undermined by water, and its walls were frail, being only eight inches thick. About this time, also, Capt. Thrasher organized a German artillery company. In August, 1861, came the battle of Wilson's Creek, in which J. W. Dyer was killed, H. H. Sawyer being promoted to his Lieutenancy. The Third Iowa Regiment was attacked near Blue Mills, Clay County, and a hospital was opened here on Washington avenue, to care for the wounded. Major Stone, since Governor of Iowa, was then in command. In October, Capt. Moore organized a cavalry company here for home defense. A. C. Davis raised a regular cavalry troop, assisted by James D. Chestnut; this occurred at Quindaro. When consolidated with Col. Mitchell's command, Dr. J. P. Root, so active in raising the force, was sent as surgeon. Large Union meetings were held all over the county, and by the latter part of the fall, Wyandotte had raised about 300 men—the banner county. The Kansas Second had returned from its conflict with Gen. Price at Lexington, the ferry boat having been seized, and George Scheiner, its pilot, being severely wounded by a cannon ball. William and John H. Miller and Matthias Splitlog, the latter the engineer of the boat, had fared better.

In August, 1862, Gen. Lane commenced recruiting the First Colored Regiment. A large and enthusiastic meeting was held here on the 15th, over which he presided. While the recruiting was going on, he sent a squad of men over to Kansas City, to "make converts." They succeeded in gathering together a number of negroes, and, had their boatman been on time, would have landed them safe in Kansas. As it was, while they were secreted in the bushes, one of their number, making signals to attract the attention of some one in Wyandotte, the whole party were set upon by the Missouri militia, and, though they returned the fire, were taken prisoners. One of their number, who was severely wounded and left for dead, returned to tell the tale at once. Within a few weeks the prisoners, who were confined in the Platte County jail, broke out and returned to Kansas. Capt. J. C. Williams established recruiting headquarters here, and his regiment was mustered in as the Seventy-ninth United States Colored Troops. This was the period of greatest excitement over Quantrell's raids. In September, 1862, he entered Olathe, but Wyandotte escaped. Up to this time, the county had enlisted about 500 men, 100 of this number being composed of the Delawares under Sarcoxie, their chief. The Wyandots enlisted as citizens, and their names appear repeatedly in the roll of honor. For further particulars in regard to the part which the people of Wyandotte County took in the war, the reader is referred to the general State History.

During the war and for several years after, the county was infested with bands of lawless men. The "Red Legs," so called from the style of their leggings (red morocco) were virtually guerrillas, favorable, however to the Union cause, and countenanced by Gen. Lane. But their independent and reckless spirit made them offensive not only to the regular militia, but to citizens at large. Among their noted leaders in this region were Lieut. Col. Hoyt (now dead), and Lieut. Swain (alias "Jeff Davis"), who was one of the party sent by Gen. Lane to bring colored recruits from Missouri. A band under Col. Hoyt was called from Leavenworth, when citizens of this county organized a force to "correct" J. A. Bartels and his son, Theodore, who lived in the "six-mile house." Both forces were armed, but the citizens surrendered, and, it is said, were kept prisoners over night.

Then, also, there was a large gang of "bushwhackers," cattle and horse thieves, robbers and murderers, whose presence was a terror for a number of years. Jim Vaughn, one of Quantrell's band, a noted "bushwhacker, who admitted that he had killed many Union men, was captured in Wyandotte in May, 1863, turned over to the military authorities, and hung in Kansas City. Union men were robbed and assaulted, and some of them driven out of the county. "Jay-hawking" raged. The county was so infested with rascals of all descriptions, that the citizens of Wyandotte finally felt called upon to put it on record that they had no sympathy with such doings; which they accordingly did at a public meeting held August 26, 1862, in the following resolutions:

> WHEREAS, Our duty to our country is paramount to all others; and,
>
> WHEREAS, The best authenticated facts warrant us in the belief that an irresponsible band of armed men crossed the Missouri River from Wyandotte, none of whom were citizens thereof, on the night of the 22d of August inst., for the double purpose of stealing negroes and horses, and to that end did steal a large number of both, and collect them on the bank of the river opposite Wyandotte, with a view to crossing into Kansas through Wyandotte; and,
>
> WHEREAS, They stated that their headquarters were in Wyandotte; * * *
>
> Resolved, That, while we are in favor of using all means in our power for crushing this rebellion, we unqualifiedly condemn kidnapping, negro stealing and horse-stealing; that we regard bushwhacking and jayhawking as the natural products of rebellion, moral deformities, and disorganizing in their tendencies, and producing war, conflagration and destruction."

The close of the war did not end this lawlessness. In the spring of 1866, John Tehan, a section boss on the Missouri Pacific, was hung on the court house steps of Wyandotte for shooting the liveryman J. L. Conklin. Newt Morrison, a noted desperado, was hung in the summer for an aggravating murder, and a few months afterward two negroes were taken from the calaboose and both shot and hung. It is the old story, and to write it in detail would not throw light upon any historical matter—it is the old story, repeated all over the country, especially in the border districts, of the gradual cooling of the passions of the war through a fearful series of criminal acts.

THE CITY OF TO-DAY.

Wyandotte is now a city of 9,000 inhabitants, growing rapidly in importance in social and business life. Its situation at the confluence of the Kansas and Missouri Rivers, makes its natural advantages great as a commercial center. The city has already absorbed Armstrong, one of its former suburbs, in which were situated the extensive shops of the Union Pacific road—Kansas Pacific division—and it seems only a question of time when Kansas City, Kansas, Wyandotte, Armourdale, Argentine and Rosedale will form one grand commercial and manufacturing city. The grading of streets, construction of public and private buildings, and general internal improvement of Wyandotte is progressing in a scale which not only evinces confidence on the part of her citizens, but inspires the feeling in others. A system of water-works and gas-works are about to be inaugurated. Her fire and police departments are already sufficient for present needs. The nucleus of a public library has also been formed. The institution for the blind is located here. She abounds in social organizations, schools and churches, and her press is as a unit in working for her progress. What follows, however, will give the best possible idea of "her institutions."

THE INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND.

Situated upon a commanding eminence and rising from a restful mass of foliage, in the northwestern part of the city, is the State Institution for the education of the blind. The naturally beautiful grove of ten acres, which comprise the grounds, has been tastefully improved, and the number of imposing buildings which have been erected during the last fifteen years, make the scene a stately as well as a beautiful one. What is now the south wing of the main building was erected in 1867, an appropriation of $20,000 having been obtained from the State for the erection of the building and improvement of the grounds. The institution opened September 7, 1868, under the supervision of H. H. Sawyer, and with an attendance of seven. From the first, the aim of the management was to educate pupils, and not to treat them as patients. They were, and are now required to be healthy mentally, morally and physically. In March, 1867, the act was passed by the Legislature to regulate an asylum for the education of the blind, and appointing Dr. Fred. Speck, of Wyandotte, Hon. F. P. Baker, of Topeka, and Gen. William Larimer, of Leavenworth, as a commission to locate the institution. They selected Wyandotte. In March, 1870, Dr. W. W. Updegraff assumed charge, and in 1871, Prof. J. D. Parker. It was during his able administration (in 1872) that the scope of the asylum's usefulness was further enlarged by the establishment of an industrial department—the educational department had been in existence from the first, and the study of music was brought into the course in 1869. In 1872, the Legislature appropriated $3,000 for the erection of a shop, in which the male inmates of the asylum could learn to make brooms, brushes, mattresses, cane seated chairs, etc. It was occupied in the spring of 1873. The hospital building, a substantial three-story brick structure, was erected in 1879. Dr. Speck has always been the physician. The main, or executive building, was erected in 1882, being occupied in June of that year. It is a commodious brick building, three stories and basement, with lofty tower, the schoolroom being in the first story, the chapel in the second and the dormitories in the third, dining-room in the basement. The asylum has accommodations for 125 pupils. Seventy are in attendance.

The faculty consists of five teachers, beside the Superintendent, Hon. George H. Miller. He succeeded Dr. Parker in June, 1875, and under his management the asylum is prospering as never before. Several of the young ladies are anxious to enter the industrial department, heretofore filled by the young men. Their industrial course has been confined to the wielding of the needle, plain and fancy sewing, knitting, etc. But the experiment is soon to be made of putting them in the shop to compete with masculine skill, in the branches named. The male inmates are obliged to pursue both industrial and literary courses, while they remain inmates of the asylum. With the young ladies, it is optional whether they chose the industrial or the musical course. It is thus seen, without going further into details, that the asylum must, as it does, turn out industrious and useful members of society, able, as a rule, to "hold their own" in their struggle with the "worldings" at large, who have all their faculties.

CHURCHES.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—The first organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the vicinity of Wyandotte was that among the Wyandot Indians, who emigrated from Upper Sandusky, Ohio, in the month of July, 1843, accompanied by their missionary, Rev. James Wheeler, of the North Ohio Conference, who was transferred to the Missouri Conference the succeeding October, and continued Missionary to the Wyandots. There were at that time two hundred members in the church, with five classes who spoke the Wyandot language, and one English-speaking class, nine class-leaders, three local preachers and several exhorters. Though the Missionary Wheeler returned to Ohio for his family, and remained there during the winter of 1843 and 1844, yet the regular services of the church were kept up, public services twice on the Sabbath, at which one of the missionaries from the other missions sometimes preached. The classes all met on the Sabbath, but at various times and places, and the general prayer-meeting was held Wednesday night and one of the local preachers preached Friday night. All these services were held in their camps at first. But through the instrumentality of Rev. Squire Gray-Eyes, a log church was built, each man doing his share of the work. It was completed by the time of the return of Mr. Wheeler in May, 1844, and the first quarterly meeting was held in it the 1st of June, 1844, at which all the children born during his absence were baptized. The church was on or near Mr. Kerr's place (near Jacob Whitecrow's farm), west of the present city, but attended by all in this neighborhood. A schoolhouse was built on the east side of Fourth street, between Kansas and Nebraska avenues, and occupied July 1, 1844. Occasional public services were held here, both in English and Wyandot. The English-speaking class met here, and the first Sabbath school was organized in June, 1847. Rev. James Wheeler remained until May, 1846. He was succeeded by the Rev. E. T. Peery, who, though sent by the Methodist Episcopal Church South, kept the records of the church in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1847, a brick church was built about half a mile west of town, and occupied in November of that year. In July, 1848, the official board petitioned the Ohio Conference for a missionary, and the Rev. James Gurley volunteered to come as their missionary. He arrived in November. Previous to his arrival, Rev. Abram Still, M. D., Presiding Elder of the Platte District (which included the Indian missions in this region), came to hold his first quarterly meeting in October, 1848. Dr. Still preached Sabbath morning on the text, "My peace I give unto you," after which Mr. Peery organized the Methodist Episcopal Church South, with forty-one members. There were in the house one hundred and ten members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and sixty-nine refused to go into the new organization. Many of the old members of the church had died since they came to the West, and, at this time, there were but one hundred and sixty remaining. Renewed efforts were made to induce the members of the old church to unite with the new, but the highest number ever obtained was sixty-five, and soon after Mr. Gurley's arrival some of these returned to the old church. But, notwithstanding there was a large majority in the Methodist Episcopal Church, the building was stoned, so as to endanger the house and disturb the services when Mr. Gurley preached in it, and the official board decided to withdraw from it for a time, to a vacant dwelling house. The last week in February, 1849, the United States Indian Agent at Wyandotte expelled Mr. Gurley, at the instance of some members and adherents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, though he had committed no offense against the law, nor caused any of the disturbances. They existed before he came, and continued until 1857. The next Saturday after Mr. Gurley's expulsion, the Presiding Elder, Dr. Still, crossed the Missouri River in a skiff, swimming his horse amidst great blocks of ice, to hold his second quarterly meeting in the old dwelling house. Thirty persons united with the church upon this occasion. As soon as the spring rains were over, the services were held in a grove, and before winter another log church was built near the present Quindaro Cemetery. Rev. Squire Gray-Eyes and J. M. Armstrong were sent to the Missouri Conference at St. Louis (August, 1849) to petition for a missionary. Rev. G. B. Markham was appointed and arrived in a few weeks. He remained two years, being followed by Rev. James Witten, in October, 1851. His wife was in failing health and died January 1, 1852. She was buried near the log church, the first interment in the Quindaro Cemetery. Rev. George W. Robbins was appointed Presiding Elder in October, 1850, and was continued three years. Following Father Witten as missionary, were Rev. M. G. Klepper, M. D., October, 1852; Rev. J. M. Chivington, autumn of 1853; Rev. J. T. Hopkins, P. E.; Rev. J. H. Dennis, fall of 1854; Rev. W. W. Goode, D. D., P. E., and Superintendent of the work in Kansas and Nebraska Territories. He moved his large family from Richmond, Ind., to a small brick house, about two miles from the confluence of the Missouri and Kansas Rivers. Soon after these preachers came, twelve persons returned from the Church South to the old church. One of them was Matthew Mudeater, a Wyandot chief; and the other, Mrs. Hannah Walker, the wife of William Walker, the Provisional Governor of Kansas. She was a white woman. All the white women in the church and Wyandot nation had united with the Church South, except one, and she was rejoiced when an English-speaking class was re-organized, after a lapse of seven years, at Dr. Goode's house. There were present Dr. Goode and family, Rev. J. H. Dennis, lady and daughter, Mrs. Hannah Walker, Lucy B. Armstrong and two of her family, who were then members of the church, and the former missionary, Father Witten, more than the requisite number for a primitive class. The class was continued until Dr. Goode moved into Iowa, in October, 1855, to take charge of the work in Nebraska. Rev. L. B. Dennis succeeded him as Presiding Elder of all of Kansas north of the Kansas River. In the winter of 1855-56, the health of Rev. J. H. Dennis, who was continued missionary, rapidly failed, and near the 1st of May, 1856, he left Wyandotte for his mother's house in Indiana, where he died the following August. His memory is blessed. Before he left, on the night of April 8, 1856, both churches were burned by incendiaries. Rev. William Butt, who had been appointed to the Leavenworth, Delaware and Wyandotte Mission moved here in November, and preached in a schoolhouse near Quindaro. In April, 1857, he was appointed Presiding Elder and Rev. R. P. Duval succeeded him as missionary. Services were held in Lucy B. Armstrong's house from April to the last of December, 1857, when the old frame church, corner of Washington avenue and Fifth street, was completed. The same year a brick church was built at Quindaro. The first quarterly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church after Wyandotte City was settled by white people and the church was re-organized, was held on Mrs. Armstrong's premises, September 1, 1857. The public services of the Sabbath were held on her lawn, under the shade of the trees. There was gathered a vast concourse of people from Wyandotte and Quindaro and the country around. Presiding Elder Butt preached the morning sermon, and Rev. J. M. Walden, local preacher, politician and editor of the Quindaro Chindowan, delivered the afternoon sermon. Now he is D. D. and Methodist Book Agent at Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis. After Mr. Duval, came as missionaries, April, 1858, Rev. H. H. Moore, who remained one year; Rev. G. W. Paddock, two years; Rev. Strange Brooks, March, 1861 (Rev. N. Gaylor, Presiding Elder), one year; Rev. M. D. Genney, March, 1862 (Rev. W. R. Davis, Presiding Elder), one year. The annual conference was held at Wyandotte, Bishop Simpson presiding. Mr. Genney was First Lieutenant in the United [illegible] volunteer service. He attended conference and resigned his Lieutenancy, but it was not accepted. With the exception of about four months, during which time Rev. C. H. Lovejoy had charge, the Wyandotte and Quindaro Mission was without a pastor this year. At the conference held in Lawrence, in March, 1863, Rev. Strange Brooks was appointed Presiding Elder of the district, and Rev. M. M. Haun, missionary. In 1864, Rev. A. N. Mariatt was appointed missionary, remaining about ten months, when a man was appointed who had been transferred to another conference, and therefore did not fill the appointment at Wyandotte. Rev. D. G. Griffith, a young local preacher, did not complete the conference year. In March, 1866, Wyandotte was made a station, Rev. D. D. Dickinson was appointed pastor, and Rev. J. E. Bryan to the Wyandotte and Quindaro Mission, Rev. H. D. Fisher, Presiding Elder. In March, 1867, came Rev. H. G. Murch, and in March, 1870, Rev. S. G. Frampton. The latter remained one year, but failed to keep up the Quindaro and Wyandotte Mission appointments, partly because most of the Indians were about moving to the Indian Territory. These appointments were therefore dropped. Rev. S. P. Jacobs remained two years from March, 1871, during which time a neat parsonage was built. Rev. H. K. Muth was appointed in March, 1873, Rev. William Smith, who succeeded him, remaining two years. The corner-stone of the new church, the foundation of which had been laid on the corner of Kansas avenue and Fifth street, was laid by Rev. William K. Marshall, and the basement was dedicated by Bishop Thomas Bowman in January, 1876. In March, 1876, Mr. Smith was succeeded by Rev. J. Cook. Rev. C. L. Shackelford came during the next March, and remained three years. Rev. E. R. Brown assumed charge in March, 1880. During his second year, the church was completed and dedicated in October, 1881. The present incumbent, Dr. William Stephenson became pastor in March, 1882. The society is now, as it always has been, one of the strongest in the county, numbering 150 members.

Methodist Episcopal Church South.—Of the one hundred and ten members of the original Methodist Episcopal Church organized by the Wyandot Indians in 1843, forty-one joined the southern branch when it was formally organized in this city by the Rev. E. T. Peery, in October, 1848. In 1873, the present brick edifice, corner of Minnesota avenue and Seventh street, was commenced, and fully completed in 1881, at a cost, with parsonage, of $6,500. Since Rev. Mr. Peery's pastorate, the incumbents have been Revs. B. F. Russell, Daniel Dofflemayer, J. T. Peery, Nathan Scarritt, William Barnett, H. H. Craig, D. C. O'Howell, Joseph King, D. S. Heron, E. G. Frazier, G. J. Warren, T. H. Swearingen and J. W. Payne. Mr. Payne has had charge of the church since September, 1880. The average attendance is between sixty and seventy.

St. Paul's Episcopal Parish.—In 1857, Rev. Rodney S. Nash, late of Lexington, Mo., organized the St. Paul's Episcopal Parish, of Wyandotte. This was the pioneer parish of the Territory of Kansas, and was organized under the authority of Rt. Rev. Jackson Kemper, the first missionary bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. Among the original incorporators were Dr. Frederick Speck, Col. W. Y. Roberts, A. C. Davis, W. L. McMath and James Chestnut. On the 9th day of July, 1882, the corner stone for the new church, now building at the intersection of Sixth and Ann streets, was laid, Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Vail, Bishop of the Diocese of Kansas, officiating. The building is to be elegantly constructed in the Gothic style of architecture, being of stone. Fourteen windows for memorial purposes have been reserved in the first story. When completed, it is estimated that the cost of the structure will be in the neighborhood of $7,000. The original building was erected soon after the organization of the parish. The little band which then assembled has been increased to over 200. Rev. John Bennett, present rector, at the ceremonies which occurred upon the laying of the corner stone, spoke as follows in regard to the history of the parish:

"St. Paul's parish was organized by the Rev. Rodney S. Nash in 1857. He came to Wyandotte in May of that year, and shortly afterward organized the parish. During the summer immediately ensuing, he went East and collected money sufficient to build the church and parsonage, the latter of which is still the property of the parish, the old church having been sold in April last. Kansas was in 1857 only a missionary jurisdiction under the care of the Rt. Rev. Jackson Kemper, the first missionary Bishop of the church in America. On July 26, 1859, he issued a call for the purpose of organizing the Territory of Kansas into a diocese, and the primary convention was held in St. Paul's church, Wyandotte, on the 11th and 12th days of August following. Shortly after the organization of the diocese, Bishop Lee, of Iowa, took provisional charge of the same for about four years, until the first Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Thomas Hubbard Vail, D. D., LL. D., who is, by the blessing of God, this day with us, was, in December, 1864, consecrated to the sacred office, and made his first visit to his new field in January, 1865. He made his second visit in the diocese to this parish. Mr. Nash, retained the rectorship of the parish until November, 1862, when he resigned, but again resumed it in May, 1864. Early in April of the following year he again vacated the parish, and the Rev. William H. D. Hatton took charge in June of the same year. Since then, the successive rectors have been the Rev. Messrs. Archibald Beatty, D. D., L. L. Holden, J. G. Jones, Thomas Betts, F. R. Holeman and John Bennett, the present incumbent.

"The parish has passed through many trying vicissitudes and struggles for life. All of its early main-stays have removed from the city, except Dr. Frederick Speck and his family, who are about the only adherents to the interests of the parish now remaining. But a new era has dawned, and during the past year many valuable acquisitions have been made to the twenty families or so of 1880."

The First Congregational Church was organized July 18, 1858, at the Methodist Church North, among the earliest members being the following: W. P. Winner, S. F. Mather, Dr. J. P. Root, Rev. S. D. Storrs, W. F. Downs, D. A. Bartlett, Samuel Crosby, D. C. Collier, J. S. Stockton, Mrs. Mary Walcott, Mrs. Frances E. Root, Mrs. Mary E. Stockton, Mrs. M. Louisa Bartlett, Mrs. Louisa K. Downs, Mrs. M. A. Mather, John Furbish, Mrs. R. B. Taylor, A. D. Downs, E. T. Hovey and wife, Mrs. C. M. Downs, O. S. Bartlett, Jesse Cooper, Mrs. Hester A. Garno (now Mrs. Halford). For six months previous to the organization, Rev. S. D. Storrs, of Quindaro, preached in Wyandotte, doing missionary labor, to an audience of from twenty to thirty persons. He became the first pastor of the church, and was succeeded in 1859 by Rev. R. D. Parker, of Leavenworth, who remained eight years. It was during his administration, in March, 1860, that work was commenced on a new church building, corner of Fifth street and Nebraska avenue. The edifice was completed in July, and dedicated August 1, 1860. The national fast, appointed for September 26, 1861, was observed by this church and congregation, and on that day the Third Iowa Regiment landed here from the battle of Blue Mills, and many of them were at the meeting. On the following evening 250 officers and soldiers held a prayer and conference meeting of intense interest. The ladies of the church administered to the wants of the wounded for many weeks. In 1869, Rev. E. A. Harlow succeeded Mr. Parker. Mr. Harlow remained three years. The church was without a pastor one year, after which Rev. James G. Dougherty was called, and continued in charge three years longer. In the fall of 1875, the present pastor, Rev. R. M. Tunnell, commenced his pastorate. Present number of members, 100.

St. Mary's Catholic Church.—In 1858, Rev. Father Heiman, of Leavenworth, came to Wyandotte and organized St. Mary's Mission, with about thirty members. They first met at the house of John Warren, but during the next year Father Heiman was succeeded by Father Fish, who remained three years, and built a little brick church 25x50 feet, corner of Ninth and Ann streets. Fathers M'Gee and Müller succeeded him, each remaining about a year. From want of support the mission was then abandoned for nearly three years. In 1864, Rev. Anthony Kuhls, present pastor, was sent to Wyandotte on trial. Then but thirty poor Catholic families belonged to the parish. After the war, however, the affairs of the church assumed a more promising aspect. The old church was sold, and in 1866 the structure, corner of Ann and Fifth streets, was erected for $9,000, the site being purchased of Mathias Splitlogs for $800 in gold. Additions have since been made until now the church possesses a fine building, a schoolhouse to accommodate 400 children, a sisters' house, the best parsonage in the diocese, and a hall for society meetings. The whole property is valued at $35,000, upon which there is a debt of only $1,500. The congregation now numbers 150 families, and it is thought that the building of a larger church will be necessary. It is in contemplation to erect a large hospital. To this end, $20,000 has already been promised by an old religious couple and a young man, and ground secured for a site. Connected with St. Mary's Church are sodalities for married men and women, and for young men and young ladies, numbering about 200 members, two insurance unions and two benevolent societies."

In 1872, the settlement ten miles west of Wyandotte, called Delaware, built a church of its own called St. Patrick. In 1880, the eastern portion across the river was taken off, and St. Bridget's Church was built, with a resident pastor in the person of Father Hayden, who has charge, also, of Delaware.

The German Methodist Episcopal Church was organized August 24, 1859, with the following members: Frank Weber, Maria Weber, Louisa Feisel, Maria Feisel, Adelhard Holzbeierlein, Catherine Schatz, Margaret Ortmann, Henry Helm, August Gabriel, Carl Gabriel, Henriette Gabriel, Gottlieb Knœpfer and Margaret Knœpfer. In 1866, the present church edifice, corner of Fifth and Ann streets, was erected at a cost of about $4,000, being dedicated in September of that year by Rev. M. Schnierly. The pastors of the church have been Revs. Gottlieb Widmann, 1858-59; George Schatz, 1859-60; Charles Stuckemann, 1860-62; Jacob Feisel, 1862-64; A. Holzbeierlein, 1864-65; Philipp May, 1865-67; W. Meyer, 1867-68; M. Schnierly, 1868-70; W. Meyer, 1870-71; Jacob Feisel, 1871-72; William Kleinschmidt, 1872-75; J. A. Reitz, 1875-78; J. G. Leist, 1878-81; G. J. Schultz, 1881-82. In 1879, the comfortable brick parsonage adjoining the church was built. The German Methodist Episcopal Church is now in a flourishing condition and constantly growing. It numbers 147 members. The entire value of the church property, including parsonage, is $6,000. In the summer of 1882, an addition to the church building was made, and the structure was completely renovated. The Sunday school, in charge of F. W. Dreyer, has an average attendance of about 105.

First Baptist Church (colored) was organized in 1862, and a frame building on Nebraska avenue erected in 1869. In 1881, the society had grown so large that its trustees purchased the site for a more commodious church structure, corner of Fifth street and Nebraska avenue. The foundation and corner-stone have been laid. The pastors have been Revs. Henry Jennings, William Harris, William Belay, Gabriel Gray, James Lewis and F. D. Ewing. The church has a membership of about 200.

Re-organized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was organized in October, 1877, with seven members—George Hayward, Presiding Elder. William Newton has been in charge of the society from the start. The organization in Wyandotte now numbers sixty members, nearly three-quarters of whom are natives of England. The leading idea of their faith is that the Gospel of Jesus Christ and His agents always has been the same from the beginning. Faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment, are the cardinal principles of their belief. This organization takes Joseph Smith as its guide, repudiating Brigham Young and all polygamists as apostates from the true faith. The church here is arranging to erect a building in which to worship.

Presbyterian Church.—In 1857, a society was organized in Wyandotte, and continued until the close of the war, when it was discontinued. In April, 1881, Rev. Alex. Sterrett located in Wyandotte, and by September had fully organized a church again.

The Congregation of the Disciples of Christ was organized on the Christmas of 1881, through the efforts of Dr. Gentry and Messrs. Johnson, Reeves, Edwards and a number of lady members. Chiefly through Dr. Gentry's untiring exertions a church building has been erected on Barnett street, between Sixth and Seventh. The congregation now numbers forty-five members, and the organization is daily growing in strength and usefulness. Dr. W. D. Gentry and E. B. Reeves are Elders of the church.

The Baptist Church was organized in the spring of 1882. The society has a membership of about sixty. Rev. R. P. Evans, pastor. A church building is about to be erected.

The German Evangelical Church was organized in February, 1882, has now sixty members, and a neat brick building is being erected on Sixth street at a cost of $3,000. The church maintains a German and English day school. Rev. Charles Kraft, pastor.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church was organized by Rev. Felix Landor in May, 1880. Mr. Landor was formerly a slave in Louisiana, and, being owned by a French master, spoke that language. At the close of the war he was converted from the Catholic faith, educated by the Freedmen's Aid Society in New Orleans, and sent to this field in February, 1880. The society has now a comfortable brick church corner of Seventh and Ann streets, its pastor being Rev. B. F. Watson. The church books show a membership of 275, of whom less than half can be called "working" members.

The above are the leading colored church societies in Wyandotte. There is, however, a little society of colored disciples, and two or three minor organizations.

SCHOOLS AND THE PRESS.

The first public school building was erected in 1867 on the corner of Sixth street and Kansas avenue. It was afterward used for colored pupils. A Central School building was erected the same year. In 1881, the city voted $15,000 to build two new ward schoolhouses, one on the site of the old colored school, and the other on Everett street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. In the spring of 1882, $15,000 additional was voted to complete the two buildings mentioned, to build the one in the Fifth Ward and repair the Central School building. In 1872, before what is known as South Wyandotte was annexed to the city, a two-story brick edifice was erected there at a cost of $5,000. Wyandotte has, therefore, five good brick school buildings. It costs $12,000 to maintain her educational system, which is under the supervision of Prof. P. Sherman, Superintendent of Schools. Twenty teachers train the young ideas. The school population of Wyandotte is 3,000, of which a little less than one-half are in attendance upon school.

Among the private educational establishments which are liberally patronized is the Wyandotte Academy, founded by Prof. O. C. Palmer, in September, 1878. By the spring of 1879, the attendance had so increased, that he found it necessary to abandon temporary for permanent quarters. Accordingly, by the end of the following summer, a large two-story brick structure, corner of Ann and Seventh streets, was erected. There are two courses of study, English and classical, the former including, besides the common branches, book-keeping, the science of government, critical study of authors, geometry, zoology, etc. Both sexes are admitted. As evidence that the Wyandotte Academy is appreciated as an educational institution, it may be stated that the enrollment in September, 1882, was about 180, many of whom came from localities outside the city and county.

Says V. J. Lane, of the Wyandotte Herald, in his history of the city press: "In May, 1857, Judge M. W. Delahay began the publication of the Wyandotte City Register. The first number was issued in a tent on the corner of Nebraska avenue and Third street Judge Delahay sold to Eddy & Patton. It finally passed into the hands of Mr. Abbot, who changed its name to the Citizen, and published it but a few months. It was succeeded by the Western Argus, which was printed on the same material, and published by the Western Argus Company, J. E. Bennett, editor, P. Sidney Post, commercial editor. The first number of the Argus was issued March 25, 1858, and it was continued till March 9, 1861, when the material was sold to R. B. Taylor, on which to print the Wyandotte Gazette."

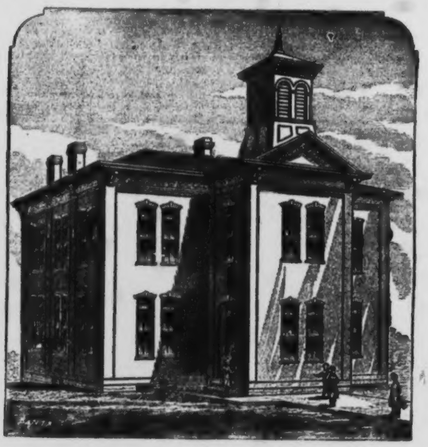
The oldest paper in Wyandotte is the Gazette, established August 7, 1858, by S. D. McDonald, editor and publisher. During the session of the constitutional convention, a daily was issued. Under Mr. McDonald's management, the Gazette continued but one year. In August, 1860, after a suspension of some months, the publication of the paper was recommenced, Messrs. McDonald and R. B. Taylor being associated together. The partnership continued but a few weeks, Mr. Taylor hiring the office, and continuing the publication alone. While he was absent in the East, in January, 1861, the establishment, which was still the property of Mr. McDonald, was destroyed by fire. When Mr. Taylor returned in March, he purchased the outfit of the Western Argus, which paper had been published for three years, and continued to issue the Gazette. After a short interregnum, in the spring of 1867, during which Messrs. Philpott & Brown were only ostensibly proprieters, Mr. Taylor again resumed control of the Gazette, and continued to publish it until October, 1869, when he leased the office to Messrs. Kessler & Tuttle. After two months, Mr. Kessler became sole proprietor, and in July, 1870, Mr. Taylor again came into possession of the establishment, remaining editor and sole proprietor until his death, which occurred March 26, 1877. His son, W. B. Taylor, then conducted the paper until October 1, 1879, when R. B. Armstrong and A. N. Moyer assumed charge. They purchased the office, and the Gazette has since been published under their management. The paper is Republican in politics, and is ably and consistently conducted.



SIXTH STREET SCHOOLHOUSE, WYANDOTTE.

The Wyandotte Herald.—The first number of this widely circulated Democratic journal appeared January 4, 1872, V. J. Lane, its present editor and proprietor, and F. G. Jackson, being its founders. The paper was then, as now, a neatly printed seven-column folio, devoted to the interests, primarily, of Wyandotte and vicinity. The Herald was at first published on the corner of Minnesota avenue and Fifth street. Several changes of location were made until in the fall of 1881 the paper moved into its fine building on the north side of Minnesota avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets. In the meantime, in April, 1880, B. R. Lane, son of V. J. Lane, purchased a one-third interest in the Herald, and is at present one of the proprietors, acting also as foreman of the job department.

SOCIETIES.

The first dispensation granted to a Masonic lodge in Wyandotte was issued by the Grand Lodge of Missouri, in July, 1854, to J. M. Chivington, W. M.; M. R. Walker, S. W., and Cyrus Garrett, J. W. At the first meeting, held August 11, a lodge, under dispensation, was duly organized. In May, 1855, a charter was granted by the same authority, authorizing M. R. Walker, Russell Garrett and Cyrus Garrett to work under the name of Kansas Lodge, No. 153. The Grand Lodge of Kansas was organized December 27, 1855, and on October 20, 1856, a charter was granted to Cyrus Garrett, W. M.; George C. Vanzandt, S. W., and Henry Garrett, J. W., authorizing them to work under the name of Wyandotte Lodge, No. 3 (A., F. & A. M.). Its present membership is 110, and its officers are (August, 1882,) as follows: J. W. McCluire, W. M.; I. C. Wyandotte Council, No. 6 (R. S. & M), was organized in October, 1877. It has now (September, 1882,) a membership of forty, its officers being: Charles Ericsson, T. I. M.; Joseph Welsh, D. M.; T. B. Roberts, P. C. W.; William Priestly, Recorder; W. M. D. Drought, Treasurer; Thomas Newton, C. G.; Charles Deuer, C. C.; Charles Morash, Steward; Samuel Milan, Sentinel.

Mendias Chapter, No. 1, Order of the Eastern Star, was organized as early as July, 1856. It was named in honor of Mrs. Lydia B. Walker, whose Indian name was Mendias.

Ivanhoe Commandery was organized in June, 1882. James Snedden is E. C.; John H. Brown, Prelate; George Jenkins, Generalissimo; John MacKenzie, Captain-General; C. Aechternacht, Secretary; W. B. Dean, Treasurer; J. C. Welsh, S. D.; G. W. Bishop, J. D.; J. K. Proudfit, Warden. Membership, twenty.

Summunduwot Lodge, No. 3, I. O. O. F., was instituted in October, 1857, with six charter members—Silas Armstrong, Sr., J. A. Fligor, J. H. Miller, I. N. White, Joseph Rosenwald and J. W. Garrett. The lodge formerly met in the old Constitution Building, but finished their hall in 1876. Present officers: N. G., James Ferguson; V. G., W. B. Cooper; Secretary, N. Dickey; Treasurer, Perley Pike; D. D. G. M., Fred Speck. Number of members 144.

Wyandotte Encampment, No. 9, was instituted in 1869, with J. C. Welch, Fred. Speck, H. W. Cook, John Bolton, W. B. Bowman, Solomon Balmer and O. K. Servise, as charter members. The encampment numbers sixty-two members, with the following officers: C. P., G. W. Robaugh; H. P., E. F. Blum; S. W., J. M. Squires; J. W., N. Dickey; Scribe, J. A. Nelson; Treasurer, William Richart; D. D. G. P., J. C. Welch.

Teutonia Lodge, No. 68, was instituted January, 1871, by District Deputy J. C. Welch. Present membership sixty-eight, with officers as follows: N. G., George Metz; V. G., Simon Eckhold; Secretary, J. J. Bernhard; Treasurer, P. Kaiser.

Tauromee Lodge, No. 30 (A. O. U. W.), organized January 15, 1880, with twenty-three charter members. Present officers (September, 1882): H. H. Sawyer, P. M. W.; C. Crouthers, M. W., Joseph Phillips, Foreman; T. J. Crekweddin, Overseer; J. E. Zeitz, Financier; J. Hopkins, Recorder; J. M. Squires, Receiver. Membership, seventy-two.

Fellowship Lodge, No. 2, Knights of Pythias, was chartered April 11, 1872. Present officers: P. C., T. G. Roberts; C. C., R. Murphy; V. C., W. L. Skinner; P. J., F. Hall; M. of E., A. R. Ford; M. of F., F. P. Strickland; K. of R. and S., B. E. Riveley; M. of A., F. G. Schulenberg; I. G., J. E. Ball; O. G., S. Warrey; Representative to the Grand Lodge, J. F. Hall. Number of members, 100.

Myrtle Lodge, No. 1, K. of P., was chartered February 5, 1880. Present officers: P. C., John A. Hale; C. C., W. B. Dunlevy; V. C., Charles Hardesty; P., F. C. Aechternacht; M. of E., James Phillips; M. of F., W. J. Stevenson; K. of R. and S., James Gibbons; M. at A., A. Hlatky; I. G., James Gribble; O. G., J. W. Walters; Representative to Grand Lodge, John A. Hale. Number of members, ninety.

Germania Lodge, No. 41, K. of P.; instituted July 9, 1881. Present officers (September, 1882): P. C., A. Gardener; C. C., H. Fieser; V. C., H. Wahlenmaier; P., F. Merstetler.; M. of E., H. Schmidt; M. of F., R. Westphal; K. of R. and S., J. F. A. Miller; M. at A., N. Soeder; I. G., August Luetzow; Representative to the Grand Lodge, F. Merstetler. Number of members, forty.

Wyandotte County Industrial Society was organized in April, 1880, as the Wyandotte County Immigration Society. In March, 1881, the name was changed. The present society still aims to induce immigration to this section, and has also in view the proper exhibition of the industrial products of the county at prominent fairs. At the Bismarck fair of 1880, it took the first premium for the best exhibit of agricultural products in the State. Present officers of the society: C. H. Carpenter, President; M. B. Newman, Secretary; Perley Pike, Treasurer; W. H. Young, Superintendent; J. T. Johnson, A. B. Hovey, I. D. Heath, Auditing Committee. Membership, 100.

Equitable Aid Union.—In March, 1879, the order was incorporated by D. A. Dewey, R. N. Seavor, W. B. Howard, H. S. Ayer and W. H. Muzzy, of Columbus, Penn. They perceived the need of a beneficiary system of a more liberal character than heretofore devised. Its objects are thus briefly stated:

1st. To unite fraternally all white persons of both sexes, socially and physically acceptable, between sixteen and sixty-five years of age.

2d. To give equal benefits to both sexes, striving earnestly to improve the moral and social bearing as well as to inspire pure and unalloyed friendship among all its members.

3d. To give woman all the rights that social equality can bestow, and to grant her all the benefits secured to man by secret organizations.

4th. To give all moral and material aid in its power to members of the order by assisting each other in business, in obtaining employment, and in sickness.

5th To establish a benefit fund from which a sum not to exceed $3,000 shall be paid at the death of a member to whomsoever the member shall designate, or if a legatee be not mentioned, to the heirs-at-law of the deceased.

6th. To see that in sickness fraternal care is at all times given, and to advance the social friendship of the members in every possible manner.

Although the first union in Kansas was organized only about two years ago, there are now twenty-two unions in the State with a membership of 1,200. There are two in Wyandotte. Dr. William D. Gentry is the Supreme President for Missouri and Kansas. The union (No. 179) of which he is a charter member, was instituted November 22, 1881, by Supreme President D. A. Dewey, of Columbus, Penn., with about thirty charter members. It has a present membership (September, 1882) of 124, with the following officers: Caleb Crothers, President; Mrs M. Blood, Vice President; Mrs. A. A. Crothers, Auxiliary; Mrs. E. Kreiser, Chancellor; T. G. Roberts, Advocate; Charles R. Yeomans, Secretary; Edward C. Butler, Accountant; Mrs. Hulda Bartlett, Treasurer; Miss Cora Crothers, Warden; Mrs. Belle Anderson, Sentinel; Perley Pike, Watchman; Dr. W. D. Gentry, Chaplain and Medical Examiner.

There is also a German Union in substantial working order, instituted in 1881, of which Jacob Maegley is President. It is No. 257.

Ancient Order of Foresters.—This is one of the most ancient orders now existing, originating in England during the time of bold Robin Hood. It is an insurance organization, and in cases of sickness its members receive $5 per week and medical attendance. The Wyandotte Court, No. 6,677, was organized in August, 1880. It now numbers sixty members, with the following officers: William Mattfeldt, Chief Ranger; William Maegley, Sub. Chief Ranger; Theodore Lippert, Secretary.

The Youths' Temperance Alliance was organized on the first Sunday in April, 1882. The object of the association is to hold an interesting temperance meeting of the children and young people of the city at one of the churches every Sunday afternoon. Present officers of the Alliance: J. W. Deal, President; Dr. W. D. Gentry, Vice President; Edward C. Butler, Secretary and Treasurer. Nearly 450 persons have signed the constitution and pledge of the Alliance.

Burnside Post, No. 30, G. A. R., was organized September 30, 1881; has now about seventy members, with officers as follows: W. H. Hurry, P. C.; George B. Reicheneker, Sr., V. P. C.; William Matfeldt, J. V. P. C.; Perley Pike, Chaplain; J. S. Clark, Adjutant.

The Wyandotte Rifles were re-organized September 4, 1882, with the following officers: Captain, J. P. Northrup; First Lieutentant, H. K. Proudfit; Second Lieutenant, E. F. Servis; First Sergeant, E. Walker; Second Sergeant, H. I. Parr; Third Sergeant, Charles Stone. Membership, fifty.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (Division 81), was organized in 1874. Present officers (September, 1882): L. W. Parr, C. E.; Charles Hilton, F. E.; Robert Murphy, S. E.; Charles Ericsson, F. A. E.; Robert C. Murphy, S. A.; John Robison, T. E. The membership is about sixty.

BUSINESS AND MANUFACTURING.

Wyandotte is now experiencing a decided growth, and business of all kinds is on the increase. Its retail trade is brisk, and an exhibit of these lines of trade will be found elsewhere. The city has, to some extent, developed the manufacturing interests, having already extensive railroad shops, three good flour mills, canning works, a planing mill, carriage and wagon works, several brick yards, etc., etc., in successful operation. Jacob Maegley has erected a brick building for a foundry, which will also soon be added to the list of manufactories. Notwithstanding Kansas City enterprise and "push," Wyandotte has a large territory to the west which is hers and which is continually growing.

The first manufactory established in the city or county was the grist and saw mill built by Matthias Splitlogs, the Indian, in 1852. It would be considered a sorry affair in these days, and stood near the present site of St. Aloysius Academy. In 1858, John McAlpine and James Washington erected the first steam flour and saw mill in the county, on the present site of the Kansas Valley Mills.

The old Kansas Valley Mills were rebuilt in 1879, having come into possession of Charles Lovelace and W. T. Allsup, the previous year. The old saw mill erected by McAlpine & Washington in 1858, is used for storage purposes. The Kansas Valley Mills have three run of stone, and a double set of rollers; size of building, 35x40 feet, four stories. Its patent brand is "Roller Mills," Messrs. Lovelace & Co. obtaining the first rolls in the county. The value of the property is $15,000. In August, 1882, Mr. Allsup retired from the firm, which became C. Lovelace & Son.

The Riverside Flouring Mills were built in 1877 by Messrs. Zeitz & Moeler. The present proprietors, J. P. & B. J. Northrup, came into possession in May, 1882. Their building is 60x60 feet, has three run of stone, and their best brand of flour is the "Brilliant."

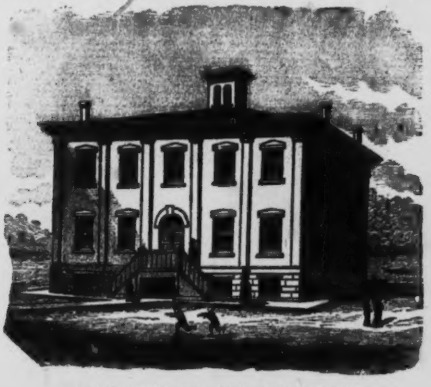
On June 1, 1882, A. Staman took charge of the City Mills, which had been built ten years ago. The building is 40x40, three stories and attic, and has four run of stone. "Cyclone" is the patent brand. The property is valued at $12,000.

Union Pacific Shops.—In the southern portion of the city, in that locality formerly known as Armstrong, are situated the car shops of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific road. The repairing material for the 1,100 miles of road comprising the division, is furnished by these shops, which also repair all of the rolling stock, and manufacture much of it. An idea of the business transacted may be obtained from the figures furnished by S. W. Meyer, chief clerk of the motive-power department, in September, 1882: Number of men employed, 370; monthly pay roll, $18,000; entire pay roll of the motive-power department of the road, $50,000 monthly, most of this amount being disbursed at this point. James MacKenzie is division master mechanic of motive-power and car department; T. B. Roberts, general foreman of the car department; J. C. Boddington, foreman of the machine department. From September, 1881, to September, 1882, the expense of operating the motive-power department at Wyandotte, was $1,270,000, of which $650,000 was for labor, and $620,000 for material.

These figures indicate in a general way, the extent of the business which operates to the advantage of the city through these shops. A visit to them bears out preconceived ideas of magnitude. They cover fifty of the 220 acres owned by the railroad company, the dimensions of the buildings being: locomotive erecting shop, 112x120 feet; machine shop, 44x132 feet blacksmith shop, 44x132, with addition 40x60 feet; boiler shop, 32x120 feet; tin shop and brass foundry, 25x75 feet; car machine shop, 80x120 feet; coach shop, 70x250 feet; paint shop, 75x100 feet; brick round house, 64x102 feet, with ten stalls, and wooden engine house, 63x144 feet, with eight stalls, besides turn table, store room, facilities for storing coal, and offices of Superintendent of Machinery, and Master Mechanic. The shops "made" Armstrong, being located there in 1870. As stated, they now form a very important item in the business activity of Wyandotte, that vicinity being a scene of life and humming and rattling industry which it is encouraging to contemplate.

The planing mill and sash, door and blind factory of Ryus (W. H.) & Judd (Byron), was built in 1881, being situated on the corner of Fifth street and Washington avenue. They employ on an average fifteen men, and transact an annual business of $10,000.

In July, 1882, R. T. Bowne, of Kansas City, erected buildings and established the canning works which are now identified with the industries of Wyandotte. The works have a capacity of 5,000 cans daily. This year only apples and tomatoes have been canned, next year attention will be given also to beans and peas. Mr. Bowne will make his own cans, and raise the products of his manufacture.



CENTRAL SCHOOLHOUSE, WYANDOTTE.

Banks.—The rushing times of 1857 necessitated the establishment of better financial facilities; consequently, A. C. Davis and P. Sidney Post opened a bank on Kansas avenue, just west of Commercial alley, and Byron Judd and William McKay opened a bank and real estate office in the building adjoining the Augusta House.

H. M. Northrup, who sold the first bill of goods (wholesale) in Kansas City, and who, in 1857, in connection with J. S. Chick, established the first bank west of Lexington, and south of the Missouri River, in 1874, founded the present bank in Wyandotte. His son, M. C., also was a partner. In 1878, A. B. Northrup became a member of the firm. This is the only banking establishment in Wyandotte, the deposits averaging $200,000. The firm have just erected a fine brick building on the southwest corner of Minnesota avenue and Fifth street, which they will soon occupy.

Hotels.—In the fall of 1855, Gen. Calhoun brought his surveyor's office to Wyandotte, and opened it in a double log building, opposite where Dunning Hall now stands. On the site of Dunning Hall was another double log hut, an Indian hotel, kept by Isaac W. Brown. The winter of 1856–57 was so very severe that the ice formed to a great thickness, and when the melting weather came, gorged itself in great masses at the confluence of the Kansas and Missouri Rivers. The cat-fish were literally cast out upon the shore in tons. They were cheap food, and the proprietor of this first hotel in Wyandotte took such undue advantage of the fact, that his guests dubbed the house "The Cat-fish Hotel." Thomas J. Barker was then chief cook. Robert Ream, the father of "Vinnie Ream," the famous sculptress, Chief Clerk of the Surveyor's office, kept a hotel which was opened in Silas Armstrong's brick residence in 1857, by Thomas B. Eldridge. Here the stages started for the West. Mr. Ream soon afterward went to Leavenworth, where he became landlord of the old Shawnee House, and in which city he lived many years. Afterward he went to reside in Washington, where his talented daughter had become so famous. Also, to accommodate the large immigration which came to Wyandotte, Col. F. A. Hunt purchased the old steamboat "St. Paul," lying at the foot of Washington avenue, took out her machinery and fitted the craft up as a hotel and a warehouse. Mark W. Delahay—now "Judge"—was the active landlord. Shortly afterward the Garno House was completed by Mrs. Hester A. Garno, and became popular with travelers. The building still stands on the northwest corner of Minnesota avenue and Third street, is a large wooden structure (three stories and basement) has thirty-one rooms, and is kept by D. Maxfield.

The Ryus Hotel, the leading public house of Wyandotte, and one of the neatest and most agreeably maintained in the State, is situated on Minnesota avenue, within easy distance of the depot, and in the center of the business district. It is a new three-story brick building, substantial in appearance without, and tastefully furnished within. The Ryus Hotel was opened June 6, 1882, having been completed by its proprietor, W. H. Ryus, at a cost of $32,000. The building is 100x123 feet, and has comfortable accommodations for seventy-five guests. Dr. P. Eager is the popular manager. Thus has been supplied a long-felt want. Mr. Ryus is an old settler of the county, and one of its most enterprising and keen business men, and in erecting and maintaining a first-class hotel, he has shown his confidence in the continued growth and prosperity of the city.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

HON. HENRY L. ALDEN, County Attorney, was elected to his present position in the fall of 1882. He was born in Hampshire County, Mass., May 8, 1847, receiving his early schooling in his native county. In 1864, he entered Munson Academy at Munson, Mass., remaining one year. He then became connected with the Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, N. H., where he continued two years. After spending one year in Pennsylvania, where he had charge of a school, he removed to Kansas, settling in Wyandotte, where he took the position of Principal of the public school, retaining this position one year. He then commenced reading law, in the office of Hon. S. A. Cobb. Was admitted to the bar at the spring term of 1870, and immediately began practice. He was in partnership with his old preceptor until the latter's death in 1878. He served as City Clerk in 1870 and 1871. Was elected County Attorney in 1872, and re-elected in 1874. In 1876, he was elected to the Legislature, where he served on several committees, being Chairman of the Committee on Municipal Corporations. Has since been engaged in private practice, until elected to his present position. He was married in Wyandotte in 1870, to Miss Mary F. Cruise, sister of J. A. Cruise, Esq., one of the pioneers of 1855. They have three children—Cora F., Maurice C. and Francis E. Mr. Alden is a member of the K. of P.

F. C. AECHTERNACHT, dealer in fancy, foreign and domestic groceries and fruits, opened trade March 10, 1883. He occupies a room 25x50 feet, and carries an average stock of $2,000. G. H. He engaged on the Kansas Pacific Railroad as freight brakeman, and was promoted as freight conductor, which position he held for some time. He afterward was employed as freight brakeman on the Missouri Pacific Railway, and by close attention to business and good moral habits soon rose to a conductor's position on freight train, and by paying strict attention to the company's business, he was honored with the position of conductor of a passenger train, which he held for five years. He then engaged in his present occupation. He was born in Pottsville, Penn., January 28, 1848. At a suitable age, he clerked in an office until he came West. His father is a wholesale coal dealer in New York City. He was married in 1874, to Miss M. V. Glick, daughter of Hon. C. S. Glick, and niece of Gov. Glick, of Kansas. They have one daughter—Etta May. Mr. A. is a member of Blue Lodge, A., F. & A. M., Royal Arch Masons, Knight Templars, Knights of Pythias, and a member of the order of Railway Conductors of the United States and Canada.

BAKER & CO., proprietors Comet Soap Works. The business was established in February, 1883. They have a capacity of 30,000 pounds of soap per week at present; are only making the Comet brand, their principle business being the manufacture of private brands for dealers. C. K. Baker, Jr., the senior member of the firm, was born in Carroll County, Mo., September 7, 1861; he was educated in his native county, and has engaged in steamboating up to the present time, his father being in the profession. Mr. Baker, senior, is well known to the early settlers in Kansas, having run on the Missouri River as Pilot and Captain for many years, commencing in 1845. He run the "Excel" up the Kansas River to Fort Riley, being the first steamer on that river. T. Lueallen, of the above firm, was born in Eastern Tennessee, in May, 1852. He commenced in the soap business in St. Louis, Mo., in 1868; afterward continued in the same business some ten years in Sedalia, Mo., where his establishment was destroyed by fire in 1882.

W. H. BALDRIDGE, proprietor of Wyandotte Pharmacy, dealer in drugs, fancy goods, paints, oils, glass, etc. The business was established in 1879, and was purchased by present proprietor in 1881. He employs two clerks, and occupies first floor and basement of a building 25x100 feet in area. Mr. Baldridge was born in Louisa County, Iowa, April 29, 1850. He commenced his business life as a clerk in Mount Pleasant, Iowa, in a drug store, about 1864. In 1868, he commenced business on his own account, in which he continued for two years. In 1871, he removed to Kansas, locating in Wyandotte, where he became connected with the Kansas Pacific Railroad. Three years later, he took a position on the Texas Pacific Railway. About 1877, he opened a drug store in Fort Worth, Tex., which he continued to operate until 1880. He then returned to Wyandotte. He was married in Wyandotte, Kan., in 1875, to Miss Fannie, daughter of I. N. White, Esq., one of the pioneers of 1854. They have four children—Charles, John L., Frank G. and Nellie M. Mr. Baldridge is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge and Encampment.

O. S. BARTLETT, undertaker and dealer in all kinds of undertaker's materials. He keeps a full line of wooden and metallic coffins, and has two hearses and two carriages with his own horses, etc. The business was established in 1872, being the first exclusive dealer in Wyandotte in his line. Mr. B. was born near Watertown, Jefferson County, N. Y., in 1822. He was educated in his native county, and learned the trade of a carpenter, following it in New York State, and also in Wisconsin, where he removed about 1855. In 1857, he settled in Wyandotte, Kan., where he engaged in contracting and building until 1863, when he enlisted as private in Company A, Twelfth Kansas Volunteer Infantry; afterward received a recruiting commission to raise a company of colored troops. He was mustered in as First Lieutenant of the Eighty-third Regiment United States Colored Troops. The Captain being killed at the battle of Jenkin's Ferry in 1864, he was commissioned Captain of Company H., and served until the close of the war. He then returned to Wyandotte and engaged in railroading until poor health compelled him to change his business. Mr. B. was married in Watertown, N. Y., in 1846, to Miss Nancy Tuttle, who died leaving two children—Ella, now Mrs. J. Furness and Frank. He was married to his present wife in Wyandotte in 1871. She was Miss Julia E. Foster of Chautauqua County, N. Y. Mr B. was a member of the City Council at an early day. He is now a member of the G. A. R. and the E. A. U.

HON G. W. BETTS, Police Judge, was elected to present position in the spring of 1883. He was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, April 8, 1840. He was educated in the ward and high schools of his native place. Having the misfortune to lose his father when about eight years old, he was early thrown upon his own resources. At the age of fifteen years, commenced dealing in cattle, in which he continued until 1868, when he moved to Kansas and settled in Edwardsville, where he bought a farm which he operated for some time; then engaged in mercantile business in Edwardsville. In 1870, he commenced reading law in the office of Crook & Sharp in Kansas City, Mo.; was admitted to the bar in the spring of 1873; was shortly afterward appointed Clerk of the District Court to fill vacancy, and re-elected five consecutive terms. He was married in Chillicothe, Ohio, to Miss R. J. Timmins of that city, a daughter of Rev. Stephen Timmins, a member of the Ohio Conference fifty-four years, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have two children—Charles and Blanch. Judge Betts is a member of the A., F. & A. M. and K. of P.

ROBERT T. BOWNE, proprietor of the Occidental Canning Works. The business was established in 1882, some 125 hands being employed that season. He is at present making extensive improvements, both in buildings and machinery; in the latter, having two Jones can machines with a capacity of finishing 5,000 cans per day. Mr. Bowne was born in New Rochelle, Westchester County, N. Y, March 29, 1836. He was educated in his native county, in New York City and Virginia, and moved with the family to Harford County, Md., about 1856, where he continued to reside until very recently, being engaged in farming principally, though interested to a certain extent in canning mills there until coming to Kansas in 1881, where he was engaged during the summer in building houses for renting purposes.

DR. A. W. BOUCHER, physician and surgeon, was born in Seneca County, Ohio, May 10, 1850. He was educated in the district and high schools of his native county. In 1870, he commenced his professional studies in the office of Dr. J. A. Royer, of Carey, Ohio. Graduated from Miami Medical College in 1873, and shortly afterward commenced practice in Wyandotte County, Ohio, where he remained about four years; then moved to Seneca County, Ohio. Two years later, 1880, he settled in Wyandotte City, Kan., where he has since been engaged in practice. Mr. Boucher was married, in Wyandotte County, Ohio, March 28, 1872, to Miss Vincie Bryan, of Carey, Ohio. They have one son—Charles Franklin.

ROBERT N. CAMPBELL, attorney at law, was born in Welland County, Province of Ontario, Canada, November 6, 1856. Was educated in his native county, and at Toronto University. Commenced reading law in 1878, in the office of Harkist & Cowper, at Welland. In 1880, he entered the law department of Ann Arbor University, graduating in 1882. The same spring was admitted to the bar, and shortly afterward settled in Wyandotte, Kan., and at once commenced the practice of his profession.

A. W. CARROLL, contractor and builder, came to Topeka, Kan., in May, 1879. He soon went to Osawatomie, and became foreman in building the insane asylum, continuing two years. In July, 1881, he went to Wyandotte, and established the above business. He soon became foreman in the building of the blind asylum, and continued in that capacity until April, 1882. He then began business on his own account. He erected the Hoag & Troup block, 25x90 feet, two stories high, built of brick; Colored Baptist Church, a dwelling corner Sixth and Oakland avenues, Dr. Freeland's dwelling, and is now erecting the Judge's stand in the new court house, also the Morris block. He employs from seven to twelve men. Was born in Butler County, Ohio, August 1, 1837, living there until he came West. Was married, in 1861, to Miss Sallie Heel, of Butler County, Ohio. They have three children—Jennie L., Nellie H. and Lynus B. Mr. Carroll enlisted April 25, 1861, in Company C, Twenty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Soon received a commission as Captain of Company F, One Hundred and Sixty-first Regiment Ohio National Guard. He participated in the battle of Scarey Creek. Was mustered out August 12, 1861. Is a member of Burnside Post, No. 28, G. A. R., and Post Adjutant of same. He is a mustering officer for the Sons of Veterans, ranking as Brevet Major. He is a member of the Board of Education.

CHANNON & WILSON, proprietors Missouri Valley Mills. The mills passed into present proprietorship in March, 1883. The main building is 40x50 feet in area, with an engine house in addition. Three run of stone and two sets of rolls give them a capacity of about eighty barrels in twenty-four hours, the product being mostly shipped to Iowa and Texas. They use winter wheat entirely, the leading brands being "Roller Mills Patent" and "Gold Drop." J. W. Wilson, of above firm, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, September 13, 1834. About 1854, the family moved to Springfield and Dayton, Ohio, where Mr. Wilson, Sr., operated flour mills, J. W. learning the business under him, and afterward following it in Indianapolis, Ind., Providence, R. I., and Warsaw, Ind. In 1878, he moved to Kansas, locating a short time in Sterling, then moving to Ellingwood, Barton County, where he engaged in milling, in company with a Mr. Hall. About 1880, moved to Wyandotte, and formed a partnership with Mr. Lovelace, they being succeeded by present firm. Mr. Wilson was married, in Marion County, Ind., February 15, 1860, to Miss Martha Johnson, of Zionville. They have three children—Horatio H., Walter B. and Joseph P.

PHILO M. CLARK, manufacturer and dealer in soda water, cider, ginger ale, etc. Business established in 1880, by the present proprietor. The works are now producing daily some 300 dozen bottles of all kinds, four wagons being constantly employed in distributing. Mr. Clark was born in Northampton, Mass., August 9, 1835. His parents moved to Wisconsin while he was still an infant. In his early days, he learned telegraphing, and opened an office in Waukegan. In 1857, he moved West, and settled in Kansas City. During the Wyandotte Convention he operated the telegraph wire—the first in the city. In 1859, he engaged in the manufacture of soda water, in Memphis, Tenn., and two years later settled in Louisville, Ky. He had in operation six factories at different places. After the fall of Vicksburg, engaged in the same business in that city. In 1865, returned North, and after locating in Cincinnati for a short time, moved to Oil City, Penn., making this place his headquarters, and operating some half dozen factories in adjoining towns. In 1869, he sold out his manufacturing interests, and engaged in real estate business in Oil City, laying out and selling two additions to the city, building an inclined railway, and making other extensive improvements. The panic of 1873 placed him where he had commenced, and the following year he moved to Kansas City, Mo., engaging in the manufacture of soda water and other occupations until he established his present business.

CLARKE & FORSTER, proprietors Washington Foundry and Machine Works, manufacturers of steam engines, railroad castings, machinery, ornamental iron and brass work; business established in the spring of 1883. The main building is of brick 20x40 feet in area, two stories high, the lower portion being devoted to the machine shop, the upper to a pattern room. The foundry is also of brick, 40x50 feet in area. The brass foundry is detached, being 25x30 feet in area. James Clarke, senior member of the firm, was born in Lancashire, England, August 15, 1842. When very young, his parents removed to Cheshire County; while still a boy, he was placed in the works of London & North, Western Railway, at Crew, where he remained about eight years, afterward working at his trade in different parts of Great Britain. In 1867, he emigrated to the United States. After spending a few months in Schenectady, N. Y., he settled in Gallion, Ohio, where he was employed as a brass-molder by the B. & I. Railroad, now the C. C. C. & I. Railroad. In 1870, he removed to Kansas, and located in Wyandotte in the employ of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, as foreman of the brass foundry. In 1876, he established the Kansas City Brass Foundry, which he continued to operate until the spring of 1883. Mr. Clarke was married in Crestline, Ohio, November 17, 1870, to Miss Sarah C. Hassinger. They have three children—Ida H., Francis M. and Edward B.

ALFR[illegible] COBB, attorney at law, was born at Beloit, Wis., August 8, 1859. He is a son of Steven Al[illegible] and Mrs. Sophia (Allis) Cobb. Stephen A. Cobb was born at Madison, Somerset Co., Me., June 17, 1833. His parents, Stephen and Mary A. (Goodwin) Cobb, were genuine New Englanders, being descended in a direct line from the pilgrim fathers. Under the influence of his mother, Stephen A. Cobb received a thorough classical education, graduating from Providence, Rhode Island, in 1858. Soon afterward, he entered, as a law student, the office of Rockwell & Converse, Beloit, Wis., and pursued his studies with such success that in 1859 he was admitted to the bar, and immediately removed to Kansas, locating at Wyandotte. In 1862, he was elected Mayor of Wyandotte, upon the Republican ticket. Resigning the office to enter the army, he was active in recruiting the famous Twelfth Kansas; was commissioned Captain, and soon afterward Lieutenant Colonel of the regiment, serving in the Thirteenth Army Corps, in the Department of the Gulf until the close of the war. Returning to Wyandotte, he was in 1868 re-elected Mayor of the city; he was elected twice to the State Senate, and in 1871 was elected Speaker of the House of Representatives. In 1872, he was elected by a large majority to Congress, where he was recognized as a hard worker, and where he was influential in procuring the passage of several important bills; among them the grasshopper relief bill, passed in the winter of 1873; the bill locating the United States post office building at Topeka, and that removing the United States Military Prison from Rock Island, Ill., to Fort Leavenworth, Kan. In 1874, he was re-nominated for Congress, but was defeated. Col. Cobb died of malarial fever, August 25, 1878. Alfred H. Cobb was raised and educated in Wyandotte, his parents removing there within a year after his birth. He received his preparatory education in the Wyandotte public schools, and in 1874 entered the Kansas State University at Lawrence, taking a full classical course. In 1880, he entered the law department of the Ann Arbor University, graduating in 1882. He was admitted to the bar the same spring, and at once returned and commenced the practice of the law.

GEORGE S. COLBY, architect and superintendent, is a native of Norfolk County, England; he came to United States at an early age, and located in New York City, where he commenced his professional studies when young, but afterward to practically perfect himself in the profession, he learned the carpenter's trade, to which he devoted about five years; afterward removed to Albany, N. Y., and engaged in contracting and building; also held the position of Building Superintendent on New York Central Railroad for eight years. In 1878, settled in Wyandotte, Kan., where he opened an office, where he is doing a large and increasing business, having designed and put up all of the principal business houses and private residences in the city.

D. E. CORNELL, General Agent of Passenger and Ticket Department Union Pacific Railway, and Mayor of Wyandotte City, was born at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., January 15, 1837. He was educated at the Bennington Academy at Bennington, N. H. and at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N. Y. The breaking-out of the war found him in California, where he had resided several years. He returned to New York State and enlisted in the Seventh Regiment New York Cavalry. After the disbandment of his regiment, he raised a company for the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and was commissioned Captain of Company A. At the close of the war, was on the staff of Gen. Rufus Saxon at Beaufort, S. C. In 1866, he settled in Wyandotte, Kan., where he took a position in the passenger department of the Kansas Pacific Railroad on the consolidation with the Union Pacific Railroad. His mode of conveyance was a flat-boat. During the next year, he settled in Jennings County, Ind. Previous to his settlement at Quindaro March 6, 1857, Mr. Lane was principally engaged in railroad surveying and contracting between Fort Wayne, Ind., and Louisville, Ky. In common with many prominent citizens of Wyandotte County and Kansas, he believed that Quindaro (on account of its natural advantages, and because of its vigorous championship by Free-State leaders) was destined to be the city of Eastern Kansas. He was chosen to fill many local offices, and upon the organization of the county in February, 1859, he became its Register of Deeds, and was re-elected in November following. He was a member of the Legislature in 1868 and in 1870, and to his organizing force and ability as Chairman of the Committee on State Library during his latter term, is largely due the present admirable condition of that educational institution of which Kansas citizens are so proud. In 1866, Mr. Lane became a member of the firm of railroad contractors, Parks, Lane & Co., and built twenty miles of the Kansas Pacific road through Ellsworth County. The previous fall he had returned from a two years' residence in Montana, being one of the first settlers in Virginia City and Helena. But Mr. Lane is best known as an editor and a successful newspaper manager. He was connected with the Quindaro Tribune in 1858, and afterward, when he removed to Wyandotte, represented the Kansas City Times in that city. The account of his connection with the Herald which he established is elsewhere given. In September, 1855, Mr. Lane married Sarah J. Robinson at Paris, Ind. Four children have been born to them. B. B. Lane is associated with his father in the publication of the Herald.

NICHOLAS McALPINE, dealer in real estate and proprietor of McAlpine's Addition to Armourdale, as well as McAlpine's Addition to Wyandotte City. He came to Wyandotte in 1857, acting as clerk for John McAlpine, his uncle. He afterward embarked in the saw mill and flour mill business until 1861. He, with B. Washington, built the first flour mill in Wyandotte County. At the beginning of the war, returned to Pittsburgh, Penn., and for four years was employed as Teller in the First National Bank, returning to Kansas in 1865, formed a partnership with Dan. Killin, taking contracts to build portions of the Missouri Pacific; also Central Branch of the Union Pacific Railroad. He was elected City Treasurer in 1866; afterward member of the City Council. He was appointed by the County Commissioner to act as Treasurer of Wyandotte County for one year. Was elected to said office by the Democrats in 1867 one term; again elected in 1871 one term; re-elected to the same office in 1873, serving in all seven years as County Treasurer, since which time he has been engaged in the real estate business very successfully. He was born near Belfast, Ireland, April 5, 1835, receiving his education there. Came to Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1853; during four years thereafter, went through all the routine of banking in the Pittsburgh Trust Company and Exchange Bank. Was married in June, 1866, to Miss Maria Walker, of Wyandotte, Kan. They have three children—Robert L., Jessie S. and Mary A. He is a member of Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 1, A., F. & A. M., and of the Presbyterian congregation. Mr. McAlpine has ever been an active worker for the best interests of Wyandotte City and county, and is well and favorably known, having a host of friends.

HON. J. S. McGREW, old settler, was born in Adams County, Penn., January 26, 1822. His parents moved to Butler County, Ohio, about three years later, thence to Indiana about 1835. In 1836, removed to Illinois, residing in Henderson County for a time, then removed to Warren. In 1840, they settled in Iowa. The subject of our sketch commenced his business life in Lancaster, Keokuk Co., Iowa, in 1840, in partnership with a brother-in-law, engaging in the mercantile business. Shortly afterward, he assumed entire control, and continued in trade here until 1856. In the spring of the following year, he settled in Wyandotte, Kan., and opened a store. This he continued to operate until 1870. In 1860, he commenced packing pork in addition to his other business. In this he continued until very recently. Mr. McGrew has been prominently identified with the politics of the State. He was elected to the Legislature in 1859, and re-elected to the next term. In 1863, was elected to the State Senate, and organized this and the following Senate. In 1865, was elected Lieutenant Governor, serving out the term. He has served as Mayor of Wyandotte City two terms. He was married in Lancaster, Keokuk Co., Iowa, in 1858, to Miss Doggett, of that county. They have five children living—Henry, Josephine E. (now Mrs. H. H. Smalley), Mary, Grace and Louise.

HENRY McGREW, attorney at law, was born in Sigourney, Iowa, April 18, 1857. The same year his parents settled in Wyandotte County, Kan. He was educated in the district and high school of that county. In 1877, entered Ann Arbor University at Ann Arbor, Mich., graduating in 1879. He then returned to Wyandotte and entered into partnership in the practice of law with Mr. H. L. Alden, which partnership still continues.

J. H. MAILAND, dealer in staple and fancy groceries, provisions, flour, feed, etc. This business was established by Mr. Mailand in 1873. In 1880, he erected the store he now occupies, which is a handsome brick building 60x25 feet in area and two stories high, the upper part being used as a residence. Mr. Mailand was born in North Schleswig, Denmark (since transferred to Germany), August 28, 1846. He was brought up a farmer, though taking advanced studies in instrumental music, for which he had a natural taste. In 18[illegible], he emigrated to the United States, locating in Jefferson City, Mo., where he engaged in brick-making about four years, then opened a grocery store in the same place, and from there removed to Wyandotte, Kan., in 1873. He was married in Gasconade County, Mo., April 17, 1867, to Miss Helena Jessen, a native of Denmark. They have three children—Annie, Madie and Walter. Mr. Mailand was the first President of the Danish Union Freiga, organized in 1877, of which he is now the Secretary.

R. S. MAUNDER, contractor and builder, came to Wyandotte, Kan., in 1879, and began the above business. He employs eighteen men annually. He has helped to build the Ryus Hotel, Noble's large block, Wood & Roberts' Block, Northrup Bank Building and seven or eight large fine dwellings, etc. He does the brick and stone work. He was born in England, October 24, 1841; came to America with a brother in 1857, settling at Rochester, N. Y., where he lived many years, and learned the carpenter trade; he has always followed that kind of work; has traveled in nearly all portions of the United States and the Canadas. He was married September, 1878, at Grand Rapids, Mich., to Miss Lizzie A. Fletcher, of London, Can. They have one daughter—Percy A. F. He has six children by a former marriage—Emma E., James H., William T., Minnie E., Richard C. and Albert E. Mr. M. is a member of I. O. O. F., of Wyandotte, Kan.

JOHN F. MEYER, contractor and builder, came to Wyandotte in 1866, and soon afterward began the above business, starting alone. He now employs annually eighteen men. He erected Northrup & Son's Bank Building, Seitz & Barker Block, Seitz & Stevens Block, Schultz & Belters Block, George W. Bishop's residence, and many others, of equal importance. He was born in Franklin County, Mo., April 12, 1843; at a suitable age, he followed teaching and agricultural pursuits until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1867 to Miss Carrie M. Harris, of St. Louis County, Mo. They have one daughter—Josephine I. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. M. is a member of I. O. O. F.

HON. GEORGE H. MILLER, Superintendent of the State Institution for the Education of the Blind; took charge of the institution in 1875. He was born in Lyons, Wayne County, N. Y., August 31, 1835. His parents moved to Calhoun County, Mich., about 1837, in which county he received his education. In 1854, he located in Adrian, Mich., where he engaged in mercantile business, clerking the first three or four years, then engaging in business on his own account. In 1865, he removed to Kansas, locating in Leavenworth, where, under the firm name of Miller & Stevens, he operated a steam-heating and house-fitting business, until appointed to his present position. He was married in Adrian, Mich., in 1858, to Miss Julia A. Stowers, formerly of Pittston, Penn. They have two children—Fred and Clara. Mr. Miller was elected Postmaster of the Legislature in 1875, serving one term. He is a Knight Templar in the Masonic fraternity, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

CHARLES N. H. MOORE, real estate, insurance and loans. The business was established in 1881. He transacts a general real estate business, dealing in city and country property in this and other States. In insurance, he represents the North British and Mercantile, and the Metropole, of France. Mr. Moore was born at New London, Conn., August 3, 1834, the family being direct descendants from Sir John Holt, Lord Chief Justice of England, over whose property a suit is now in progress. The subject of our sketch was educated in his native city. At the age of eighteen years, he started for California, stopping for a time while en route in South America and Acapulco, Mexico. He remained in California about five years, engaged in mining and other occupations; then started across the plains with a pack team. On his arrival in Wyandotte, he determined to remain, and opened and improved a fruit farm west of the city. In 1867, he was ordained minister of the Baptist Church, and took charge of the Wyandotte Forest Baptist Church of Wyandotte County, where he officiated about five years; after five years' pastoral labors, organized a Baptist Church in West Kansas City, Mo. In 1872, took pastoral charge for three years, and two years pastoral labors in Kansas City, Kan. Ill health at this time compelled him to resign his regular pulpit, though he still continues to officiate at times. After leaving the church, he accepted a position on the staff of the Kansas City Mail, in which he continued until that paper sold out. In the meantime, he had organized the real estate business which he now operates. During the war, he was commissioned by Gov. Robinson, Captain of the Wyandotte Rangers; also received a commission to recruit a company for the Second Kansas Cavalry, but was shortly after stopped by orders from the General Government; afterward assisted Commissioner Dole in the formation of an Indian brigade, this being also left in an unfinished state by orders from Washington, discontinuing all Indian enlistments. Mr. Moore was married in Wyandotte, Kan., in 1859, to Miss Mary Johnson, of that town. They have one son, Charles W.

H. MORRIS & BROS., Memphis, Tenn. L. Morris manages the retail dry goods and clothing business at 408 Main street, and H. Morris manages the jeans clothing manufacturing business, where they employ at some seasons of the year as high as 300 hands. Sell their goods mostly in Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama. Mr. H. Morris, the head manager of all, came to the United States in 1866, and in 1878 opened a small retail store at 408 Main street, with his brother, L. Morris, in partnership, and by hard work and honest dealing have established a splendid business. In 1870, the youngest of the firm, I. Morris, came to the United States, and in 1873 opened another store with Frank Kahn, at 388½ Main street, Memphis, Tenn., and in 1878 dissolved partnership. I. Morris then went to Ottawa County, Kan., and opened the clothing house by name of Blue Store, and in 1882, May 16, opened the so-called Famous Clothing House at Wyandotte, Kan. Style of firm H. Morris & Bro. I. Morris, the manager of the Famous, was born February 16, 1854, in Czarnikan, Prussia. In 1867, he accepted a place to learn the grocery business, at S. M. Samter, Filehue, Prussia. July 1, 1870, he left that place and in August 16, 1870, he embarked for the United States to join his brothers in Memphis, Tenn. In Wyandotte at some seasons of the year they employ from fifteen to thirty-five hands to make jeans clothing and overalls, and they sell them at wholesale and retail. I. Morris is a member of the I. O. Bnai Brith, K. of H. and K. of P.

M. B. NEWMAN, real estate; the business was established about 1871 by Mr. N. He now transacts a general real estate business in city and country, having entire control of Hammerslough's addition to the south part of the city, consisting of ten acres all platted. Mr. Newman was born in Warren County, Ohio, March 9, 1816. He received his schooling in his native county. In 1836, he began reading law in the office of Corwin & Dunlevy, at Lebanon, Ohio; was admitted to the bar in 1840, and shortly afterward began practice in Franklin and Indianapolis, Ind. About 1842, he removed to Lima, Ohio, where he remained in practice about five years, then removed to Sidney, Shelby Co., Ohio, where he remained in practice until he came to Kansas in 1857. He first located in Quindaro, Wyandotte County, where he opened a law office and also engaged in dealing in real estate. In 1860, he removed to Wyandotte, having been elected County Clerk and Clerk of the District Court. In 1866, was elected County Attorney, a position he held two years; was afterward elected Justice of the Peace and Police Judge. In 1873, was appointed Probate Judge by the Governor to fill the vacancy, the former office continuing until 1877. Since that time, he has devoted his entire attention to real estate. He was married in Sidney, Ohio, in 1852, to Miss Harriet Sheppard. They have five children living—Lida, now Mrs. Dr. Diedrich; Marie, now Mrs. W. H. P. Mull; Frank P., Edward P. and Robert W. Mr. Newman has always been very much interested in the study of horticulture. He is at present Vice President of the State Horticultural Society.

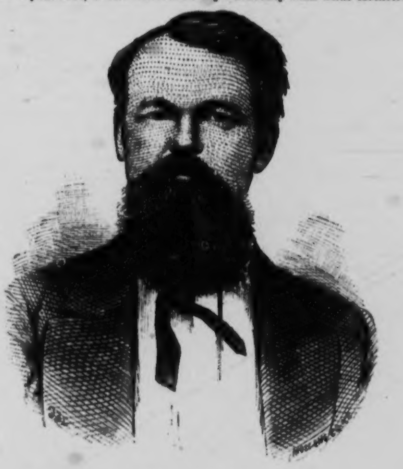
HIRAM MILTON NORTHRUP, only son of Andrus Bishop and Martha (McHenry) Northrup, was born in Olean, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., June 4, 1818. His mother died when he was but two years of age, and from that time until he was fourteen, Mrs. Sarah Lockwood, his mother's sister, filled to him the place of the mother he had lost. Under her care, he received a good common school education, and after her death, was able after remaining a year in a store in his native town, to teach a district school of some sixty pupils. After engaging for a time in ship-building in Cincinnati, and being in business with his father from 1839 to 1844, he came in the latter year to Westport Landing, then a few huts and shanties, now Kansas City. Mr. Northrup immediately engaged in the Indian trade, his first venture being with the Comanches of Texas and New Mexico, proving a disastrous one. He escaped barely with his life, but not a whit daunted, started again and was rewarded with abundant success, soon becoming one of the leading traders in the West. Among his partners were E. P. Hart, P. M. Choteau, Silas Armstrong and Joel Walker; Mr. Northrup and his partners being in an especial manner identified with the early growth and progress of Wyandotte and Kansas City. In 1847, Mr. Northrup built a log house on what is now the corner of Main and Fourth streets, Kansas City, in which he resided for several years, and when the town was laid out he built the first house on Main street, having embarked in the Santa Fé trade, in partnership with J. S. Chick, under the firm name of Northrup & Chick, the house in 1857 establishing at Kansas City the first bank west of Lexington, and south of the Missouri River. They also established the first post office at that point, by becoming responsible to the Government for all deficiences in the receipts to meet the mail service. The firm also at one time, when the credit of the city was worth almost nothing, loaned the corporation $60,000, which was expended in public improvements. Mr. Northrup was President of the Kansas City branch of the Union Bank of Missouri, resigning his position in 1860. The banking house of Northrup & Co. was removed to New York City, soon after the breaking out of the war, owing to the Jayhawkers' raids upon it, and the general insecurity of life and property in Western Missouri. The bank was established at No. 33 Nassau street, and subsequently removed to Wall street, where it remained, the business being eminently prosperous until the panic of 1873, when, with many other similar institutions, it was obliged to suspend business. In the course of four months, the business was settled, all claims liquidated, and Mr. Northrup soon after settled in Wyandotte and established the banking house of Northrup & Son, which grew to be one of the most successful and reliable establishments of the kind in the West. Mr. Northrup was married at Wyandotte, at the Methodist Mission, November 27, 1845, to Margaret, the accomplished daughter of Thomas Clark, one of the chiefs of the Canada branch of the Wyandot nation. Mr. Clark died at Wyandotte in 1843. Mr. and Mrs. Northrup have had four children, only two of whom are living—Milton C., born October 5, 1846, Andrus B., born April 27, 1849. Their deceased children are Thomas B., born December 27, 1851, died October 28, 1876, and McHenry, born November 5, 1854, died December 1, 1857.

NORTHRUP BROTHERS, proprietors Riverside Mills; the firm is composed of J. P. Northrup and B. J. Northrup. This firm originally operated the City Mills, succeeding Zeitz & Moler to present mills. The buildings are of frame 40x50 feet in area, with engine house in addition; three run of stones and three sets of rolls, give them a capacity of 120 barrels of flour. The principal brands are "Brilliant" and "Riverside." John P. Northrup, senior member of the firm, was born in Sussex County, N. J., in May, 1844. His father was engaged in milling in Newton, N. J., and the subject of our sketch commenced under him in 1860. In 1861, he enlisted in Company F, Second New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, serving with the command about three years, holding a commission as Captain of Company B, when he left the army. On his return home he engaged in milling at Pleasant Valley, N. J.; was burnt out in 1869, and afterward operated a saw mill that had been connected with the flour mill until 1878, when he moved to Kansas, locating in Wyandotte, and taking charge of the City Mill. He was married in Pleasant Valley, N. J., in 1869, to Miss Anna H. Bale, of that town. They have two children—Benjamin J. and Charlotte. Mr. N. is a member of Burnside Post, No. 28, G. A. R.

JAMES W. PLATT, foreman carpenter department of Plankinton & Armour's Packing House. He came to Kansas City, Kan., in May, 1879. Has twenty-five men in his department. He was born in Greenwich, Washington Co., N. Y., June 15, 1842, and was raised there. Enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Twenty-third New York Volunteer Infantry, 1864. Transferred soon afterward to New York Veteran Volunteer Infantry; promoted to Orderly Sergeant, and participated in all battles of his command. Mustered out at Ogdensburg, September 16, 1865. Discharged August 29, 1865. Was married in October of the same year to Miss Christina Sawyer, of Whitehall, N. Y. They have four children—Mary A., John P. and Edward and an infant daughter. He is a member of I. O. O. F., A. O. U. W. Corbett, Post, No. 128, G. A. R., of Whitehall, N. Y.

GEORGE B. REICHENEKER, Postmaster, was appointed to his present position in March, 1881. He was born in Mansfield, Ohio, November 10, 1843. Came to Kansas with his parents in 1857, and settled in Wyandotte, where he completed his education. In 1862, he enlisted in Company G, Tenth Regiment Kansas Volunteers, and served until the close of the war. He then returned home, and shortly afterward engaged in mercantile business in Burlingame, Kan. One year later, moved to Manhattan, where he engaged in general occupations for a time, then returned to Wyandotte, where he opened a restaurant, continuing in business about two years. He then moved to Ellsworth, Kan., taking a position in car builder's department of the Kansas Pacific Railroad. Afterward returned to Wyandotte, and engaged for some years in mercantile business. In 1878, was appointed clerk in the railway mail service, in which he continued until appointed Postmaster at Wyandotte. He was married in Manhattan, Kan., April 21, 1866, to Miss Hattie M. Sarber, daughter of Stephen Sarber, Esq., one of the pioneers of 1856. They have two children—Lucy E. and Newton V. Mr. R. is a charter member of Post No. 28, G. A. R. Is also a member of Fellowship Lodge, No. 2, K. of P.

W. P. OVERTON, wholesale and retail dealer in anthracite, Blossburg and soft coal, business established in 1879; the business is a constantly increasing one, the annual sales aggregating at the present time 1,200 to 1,500 cars. Mr. Overton was born in Alabama, September 22, 1826, his mother at the time being on a visit to relatives; the home of the family being in Jackson County, Mo., where the subject of our sketch was brought up. While still young, he went to Texas, where he engaged in surveying, dealing in cattle, etc. During the Mexican war, he was attached to Company A, of Col. Doniphan's Regiment of mounted troops, serving somewhat over one year. After his return home, he engaged for some years in freighting across the plains to Salt Lake City and California. In 1855, he moved to Kansas and settled in Wyandotte, where he formed a partnership with Silas Armstrong, in operating a saw mill; also engaged in merchandising, putting up the first brick business block in the city. About 1863, the firm dissolved, and Mr. O. continued in the business alone some time longer, then sold out and removed to Pomeroy, Kan., where he erected a saw mill, this he afterward changed to a flouring mill; also engaged in mercantile business in the same place. About 1878, he returned to Wyandotte, and shortly afterward established present business. Mr. Overton was married in St. Joseph, Mo., in 1847, to Miss Mary J. Wales, a native of Massachusetts, who died leaving one child—Elizabeth, now Mrs. C. Hetrick, of Kansas City. He was married in Wyandotte, July, 1858, to Miss Sarah M. Barnett, daughter of James Barnett, one of the pioneers. By this marriage, he has seven children—Maud F., Jessie B., William, George R., Estelle, Sarah D. and Margaret A. Mr. O. is a member of Lodge, Chapter and Council, A., F. & A. M., and of Myrtle Lodge, No. 1, K. of P. He has been a member of the City Council and of the Board of County Commissioners.



W P Overton

G. W. ROBAUGH, pump manufacturer and steam fitter. This business was established in 1881. He handles all kinds of pumps, though his principal business is the manufacture and sale of a pump patented by himself in 1874 and 1875. Mr. Robaugh was born in Cambria County, Penn., June 14, 1835. He learned the trade of a machinist at Altoona, Penn., and in 1857, moved to Kansas, making Wyandotte his headquarters. He visited different parts of the Territory, putting up mills for the Indians and other parties. In 1860, he returned to Pennsylvania, and in 1862, enlisted in the doctors' corps of the United States Army, being employed as Hospital Steward at Hampton near Fortress Monroe, W. Va., some two years. He then returned to Altoona, where he was connected with the railroad shops. In 1864, he again settled in Wyandotte, Kan., where he put up a saw mill and operated it until the loss of an arm the same year, by accident, compelled him to change his business. He was married in Wyandotte, in 1858, to Miss Mary Reeves, a daughter of A. Reeves, one of the pioneers of 1857. They have two children—Alfretta and Capitola. Mr. R. is a member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge and Encampment, and of the A. O. U. W. February 1, 1865, he engaged as foreman on the Union Pacific Railroad, then starting out from this place; was engaged on the railroad about two years, then started a wagon and drove throughout all the country near Kansas City, selling dry goods, notions, boots and shoes, taking in exchange farmers' produce. Followed this business until 1875, when he gained his patent on the "Little Giant force pump," and engaged in the manufacture of said pump, and is at present in same business.

A. H. ROGERS, Cashier Wyandotte Bank, was born in Le Claire, Scott Co., Iowa, February 2, 1858. His parents settled in Leavenworth, Kan., in 1866, where he pursued his preparatory studies at the high school. In 1874, he entered Harvard College, taking a full classical course, though making a special study of philosophy, in which he took honors. He graduated in 1878 with the degree of A. B. Shortly afterward commenced the study of law in Wyandotte, in the office of E. Bartlett, and was admitted to the bar in Olathe in 1880. In 1879, he entered the firm of J. C. Rogers & Co., at Spring Hill, Kan., and engaged in the milling and banking business, in which he continued until his present business was established. Mr. Rogers was married in Phœnix, Oswego Co., N. Y., May 18, 1881, to Miss Kittie Coburn, of Phœnix. They have one son, Percival Caldwell.

D. J. ROSS, M. D., physician and surgeon, was born in Hickman County, Ky., September 7, 1843. He was educated at Asbury University at Greencastle, Ind. Commenced professional studies in 1860, under his father's instructions. The following year, commenced a regular course at the Kentucky School of Medicine, from which institution he graduated in 1865. During his regular course of lectures, he held a commission as Hospital Cadet attached to the military hospitals. In 1865, he settled in Lexington, Ind., where he engaged in practice until 1866, then moved to Illinois, where he engaged in successful practice until 1876. He then took an European tour, visiting the hospitals of Germany and other places. Shortly after his return, he moved to Kansas, settling in Oskaloosa in 1878, where he continued in practice until he moved to Wyandotte in October, 1881.

JOHN B. SCROGGS, attorney at law, was born in Canton, Ohio, November 24, 1837. His parents moved to Crawford County, Ohio, in 1839, where he received his education in the district and high schools. Commenced reading law in 1859, in Bucyrus, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1861. In 1862, enlisted in Company K, Eighty-sixth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was mustered out in 1862. He then entered the Quartermaster's department in which he continued until 1864, then located for a time in Freeport, Ill. In 1866, he removed to Kansas, settling in Wyandotte, where he has since actively engaged in practice. Was elected County Attorney in 1868, and served one term and then returned to his private practice. He was married in Wyandotte June 1, 1875, to Mrs. M. E. Cruise, one of the pioneers of 1858. Mr. Scroggs is a Royal Arch Mason and a member of the A. O. U. W.

SCOTT, ORR & CO., dealers in real estate, loans and insurance. This is the leading firm in their line in the city, their sales the last twelve months exceeding $300,000. Thomas A. Scott, of above firm, was born at Port Hope, Canada, October 16, 1854. His parents were farmers of a sturdy and vigorous order, and imparted to their children strong minds and healthy bodies. In 1859, when the subject of this article was but five years of age, his parents moved with him to McHenry Co., Ill., where they resided until 1869. Young Thomas, in the meantime, was attending school at Beloit, Wis., where he received all the education he has. In 1869, he went to Chicago and engaged in the grocery business, and remained there until 1871, when he came to Kansas City, Mo., and engaged in the dairy business with his brother, Samuel F. Scott. He remained in the dairy business one year and a half, and in 1872, returned to Chicago and engaged in the retail market business, in which business he remained about three years. In 1875, he, with C. W. Marsh, of "Marsh Harvester" fame, O. N. McClintock, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Col. E. W. Chapman, of Keokuk, Iowa, incorporated the Northwestern National Planing Machine Company of Chicago, of which he was elected Treasurer. He remained with that enterprise about one year, when he sold out his interest and engaged in the real estate business in Chicago, where he remained until the latter part of 1879, when he again came to Kansas City, Mo., and went into the real estate business with his brother and the firm of S. F. Scott & Company. The firm did a large business, but desiring to widen out his business and extend his dealing, Thomas A. Scott, in July, 1882, founded the well-known "real estate and loan broker" agency, known as Scott, Orr & Company, of Wyandotte, Kan., where he now is. Mr. Scott was married to Alice M. Orr, a daughter of Thomas Orr, one of the wealthiest men in the West, and a resident of Wyandotte, Kan., on the 23d day of November, 1881. Mr. Scott is one of the best business men in the country, and by his indefatigable energy and unquestioned honesty and ability, has made for himself and family a competency; and, although a young man yet, has a business which is second to none west of the Mississippi. Mr. Scott is a man of affable address, courteous with friends and customers, and of splendid physique. A long and useful life is before him, and his many friends are proud of his acquaintance, and not a few remember with grateful feeling his unstinted liberality and generosity.

O. K. SERVISS, Chief of Police, Deputy County Sheriff, and Deputy United States Marshal, was born in Clark County, Ohio, December 9, 1836, and was educated in his native town. In 1856, he settled in Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where he was engaged in mercantile business. In 1866, he removed to Wyandotte, Kan., where he was engaged in mercantile business until about 1878. In 1879, he was appointed Under Sheriff by Sheriff Bowling, a position he still retains. Mr. Serviss has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Forgy, to whom he was married at Waverly, Ind., in 1857. She died, leaving two children—Edgar F. and Clara. He was married to his present wife in Streator, Ill., in 1873. She was Miss Ella A. Haskell, of that city. Mr. S. is a member of the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment, I. O. O. F., also of the Blue Lodge, A., F. & A. M. He has been a member of the City Council several terms, also City Treasurer several terms.

SAMUEL NEWELL SIMPSON. The subject of this sketch was born in Deerfield, N. H., October 3, 1826. He has two brothers, Henry M. and William A., who have been intimately associated with him, both in business and in his pioneer work in Kansas. The Simpson family is a distinguished one in American history. John Simpson, the great-grandfather of Samuel N. Simpson, fired the first gun on the American side at the battle of Bunker Hill. A son of this John Simpson, whose name was also John, was a gallant soldier during the entire Revolutionary war. John Simpson, Jr., was the father of four sons and two daughters. Samuel Simpson, one of these four sons, was born in Deerfield, N. H., January 29, 1792, and died at Lawrence, Kan., January 12, 1872. He was one of the truest and firmest friends of the Free-State cause. He was married in Deerfield, N. H., to Miss Hannah Pearson, daughter of Timothy M. and Deborah Pearson. Samuel and Hannah (Pearson) Simpson were the father and mother of the subject of this sketch. Samuel N. Simpson was well instructed in his New England home, in the day school, the Sunday school and the church. He remained at home with his parents until the attainment of his majority, when he made a contract with the Manchester & Lawrence Railroad Company to furnish lumber to fence twenty-six miles of their road. When twenty-two years of age, in company with his brother, Henry M., who was two years younger than himself, he engaged in retail and wholesale trade. The two brothers soon extended their business so as to embrace an extensive real estate and lumber trade, in which they failed, $6,000 in debt. This was about 1849. In 1857, Mr. Simpson sent $11,000 in gold from Kansas to liquidate the indebtedness, principal and interest. He had moved to Kansas in 1854, during the discussion of the Kansas-Nebraska bill in Congress, not at all depressed by his misfortunes in the East. From St. Louis, Mo., to Lawrence, Kan., he made his way on foot, too independent to ask assistance or let his circumstances be known. He reached Lawrence September 29, 1854, bare-footed, carrying his boots upon his shoulder, weary and foot-sore from his tramp. On the next day, he surveyed a claim, with the hope of making it the foundation of a fortune. From this time forward, he was actively engaged in promoting his own interests and those of his fellow-men. On the 1st of October, 1854, he organized a Bible class, and was elected its teacher. On the 7th of January, 1855, he opened a Sunday school, which in time became the Plymouth Congregational Sunday school. He also organized Sunday schools at Franklin and at other places, and it was while he was engaged in his capacity of Sunday school teacher that he discovered the Franklin plots to destroy Lawrence. In the fall of 1854, he assisted in forming the Plymouth Congregational Church at Lawrence. At a meeting held in October of this year, to name the new town, Mr. Simpson moved that it be called Lawrence, which motion was seconded by Dr. Robinson, and thus the city was named after Amos A. Lawrence, of Massachusetts, one of the stanchest friends of early Kansas. Mr. Simpson was active in securing arms and ammunition from the East to aid in the defense of the Free-State cause against the border ruffians of those days, as well as to provide provisions for the Free-State men while they were engaged in the defense of their homes. As a result of arrangements made by him with New York capitalists, the Simpson Bank was started, of which he and his two brothers were the proprietors for several years. For eighteen months of John Brown's career in Kansas, Mr. Simpson had charge of his guns and ammunition, and after the Quantrill massacre he had charge of the interment of the bodies of the hapless victims, which work occupied two days and two nights. Mr. Simpson was married, January 1, 1864, at Columbus, Ohio, to Miss Kate L. Burnett, daughter of Judge Calvin Burnett, of Morrisville, Vt. Mrs. Kate L. Simpson was born in 1833. She is a woman of superior mental endowments and culture, and a successful teacher. The oldest son of this couple, Charles Lyon Simpson, was born November 23, 1866; Theodore was born February 10, 1868, and died in infancy; and Newell was born July 13, 1869. Recently, Mr. Simpson has been actively engaged in business pursuits, principally in the sale of real estate. Some few years since, he laid off a town adjacent to the east line of Kansas, on the banks of the Kansas River, adjoining Kansas City, Mo., calling his town River View. At this new town he lives, in a home well supplied, and surrounded with all that tends to render life enjoyable and dignified, and in the confident hope of a happier life beyond.

JAMES SNEDDEN, mine owner and operator, is a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, from which country he emigrated at the age of eight years. He came to America and located in Johnstown, Penn., in 1860, where he remained until 1867, being four years in the Union army, in the Fifty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1867, he came to Wyandotte, Kan., and was painter on Union Pacific Railroad for two years, and was then on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad in the same position, seven years. He then traveled as agent for lost cars for the same road for three years. He was then in the Weir City Zinc Works for a short time. He went to Galena, Kan., in mining interests in 1879, and has operated largely on Moll Reserve and school land; also on Folmer ground. He is now operating on Bonanza ground with good prospects. Mr. Snedden's mining operations cover a period of four years. In January, 1883, he returned to Wyandotte and went into the paint, oil and glass business, and is doing a flourishing trade. He is a member, Past Master and Past High Priest in the Freemason order; also Past Thrice Illustrious Master; is Deputy Grand Master of the State; is Eminent Commander of the Knights Templar of Wyandotte. He was married to Miss Mary C. Speck, of Wyandotte, Kan., who is Grand Matron of the order of Eastern Star. They have one child—Irene M.

RICHARD BAXTER TAYLOR was born in Buckland, Franklin Co., Mass., March 26, 1817. The genealogy of the Taylor family is traced to Capt. John Taylor, who was born in 1641, and was killed by the Indians May 30, 1704, in what is now Easthampton, Mass. Richard received a good common school and academic education. When seventeen years of age, he went to Canandaigua, N. Y., where he taught school; next going to Ellenville, Ulster County, where he engaged in the practice of law. Before completing his studies, however, he became connected with the Ellenville Journal and was proprietor of that paper until he came West in 1857. He did not bring his family with him until 1858, when he visited Wyandotte, intending to locate in Lawrence. Mr. Taylor came to Kansas with the premeditated purpose of assisting in making it a free State, and had the satisfaction of knowing, finally, that he was considered one of the most earnest leaders of the great movement. He concluded to settle in Wyandotte, purchasing an interest in the Gazette of S. D. MacDonald. In January, 1861, the office and its contents were destroyed by fire. Soon afterward, Mr. Taylor purchased a new outfit, and bought the interest of his partner, and continued sole editor and proprietor of the journal up to the time of his death, which occurred at his residence in Wyandotte March 26, 1877. As an editor and a man, Mr. Taylor was bold and honest, an honor to the profession and the State. He was among the foremost of the fraternity who favored the formation of a State Editorial Association, being chairman of the meeting which met in Topeka, January 17, 1866, to effect an organization, and was elected its President in 1868, delivering the annual address in 1870. The Editorial Association which Mr. Taylor was so active in organizing, at its annual meeting held at Manhattan, April 7, 1875, suggested the action which led to the organization of the State Historical Society, and he was made one of its first directors. Mr. Taylor was married to Miss Rachel Broadhead, May 22, 1851. She is the daughter of William and Susan Broadhead, of Ellenville, N. Y. William B. Taylor, their only child, was born December 30, 1855.

J. M. VOSS, dealer in furniture, curtains, etc.; the business was established in 1872, by a Mr. Poehler, the present proprietor succeeding him May 1, 1883. He occupies a room 25x75 feet in area, with a shop in addition. He is adding to his regular business facilities for finishing and making furniture to order, for which his long experience gives him great advantage. Mr. Voss came to Kansas in 1866 with his parents, finishing his education in Wyandotte. In 1872, he went to Lexington, Mo., where he learned the cabinet-making trade in the large furniture factory of that city, and remained there until he bought out present business. Mr. Voss was married in Lexington, Mo., in 1875, to Miss Kate Lierman, of that city; they have three children—George F., Catherine M. and Arthur J. M.

CHARLES WAHLENMAIER, contractor and builder, came to Wyandotte in 1864, and worked at the carpenter's trade until 1873, when he engaged in contracting and building. He employs from four to six men, and has erected many buildings in Wyandotte. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, March 25, 1847; came to America in June, 1864; was married in 1872, to Miss Mary Herscheman, a native of Hanover, Germany. They have three children—Anna M., John Frederick and Nellie E. In 1876-77, Mr. W. followed contracting and building in California, and employed a large force of men.

J. W. WAHLENMAIER, dealer in lumber and all kinds of building material, came to Wyandotte in 1864, and engaged in contracting and building until 1872; he then opened the lumber trade; now employs six men in the business. He began with a stock of $4,000; now carries a general stock of $10,000. He was born in Germany January 12, 1846; came to America in 1864, coming directly to Kansas; was married in 1868, to Miss Caroline Hosch, a native of Baden, Germany. They have five children—Willie F., Bennie J., Frankie, Minnie and Albert. They are members of the German Methodist Episcopal Church, of Wyandotte. He has been a member of the Board of Education two years, and City Treasurer, elected twice, held the office two years, and a member of the City Council the same length of time, and is now serving his second year on the Board of County Commissioners.

I. D. WILSON, President of the Bank of Wyandotte, came to Wyandotte in October, 1882, and soon became President of the above bank; he was born in Crawford County, Ill., June 22, 1832. He resided in his native county until twenty-three years of age; being raised a farmer, he followed agriculture, also kept hotel a number of years. In 1855, he went to Charleston, Ill., and embarked in the mercantile and banking business until 1865, when he went to Chicago, Ill., and engaged in the wholesale business until 1867; thence embarked in the manufacture of lard and oil a year; sold out and moved to Oxford, Wis. He there bought the Oxford City Mills, built them and operated the same successfully until December, 1881; sold out and removed to Olney, Ill. He then engaged in the banking business until he removed to Kansas. He was married in 1863, to Miss Sophia Ricketts, of Coshocton, Ohio. They had one daughter—Sophia R., now living in Coshocton, Ohio. His wife died in 1864; he was again married in 1867, to Ettie Spoor, a native of the State of New York. They are members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. W. is also connected with the Masonic order.

L. H. WOOD, real estate and insurance agent; business established in 1868; transacts a general real estate business, dealing in both city and country property; represents in insurance, Etna of Hartford, Continental of New York, Springfield of Massachusetts, Phenix of Hartford, American of New Jersey, Hartford of Hartford and Home of New York. Luther H. Wood was born in Syracuse, N. Y., April 29, 1828. About 1831, the family moved to Huron County, Ohio, where L. H. was educated at the common schools and academy. About 1843, his parents moved to Crawford County, Ill. His early life was spent in farming; afterward dealing in cattle, buying and shipping. About 1855, he became connected in a clerical capacity with the construction of the first railway across Iowa. In December, 1857, he left Illinois and proceeded by rail to Jefferson City, Mo; thence by stage to Kansas City, landing in Wyandotte the same month. The next spring, he went to St. Louis by the old steamer Sioux City, Gen. Harney and his staff being on the same boat. The same year returned to Wyandotte, establishing the first hack line to Kansas City. In August, 1858, he sold out and bought a saw mill, which he operated until 1860. In 1859, was elected Sheriff, the first in the county, and was re-elected in 1861. In the winter of 1861-62, he assisted in raising the Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and in January, 1862 he was commissioned Quartermaster of that regiment. In the spring of the same year, this regiment was consolidated with the Second Kansas Cavalry, and he was commissioned Commissary of the new organization, a position which he retained until October, 1864, when he resigned, and shortly after located in Kansas City, Mo., where he engaged in real estate operations until 1868. He was married in St. Louis, Mo., November 14, 1864, to Miss Louvenia Wood, of Brunswick, Mo. They have six children living—Charles K., Ida, Laura, Edward L., James F. and Luther H. Mr. Wood is a member of the Lodge and Chapter A., F. & A. M. and of the K. of P.

G. W. YATES, attorney at law, is a son of William Yates, Esq., who passed through Kansas in 1849, en route to California, and who returned and settled with his family in that portion of Kansas now known as Douglas County, Kansas, in August, 1854. He was a very prominent figure in the border ruffian times, and organized and commanded a cavalry company of Free-State men, in his county, during the border ruffian war. The subject of this sketch was born in Pittsfield, Ill., September 2, 1844, and came to Douglas County, Kan., with his parents in 1854. He was educated in that county, and was a pupil in the first district school established in the Territory of Kansas. He commenced life in Lawrence, in 1863, as a clerk for George Leis, in Lawrence, and embarked in the drug business on his own account in 1878, continuing the same to June, 1881. Commenced reading law in 1878, in the office of the Hon. George J. Barker in Lawrence, at the same time entering the law department of the Kansas State University, graduating in June, 1880, and was admitted to the bar the same term, and at once commenced practice in Lawrence. In July, 1881, he moved to Wyandotte, where he has since been engaged in practice. He was married in Lawrence, October 31, 1868, to Miss Adelle B. Benedict, of Sherburne, Chenango County, N. Y. Mr. Yates is a member of Acacia Lodge, No. 6, A., F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F. and the A. O. U. W.

JOHN E. ZEITZ, old settler, retired. Was born in Prussia, December 5, 1831. He was educated in his native place, and after leaving school served an apprenticeship of five years in the dry goods trade. About 1851, he came to the United States, and engaged in the mercantile business in Chicago. In 1857, he removed to Wyandotte, Kansas, where he opened a hardware and grocery store, which he continued to operate until 1863. In that year, he bought an interest in the City Mills in company with Mr. Washington. Shortly afterward the firm was changed to J. E. Zeitz & Co., under which title he operated the old mill, and also the Riverside Mills until 1882. He then disposed of his interest to Northrup Brothers. He was married in Prussia in 1857, to Miss Sophia Stade. They have three children—Esther, Helen and Herman. Mr. Z. is a member of the Common Council, also of the A. O. U. W.

KANSAS CITY, KANSAS.

It would be almost an impossibility to write in detail the early history of Kansas City, Kan., without treating the topics connected with the early times of the whole region, comprising the establishment of the Chouteaus at a point about three miles below Kansas City, and on the south side of the Kaw River, opposite Muncie, between 1821 and 1825, and the French settlement, or the Kawsmouth settlement, made after the flood of 1826, which washed away M. Chouteau's post-agency houses in the bottom opposite Randolph Bluffs. Again, it would be an impossibility to separate Kansas City, Kan., from Kansas City, Mo., in such an narrative, which partakes at best, much of the nature of fiction, and has been gathered from unreliable sources. Reference is made for the accounts of the Indian and French settlements to the general State history. The first white settler after the French traders to locate upon the present site of Kansas City, was James H. McGee, who made three entries of eighty acres each in Sections 5, 7 and 8, on November 14, 1828. The settlement of Rev. Isaac McCoy, four miles south of Kawsmouth in 1831; the establishment of a trading house at this point by his son, John, during the next year; the removal of the Indians, from 1832 to 1840; the platting of Westport in the meantime; the development of the great Santa Fé trade, and the founding of Kansas City, as a convenient landing place for the goods of the Indian and Santa Fé traders, and the formation of the town company in 1838 are matters which cannot be separated from the history of Kansas City, Kan., nor yet, since the city is treated here as a separate corporate body, can full details be given. A settlement was begun in 1857, on the east side of the Kansas River in what is now Kansas City, Kan., or, more properly, a house was planted on ground where now flows the Missouri River, just east of the mouth of the Kaw. It was built by David E. James, was a two-story frame, and stood there about ten years. This was United States land at that time, being claimed by Silas Armstrong under the treaty between the Wyandots and the United States, as his float. Certain leading Wyandots had been granted a section of land each, to be located in any spot they might choose; hence the term "float." Willis Wills and several others squatted upon different portions of this land, and claimed the right to pre-empt it. But in 1858, through D. E. James, a compromise was effected by which Silas Armstrong released his claim to a portion of it, and the settlers released to him the balance. The log house occupied by Mr. McDowell in 1857 and several years after, may be seen to-day standing on the south side of Sixth street, just this side or west of the State line. This is the only building left of those on the Armstrong "float," in 1857-58. That float comprised what is now Kansas City, Kan., lying between the State line and the Missouri River. Many acres of it have been washed into the river. That year, the traveled road between Kansas City, Mo., and Wyandotte ran where now is the south side of the Missouri River, at its most southerly bend; hence at low water the whole of the river runs where then was a cornfield; but since the riprapping of 1867, it wears no more. Much might be written of the early history of the Armstrong "float," now known as Kansas City, Kan. Several families resided on the point from 1856 to 1860, who were regarded only as squatters. They obtained a living by various means. There was a family named Johnson here then, having a habitation where now the Missouri River runs, a few hundred yards northeast of the Anglo-American Packing House. This family was known to the early settlers as fishermen. The family of Edward Olivet, were recognized by Armstrong as having a squatter's interest in the land, and while the towns of Kansas City, Kan., and Wyandotte were being built, Mr. Olivet was the agent of Armstrong for the sale of sand and wood to the people of either town. Mr. Henry Williams also resided out in land now claimed by the "Big Muddy." There was also a house full of colored people in that now imaginary place on the point. The house heretofore mentioned as the land office building, was a building of twelve rooms, and had its history. Settlers of early date now reside in Kansas City who remember this old house as having had the reputation of being haunted. It was said that the ghost of a Mr. Wills would on certain occasions appear in the house and make claims to the ground on which the house in which he once resided stood, as the property of his heirs. The claims of the Missouri River were pressed with such irresistible force that when the land became water, the occupation of the ghost departed. Business is now too lively in this neighborhood to permit the existence of ghosts, and that old idea is rapidly fading away. Near the State line on Sixth street, the widow of Edward Olivet—Mrs. Sophia Olivet—now lives, the only one of the original squatters on the Armstrong "float" now claiming a home on said track.

The Kansas City (Kan.) Town Company was formed in 1868, by Silas Armstrong, David E. James, Dr. George B. Wood, Luther H. Wood, William Weir, Thomas Ewing, Jr., T. H. Swope and N. McAlpine.

The town site was situated upon parts of fractional Sections Nos. 10, 11 and 14, Town 11 south, of Range 25 east, lying north of the old bed of Turkey Creek, east of the Kansas River, south of the Missouri River, and bounded on the east by the State line between Missouri and Kansas and comprised the following named tracts, viz.: Two tracts of land belonging to George B. Wood; two tracts of land belonging to D. E. James; one tract belonging jointly to George B. Wood and N. McAlpine, and the piece of land lying between the lands of Thomas Ewing on the south and lands of D. E. James on the north, between Armstrong street and Kansas River. The site was surveyed by John McGee, C. E., April 24, 1869, and recorded with the Register of Deeds of Wyandotte County, May 3, 1869.

The streets were named after the original proprietors of the town. Mr. James erected the first dwelling house of any prominence, in 1870, at the south end of James street, near the railroad tracks. Soon followed the establishment of the large packing houses and stock yards, whose business forms the bulk of the city's trade. In October, 1872, Kansas City, Kan., was incorporated. For details as to her city government and the enormous business transacted, the reader is referred to matter following:

INCORPORATION.

The first city election was held October 22, 1872, by order of Judge Hiram Stevens of the Tenth Judicial District, and resulted in the election of the following city officers:

Mayor, James Boyle; Councilmen, S. W. Day, Charles H. Jones, John McKnight, George Forschler and James Lundell; Police Judge, James Kennedy; City Clerk, Cornelius Cushin; Treasurer, Samuel McConnell; City Attorney, H. L. Alden.

The mayors of the city since its organization have been: James Boyle, C. A. Eidemiller, A. S. Orbison, Eli Teed and Samuel McConnell. John Sheehan was appointed Marshal in 1875, by Mayor Eli Teed, and has held the office continuously up to date. He is also Chief of Police, having a force of five men.

In June, 1880, the Governor of Kansas proclaimed the city of Kansas City a city of the second class. The following are the present officers: Mayor, Samuel McConnell; Councilmen, Samuel W. Day, Richard Edwards, Cornelius Butler, George Forschler, Theodore Kennedy and James Sullivan; Police Judge, B. M. Brake; City Attorney, W. S. Carroll; City Clerk, H. C. Stout.

The fire department of Kansas City, Mo., extends its protecting arm over Kansas City, Kan. A public building is now (in September, 1882,) being erected on James street, near Sixth, for the purpose of accommodating the fire and police departments, and also the city officers. The city is attached to Kansas City, Mo., for postal service, and receives its mail by the free delivery system of that office. For banking and postal exchange the five thousand people of this growing town are compelled to go to the stock yards in the extreme south part of the city, to Wyandotte, or to Kansas City, Mo.

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

The city limits are also the limits of the school district, which contains about 300 acres of land, 5,000 people, and nearly 500 school children; seven teachers are employed. The first building was built in 1871; in 1879, it was enlarged. The Board of Education is now composed of the following named gentlemen: President, L. F. James; Treasurer, Samuel McConnell; Members, Dr. A. H. Vail, George Nelson, John Furguson, E. S. Mattoon and J. H. Spake. The principal and teacher of the sixth and seventh grades, is H. S. Gibson. The colored school is conducted in a separate building and has an average daily attendance of forty-five, out of over seventy enrolled in the district.

On the first floor of St. Bridget's Church, corner of Wood and Fourth streets, the Rev. F. M. Hayden, assisted by two sisters of charity conducts a parochial school of 120 pupils.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—The first organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Kansas City, Kan., was in the year 1872. The church was not sufficiently strong to build a church building until 1882. Early in the summer of that year, Rev. W. A. Crawford, of Illinois conference, was assigned to this charge, and in September a church edifice was erected on the southwest corner of First and Wood streets, at an expense of $4,000. A parsonage on south side of same lot was completed at an expense of $1,700. Although the church books now show a membership of only fifteen, one may readily understand by the amount of building done in 1882, that they are zealous workers.

Wood Street Baptist Church was chartered in the year 1878. In June, 1881, the church building located on the southwest corner of Wood and Sixth streets, was erected, and services have been held therein every Sabbath morning and evening since that date.

In the spring of 1882, the Rev. G. W. Ford, pastor, was removed by the hand of death, and the pulpit is temporarily supplied by Rev. J. W. Irwin. The number of members now enrolled on the church books are sixty, and the number of Sunday school scholars in attendance each Sabbath, 110. The church property is valued at $5,500.

Swedish Baptist Church.—This church was organized in Kansas City, Kan., in 1879, and the present church edifice completed in 1881. It is located on the southwest corner of Wood and Third streets, with a tasty parsonage conveniently in the rear. Services are held every Sabbath morning and evening by the Rev. C. A. Schrogren, pastor. The membership numbers forty. Valuation of church property, $3,500.

St. Bridget's Church (Catholic) was organized in December, 1880, and in May, 1881, the new church building on the corner of Fourth and Wood streets was completed and services held therein by Rev. F. M. Hayden. It is a two-story wooden structure, the first floor being used as a parochial school, and the second floor devoted to church purposes. The parish contains nearly 1,000 members. The church property is valued at $7,000.

The Congregational Society has a building known as Kawsmouth Chapel, on the east side of Wood street, between Fourth and Fifth, which is valued at about $4,000. It was erected in 1880, and in addition to being used for church and Sabbath school purposes, is otherwise utilized as follows: The basement is a restaurant, and meals are sold at $3.25 per week; the first floor is a public reading room during the week, but devoted to services on Sunday, and the second floor for lodging rooms. The profits of the lodging and restaurant are used to support the religious services and to keep the reading room supplied with proper literary works and periodicals. Rev. J. T. Breese conducts the devotional exercises, and is the superintendent of the business interests of the chapel. The Swedish Lutheran society also hold services in this chapel every Sunday morning.

The Colored Baptists of this city have a strong and earnest organization. They are now in fall of 1882, renting a building on the southeast corner of Wood and Sixth streets, and hold regular services every Sabbath morning and evening. The church was organized in 1880, and the list of members contains forty-six names.

THE PRESS AND SOCIETIES.

The Weekly Spy came into existence in the year 1880, and was the property of B. M Brake. In September, 1882, Charles H. Van Fossen & Felix G. Head bought the material of the Weekly Spy, and commenced the publication of the Daily Evening Globe, September 5. It is a sprightly evening journal with experienced men in charge, and will till the field now open for it creditably. Mr. Felix G. Head, the editor, was for several years connected with the St. Paul Pioneer Press; and Charles H. Van Fossen, the business manager, is an old resident of Kansas City, Kan., one of the early settlers of the Missouri Valley, a man of much newspaper experience and one who has made life and business a success.

The Knights of Labor, a social, political and beneficial secret order, have an assembly in this city, known as the Argo Assembly, No. 2,065. It was organized June 21, 1882, and it now has a membership of over seventy. It is composed of wage-workers, producers and business men and women. The officers are: J. G. Cougher, M. W.; Frank Donnelly, W. T.; Edwin Berg, Secretary; W. O. Henderson, Treasurer; O. T. Angell, Financial Secretary.

Danish Union Freija, of Kansas City and Wyandotte, was organized about 1877, and was incorporated under Missouri State laws, in 1881. Its present membership is forty-five. The present board of officers is made up as follows: L. Brotherman, President; H. Johnson, Vice President; J. H. Mailand, Secretary; J. Carr, Treasurer; L. Johnson, Cashier. This society is organized for benevolent purposes.

Equitable Aid Union.—In the month of May, 1881, Occidental Union, No. 317, E. A. U., was organized in Kansas City, Kan. No. 317 has about twenty members, of whom Jacob Addison is President, A. J. Orcutt, Secretary; W. T. Brown, Treasurer, and S. W. Day, Accountant. When the Occidental Union was only one year old, in May, 1882, the order suffered a loss in the death of the Rev. G. W. Ford, pastor of the Wood Street Baptist Church, a member of No. 317. His family was promptly paid the sum of $1,000.

Half-Acre Mission.—The exodus of so many houseless, homeless, uneducated colored people to Kansas in 1879, made some provision for their future care and education a necessity, and as a great many of these people had settled in Kansas City, Kan., this point was fixed upon by Miss E. P. Newcom as a desirable one to establish a Mission, whose object should be the distribution of charity, and the civilization of the unfortunate colored women and children. Accordingly, the Half-Acre Mission building was erected. It is a two-story frame structure, situated on State Line street, in which is conducted a school for the education of colored women and children in needle-work, house-work, and the common English branches. The manager, Mrs. L. P. Fulton, also distributes clothing, received through various charitable channels, to the needy colored people of both sexes, of the noted Half-Acre District. One hundred pupils are now receiving instruction at the evening school, chiefly women and girls, while during the year several hundred are partially clothed and shod. There is also a branch of this work in Cherokee County.

The Colored Masons of Kansas City, Kan., became strong enough in 1882 to form a separate organization, and in September of that year, a lodge called St. Andrew's Lodge, was organized and has since held its regular meetings in the hall on the corner of Wood and Sixth streets. The officers are: P. T. Toliner, W. M.; B. Smith, S. W.; L. Lably, J. W.; C. J. Bruce, Scribe.

BUSINESS INDUSTRIES.

To read the business history of this marvelous young town will cause readers to open their eyes with astonishment. One can scarcely comprehend that a town only ten years of age should be such a hive of business industry. Over a million of dollars per month change hands here in legitimate and healthy trade. It will be necessary, in order to give the reader a complete understanding of this immense business, to take some of the more important enterprises and describe them in detail.

Plankinton & Armour's Packing House.—In the fall of 1871, this firm moved their packing business from Kansas City, Mo., to its present site near the State line, and commenced the erection of buildings for their present mammoth establishment. They have continued to build each year, until now their buildings cover nearly ten acres of ground, some of them reaching five and six stories in height. During the summer of 1882, two large, four-story warehouses were completed and put in readiness for the fall slaughter. The rooms are illuminated by the Brush Electric light, and the cooling rooms are filled with cool air, produced by four large refrigerating machines. The capacity of this house is so great that in busy times eight hundred hogs per hour are caught by the hind leg, raised on a track, passed before the sticker, on to the scalding vat, through it to the scraping machine, into the hands of the disembowelers and thence to the cooling rooms, where they remain twenty-four hours. They are again started toward the consumer, by way of the cutting department, where they are separated into their several specialties and pass on to the curing, salting, pickling and smoking rooms, and from thence into barrels, boxes, or canvas, ready for shipment. The entrails, blood and refuse go to the fertilizer room, where they are made into fertilizer, valued quite highly in Eastern markets. The tanking department for rendering the lard, is one of the largest branches of the business. There are thirty-one large tanks, each capable of trying-out 10,000 or 12,000 pounds of lard. From the tanks the lard is run to the lard rooms and press rooms, where it is pressed, barrelled, purified and canned. Eight hundred cattle can also be disposed of each day by systematic machinery, constructed solely for the slaughter and packing of beeves. A few sheep are also slaughtered for the home market and for shipment by refrigerator car.

This establishment keeps on its pay-rolls a regiment of men, one thousand strong, and the weekly disbursement each Monday night, amounts to from $10,000 to $13,000.

The expenses of this house for the year ending June 30, 1882, were over $10,000,000, and there were packed therein 450,000 hogs and 35,000 head of cattle. They do everything in their own buildings except manufacture the barrels, although they keep a large force of coopers. The engines of this establishment, including the Brush light, refrigerator engines and motive-power for the various departments, amount to a 625-horse-power capacity.

This firm contemplates still further additions to their business facilities here. The bulk of the hogs killed here come from Kansas, while the products are shipped all over the civilized world.

The proprietors of this business are Plankinton & Armour. The resident officers are: S. B. Armour, General Manager; W. P. Alcutt, General Superintendent, and George and C. C. Alcutt, Assistant Superintendents.

The business of the coming year will be greater than that just recorded of last year, because of increased facilities for handling and the more abundant hog crop of the State of Kansas, which is coming to Kansas City, Kan., through the stock yards.

The Stock Yards.—These yards are situated at the extreme southern limit of Kansas City, Kan., and are occupying every available foot of ground in that locality. This company was chartered in 1871, and commenced operations at once. It has been a Boston investment from the beginning, and the wonderful growth of the business, the readiness with which every railroad company running into Kansas City has availed itself of the opportunity to become a feeder to this business, demonstrates that Yankee pluck, when backed by good judgment and a thrifty foresight, is bound to win. These yards are now the largest in the Missouri valley, covering 130 acres, and having seventy-five acres of dry and comfortable pens. In the year 1871, the number of cattle received was 120,827 head; hogs, 41,036; sheep, 4,527; horses, 809. In 1881, the number of cattle had increased to 285,134; hogs, 1,015,447; sheep, 79,848; horses, 12,604. If the present proportion of increase is maintained, these yards will, in 1882, handle over half a million of cattle and more than one million and a half of hogs.

At the present time this company is under the management of Charles F. Adams, Jr., President; Charles Merriam, Secretary and Treasurer; Charles F. Morse, General Manager; H. P. Childs, Superintendent; E. E. Richardson, Assistant Secretary and Treasurer. Their full capacity is 10,000 head of cattle; 25,000 head of hogs; 2,000 head of sheep, and 500 head of horses and mules, daily. In 1876, the Stock Exchange building was built, at an expense of $35,000. It is a large four-story building, with a three-story wing on the west, fitted up with every modern convenience. There are thirty-four offices rented to banks, commission merchants and live-stock men, besides the rooms used by the officers of the company. The Bank of Kansas City, with a capital of $800,000 has a suite of rooms on the first floor; and the Merchants' National Bank, with a capital of $500,000, occupies apartments adjoining.

The Live-Stock Indicator, a weekly paper, wholly devoted to the live-stock interests, and the interests of Kansas City in live-stock, has an office in the building, and a corps of agile reporters among the cattle kings congregated here.

The growth of the stock business at this point is so very rapid, and gives such promise of still greater increase, that the company is already seriously considering the advisability of moving its whole business across the Kansas River to Armourdale, where it owns several hundred acres of land. The company has gone so far as to survey 220 acres of its tract, and lay it off in suitable alleys and pens for the business. Not many months will elapse ere this change will be made, and the present grounds laid out in building lots, which will be readily taken by business men, who are anxiously waiting for ground to enlarge their business and increase the number of their buildings.

The Soap Works.—In 1879, J. W. Bowen and G. J. Baer came from Leavenworth, Kan., located in Kansas City, built a large factory at 125 and 127 Armstrong street, near Riverview Bridge, and engaged in the manufacture of soaps. They have since made considerable addition to their building and business; have taken a third partner, Mr. C. R. Hallar, and are pushing business vigorously. In 1882, the value of wares they will manufacture here will exceed $100,000.

The Anglo-American Pork and Provision Company.—This immense packing establishment was located at this point in the fall of 1880. They had been operating a similar house of their own at Winthrop, Mo., but finding the hog market more convenient, and the shipping facilities greater, they concluded to build on the peninsula, at the junction of the Kansas River with the Missouri. They therefore purchased the packing house of Mr. T. J. Bigger, and annexed sixteen acres of land on the point, and at once abandoned their works at Winthrop, Mo., and immediately commenced the erection of their system of buildings at Kansas City, Kan. In November, they were ready for business, and have steadily increased their facilities and extended their operations every month since. During the summer of 1882, they converted their ice houses on the bank of the Kansas River into a soap factory, and completed their glue works. To give the reader an idea of the immensity of this enterprise, and its value to a town, his attention is called to the following figures:

This house has a daily slaughtering and packing capacity of 3,000 hogs, 400 beeves, and 200 sheep. Everything required is made on the grounds. They consume $25,000 worth of coal per annum; their cooperage costs them $80,000 each year; boxes and other packing material, $60,000; salt and saltpetre, $60,000; sugars and syrups, $10,000. The item of tin alone foots up to about $30,000 per year, and the machinery for the manufacture of tin cans for their lard and canned beef, cost over $20,000. Their miscellaneous expenses are over $50,000 per annum.

They are not dependent upon the city water works, but have a system of their own, operated by separate engines, with hose connected with hydrants for every room in their many buildings. Their fire department is perfection itself, having a building for its exclusive use.

They no longer put up ice each winter, but have immense refrigerator machines for the production of cold air for their cooling rooms. A Brush Electric Light, with fifty burners in various parts of the buildings, was added in 1882.

Their present buildings in Kansas City, Kan., with the machinery therein, have cost the sum of $750,000.

Near St. Mary's this company has a fine stock farm of about 8,000 acres, on which they have expended $120,000 in improvements and blooded cattle.

The Anglo-American Pork & Provision Company is by no means a firm whose organization is of recent date. Five brothers named Fowler have been in the business for several years, and besides their institution at Winthrop, Mo., now idle, they also have establishments in Chicago, New York, and Liverpool. The manager of the company's affairs here is Mr. George Fowler, who resides in Wyandotte. The first year of their existence in Kansas City, Kan., their business aggregated over $7,000,000. Their second year, at present writing, is not complete, but the ratio already shows that it will be greatly increased.

One of the manufacturing establishments of no small pretensions is the barrel factory of Lain Bros., at 918 State Line street. It was located here in 1878, and is now making about $50,000 worth of barrels per annum, employing steadily over forty coopers.

The Kawsmouth Manufactory is also located in Kansas City, Kan. It is devoted to the exclusive manufacture of overalls. It is located in a deep two-story building, in which the hum of the sewing machines may be heard loud enough to attract attention for several blocks.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

C. W. BANGS, Superintendent Kansas Desiccating and Refining Company, was born in Derby, Vt., December 19, 1834. He learned the soap business as a boy, and followed it in the East until 1866, when he settled in Lawrence, Kan., and engaged in the manufacture of soaps, under firm name of Bangs Brothers; this continued until 1877. The subject of our sketch then moved to Kansas City, Mo., where he engaged in rendering, etc., until the Desiccating and Refining Company was organized. In 1861, he enlisted in the four months' service, re-enlisted in Company H, Tenth Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, September 18, 1862. He participated in all the actions and battles of his command. Was taken prisoner at Mt. Sterling, Ky., paroled and in one month exchanged. His regiment was then detailed to run down rebel guerrillas and raiders from Virginia and Tennessee; they had numerous small battles and skirmishes with bush-whackers. Was mustered out September 17, 1863, having only enlisted for the term of one year. He then returned home, and worked on his father's farm until January, 1865, when he went to Connilton, W. Va., and worked in coal mines a year, and returned to his home in Kentucky, then went to Louisville, Ky. Married January 9, 1866, to Miss Jane McAllen, a native of Ireland. He then returned to West Virginia, and followed mining until 1868, returned to Kentucky, and followed farming until the spring of 1871, and on the 3d of March of that year landed with his wife and two babies in Osage City, Kan., then a very small town. He there worked in coal mines about a year, was promoted to underground foreman, Osage Coal Mine Company. Held the position three years, and then went into coal mining on his own account, but did not succeed. In the spring of 1874, was elected City Councilman of Osage City, and the following November, was elected to represent Osage County in the Kansas Legislature. He was there author of the first mining law, entitled "a Bill for the safety of persons employed in coal mines," which became a law. In the spring of 1875, was elected Mayor of Osage City, Kan., as a reward for his record as Councilman and Representative in the Legislature. In 1876 was re-elected Mayor. In the fall of that year, settled in Lexington, Mo., having failed in business; remained eighteen months, and removed to Camden, Mo., where he worked in coal mines eighteen months. KANSAS CITY, MO.

CHARLES L. DUNHAM, Superintendent of the Missouri Pacific Railroad from Kansas City, Mo., to Omaha, Neb., and from Atchison, Kan., to St. Joe, Mo., commenced railroading, in 1853, as a brakeman on the Michigan Southern, between Toledo and Chicago, at a salary of $26 per month. In about one year's time he was offered the position of baggage-master, which he accepted, and was afterward conductor on a freight train. In 1858, Mr. Dunham came to St. Louis, and accepted a position on the line of road now known as the Indianapolis & St. Louis, and was passenger conductor on this road during the entire rebellion, and Mr. A. A. Talmage, who is now General Manager of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, was then Assistant Superintendent of the road on which Mr. Dunham run. In 1864, his train was brought into requisition for the purpose of removing a lot of rebel prisoners. In 1868, he took charge of a division on the North Missouri Railroad, which now forms a part of the Wabash from St. Louis to Ottawa, Iowa, where he continued up to the time of his engagement with the Missouri Pacific road, which occurred in 1871, and where he has since been employed, with the exception of a very short time. Mr. D. is a native of Syracuse, N. Y., born March 7, 1835; he has been very successful in this his chosen career, having risen from a brakeman to his present influential position by careful attention to and thorough study of the duties of the various positions assigned him, and with his thorough knowledge of railroading and its appurtenances, having been educated to it from his youth up, as it were, he is a gentleman well calculated to fill the position, and is one of the most expert railroad men in the West.

ARMOURDALE.

Armourdale is a very neat young city of ten or twelve hundred inhabitants, situated on the north bank of the Kansas River, one mile from its junction with the Missouri. This city contains about eighty acres and was platted in 1880. It is a part of the southwest quarter of southeast quarter of Section 15, and part of northwest quarter of northeast quarter of Section 22, Town 11, Range 25 east. The proprietors of the town site are, The Kaw Valley Town Site & Bridge Company, composed of Boston capitalists, named John Quincy Adams, Charles Merriam, Nathaniel Thayer, H. H. Hunnewell, John A. Burnham and Charles F. Adams. This company owns a large tract of land not embraced in the town site of Armourdale, which is rapidly being sold for manufacturing purposes.

The city was incorporated in the spring of 1882; and the first city election was held May 5. The officers are: Mayor, Frank W. Patterson; Councilmen: Nehemiah Shirrick, Daniel Herbert, E. W. Anderson, S.

Snyder and Joseph Bradley; Police Judge, John C. Foore; Marshal, William Ross; City Clerk, Granville Patterson.

Early in the spring of 1882, the old school district in which a school had been maintained for over twenty years, was divided, and that portion of the school district containing the schoolhouse was set over to South Wyandotte. In May the Armourdale District, No. 9, voted bonds for a $9,000 schoolhouse, which was completed on October 5. The present officers of the School Board are: N. Sherrick, President; E. Sheldon, Secretary, and F. W. Dreyer, Treasurer.

The colored school is taught in the old wooden school building in the west end of town.

Presbyterian services have been held here several years, but it was not until April 15, 1882, that the Central Presbyterian Church was organized. The society immediately commenced building a house of worship, which is located on the corner of Wyandotte avenue and Eleventh street. It was completed in June, at a cost of $1,800. In addition to the regular services a Union Sabbath school, with 100 scholars, is zealously conducted by the Protestant people of Armourdale. The church, which numbers twenty members, is now making arrangements for a permanent pastor, to arrive next month.

The city of Armourdale was named for the Armours, bankers and pork packers. It gives promise of being the center of many great manufacturing interests, and already many large establishments have bought ground here and are moving out of Kansas City, which is just across the river. A new bridge, by the Belt Line Company, is now being erected across the Kansas River, in the southeast part of Armourdale. This will let the various railroads in to the elevators and other interests now building in that part of Armourdale.

MANUFACTURES.

The Kansas Desiccating and Refining Company of Armourdale, is composed chiefly of members of the Kaw Valley Town Site & Bridge Company, some of the members of the Stock Yards Company, while a few shares are owned by the packing houses in Kansas City, Kan. The company owns about twelve acres of land on the west or north bank of the Kansas River, adjoining the city of Armourdale, on which they have erected a three-story brick building, 145x150 feet, on the ground, with several wings, engine houses, etc., and placed therein necessary machinery at an expense of $75,000. These works are for the purpose of extracting the fatty matter from dead animals and converting the refuse into fertilizer. They obtain the dead animals at the stock yards, of the packing-houses and throughout the city. There are four large rendering tanks, with a capacity of 20,000 pounds each. On the 6th of March, 1882, one of these tanks exploded with such terrible force as to completely raze the building to the ground except the engine and boiler room. An immense force of men was immediately set to work by the energetic proprietors, and in the month of May the establishment again resumed operations. They now employ about twenty hands, most of their work being done by machinery. Their engine is of seventy horse-power, and occupies a building, 40x40, one story and a half high. Mr. C. W. Bange, formerly of Lawrence, is the Superintendent. The works are not so offensive as one would suppose. There is an invention operated by a system of fans which forces nearly all the disagreeable odors through a long pipe into a condenser, from which a sewer conducts the gas and water to the river. North of the desiccating works, on the same belt line railroad track, the pedestrian will find the elevator, which at present is the only elevator in Armourdale, although this city will be the headquarters for all the elevators as soon as the belt line is completed. The elevator we refer to, however, was removed from Kansas City, Mo., to its present location in the summer of 1882 by Arthur S. Pierce, the proprietor. It has a storage capacity of 200,000 bushels. Large additions are being made to the south side of the building to accommodate prospective business.

The Kansas City Bridge and Iron Company.—The yards, sheds and shops of the bridge company above mentioned are situated directly north of the elevator just mentioned. This is a Kansas City firm, at the head of which appears the name of G. H. Wheelock as President, and A. Blodgett as Secretary. They, too, were forced out of Kansas City for want of space, and have followed the natural channel of trade and improvements up the Kaw River. They are here, at Armourdale, extensively engaged in the manufacture of every variety of bridges for railroads and highways. They employ a capital of $30,000, and employ about thirty skilled mechanics.

The Armourdale Foundry was incorporated in June, 1882, with C. E. Moss, President, and G. H. Wheelock, Secretary. They commenced the erection of their buildings on Kansas avenue, and in September of said year were in operation. Their capital stock is $30,000. It is also a Kansas City business, and employs a large force of men. It is situated near the bridge leading across the river to Kansas City.

Agricultural Implement Factory.—In September, 1882, the firm of Trumbull & Reynolds, of Kansas City, Mo., commenced the erection of a building on Kansas avenue, in Armourdale, in which to engage in the manufacture of several varieties of agricultural implements. The buildings and ware rooms cover about four acres of ground, and an immense capital will be required to put in the machinery and operate the factory.

Armourdale is connected with Kansas City in Kansas and Missouri by a street car line. This line is to be extended to Argentine, and also by way of Armstrong to Wyandotte at an early day.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

MAJ. E. W. ANDERSON, Postmaster and dealer in books, stationery and notions. He came to Armourdale, Kan., in November, 1881; took charge of post office July 26, 1882. BLANTON, foreman of Armourdale Desiccating & Refining Company's Works, came to Leavenworth County in 1863, and engaged in agriculture until 1864; thence went to Weston, Platte County, Mo., and followed butchering and stock business until 1872, when he came to Kansas City, Mo., and followed the same occupation until 1880, when he took charge of the above works. He was born in Platte City, Mo., June 12, 1851, and made that his home until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1875, to Miss Elizabeth Hyre, of McDonough County, Ill. They have one son—Charles Lewis. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Kansas City, Mo. The Armourdale Desiccating and Refining Works were erected of brick in 1882. The size of the main building is 50 by 100 feet, three stories high; dry room, 50 by 50 feet, two stories high, and two store rooms same size, besides one store room 40 by 50 feet, two stories. Boiler room, 40 by 50 feet, two stories. The buildings, machinery and grounds cost about $100,000.

ROBERT E. CHANCE, contractor and builder, and a part lessor of Chance Brothers' Park. This is a beautiful park, consisting of many varieties of timber common to Kansas, and it is located in the northwestern portion of Armourdale. Mr. Chance was born in Weston, Mo., August 29, 1856, where he lived until 1867. He then went into the employ of the United States Government on river surveys, etc.; has followed the latter occupation two and one-half years, and during that time visited ten States and two Territories. Then locating at Armourdale, he began the carpenter and builders' trade, and has since followed it. He was married January 5, 1881, to Miss Mary K. Harmon, of Rockingham County, Va., born August 9, 1862. They had one son—Robert Franklin Chance, deceased.

SAMSON CHURCH, dealer in real estate and agent for the Kaw Valley Town Site & Bridge Company, having charge of a branch office at Armourdale. He also represents about twenty of the leading fire insurance companies. He located in Wyandotte Township May 5, 1871, and engaged in agricultural pursuits three years; thence embarked in the hotel business at Armstrong a year, that being the first hotel in the latter place. He then went into the grocery trade three years, after which he went into the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, as engineer of stationary engine two years, had charge of coach department a year, and in March, 1881, located in Armourdale, when he engaged in his present occupation, being the first real estate dealer to locate in that business in the village. He still carries on agriculture, owning over 470 acres of good land. He was born in Wise County, Va., June 30, 1848; lived there until 1865, and went to Jackson, Breathitt County, Ky., where he ran a saw-mill and carding factory two years. He then followed agriculture at Rising Sun, Ind., until he came to Kansas. He was married, in 1869, to Miss Emma Anderson, a native of Indiana. They have five children—Mamie, Freddie, John, Harry, and Pearl.

WILLIAM B. DOUGLASS, dealer in general merchandise, opened trade in January, 1882, with a stock of $500. He now carries a stock of $4,000. He came to the Kaw Valley, near Armourdale, in 1871, and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1882. In the fall of 1881, he bought and shipped twenty-two car loads of vegetables to Denver, Colo., and has dealt in farmers' produce since. He was the first City Treasurer in 1882, and Treasurer of the district schools the same year. He was born in Clermont County, Ohio, February 10, 1821, and was raised, after eight years, in Switzerland County, Ind., until 1869, when he moved to Howard County, Southern Ill., and lived there a year. Thence he returned to Switzerland County, and remained until 1871; thence to Wyandotte County, Kan. He has followed flatboating about eight years on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, from Cincinnati, Ohio, to New Orleans, La., having made twenty-four full trips, besides many short ones. He followed agriculture the remainder of the time. While flatboating, he was once robbed of $300. He enlisted in August, 1862, in Company C, Eighty-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and participated in the first battle of Vicksburg, beginning the second battle of the same; also in the capture of Arkansas Post. He was born in Pittsburgh, Penn., March 29, 1840. Learned the carpenter's trade under James Graham, a prominent contractor and builder in the city. In 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Twelfth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, serving out the call of ninety days, then returned to Pittsburgh, where he worked at his trade until 1864, when he moved to Kansas. After remaining for a short time in Kansas City and Wyandotte, he settled in Leavenworth, engaging in house carpentering. Shortly afterward, was engaged by Col. Gregg, to go to Hennosello, N. M., to put up a residence and other buildings; then on his return he located in Wyandotte, where he remained until the fall of 1866, engaged in contracting and building, thence returned to Pittsburgh, Penn., engaging there in house carpentering, until he returned to Wyandotte, and entered the employ of the Kansas Pacific Railroad. He was married in Pittsburgh, Penn., December 5, 1866, to Miss Catharine Gardner, of Allegheny City. They have four children—Mary B., William G., Isabelle and James, Jr. Mr. F. is a member of the Lodge and Encampment, I. O. O. F., being Past Grand, and is Past Chancellor in the K. of P. Is now President of the school board, serving his third term. He was three times President, and was a member six years.

JAMES F. HALL, foreman of the erecting department of the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position in 1875. He was born in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, September 27, 1824; commenced learning the machinist's trade at the age of fourteen years. His first railroad work was in the shops of the North British Railroad, at Newcastle. In 1853, he moved to the United States, and located in Paterson, N. J., where he was employed by Danforth, Cork, Smith & Jackson, about two years. He then entered the employ of the New York & Erie Railroad, at Piermont. He remained in the employ of the company about eleven years, moving to Elmira, N. Y., when the shops were moved. After spending a few months at Alexandria, Va., in Government employ, he settled in Nashville, Tenn., where he held the position as foreman of the round-house in the shops of the N. & C. Railroad. His health failing, he returned to Elmira, N. Y., where he held the same position in the shops of the New York & Erie Railroad about two years. From there he removed to Springfield, Ill., where he was employed in the shops of the Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad; thence to Chicago. After spending a short time here and in Memphis, Tenn., he returned to Springfield, and then moved to Omaha, where he was employed in the Union Pacific Railroad shops. He was first connected with the Kansas Pacific Railroad in 1870, as machinist, and has since remained in that department. He was married in Chicago, in 1867, to Miss Mattie Southerall, of that city. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and K. of P.

JOSEPH LEAF, foreman boiler department of the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position May 1, 1881. He was first connected with the Kansas Pacific Railroad in 1870, in this same department. He was born in Quincy, Ill., August 15, 1849, and commenced his trade at the age of fifteen years, and followed it in Quincy, Ill., and afterward in St. Louis, Mo., in the Rohn & Allison Boiler Works, where he remained until 1870. Since beginning his trade, he has not lost a single week's time, being continuously employed. He was married in Wyandotte, Kan., in 1870, to Miss Cecilia Houg, a native of Quincy, Ill. They have four children, Joseph, Jr., John, Theresa and Harvey.

JAMES MACKENZIE, master mechanic Kaw Valley Division Union Pacific Railway, was appointed to his present position in June, 1881. He was born in Kilmarnock, Ayrshire County, Scotland, June 13, 1824. He was apprenticed to the machinist's trade at the age of seventeen years. In 1844, he came to the United States, locating in New York City, where he followed his trade until 1847, when he moved to Schenectady, N. Y., where he worked in the locomotive works some six years. He then moved to Susquehanna, Penn., where he was employed in the New York & Erie Railroad shops, remaining some years. After spending about two years in the employ of the Toronto Locomotive works, he returned to New York State, and took charge of the Eagle Foundry, at Troy. About one year later, he returned to the Susquehanna shops. About 1857, he went South to take the position as foreman of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad shops at Memphis, Tenn. During the war, he was in the shops at Chattanooga, Tenn., and remained there after the town was captured by the United States troops, and was afterward at Bowling Green, Nashville, and other points, until about 1875. He then came north, to take the position of foreman of the shops at Jackson, Mich., of the Lansing & Saginaw Railroad. Shortly afterward he took the same position at Detroit, with the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad, where he remained a number of years. From this road, he went to the Union Pacific Railway, as foreman of the machine shops. From that was promoted to his present position. He was married in Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1844, to Miss M. White, of that county, who died leaving six children, of whom there survive, John, now Superintendent of the New York, Chicago, & St. Louis Railroad; James, Adam, Margaret, now Mrs. John Lindsey; Sarah, now Mrs. William White. He was married to his present wife at Nashville, Tenn. She was Mrs. Sallie (Cook) West of that city.

S. W. MEYER, chief clerk motive power and car department of the Kaw Valley Division of the Union Pacific Railroad, was born in Franklin County, Mo., October 10, 1854. He was educated in Wyandotte County, Kan. In 1869, he took a position as clerk in car shops of the Kansas Pacific Railway at Wyandotte. In 1871, he was transferred to the Superintendent of machinery's office of same road at Armstrong, and in 1873 he was transferred to the Auditor's office of the same road at Kansas City, Mo. On the consolidation of the Union and Kansas Pacific Railroad Companies in 1879, he was promoted to the chief clerkship of motive power and car department of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific Railroad, which position he has since retained, excepting a few months' interval, which he spent in the Auditor's office of the Union Pacific Railroad at Omaha, Neb. He was married in Kansas City, Mo., December 16, 1875, to Miss Lucy Bell.

CHARLES MULBEY, proprietor Armstrong Brick Yard, and manufacturer of a fine quality of brick, began operations in the spring of 1882; employs six men in the business, and manufactures 6,000 brick per day. He came to Wyandotte, Kan., in the spring of 1882. He opened a brick yard at Kansas City, Mo., in the spring of 1881, and continued until he came to Armstrong. He was born in Columbus, Ohio, July 4, 1847, and was raised a farmer and brickmaker. He was married in the spring of 1881, to Miss Mattie Edgar, of Hocking County, Ohio. They are members of the Catholic Church.

THOMAS NEWTON, foreman of the wood-working machinery department of the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position in 1875. He was first connected with the Kansas Pacific Railway in 1872, in the same department of which he is now foreman. He was born near Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, September 21, 1842, of Scotch parentage. His parents moved to Roxburyshire, Scotland, while he was an infant. He commenced as a boy in the saw-mill there, and continued until 1861, when he located in Woodstock, Canada West, where he was employed in a saw-mill about two years; then moved to Detroit, Mich., working for a time in private mills. In 1865, he became connected with the Detroit Car Company shops, remaining about three years; then went to the Michigan Central Railroad shops in the same department, remaining there until he went to the Kansas Pacific Railroad. He was married in Detroit, Mich., January 2, 1873, to Miss Josephine MacQuillin, a native of Monroe, Mich. They have three children—George C., Thomas W. and William R. Mr. N. is a member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter and Council, A., F. & A. M., and also of the I. O. O. F.

ALMOND NOBLE, engineer, now running an engine on the Union Pacific Railroad, came to Leavenworth in 1855, where he spent his school days. Enlisted in 1862, in Company A, Twelfth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and participated in all the battles of his command, and was once badly wounded; mustered out in 1865. He then engaged as a fireman on an engine two years, after which he was promoted to engineer, and has since had charge of an engine. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1845, and was raised in that city until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1879, to Miss Delia Van Netten. They have two children—Harry V., and an infant daughter, not yet named.

THOMAS B. ROBERTS, master car builder in the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position August 18, 1871, and has held it continuously since. He began his connection with railroad work about 1858, under William Dodd, contractor of bridges and buildings in the Great Western Railroad, of Canada, at Toronto, and was afterward employed in the car building department of that road. He then moved to Detroit, where he was appointed foreman of the car building department of the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad. Remained in the employ of this company from August 15, 1860, until August 15, 1865. He then resigned, and took the position of general foreman of the Crogan street car shops for H. H. Leroy. He continued in this place from August 18, 1865, to July 18, 1867, when he was called by Supt. J. B. Southerland to the Michigan Central Railroad, to take charge of the shops of the company at Detroit. He held the position of foreman of the shops here from July 18, 1867, until August 15, 1871, when he resigned to take his present position. He was born in Bromley, England, December 18, 1828. His parents moved to Toronto, Canada, about 1831, where he commenced his trade at the age of fifteen years. He spent six years at carpentering, joining, stair building, etc. He then went into contracting and building on his own account, putting up mills, etc., until 1858. He was married at Thornhill, near Toronto, Canada, to Miss Nancy Dunlap, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland. They have eleven children—Thomas G., David R., Joseph, John, James, Emily A., Susan J., Ellen G., Margaret, Minnie and Elmira. Mr. Roberts has been a member of the City Council two terms. He is Royal Arch Mason and a member of the Eastern Star Lo[illegible] and also the K. of P.

DAVID E. TYLE[illegible] chief clerk of the store department of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific Railroad, was appointed to his present position in 1883. Has been connected with the Union Pacific Railroad since August, 1881, always in this department. He was born in Clarksville, Huron Co., Ohio, August 2, 1842. He was educated in his native county, and engaged in clerking until the breaking-out of the war. In 1861, he enlisted in Company B, Third Regiment Ohio Cavalry; veteranized in 1864, and was shortly afterward appointed Adjutant of the regiment. He was in all the campaigns of the Army of the Cumberland. On the close of the war, he removed to Missouri, and engaged in farming there until 1872, when he removed to Kansas, locating in Brookville, Saline County, engaging in dairy farming until 1881. He was married in Huron County, Ohio, September 28, 1865, to Miss Gertrude A. Seger, of that county. They have four children—Maude, Winnie, Charles S. and Orno.

JOHN VOLK, foreman of the blacksmithing department of the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position in July, 1878. He was born in Piermont, Rockland Co., N. Y., March 27, 1829. He first became connected with railroad work in 1846, in the shops of the New York & Erie Railroad, at Piermont, where he remained until he came of age. He then took charge of machinery in a bridge shop at Oswego, N. Y., about one year, and afterward went to Chicago, where he was employed in the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad shops, holding a position as foreman some two or three years. He was called by Supt. Walsh, of the Chicago & Alton Railroad, to take charge of the mechanical department at Joliet, and was employed to take charge with Mr. Walsh of the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad shops at Hannibal, Mo., where he remained twenty two years and one month. While at Hannibal, he was Alderman sixteen years, and member and Secretary of the Board of Education six years. He has been foreman in all some thirty years. From the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad he moved to Kansas, to take his present position. He was married in Joliet, Ill., November 25, 1854, to Miss Helen Van Auken, a native of New York State. They have four children—Ida, now Mrs. Arthur Cole; Helen, now Mrs. MacArmstrong; Alice and Anna. Mr. Volk is a member of Blue Lodge and Chapter, A., F. & A. M.

WILLIAM WHITE, foreman of the copper and tin department of the Union Pacific Railroad shops, was appointed to his present position in 1870. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, September 17, 1843. He began his trade at the age of twelve years, and followed it in his native city until he came to the United States in 1868. He settled in Chicago, where he was employed at distillery work until 1870, when he was called by George W. Cushing, Superintendent of motive power, to take his present position. Mr. White was married in Wyandotte, Kan., to Miss Sarah Mackenzie, daughter of James Mackenzie, Esq.

ROSEDALE.

Rosedale City was platted in 1872, by James G. Brown, and covers the territory embraced in the following description: South half of the southwest quarter of Section 27, northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 34, Township 11, Range 25 east; also a strip of land on south part of the north half of southwest quarter of Section 27, Township 11, Range 25 east. The building of the town was commenced in 1875, the rolling mills which will be hereinafter mentioned having been located here in that year. It was not until the year 1877, however, that the city contained the necessary population of 600 to demand a government under the act authorizing the existence of cities of the third class. August 3, of that year, Judge Stevens ordered an election for the 28th of that month, which resulted in the selection of the following city officers for the year to ensue: Mayor, D. S. Mathias; Councilmen, John Hutchinson, Sr., Henry Juergens, William Bowen, John Haddock, Benjamin Bousman; Police Judge, Edward Blanford; City Clerk, William Dauks. Since that time nearly all the trades and professions have looked upon Rosedale, and the result has been that each is now represented here. The present city government is administered by, Mayor, David E. Jones; Councilmen, L. A. Wohlfarth, Morgan Lewis, Henry Juergens, D. S. Mathias, Richard Hughes; Police Judge, W. A. Purviance; City Clerk, W. D. Mathias.

Arrangements have been made by the city to build an immense reservoir south of the city, and 150 feet above the level of the streets for the purpose of supplying the town with water. The water will be pumped from Turkey Creek, a beautiful natural stream which impetuously rushes through the vale in which the town is situated. The ponderous engines at the rolling mills are to pump the water from the creek to the reservoir for the sum of three mills per barrel. Fire hydrants will be conveniently located throughout the town for the benefit of the city. This will be the cheapest and most complete system of water works in the West.

The city has an elegant school building conveniently located on Kansas City avenue; nearly 300 hundred scholars are in attendance; four teachers are employed in the white school, and one in the colored department, which has an average attendance of fifty scholars.

The School Board is composed of Hon. Horatio Gates, G. F. Espenlaub and George Wood.

The city has a population of 1,800, and is one of the neatest and most prosperous towns in this part of the State. Churches and societies are well attended and supported in Rosedale, and have ever been prosperous since the town was in its infancy.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The Catholic Church in Rosedale, is one of the oldest church organizations in the city, having come into existence in 1876. It built a church building the following year, which, in February, 1881, was consumed by fire. It had, however, previously completed the frame edifice on Kansas City avenue, and was not without a house of worship. The church books show fifty-four names enrolled, and their actual church property is worth $1,500. Rev. A. M. Weikman, the pastor in charge, resides at Shawnee.

The Methodist Church is located on Bluff street, and is an elegant building erected in 1881 at an expense of $2,000. Services are held therein regularly every Sunday by Rev. J. H. Colt, the pastor, and a well attended Sabbath school attests the zeal of the church organization.

The Union Sunday School has the largest attendance of any school in the city. In the winter of 1882, the number of scholars in attendance reached 280. D. S. Mathias, superintendent.

The Colored Baptist Society built a church in 1882 valued at $1,000. Previous to the erection of this building, the church held regular service in the schoolhouse. Their organization numbers forty-three members.

In September, 1882, a society bearing the name of "Law and Order Society," was organized in Rosedale. Its avowed object is to oppose in every legal manner the open and repeated violation of the prohibitory law in this otherwise peaceful and orderly city.

The existence of the rolling mills and other manufacturing institutions in the town has led to the organization and maintenance of numerous secret, moral and beneficiary societies. A perusal of the list will convince the reader that the people of Rosedale know the value of organization in whatever they attempt.

The Lodge of Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers is one of the largest and most important in Rosedale, numbering over 100 members. The order meets regularly, and at this writing is presided over by William Rankin, President; William Vaughn, Vice President; James B. Mullay, Recording Secretary; Newton Watson, Financial Secretary: S. P. Lewis, Corresponding Reporter. This union was organized August 13, 1881.

The Court of the A. O. of Foresters, which was instituted September 28, 1880, meets every Monday evening, and is called "Pride of Rosedale," No. 6663. The officers for the present term are John Wolfe, C. R.; William Bowen, S. C. R.; W. A. Purviance, Secretary; S. J. Jones, Treasurer; Dr. L. A. Wohlfarth, Court Physician. The roll of the Court shows over forty members.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen has a lodge in Rosedal[illegible]h was organized in 1881, and now contains over 100 members. George Wood is M. W., William Mathias, Financier, and D. E. Jones, Recorder.

The Good Templars organized a lodge and commenced holding regular meetings in 1879. The present officers are Morgan Lewis, W. C. T.; Ja[illegible] P. Mallay, R. S.; Amanda Smallwood, W. V. T.; Newton Watson, F. S.; D. J. Watkin[illegible]rer.

Achilles, No. 54, K. of P.—Not until the 9th day of Sep[illegible] 1882, was a lodge of the Knights of Pythias established in Rosedale. On that date, ninety-seven visiting Knights, accompanied by P. G. C. Lyon, instituted Achilles, No. 54, K. of P., of Rosedale, with forty-six charter members. The officers are Daniel E. Davis, C. C.; W. P. Vaughn, V. C.; George Gilbert, M. of T.; G. Whipple, M. of E.; G. Kilmer, K. of R. and S.

MANUFACTURES.

The Kansas Rolling Mills—Were established in Rosedale in the year 1875; what little machinery then constituted the mills was brought here from Decatur, Ill. The company has been constantly making additions to their works until their present capacity is something marvelous for so young an institution in such a small young city. The mills now employ 500 men, and manufacture nearly every variety of railroad supplies, including iron rails, and anything that can be thought of in the way of miners' tools and equipments. They also make a specialty of harrow teeth, girder plates and many articles of builders' supplies. The engines aggregate 500 horse-power, and together with the furnaces consume twelve car loads of coal per day. The capacity of these mills enables them to manufacture each week 500 tons of rails; 33,000 splice bars; 270,000 pounds of spikes, and 30,000 pounds of bolts. Their cooper shop on the premises, for the manufacture of kegs for spikes, turns out 500 kegs daily. The company at present is officered by, A. B. Stone, President; Ira Harris, Vice President and General Manager: Edward V. Wilkes, Secretary and Treasurer; and D. S. Mathias, Superintendent. They have about ten tenement houses in the town occupied by employes. A forging shop is connected with the mills, in which is operated a 700 pound steam hammer. Quite important changes and improvements are contemplated by the company for the coming year. Their monthly pay roll varies from $10,000 to $25,000, and skilled workmen who work by the piece realize big wages.

These mills manufactured during the year ending July 1, 13,000 tons of rails; 5,200 tons of splice bars; 4,500 tons of spikes; 4,000 tons of miscellaneous goods.

Next in importance among the manufacturing interests of Rosedale come the following:

Thor Iron Works.—This company which is now officered by Ira Harris, President; George H. Nettleton, Vice President; E. V. Wilkes, Treasurer; and B. F. Pierce, Secretary and Manager, commenced operations in Rosedale early in the summer of 1878. It was then known as the Kansas Iron Fence Company, and was an off-shoot of the rolling mills just mentioned. The special attention of this company is given to iron fencing of every style, and to the manufacturing of all kinds of machinery. They are now engaged in making bridge castings and girders. The company employs about seventy-five men, and their monthly pay roll amounts to $3,500. Their buildings are located just north of the rolling mills, and the general office is in Kansas City, Mo., corner of Sixth and Wyandotte streets.

The Rosedale Coal and Mining Company, Capt. Ira Harris, President, and John Haigh Superintendent, is next in order of importance in Rosedale. In the fall of 1881, at a depth of 335 feet, this company struck a twenty-inch vein of coal, which they have been operating since that time. They are now sinking a shaft 75 or 100 feet deeper where they expect to find a thicker vein. The company at present employs eighteen men at the shaft.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

W. C. COPLEY, proprietor of Rosedale Hotel, was born in Cass County, Mo., February 25, 1847; is a son of Almon and Lydia Ann Copley. When he was only three years of age, his father was caught in the shafting of a mill near Harrisonville, Mo., and killed. They continued their residence in Missouri until August, 1861, when the Confederates destroyed their mill, burned their house and nearly all that it contained; took all their horses, ran off with their cattle and sheep, and threatened their lives, and they were compelled to leave the State in the night; were overtaken on the road, and but for the remonstrances of his mother and the timely arrival of Col. Jennison's regiment, they would have been massacred. After their arrival in Kansas, they lived for a short time at Baldwin City, one year at Ohio City, and since then his mother, step-father and family have lived at Paola, Kan. He entered Kalamazoo College, Michigan, in the spring of 1862. After attending four years, he returned to Paola, Kan., in the spring of 1866, and engaged as clerk in a mercantile house three years. He next assisted in the survey of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad one year, and afterward acted as agent for the Western Pump Company two years. He then bought and improved a farm of 163 acres. He still owns and leases his farm, but is at present engaged in the hotel business at Rosedale. This house is first-class, and convenient to depot, and is supplied with the modern arrangements for the convenience of the traveling public. He was married at Freeman, Cass County, Mo., December 1, 1870, to Carrie Wygal, daughter of Daniel and Mary Wygal. They have three children, Charlie Almon, Le Grand Anderson and George William.

DAVID E. JONES, Assistant Superintendent of Kansas Rolling Mills, was born in Wales, October 13, 1855, son of John E. and Ann Jones. When about six years of age, he moved with his parents to America, stopped a short time at Philadelphia, and then moved to Cleveland. His father was engaged in a rolling mill here, and afterward at Chicago; he attended school in both these cities until 1867, when he went into the office of the Chicago Plate and Bar Mill Company; served over three years as shipping clerk. Next went to Pittsburgh and entered the Western University of Pennsylvania; attended one term. He attended the public schools in Pittsburgh about six months, and then for the next eighteen months was connected with a sash and door factory. From Pittsburgh he went to Chicago, and, after three months' stay there, he came to Rosedale, Kan., but the next year returned to Pittsburgh, and three or four months afterward, was sent for to fill the position which he has ever since occupied in the Kansas Rolling Mill Company. In addition to the duties of an Assistant Superintendent of the rolling mills, he is serving as Mayor of the City of Rosedale, having twice been elected to this office. He was married in Rosedale September 22, 1881, to Lenora E. Mathias, an educated and accomplished lady, a native of Indiana, and daughter of David and Mary Mathias. He is financier of the A. O. U. W., and is a young man of more than ordinary promise, having already served acceptably in several very responsible positions, both in business and official life.

FRANKLIN A. McDOWELL, contractor, came to Kansas in the fall of 1855, and located where he lives at present. He engaged in teaming three years, then, in company with H. Wood, of Wyandotte, owned and operated a saw-mill eighteen months, on Kaw River, where Argentine is now located. He next engaged in merchandising a short time, at his original place, then farmed one season, and the next two years lived in Shelby County, Ky. He then came to Westport in the fall of 1865, and took charge of an ox train for J. W. Prowers, which left Westport September 9, and reached Fort Union November 9. On return trip, laid over in Raton Mountains eight days, and at Fort Lyons left most of wagons, and about the 1st of December started for home with two wagons and twenty men; were afterward joined by another outfit of six wagons and thirty men. Thirty miles above Fort Larned, a snow storm set in, but they moved on to Coon Creek, twelve miles from Larned, where they camped, and the storm was so severe that they lost all their cattle, and were obliged to send into the fort for relief. The Governor sent out two ambulances, one of which broke down on the way back. Two men who could not get in, and had attempted to walk, gave out, and were stowed away in the broken down ambulance, and rescued with frozen feet the next day. After a rest of ten days in Larned, Mr. McDowell hired a man with a two-horse wagon to haul their blankets and provisions to Council Grove, while the men walked. At Council Grove he hired conveyance for his men to Westport, while he went in advance by stage to Lawrence, and thence by rail to Westport. He reached home December 25, 1865; engaged in the grocery business at Westport the next two years; then opened and improved a farm in the southeast corner of Wyandotte County. In 1872, he moved to West Kansas City and operated a saw-mill one year; returned to his farm, and for the next six years engaged in the dairy business, one year at the farm and the remaining five years at the place where he now lives. The last year he has been contracting. His home is only one mile from Kansas City, and his yard fence is on the Kansas and Missouri State line. He has been quite successful in business, and has a comfortable home and an intelligent family. He was the first constable ever elected in Shawnee Township. He has served as Justice of the Peace one term, and for many years has been a member of the School Board. He was born in Johnson County, Mo., January 28, 1835; son of Joseph and Nancy McDowell. When twelve years of age, he moved to Kansas City and lived in that city from 1847 to 1855, when he came to Kansas. He was married in Wyandotte County, Kan., September 27, 1859, to Mary Elizabeth Beatty, an accomplished lady from Kentucky, and daughter of William and Elizabeth Beatty. He has four children, viz., Sue Fannie, Jessie, Perie Soule and Laura May. He and wife are worthy members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

DAVID MATHIAS, master roll turner in Kansas Rolling Mills, was born in Dowlais, Wales, December 31, 1823; is a son of David and Margaret Mathias. Was raised and educated in the city of Dowlais. Learned his trade there and understood every branch of the iron business. Served as master roller in his native city. Went to Gune, France, in 1845; worked in a rolling mill one year; then to Scotland, and superintended a rolling mill at Mossend eight years; then moved to Pittsburgh, United States, and worked as roller in a mill one year; thence to Indianapolis, where he worked in the same capacity, until 1863, when he went to Chicago, built and took charge of the Union Rolling Mills. Remained three years, then took charge of the Great Western Rolling Mills at Hamilton, Canada West, until 1867, when he took charge of the Superior Rail Mill, of Pittsburgh, and two years after bought and operated the mill under the firm name of Harbaugh, Mathias & Owens, and in 1874, went under on account of the great financial panic. He next superintended the Newark Rolling Mill in Ohio, until he came to Rosedale, Kan., in the summer of 1875, where he has been steadily at work as master roll turner ever since, with the exception of a few months spent in Colorado. His son, D. S. Mathias, was the first Mayor of Rosedale, and served two terms, and in April, 1879, was himself made Mayor, and served one term. He was married in Rhymney, Wales, January 3, 1843, to Mary Llewellyn, daughter of Stephen and Ann Llewellyn. He has seven children, viz.: David S., Margaret, Mary Ann, Emma, William D., Leonora and General Ulysses Grant. He is a worthy Mason and a member of the I. O. O. F.; the Ivorites, also of the Congregational Church. Is an active worker in the Sunday school. He has one of the finest residences in Rosedale, and owns besides his residence, eight other houses which he lets or leases.

GEORGE H. WOOD, Superintendent of Thor Iron Works, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., July 12, 1838. Son of William N. and Phœbe E. Woods. At the age of fourteen, left Buffalo and went to sea; served on a merchant's vessel. In the winter of 1859, sailed from New York for Sydney, Australia, on the bark Crusader, sailed around Cape of Good Hope to Sydney, thence to Valparaiso on the coast of Chili, then up the coast of Ecuador and finally around Cape Horn to Baltimore, Md., completing the entire journey around the world in eleven months and twenty-one days. Was on another voyage from New York to Buenos Ayres, South America, and returned to Baltimore, Md., then went home, and his father fitted him up a blacksmith and machine shop, but the rebellion breaking out a few months afterward, he enlisted at New York City in the United States Navy, April 22, 1861. Was mustered in May 9, as an able seaman. Went out under command of Com. Dupon in the United States steam frigate Wabash. Just six months after his enlistment and following the engagement at Fort Pulaski, he was promoted to a master's mate. Afterward transferred from the Wabash and put in command of the celebrated yacht America, captured from the rebels; he run her as a dispatch boat, along the coast from Port Royal to Charleston, and as far as Fernandina, Fla., and made several important captures with her. He afterward applied for a transfer, and served as ensign on the gunboat Seneca. He was in the engagements at Charleston, Port Royal, Fort Fisher, Hatteras Inlet, Wilmington and Richmond. Was mustered out October 14, 1865. After close of war, sailed two seasons on the upper lakes, then went into the machine shops at Cambridge City, Ind., thence to Decatur, Ill., 1871, and finally came to Rosedale, Kan., in the summer of 1875, and has been engaged as Superintendent of Thor Iron Works ever since, until its recent consolidation with the rolling mills, and he is now serving in the capacity of Assistant Superintendent of the Kansas Rolling Mills. Mr. Woods is also Treasurer of Shawnee Township, and Treasurer of School District No. 15. He was married in Cambridge, Ind., November 12, 1862, to Mary M. Jackson, an intelligent and accomplished lady, a native of Indiana, and daughter of Wilson and Lydia Jackson. He has five children—all boys, viz.: George H., Charles Judson, Arthur Rodgers, William Wilson and Walter Woods. Mr. Woods is a member of the I. O. O. F., also K. of P. and is P. M., A. O. U. W. He and wife are worthy members of the Missionary Baptist Church, and recognized leaders in society.

ARGENTINE.

The thriving young city of Argentine is situated on the south bank of the Kansas River, three miles from its mouth. The location of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe transfer depot here was rendered necessary in order to find room for their side tracks, round house, coal chute and sheds. This location on the south bank of the river is pleasant, convenient, dry and roomy. A town sprung up here at once, and as the different business interests have continued to select this as a location for manufacturing, the town has grown accordingly. The town site proper is a subdivision of Sections 20 and 29, Township 11, Range 25 east. It was platted in November, 1880, and originally contained sixty acres. James M. Coburn was proprietor of the first town site.

The Kansas Town Company, of Wyandotte County, was organized under its charter of date of April 9, 1881; capital, $100,000. Incorporators, William B. Strong, George O. Manchester, Joab Mulvane, E. Wilder, J. R. Mulvane, the same being Directors for the first year. Officers elected, Joab Mulvane, President and Manager, and E. Wilder, Secretary and Treasurer. There were purchased for this company some 415 acres of land in Sections 20, 21, 28, 29, Town 11, Range 25 east, in Wyandotte County, Kan., and after turning over to the Kansas City, Topeka & Western Railroad what was desired for railroad purposes, the remainder, some 300 acres, was platted and put upon the market as Mulvane's Addition to the town of Argentine.

In 1882, Judge Dexter having become satisfied that this young city had a sufficient number of inhabitants to entitle it to a city government therefore ordered an election to be held on the first Tuesday in August, 1882. The following are the names of the officers then elected: Mayor, G. W. Gully; Councilmen, John Steffins, A. Borgstede, W. C. Blue, Patrick O'Brien and George Simmons; Police Judge, A. J. Dolley; Marshal, Charles Duvall; City Clerk, J. H. Halderman.

In October, 1881, District No. 40 was made a separate district to include the city of Argentine, and the following School Board elected: A. T. Smith, President; John Steffins, Treasurer; William Erwin, Secretary.

During the winter of 1881 and 1882, a very successful school was held. The colored children attended a separate school taught by a colored lady. The necessity of a public school building now becoming apparent, on the 28th day of August, 1882, an election was held to vote bonds to the amount of $7,000 for the purpose of building a schoolhouse. The bonds were carried and the building is now in process of erection.

The Congregationalists of this city have held services in this town since the summer of 1881, but it was not until the 21st day of May, 1882, that the church was organized. It commenced with a membership of forty-five. They were temporarily using a building for divine service while devising ways and means for the erection of a church, when the wind of June, 1882, which destroyed so much church and school property in eastern Kansas, almost completely destroyed their house of worship. Then was their opportunity, and in three months they had completed their new church building, corner of Ruby avenue and Second street. The property is richly worth $3,000. Their pastor is the Rev. J. W. Johnson. A Sunday school is held and an average attendance of sixty-five scholars reported.

This town was called into existence by the pressure of business a few miles east of it, and although now only on the out-post of the trade and commerce marching up the valley of the Kansas River, it is already taking advantage of the tide and putting its house in order.

BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The Kansas City Smelting and Refining Company located at Argentine in 1880 and was ready for business in August of the same year. This company employs something over 250 men and the work never ceases. Day and night are only known here by the change of gangs of men. The buildings are a series of structures not specially designed for their beauty, but adapted to the business of separating from the ores and base bullion the several marketable metals. The ore and base bullion is received from the mining districts of the mountains and is here crushed, separated and refined. It is known as a lead smelter, but their refining process produces from a ton of base bullion from one-tenth of an ounce to ten ounces of gold; from two ounces to five hundred ounces of silver, and the balance nearly all lead. The capital stock of the company is $200,000. The officers of the company are A. R. Meyer, President and Treasurer; O. F. Morse, Vice President; and M. E. Smith, Secretary. In the summer of 1882, they purchased the building and business of the "Western Lead Manufacturing Company" and moved the business within their own enclosure, leaving the building of the Lead Manufacturing Company at present unoccupied.

These works have twenty acres of land at the smelter, and the necessary buildings offices, guard houses, sheds and dwellings, nearly covering the grounds. Mr. W. N. Ewing, the originator of the enterprise in Argentine, disposed of his interest in the smelter early in 1882, and has since devoted himself to his real estate interests and the growth of Argentine.

The Transfer Depot of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway at this place is a business of no small importance. At present writing, nearly 600 men are employed by the Santa Fe Company at this point. The round house, the coal chute, and something like twelve miles of side track and 70,000 or 80,000 feet of transfer platform will give the reader an idea of how and where these men are employed. Not all of them, however, reside in Argentine, although this young city has a population of about 800.

With all the adjuncts of a thriving town, with a rapid sale of property and advance in values, resultant from the patent fact that this is already one of, if not the very best point for manufacturing, in view of its nearness to Kansas City, with her concentration of railroads, and the further fact that the Union Stock Yards, within a year or two, are to be removed to a point opposite, on the north bank of the river, now connected by a wagon bridge, and in the near future, this, with Armourdale, Armstrong, Wyandotte and Kansas City, will be one great city.

The Myers House, a large and handsome two-story frame building near the depot, is the largest hotel in town up to date, although several others are projected. It was completed in the summer of 1882.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOSEPH F. BAEHR, druggist, was born in Dunluth, Ill., December 15, 1859, son of Joseph and Mary Baehr. At an early age he left Illinois, and with his parents immigrated to Iowa, and thence to Wisconsin, where his father engaged several years in lead mining, but finally went to Lexington, Mo., where he engaged in the grocery business about fifteen years, with the exception of two or three years spent in the meantime at Leavenworth City, Kan. The subject of this sketch was educated partly in the public schools at Lexington, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kan., but afterward attended the College of the Christian Brothers, at St. Louis, Mo., one year, and graduated from the College of Pharmacy, March 12, 1879. He was employed as prescription clerk in a drug store in St. Louis, from July 8, 1874, until December 31, 1879, than came to Kansas City, Mo., where he was engaged as prescription clerk in the drug firm of James M. Love & Company, until June, 1880, when he went to Las Vegas, N. M., and took charge of drug business for Griswold & Company, until November 20, of same year. He then went to Alamosa, Col., where he had charge of the drug store of P. L. Craig, until April, 1881, when he bought it out, and with a partner carried on the business till March, 1882. He then sold out and came to Kansas and opened a drug store at Armourdale, but moved his business in September, to present location, where he has carried it on ever since. He was married in St. Louis, April 18, 1881, to Lizzie Schub, a native of St. Louis, and the accomplished daughter of Carl and Hermina Schub. Mr. Baehr carries a complete stock of drugs, toilet articles and notions, and has already won the confidence and respect of the people, and is justly recognized as one of the representative men of Argentine.

CHARLES LEROY BURKE, M. D., physician and surgeon, came to Kansas in the fall of 1864, located at Spring Hill, Johnson Co., Kan. Was then only eleven years of age. Lived with his parents on a farm five years, then engaged with his father in the drug business at Spring Hill about five years. He then attended the Illinois State Normal School about one year, and afterward the Kansas State University four years, and then attended the Kansas City University of Medicine where he graduated March 2, 1882, and immediately began the practice of his profession at Argentine, Wyandotte Co., Kan., and has had a growing practice ever since, indeed has already won an enviable reputation as a physician, and has enjoyed a lucrative patronage from the beginning. He was born in Summerfield, St. Clair Co., Ill., February 8, 1854. Is a son of Ira and Caroline C. Burke. He was raised on a farm until eleven years of age, and came direct from his native county in Illinois, to Johnson County, Kan. He is unmarried. He has, combined with a prepossessing personal appearance, the native talent, the education and culture required to render him proficient in his profession.

JAMES R. HOWE, Justice of the Peace and Police Judge, came to Kansas April 20, 1871; located near Belmont, Woodson County, and taught school one year; then bought a farm in Wilson County, Kan.; farmed in the summer and taught in the winter for four years; then devoted his entire time to his farm. In February, 1880, was elected Justice of the Peace, and served until he came to Argentine, October, 1881; was very much broken down in health when he came to Wyandotte, but was cured of general debility by two months' attendance at Dickinson's Medical Institute, Kansas City, Mo., after which he engaged in teaming about six months. He is recognized as one of the useful men in Argentine; is now serving as Justice of the Peace, Police Judge and Director of the School Board. He was born in Shelby County, Ill., November 7, 1841; is a son of Eliakim and Hannah Howe; he was educated at Newbury Seminary, in the State of Vermont, and completed the prescribed course of that institution, and afterward taught two years in his native county; he then engaged in farming four years, and again taught for five or six years, until his removal to Kansas, in the spring of 1877. He was married in Wilson County, Kan., April 24, 1873, to Mary L. Gillaspie, a native of Iowa, and daughter of Thomas and Mary Gillaspie. Mr. Howe has four children, viz.: Mark M., Oral A., John C. and Marinda Howe.

JOHN B. MARSHEL, assistant freight agent A., T. & S. F. R. R., at Argentine, came to Kansas September, 1867, and accepted a position as operator at Junction City, Kan., for the U. P. E. D. R. R., now called the U. R. R. W., Kansas Division, served eighteen months, then served the Memphis & Ohio Railroad in same capacity at Humboldt, Tenn., until October, 1874; he then continued in the employ of this road as night dispatcher at Memphis two years. The next five or six years, he was engaged as chief clerk of the Union Transfer Company, at Louisville, Ky., and in May, 1882, was made assistant freight agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad, at Argentine. He was born in New Albany, Ind., April 28, 1849, son of Blaine and Mary Marshel. He lived in New Albany till 1860, and then moved to Louisville, Ky. He was engaged one month in 1862 on the gunboat Tuscumbia; was discharged on account of youth; returned to Louisville, where he remained until 1863; and the next four years lived in New Haven, Nelson Co., Ky., and in September, 1867, moved to Junction City, Davis Co., Kan. He was married in New Albany, Ind., November 20, 1872, to Louise L. Sabin, a native of Indiana, and daughter of Elijah and Martha Sabin. They have three children, viz.: Addison, Jennie and Charlotte. Mr. Marshel was educated in the public schools of New Albany and Louisville; is a man of pleasing address, quick perception and industrious habits, possessing in a marked degree all those qualities which make a successful business man.

JOHN E. MYERS, practical engineer and proprietor of Argentine Hotel, was born in Canfield, Mahoning Co., Ohio, June 26, 1829, is a son of George and Eliza Myers. At an early age, went with his parents to Trumbull County, Ohio. He was educated partly in the public schools of that county, but afterward attended Hiram College, at the time Garfield was President of the institution. He learned his trade at Cleveland, in the shops of the Cleveland & Erie Railroad, now the Lake Shore & Southern Railroad, and then served as engineer of the Michigan Central Railroad fourteen years. He next moved his family to Parsons, Kan., and accepted a position as engineer on the M. K. & T. R. R., and afterward on Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. He served the latter company about four years. He moved his family in the meantime to Kansas City, where he very judiciously invested in town property, in which he has already realized a handsome profit. He has built four dwellings in Kansas City, which bring him quite an income from rentals. He also bought four vacant lots for $125 each, for two of which he has refused an offer of $9,000. He was transferred from the Gulf road to the K. C., Lawrence & Southern Kansas Branch, since purchased by the A., T. & S. F. Co. He has erected a large two-story hotel in Argentine, where his family moved August, 1882; his house is first-class in every respect, is 22x60 feet, with an ell 30x50, containing about thirty rooms, with a broad veranda seventy-two feet long; hotel convenient to the depot, and the only first-class hotel in Argentine. Mr. Myers was married in Calhoun County, Mich., September 23, 1867, to Augusta Starks, a native of Michigan, and the daughter of Samuel C. and Mary Jane Starks. They have one child—Orrin J. Myers. Mrs. Myers is a worthy member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

DR. GEORGE W. NEVILLE, was born in Barren County, Ky., June 17, 1822, is a son of James and Phœbe Neville; was raised on a farm in his native county until the year 1844; read medicine under Doctors Jett and Gardener, Munfordville, Ky., and under Green and McMichael, of Blue Springs, Barren Co., Ky. Dr. Neville has been a studious man all his life, and is self-made. He moved to Booneville, Cooper Co., Mo., March, 1854. He practiced medicine in Cooper County about eighteen months, and was then sent by the St. Louis & M. E. South Conference to Westport and Kansas City on the Independent Circuit as junior minister with Samuel Colburne, and at the solicitation of the Stewards, was retained as retention minister at Kansas City and Westport one quarter, but then gave up his charge and moved with the tide then flowing into Kansas, and took a Government claim on the first Delaware trust lands, near where the Kansas State Penitentiary is now located. He disposed of his place claim for $4,000, and thus with his practice cleared nearly $5,000 the first year. He spent the fall of 1857 and the following winter visiting in his native county, in Kentucky, but returned in the spring of 1858 to Johnson County, Mo., where he farmed and practiced medicine until December, 1875, but four years of the intervening time was spent as a refugee in Kansas City, where he was obliged to take refuge during the war on account of his loyalty to his country. In 1861, he was Recruiting Officer of the Second Battalion Missouri Mounted State Militia, and also organized a company of seventy home guards. In 1861, he served for a time as First Lieutenant. In 1862, Quantrill and Parker, with a force of over 300 bushwhackers, attacked the town of Harrison Mills, Mo., defended by less than one hundred men, all raw recruits of the Second Battalion Missouri Mounted State Militia, Dr. Neville assuming command. By his coolness and self-possession in directing the movements of his men, succeeded in saving the town. He suffered a loss of $12,000 or $15,000 on account of the war. In December, 1874, he moved to Wyandotte County, Kan., and farmed and practiced medicine near Pomeroy until November, 1881, when he moved to his present location, where he is now engaged in the practice of his profession. He has served, by appointment, as Coroner of Wyandotte County, filling an unexpired term to supply a vacancy, and was then elected for a term of two years. He was married in Cooper County, Mo., October 18, 1854, to Melinda Corum, daughter of Hiram and Mary Corum. They have six children, viz.: Katura, Delora, Laura, Cora, Leona and Sierra. Dr. Neville is an active temperance worker; he is a speaker of ability, and his voice has always been on the side of temperance, truth and virtue; he has always borne an unblemished reputation for honesty and uprightness, and is generous to a fault. His wife was educated at Tracy's Female Seminary, Booneville, Mo., and after her graduation taught about six years in her native county. Dr. Neville was raised a Whig, and cast his first vote for Henry Clay, President in 1844; he afterward became a Democrat through investigation of the issue which divided the two parties, and supported Polk's administration; voted for Stephen A. Douglas, but heartily endorsed Lincoln's administration and supported him in 1864; has ever since voted the Republican ticket, and sees no cause to change his position.

GEDDES SIMMONS, speculator and Postmaster of Argentine, came to Kansas in 1879, and located in Winfield, Cowley County, where he carried on a meat market two years. During the spring of 1881, spent a month traveling and prospecting in Colorado, and the following six months in Illinois, and on the 28th day of December, 1881, came to Argentine, where he has been engaged in buying and selling town property. He first built a dwelling house, then put up a livery stable, which he stocked and ran about one year. In the meantime, he has built two large stores and three dwellings, all of which he lets or leases; he is at present arranging for the erection of another dwelling. He is Postmaster of Argentine, and will soon establish a real estate and insurance agency. He was born in Will County, Ill., May 12, 1841; is a son of Harriet and Philander Simmons. He was reared and educated in Will County, and lived on a farm during his youth, and was thus inured to hard labor, but during the last seven years in Illinois prior to his removal to Kansas, he lived in Gilman, Iroquois County, where he engaged in the grocery business and carried on a meat market. He was married in Will County December 18, 1861, to Lydia Mellen, a native of Vermont, and the accomplished daughter of William M. and Elvira Mellen. Their children are Hattie E., Jennie B., Dora E. and Lydia O. Mr. Simmons and wife are consistent members of the Baptist Church; he is also a member of the I. O. O. F., and is recognized as one of the leading men of Argentine.

THEODORE A. SMITH, machinist, came to Kansas March, 1875; settled at Newton and was employed by C. H. Hobert, as machinist and engineer, in a flouring mill eighteen months. He then engaged in the grocery business at Burton, Harvey County, over one year, after which he bought and improved a 160-acre farm in Harper County; lived on this farm three years, and then moved his family to Newton, while he worked in Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad shops, at Raton, New Mexico, four months. He next spent two months working at his trade in McPherson, Kan., and finally settled with his family in Argentine, where he is now a permanent fixture; he still owns and lets his farm in Harper County; he has been engaged since coming to Argentine as machinist for the Kansas City Smelting & Refining Company several months, and put up the machinery for the Western Lead Pipe Company, and is now employed as machinist in the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad shops. He was one of the first permanent settlers in Argentine; circulated a petition for incorporation as a city of the third class; took it before the District Court and saw it through from the beginning. He was elected School Director, and was largely instrumental in securing bonds for the building of a large and commodious schoolhouse, now in course of erection, which, when completed, will be a credit to the educational enterprise of the citizens of Argentine. Mr. Smith is now City Clerk of Argentine, and is recognized as one of the most public spirited men of the town. He was born in Ohio County, Ind., February 2, 1850, son of Hayes and Ann E. Smith. His father died when he was but a child, and his mother removed with her family to Cincinnati, Ohio. He remained in Cincinnati till 1865, and then drove a freight team with a private train of seventy-five wagons to Denver, Col., and then returned with the teams to Doniphan County, Kan., same fall, where he in company with another man, took charge of them during the winter, and the following spring went to Groveland, Tazewell Co., Ill., where his mother and her family had moved in the meantime, and with the exception of eleven months spent in Delaware County, Iowa, was employed as machinist for the Groveland Milling Company from 1866 till 1875; then came to Kansas. He was married in Pekin, Ill., April 2, 1873, to Ettie Shurtleff, native of Illinois, and accomplished daughter of Lot and Fannie Shurtleff. Mrs. Smith's uncle, Charles Shurtleff, endowed the Shurtleff Female College at Alton, Ill., with a fund of $20,000; another uncle, Flavel Shurtleff, was at one time Mayor of Boston, and George Shurtleff, still another uncle, has for years been Superintendent of the California State Insane Asylum at Stockton. The name was formerly Schiercliffe, but has been changed to Shurtleff, the great progenitor of the family in America was Lot Schiercliffe, who came over in the Mayflower; for many years after his settlement in this county, there was not a natural death occurred in the family, but all were caused by lightning. A history is now being compiled entitled "Thunder and Lightning, or the lives of the Shurtleff Family." Mr. Smith has two children—Harry C. and Gertrude B. Smith.

DAVID S. YOUNG, real estate agent at Argentine and Wyandotte, also clothing merchant, Wyandotte; came to Kansas November, 1869, and located at Argentine; purchased 200 acres of land near Argentine at $14.50 per acre; sold 100 acres soon afterward for $25 per acre, and 60 acres in 1876 for $100 per acre, and the last 40 acres for $150 per acre. He was engaged in farming for several years after coming to Kansas, and raised the first broom corn and sorghum ever cultivated in Wyandotte County. He has served as Township Trustee three terms, and is at present engaged in the real estate business with an office at Argentine, and also at Wyandotte City. He is also engaged in mercantile business in Wyandotte. He was born in Prince Edward County, Canada, August 7, 1822, son of William and Margaret Young. He is of Scotch Irish descent, and has a remarkably active brain, with a turn for speculating, and is regarded one of the shrewdest business men in Wyandotte County. He was educated in the public schools of Canada, and reared on a farm; taught school one year, and at the age of nineteen years engaged in the mercantile business as clerk in the town of Wellington for a short time; then managed a farm and at the same time engaged in a general speculating business until he sold out and moved to Clay County, Mo., in the year 1865. He lived in Missouri till the fall of 1869, when he came to Kansas. He was married in Wellington, Canada, December 24, 1850, to Minerva Lane, by whom he had two children—Anna and Emma J. Young. His first wife died in 1853, and in 1854 he was married a second time in Wellington to Mary Short, daughter of Adam and Mary Short, by whom he has six children—Maggie, Mamie, William, John, Frankie and Edith Young. Mr. Young is a worthy Mason, and a member of the Equitable Aid's Union.

TURNER.

CHARLES LOVELACE, farmer and contractor, proprietor of Kansas Valley Flouring Mills, at Wyandotte, P. O. Turner. He came to Kansas in the fall of 1856, and established a saw mill near where he now lives; moved his family here the following spring. He has lived in Wyandotte County ever since, and few men in Kansas have done as much hard labor, transacted as much business, and altogether led as active a life as Mr. Lovelace. While living on a large farm, and managing it ever since he came to the State, he also operated a saw mill from 1856 till 1878, and from 1878 till the present time; has owned and operated a large flouring mill, four stories, three run of buhrs, and a set of rollers; capacity fifty barrels per day, and has at the same time been extensively engaged in contracting. At one time took the contract for furnishing a railroad company with ties to the amount of eleven thousand dollars ($11,000), and has furnished in smaller contracts double that amount. In company with two others, he contracted to furnish the Santa Fé Railroad Company with a large amount of ballast, for which they received $50,000. He has also filled several contracts with the Kansas City Smelting and Refining Company; did all the excavating and grading, burned and furnished all the brick, and did the mason work for their buildings at Argentine, all of which amounted to $25,000. At present is engaged in building the substructure for a bridge across the Kansas River at Kansas City, for Santa Fé Railroad Company, for which he will receive $14,000, and with all his other duties, he has found time to serve as Justice of the Peace one term, Township Treasurer two years, and member of the School Board ever since his district was organized; and besides all this, he is an active and exemplary member of the Missionary Baptist Church, and exhibits a remarkable degree of religious culture for a man of such active business habits, furnishing in his own case a sure proof that secular diligence and Christian culture are not at all incompatible. He was born in East Tennessee, June 20, 1833; son of Charles and Rachel Lovelace; was reared on the farm; moved from Tennessee to Wright County, Mo., when fourteen years of age, and lived two years in Wright County, and the remainder of the time until fall of 1856, in Jackson County, Mo.; then came to Kansas. He was married in Jackson County, Mo., October 25, 1855, to Louisa Hewitt, native of Ohio, and daughter of Richard and Hannah Hewitt. They have six children living—Eldridge H., Almus A., Charles F., Roxana Irena, Alfred, Linnie L. Two dead, Alice and Ida. Mr. Lovelace lives on his farm, about six miles from Kansas City; has 300 acres of choice farming land, with fine improvements. Another incident in his remarkably active life, worthy of mention, and which we have neglected to note in its proper connection, was a trip with ox-train to California in the year 1850, which proved a financial success. On his return by water, was shipwrecked on the Island of Chandileur, seventy miles northeast of the delta of the Mississippi River, being driven on to the island by a heavy gale, accompanied with dense fog. The vessel was abandoned, and the passengers and crew were picked up by two fishing boats which carried them safely to the shore of Lake Pontchartrain, where they took the train for New Orleans, thence to Jackson County, Mo.

J. J. SWINGLEY, merchant, cigar manufacturer and jobber, Turner, came to Kansas in spring of 1860; located in Johnson County, near Olathe, and engaged in farming until 1876; received a business education at the Olathe Commercial College and taught school one year, and in 1878, went to Olathe, and for three years engaged in the manufacture of cigars, and on April 12, 1881, established his present business at Turner, where he carries a large stock of general merchandise, and engages extensively in the manufacture and sale of cigars. He was born in Ogle County, Ill., January 23, 1852; son of Samuel and Mary Swingley. When only eight years of age, he moved to Johnson County, Kan., as above noted. He is favored with fine personnel and affable manners, and is highly respected by all who know him. His father, Samuel N. Swingley, is engaged in business with him, and is a native of Maryland; was born October 22, 1817; son of Michael and Mary Swingley; lived in Maryland twenty-five years; Ogle County, Ill., eighteen years, and the last twenty-two years in Kansas. He was married in Maryland, December, 1842, to Anna L. Locher, daughter of George and Elizabeth Locher. He has eight children—Elizabeth, Rose E., Henry, Michael, James, Samuel, Mollie and Charley.

SHAWNEE TOWNSHIP.

MERRICK K. BARBER, farmer, Sections 23, 13 and 14, P. O. Turner, was born near the line of Chemung and Tompkin's County, N. Y., January 25, 1823; son of William and Charity Barber. His father died when he was eight years of age, and about one year after this event, he left home, and has shifted for himself ever since. He went to Pine Creek, where it empties into the Tioga River, and learned the millwright's trade, and about five years afterward, traveled in his business, setting up buildings, overhauling and repairing saw and grist mills. He travels in Pennsylvania and New York, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan and Upper Canada, and built some of the finest and most extensive mills in the country; continued the business until 1850, when he settled in Wyandotte County, Kan., and has since been engaged in farming. He was married in Mount Elgin, Gore District, Can., September 15, 1852, to Joanna Malvina Woodward, daughter of Jesse and Joanna Woodward. They have had one child, Anna, who died in August, 1853. Mr. B. has a fine farm of 200 acres, with fine improvements, and is one of the prominent and successful men of Wyandotte.

SAMUEL BEATTIE, farmer, Sections 28, 27 and 21, P. O. Turner, came to Kansas May 1, 1858. After prospecting one year, he settled at Shawnee, Johnson County, and engaged in the mercantile business till the fall of 1863. In June, 1863, the bushwackers from Missouri burned the town, and killed three men, one of whom was murdered in Mr. Beattie's store. After breaking up the china ware and destroying many other things, they carried off $1,600 worth of goods. He then took what little was left, added a stock of $3,000 worth, and opened business in Booneville, Col., but returned to Shawnee the following June. Engaged for a short time in putting up hay for Government uses, and in 1865 made a profitable trip to Santa Fe, New Mexico, and same fall graded by contract Twelfth street, Kansas City, from Main street to the west bottom, and in October, 1866, came to his present location, where he has since cleared 250 acres of timber land. Has been engaged in cultivating and improving his farm ever since. Has 520 acres of fine land, all of which is bottom except fifty acres, and 300 acres of which are in a high state of cultivation, the balance in blue grass pasture. He has served as County Commissioner four years, and as Treasurer of School Board six or seven years. He acted as scout for Ferguson's militia in the Price raid. Was born in Ireland, October 13, 1833, son of William and Nancy Beattie. Was educated in the National schools of Ireland, and public schools of America. Came to America when thirteen years of age, and farmed three years in Stevenson County, Ill. In 1852, went to New Orleans. Was engaged in business with his uncle till the breaking-out of yellow fever in 1853, when he returned to Illinois and clerked in grocery store one year. Was then under medical treatment for several years, in New Orleans and other places, for inflammation of the lining membrane of the femur bone. Finally came to Kansas May, 1856. He was married in Wyandotte County, January 21, 1875, to Florence C. Hoffman, a native of Ohio, and the accomplished daughter of Henry T. and Mary Hoffman. They have two children—William A. and Margaret Beattie. Mr. Beattie is a worthy Mason, a very quiet and unassuming man, but one of the wealthy, intelligent leading men of Wyandotte County.

THEODORE BENDER, farmer, Sections 27 and 33, P. O. Turner, came to Kansas City May, 1855. Engaged in blacksmithing five years. In 1861, went with private train of twenty-seven wagons to California. Worked at his trade in San Francisco one year, and in Virginia City, Idaho, six years. Then took steamer at San Francisco for New York City. Was shipwrecked in a storm off the coast of New Jersey, and twelve passengers lost their lives in an attempt to escape by life boats. The rest of the passengers, numbering about 450, were picked up by wreckers and saved. He returned via Philadelphia to Kansas City, and thence, in 1867, to his present location, where he bought 120 acres of land, which he has since cleared and improved. He has one of the best barns in the township, a good one and one-half story house, and other good improvements. He was born in Germany, on the Lahn River, at Lollscheit, July 15, 1834, son of Phillip and Catherine Bender. He attended school till fourteen years of age, in Germany. Followed blacksmithing three and one-half years, and in 1852 came to America. Lived three years in Belleville, Ill., just prior to his removal to Kansas City. He was married in Independence, Mo., June 15, 1858, to Gertrude Schuck, a native of Germany, and daughter of K. and Sophia Schuck. They have six children, viz.: Katie, Lizzie, Mealy, Emma, Willie and John Bender. Mr. Bender and wife are worthy members of the Lutheran Church.

GEORGE W. BROWN, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Argentine, came to Kansas border, near Kansas City, in the fall of 1851, and in June, 1852, he started for Independence, Mo., with Yeagers and Major's ox train of twenty-five wagons and thirty men for Santa Fe, N. M. Made the round trip in three months, and took out another train the same summer, and reached home on return just before Christmas in the spring of 1853. He took out a Government train loaded with beads, blankets, tobacco and other Indian supplies. On their arrival at Cherry Creek, near Pike's Peak, 1,500 wild Indians from the mountains and plains were assembled to receive their presents from the Government. The Indians were greatly pleased, and held a general jubilee and feast, indulging in roast dog for a luxury. After the usual formalities they dispersed to their mountain homes. Mr. Brown returned with the train; his brother was taken sick with the rheumatism on the way, and he was obliged to drive both teams part of the way. In October, 1853, he took a claim on Wakarusa Bottom, south of Topeka, but soon after took his sick brother back to Virginia, where he died after lingering until the summer of 1854. He did not return to his claim, but remained in Virginia, farming about five years. Having married in the meantime, he emigrated to Tarrant County, Tex., in the fall of 1859; after completing about two-thirds of the journey, he was taken sick, and the rest of the train, consisting of fifteen wagons, went on and left him with a wife and three children and a friend. He was unable to travel for three weeks, and then moved on and joined the colony near Fort Worth, where he made his home about nine years, engaged while there in gathering up and driving beef cattle to Louisiana, and other places for soldier's supplies. Was in the employ of Government contractors during the war; the rest of the time was engaged in farming. He had, during a nine years' residence in Texas, only half a bushel of Irish potatoes, for which he paid $1. Left Texas August 10, 1868, and after one year and a half residence in Jackson County, Mo., moved to Wyandotte County, where he rented a farm of George Matney; gave him half the crop, and then made more money than he had ever made before in one season. He then rented a 200-acre farm of a wealthy Indian woman for six years. She died in 1875, and the farm fell to the only heir a neice, Mary Rodgers. Before the lease expired, Mr. Brown bought eighty acres of the land, which he has owned and cultivated ever since. He has put good improvements on the place, building him a good, commodious two-story residence, planting an orchard, and ornamenting his home in a manner creditable to his taste and industry. He was born in Tazewell County, Va., September 8, 1830, son of Joseph and Elizabeth Brown. He was reared on a farm in his native county, until twenty-one years of age, when he came to Missouri, on Kansas border, as before stated. He was married in Tazewell County, December 11, 1855, to Lillie Young, also a native of Tazewell County, Va., and the accomplished daughter of Hugh and Visa Young. Mr. Brown has eight children—Mary Alice, wife of W. B. Peart; Reese B., Charles H., Joseph C., Elizabeth, George Thomas, John H. and Robert W. Brown. He is a worthy Mason, and a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. Brown always had a hard struggle in life until he reached Kansas, which has been to him a veritable land of promise. He has enjoyed uninterrupted prosperity since coming here. He is sober, honest, industrious and hospitable, and his wife is in every way worthy to be his companion.

LESTER COLBY, farmer and horticulturist, Section 32, P. O. Rosedale, came to Kansas February 2, 1859, settled in Oskaloosa, and lived there seven years. Was engaged in carpentering and building five years in Oskaloosa, and the last two years of his residence there he was away from home, assisting in building up Lawrence, after Quantrell's raid. In May, 1866, he moved to Kansas City, where he worked at his trade in a sash and door factory most of the time for five years. He then moved, February, 1871, to his present location, where he is principally engaged in fruit culture. He was born in Wyoming County, N. Y., October 29, 1833, son of William and Phoebe Colby. Was raised on a farm till seventeen years of age, and then moved to Genesee County, N. Y. Worked at house building until September, 1858. He then came to Kansas, stopping on the way about four months at Vernon County, Mo., arriving in Kansas February, 1859. He was married in Rochester, N. Y., July 10, 1856, to Elizabeth Randall, daughter of Hiram and Nancy Randall. She is a native of Genesee County, N. Y. They have six children, viz.: Frank, Gertrude, Grace, Addie, Hiram and Fenton.

G. F. ESPENLAUB, horticulturist, Section 28, P. O. Rosedale, came to Kansas in July, 1859; located near Bellmont, Doniphan County. Bought a tract of land and carried on the nursery business for seven years, but in the meantime went across the plains. Started from Fort Leavenworth April 11, 1862, with a Government train of twenty-six wagons, ox teams. Reached Fort Union about the 20th of June; remained about two weeks, and re-loaded with provisions for Peralto, N. M., ten or twelve days' journey across the mountains. Brought them to Peralto, where they discharged their freight and re-loaded for Fort Craig. Delivered their freight at Ft. Craig in due time, and returned with the teams and wagons to Leavenworth. He then continued the nursery business in Doniphan County until 1866 or 1867. Next lived one year at Blue Springs, Mo.; then moved to his present location, where he has ever since engaged in the nursery and fruit business. He has sixty acres of very fine land, twenty-five acres of which are planted in fruit. His fruit yield for 1882 had a market value of about $5,000. His residence is a two-story brick, main part 17x36, handsomely finished and furnished throughout; architectural design very pleasing, the grounds, ornamented with shade and evergreen trees, walks and shrubbery, presenting one of the most pleasing views that greets the eye on driving out on the Shawnee road from Kansas City. His home commands a fine view of Kansas City, Wyandotte, Armourdale and Armstrong. He has served ten years as District Clerk, and is at present acting Director. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, August 19, 1837, son of William and Elizabeth Espenlaub. He was raised on a farm until sixteen years of age. His father died in 1844, and in December, 1853, he embarked at Havre for America; came via New Orleans to Evansville, Ind., where he farmed and raised nursery stock six years; then moved to Doniphan County, Kan. He was married in Doniphan County, near Troy, December 20, 1863, to Elvira Gromer, an educated and accomplished lady of St. Joseph, Mo., daughter of Greenberry and Elizabeth C. Gromer. They have a family of eight children—Elizabeth, William, Annie, Albert, Bertha, Sophia, David and Gracie. Mr. E. is one of our practical, scientific and successful horticulturists, a good citizen and a reliable business man.

JAMES W. GALLAGHER, farmer, Section 32, P. O. Glenwood; came to Kansas in the fall of 1861, and farmed four years in Douglas County; also did some missionary work as a Union Baptist minister. He then moved his family to Saline County, Mo., in the fall of 1864. He was away from home, in Osage County, at the time of the Price raid, and escaped capture by hiding in a brush three days with a furloughed soldier from Indianapolis named Campbell. He then moved his family back to Douglas County, Kan., December 25, of the same year. Farmed here two years, and then engaged in teaming at Pleasant Hill, Mo., for three months. The next three years, was employed in clearing and improving a farm near Sarcoxieville, Kan., and in preaching to three congregations. He then moved to Shawnee Township, where he has been engaged in tilling and improving his farm and preaching on Sunday ever since. In 1878, he lost four children, three boys and one girl, with typhoid malarial fever. Aside from this sad misfortune, his work has been pleasant and profitable in the State of Kansas. He was born in Alton, Ill., October 14, 1840, son of Peter B. and Lydia Gallagher. He moved with his parents at an early age to Osage County, Mo., and shortly afterward to Pettis County, Mo., where he was raised on a farm until 1859; then moved to Saline County, and from there, in 1861, to Kansas. He was married, in Douglas County, Kan., December 8, 1861, to Virginia A. Carey, a native of Virginia, and daughter of Newton and Nancy Carey. They have four children living—Henry Leander, Emma F., Charlie and Peter. Mr. G. was ordained a minister of the Union Baptist Church in the spring of 1868, in Wyandotte County, and while supporting himself and family, principally by the labors of his own hands, he has devoted much time and labor in proclaiming the Word through the borders of Missouri and Kansas, and his labors have been fruitful and of much good.

JOHN GIBBS, Jr., farmer, Sections 25 and 36, P. O. Shawnee, Johnson County, came to Kansas October, 1855, and located a claim on the Delaware Trust Lands, in Jefferson County, which he bought at the land sales at Fort Leavenworth, November, 1856. He afterward bought, in 1857, 160 acres in Franklin County, and in 1858 bought 320 acres in Shawnee County, and now owns the 320-acre tract in addition to the well-improved farm on which he lives, in Wyandotte County. In 1855, while in search of a claim, in company with others, he stopped at a lone cabin near Big Stranger for dinner. The lady of the house gathered some corn, grated it, and quickly prepared a repast of corn bread, bacon and coffee, which they devoured with a relish. On inquiring the bill, the lady replied, "If you are Free-State men, nothing, if Pro-slavery, your bill is $1." Mr. Gibbs replied, "According to your proposition, we are entitled to a free dinner, but we insist on your accepting the pay." On her positive refusal to take anything, he deposited $1.50 on the table, wished her God's protection, and took his departure. Mr. Gibbs was in Kansas during the entire border war, and witnessed many of those disgraceful attempts to control the elections by violence and by stuffing the ballot box. Was in the company of seventeen men who went to the rescue of Mr. Manard and family, at Easton, Kan., in 1856, where a company of ruffians were held at bay for forty-eight hours by Manard and two women, who stood guard at doors and windows of their residence, shot-guns in hand. On the approach of the rescuers, the ruffians fled. He was harvesting in Platte County, Mo., during the summer of 1856, and was threatened with tar and feathers if he did not leave by a certain time. He defied the mob, and though the threat was repeated and the time distinctly stated, he remained and was not molested. During the winter of 1858–59, he was in the Government service, freighting to Fort Smith, Ark., and also to Indian Territory. In the spring of 1859, in company with his father and others, he started with ox teams to Denver. After many hardships and dangers from hostile Indians, reached Denver safely. From Denver, went to Russell Gulch and Clear Creek. There left his father, and with pack animals went over the range and up the Arkansas River, camping over night where Leadville is now located. He also explored the Blue and Swan River country, and returned to Denver with satisfactory evidence that gold existed in paying quantities on the head-waters of the Arkansas, and on the 15th of February, 1860, he returned, via South Park, reaching California Gulch the last of April, and remained three years, mining and merchandising and freighting, and, in 1863, went from Denver with an ox team to Virginia City, reaching his destination about the 1st of July. He remained in Montana until October, 1866, when, in company with his brother and eight others, he came down the Missouri River in a row boat. Encountering the ice, it became necessary to row all night at times to keep ahead of the floating ice. Reached Omaha about the 5th of December. After spending the winter with friends in the East, returned to Kansas in the spring of 1867, and after spending two years on his farm in Shawnee County, bought the farm in Wyandotte County, which he has made his home ever since. He was born in Kalamazoo County, Mich., February 28, 1835. Is a son of John and Miranda Gibbs. He left his father's home when fifteen years of age, and worked on a farm summers, and in the winter did chores for his board, while attending school until twenty years of age, and came to Kansas, October, 1865. He was married in Wyandotte County, Kan., May 30, 1878, to Elmira Holsinger, an estimable lady, daughter of William and Catharine Holsinger. She was born in Covington, Ohio, August 28, 1850. They have one child, viz., John W. Gibbs, born July 15, 1881. Mr. Gibbs is a man of much nerve, strong will, great firmness, settled convictions and engrafted principles, honest and reliable in business.

FRANK HOLSINGER, farmer and horticulturist, Section 32, Town 11, Range 25, P. O. Rosedale, was born in Bedford County, Penn., April 3, 1836, son of George and Susan Holsinger. He was educated in the common school and in Mount Morris Seminary, attending school until nineteen years of age; then went to Ogle County, Ill., and engaged in railroad service as station agent at Haldane; was also Postmaster at that place until March, 1857, when he emigrated to Kansas, and engaged in farming near Clinton, Douglas County, for two years, and was a delegate to the Grasshopper Convention in 1857, which nominated Marcus J. Parrott Delegate to Congress. He returned to Bedford County, Penn., in 1859; taught school two years, then enlisted April 14, 1861, with the Marietta, Ohio, Blues. Not being mustered in, he was discharged to go into a Pennsylvania regiment, and on May 8, 1861, enlisted in Company I, Eighth Pennsylvania Reserve Corps. Was in many of the heaviest engagements of the war; was in that of Dranesville, Mechanicsville, Peach Orchard, Fair Oaks, Charles City, Cross Roads and Malvern Hill, under McClellan; Aqua Creek, Rappahannock, Manassas Junction, under Gen. Pope; South Mountain and Antietam in Hooker's corps; Fredericksburg, under Burnside, and in storming the heights on the left of Fredericksburg; was wounded and sent to the hospital at Washington. Three months afterward was ordered before the Board of Examiners to examine officers to command colored troops. Passed as Captain of the first class, and was mustered into the Nineteenth Colored United States Infantry March 23, 1864, at Baltimore, commanding a company. May 1, was assigned to Burnside's corps, crossed the Rapidan May 4, and participated in all Grant's engagements before Richmond until November 28, when he was wounded in the right arm at Bermuda Hundred, necessitating an ex-section of the radius of the right arm; was sent to Chesapeake Hospital at Fort Monroe, where he remained until the capture of Richmond, his regiment being one of the first to enter the city. The war being over, his regiment was sent with corps of observation to the Rio Grande, where he continued until the expiration of his term of enlistment. He was mustered out at Baltimore March 27, 1867; was placed on the pension list on account of disability from wounds, and was twice brevetted for gallant and meritorious conduct during the war. On his return from the army, he engaged in farming in Bedford County, Penn., about two years; then moved to Wyandotte County, Kan.; settled near Rosedale, March 27, 1869; cleared and improved a 160-acre farm, and for several years has confined his attention principally to fruit culture. He bought his present location during the spring of 1874, and now owns 300 acres of choice land, about seventy-five acres of which are in orchard. He has gathered this season about 2,500 bushels of apples, and about 2,000 bushels of fine budded peaches; has marketed the present season over $600 worth of berries, has sold $4,000 worth of nursery stock, and besides has received as rental from lands which he lets $2,000 bushels of potatoes, about 1,800 bushels of corn and 600 bushels of wheat. He was married near Sharpsburg, Md., November 26, 1868, to Mary Frances Long, an intelligent and accomplished lady, daughter of Elder David and Mary Long. He has six children—Mary, Gerald, Clarence, George, Edna and Maud. Mr. H. is the Treasurer of the Missouri Valley Horticultural Society, and is one of the leading horticulturists of the State. He and his wife are members of the Progressive Branch of the Dunkard Church.

WILLIAM JUSTICE, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Turner, came to Kansas in the fall of 1854, and settled on the Wakarusa River, seven miles southwest of Lawrence. The country was then unsettled, only two or three families lived in that locality. He farmed eight years on the Wakarusa bottom, and then moved to where he now lives, on a well-improved farm of 100 acres of choice bottom land. Mr. Justice is one of the oldest settlers in Kansas, and while he is a quiet and unassuming man, he is recognized as one of the solid men of his county. He has been very attentive to home duties, and hence has never figured prominently in public matters. He has furnished ties to some extent for construction of K. C., Ft. S. & G. R. R., but has been principally engaged in farming all his life. He was born near Nashville, E. Tenn., February 22, 1826, son of Alfred and Sarah Justice. At an early age, moved with his parents to Jackson County, Mo., where he was raised on a farm. About the year 1848, moved to Westport, Mo., where he farmed and teamed till 1854, when he moved to Kansas. He was married in Westport August 14, 1851, to Jane Corel, who was born March 17, 1830, in West Virginia, daughter of William and Rebecca Corel. They have eight children, viz.: Albert, John G., Samuel M., James Monroe, Alice Ellen, Ella Lee, Hattie Ann and Eva Lena. Mr. Justice and wife are worthy members of the South Methodist Episcopal Church.

AMBROSE KEY, farmer and horticulturist, Section 35, P. O. Rosedale, was born in Crawfordsville, Ind., November 27, 1829, son of George and Rebecca Key. At an early age, removed to Louisa County, Iowa; remained there until 1858, and then moved to Texas; bought the Baker & Thomson saw mill on the San Jacinto River, and in combination with a sash, door and blind factory, operated about four years, and at the same time was proprietor of a general store; then moved to Navasota, near the old capital, where he carried on a general commission business until the fall of 1860, when he moved to Fall County, Tex., and there bought a saw mill and started a tannery; remained in this business until the close of the war, and then went to St. Louis, and one year afterward moved his family to Westport, on the Kansas border in spring of 1869, while he went to the Indian Territory, and carried on a general trading business for three years, and then bought a farm in Shawnee Township, which he has made his home ever since, and has engaged since 1872 in horticultural pursuits; has made the business quite profitable, and besides his market gardening and general farming, has raised and sold $500 worth of small fruits, and has gathered 1,200 bushels of apples this year. He was married in Tipton, Mo., May 21, 1859, to Mary Garrett, a native of Ohio, and an intelligent and accomplished lady, daughter of Elisha and Eleanor Garrett. Their children are Sidney D., born December 30, 1862; Joseph F., born June 22, 1865; Nellie, born June 15, 1867; Gertrude S. P., born January 15, 1870.

JOHN W. KINGSCOTT, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Argentine, came to Kansas in April, 1870; located where he now lives near Argentine, and has been engaged in farming ever since. In 1873, he was elected a member of the School Board, and has served in that capacity ever since. In 1874, was appointed Township Clerk to fill vacancy; served the unexpired term and was re-elected. In the year 1880, was elected Justice of the Peace; served one term, and is now serving as Township Clerk. Was elected Justice of the Peace February 6, 1883. He was born in the city of London, November 27, 1822; son of John and Barbara Ann Kingscott. When four years of age, moved with his parents to Nantyglo, Monmouthshire, England; lived there until eleven years of age; came to America and settled in Genesee County, N. Y.; farmed until 1839, and then enlisted in Company A, Fifth United States Infantry, Regular Army, December 10, 1839; served for six years as drummer boy; was then made Corporal on March 12, 1846; served continuously through the Mexican war; helped to build Fort Brown; was in several heavy engagements under Gen. Taylor; joined Gen. Scott in front of Vera Cruz, and participated in the siege of that city; was under Scott in the advance toward the City of Mexico, and was in all the engagements of the campaign, including the capture of the City. After serving three full consecutive enlistments, he was honorably discharged as Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant August 10, 1854; he then farmed in Macomb County, Mich., until the breaking-out of the rebellion, when he enlisted August 24, 1861, in Company H, Second Michigan Cavalry; was mustered in as First Sergeant September 16, 1861. In the engagements of New Madrid and Corinth, fought Bragg at Perryville, Ky.; had running fights with John Morgan at Glasgow and Bacon Creek; was in the engagements at Chattanooga and Chickamauga; fought Longstreet at Knoxville, Strawberry Plains and Massey Creek; was under Thomas in the battles of Nashville and Franklin; under command of Gen. Wilson raided through Alabama, took Selma and Montgomery; thence through Georgia to Macon, where the news of Lee's surrender was received; was present when Jefferson Davis and family were turned over to Gen. Wilson, just after the capture; from Macon was ordered to Nashville, and then served as Depot Quartermaster at Edgefield until ordered home to be mustered out December 27, 1865; he entered the service as First Sergeant, and was promoted to Second Lieutenant January 20, 1862; afterward made First Lieutenant, and June 7, 1864, was promoted to Captain. He served in six heavy engagements in the Mexican war, ten or twelve heavy battles, and altogether 110 battles and skirmishes in the war of the rebellion; never received a scratch, was never taken prisoner and was never relieved from duty on account of sickness. After his return from the army, he engaged in farming in Macomb County, Mich., until 1870, and then moved to Kansas. He was married in Detroit, Mich., July 15, 1857, to Ellen Morehead, a native of Ireland, and daughter of John and Sarah Morehead. Their children are John C., Frances R., Ellen L., Mary Ann, Eleanora and Rosana Ann. Mr. Kingscott is one of the most intelligent and useful men in Shawnee Township.

JOSEPH McDOWELL, farmer, Section 28, P. O. Rosedale; entered a claim on Armstrong Reservation in the fall of 1855, and moved his family in March, 1856. His claim was one and a half miles from Kansas City, in Wyandotte County, bordering on the Missouri State line. He cleared, improved and cultivated it until June, 1877; then came to his present location, adjoining the town of Rosedale, where he has lived ever since. He has a valuable rock quarry and several teams, and is extensively engaged in contracting and teaming; also deals in real estate and town property; at present lets five dwellings in the town of Rosedale. He has thirty-two acres of land adjoining the town, on which he lives. He was born in Madison County, Ala., December 25, 1816; son of Samuel and Abigail McDowell; left his native county when ten years of age, and after five years in Rutherford County emigrated to Johnson County, Mo., and was present when Warrensburg was laid off. He farmed most of the time in Johnson County until the spring of 1847. In 1846, he took charge of an ox train for Russell and Wadell, loaded with Government stores. This was during the Mexican war. Started from Fort Leavenworth in the fall, with thirty wagons, bound for New Mexico; the weather was severe and the men and teams suffered much from cold. Three men and many cattle perished on the way out, and they were obliged to send on into Santa Fé for more teams. They finally pulled into Santa Fé January 11, 1847. They remained here until the 1st of February, during which time fourteen of the men died with the measles, and Mr. James Brown in charge of two mule teams, four and six mules respectively, and an ox wagon drawn by three yoke of oxen, started on the return trip, accompanied by five men, including Mr. McDowell. The cold was intense and feed scarce, and nine out of the ten mules perished, and when within two days' journey of Council Grove all but one yoke of oxen had given out. The wagons were all abandoned except one. Mr. Brown here backed the only remaining mule, and calling Mr. McDowell to him, he divided the last half gallon of meal equally with him, and said: "You must now take charge of this outfit until my return. When the men are asleep to-night, bake you a pan of bread from this quart of meal, parch one quart of corn and conceal it, and if you are obliged to walk for your life, you may manage to get into Westport; if possible, I will meet you with relief in a few days." With this instruction, Mr. Brown left them, and rode on. At Council Grove, which then consisted of an old abandoned blacksmith shop, and not an inhabitant, he found a live ox, which had given out, and was left behind by some other train. This ox he killed and dressed, and hung up a quarter in a tree to relieve the party who were coming on. When the party arrived in sight of this old shop in the woods, their last yoke of oxen gave out. The wagon-bed was removed, the wagon uncoupled, and the two sick men of the company tenderly laid on the hounds of the fore wheels, and the oxen induced to pull them on to the shops at Council Grove. Here the cattle laid down and died. About this time, a terrible snow-storm set in, and during this terrible night of suffering and hunger, there fell eighteen inches of snow. The night was one of bitter cold, and the morning brought nothing but despair. It was now decided that Mr. McDowell, accompanied by one young man, should go on foot to Westport, and, if possible, bring relief to the rest of the party, all hopes of Brown's return having been given up. Swearing they would bring provisions or lose their lives in the attempt, they started out with a single blanket each, and the pan of corn bread and quart of parched corn. After traveling all day, and just at night-fall, came Brown's wagon coming to their relief. Never did food taste sweeter, nor sleep more refreshing than to these half-starved and weary men that night. After camping here all night, and taking an early breakfast next morning, they moved on to the relief of the little company at Council Grove, arriving just at sundown. Their feelings can better be imagined than described, when to their desponding souls came the sudden joy of an immediate rescue. The sick men got well, and, after five days' travel, they pulled into Westport, March 16, 1847. Mr. McDowell took conveyance for home, and reached Warrensburg March 18, and the same spring returned with his family to Kansas City, where he lived until his removal to Kansas in the spring of 1856. He has been married three times, the first time in Johnson County, Mo., in June, 1834, to Nancy Harrison, by whom he has had five children—Franklin A., Elizabeth, Samuel, Jesse and William H. His first wife died in December, 1848, and he was married a second time in Kansas City, in August, 1851, to Rebecca French, who died in August, 1876, and his last marriage took place in Wyandotte County in July, 1878, to Sarah E. Carter, an estimable widow lady, whose maiden name was Brown, daughter of James and Ruth Brown. Mr. and Mrs. McDowell are worthy church members, and both are highly respected for their many excellent qualities of mind and heart.

THOMAS McMAHON, farmer, Sections 29 and 32, P. O. Rosedale, came to Kansas spring of 1854; stopped a few days at Leavenworth City, then went to Kansas City and contracted public work until spring of 1861; next farmed near Olathe, Kan., till fall of 1862, and in the spring of 1863 he fitted out an ox-train of five wagons and went to Colorado, and in company with three brothers owned and worked a mine in California Gulch, near where Leadville is now located; sold out his mine, and returned same fall to Kansas City, the trip having netted him about $1,000. The next spring, with two wagons, one of which was loaded with 4,000 pounds of choice provisions, and drawn by four mules, the other a spring wagon, containing his family, drawn by two horses, he started to Montana. It was very early in the spring, and they encountered snow, sleet, cold and other hardships on the way, but finally reached Horse Prairie Valley June 22, 1864. He mined in the Placer diggings during the summer, and made it very profitable. He moved his family to Bannock November, 1865, and engaged in freighting from Salt Lake Valley to different points in Montana, until the spring of 1869. Left Bannock March 22, and arrived at Kansas City May 11, 1869, and in June bought of an Indian named Pumpkin and his white son-in-law, Franklin, the farm of ninety-eight and one-half acres, which he cleared and improved, and has ever since made his home. He has a large two-story frame residence, twenty-two acres of fruit, and other substantial improvements, which make his place one of the most desirable in that vicinity. He was born in Kings County, Ireland, in the year 1832; son of Hubert and Mary McMahon; lived in Ireland till eighteen years of age, then came direct to America; lived in New Jersey one year, then went to New Orleans, where he worked in a wholesale house till the spring of 1854, when he came up the river to Leavenworth, Kan. He was married in Kansas City, Mo., April 25, 1859, to Bridget O. Flaherty, an intelligent and accomplished lady, daughter of Eugene and Kate Flaherty. She was born in Maryland, raised in Virginia, and afterward moved to Ohio, thence to Kansas City. They have twelve children—John Hubert and Mary Catherine (twins), Ellen, Annie, Thomas F., Nora, Lawrence, Josephine, James, Agnes, Catherine and Joseph Patrick. Mr. McMahon and wife are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and are counted among the most thriving and enterprising citizens of Shawnee Township.

JOHN TILGHMAN MACKOY, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Rosedale, was born in Mason County, Ky., October 4, 1811. His father, James Mackoy, was a Revolutionary soldier, enlisted just in time to participate in the battle of Yorktown. He was only fifteen years of age. Arrived at the scene of action on Saturday; fought under La Fayette until the capitulation of Cornwallis on the following Wednesday; his mother, Mary Mackoy, whose maiden name was Walton, was the grand-daughter of George Walton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; he was a direct descendant of the Lawrence and Chase families, who were very noted. Mr. Mackoy was raised principally on the farm. His father was also proprietor of Mackoy's flouring mill, located on Lee's Creek, Mason Co., Ky. He attended Beasley Creek Academy and received a good academic education. At the age of fifteen, was put to work on the farm and in the mill. He left his native place in 1859, and moved to Holt County, Mo., where he lived on a farm until it was well improved, and he was able to live comfortably when the war broke out, and his horses were stolen by Jayhawkers, his life threatened, one of his neighbors killed, and his family so frightened that he returned to Kentucky and remained during the war. In 1865, he returned through Missouri to Council Bluffs, where he farmed three years, and in the spring of 1868 moved to his present location, where he has made a comfortable home, which is a model in the way of taste, tidiness and culture, and where his old age is made comfortable by the companionship of an intelligent wife and loving children. He was married in Mason County, Ky., May 17, 1836, to Frances A. Craig; she was the daughter of Elijah and Mary Craig, grand-daughter of Joseph Davis, a Major in the Emmett's rebellion. James Kempe, great-uncle, was a Colonel in the same rebellion, and afterward Gen. Jackson's aid-de-camp in the battle of New Orleans. Mr. Mackoy has seven living children—James Craig, Jane Elizabeth, Frances Mary, John Beckett, Sarah Gresham, Annie Lawrence and Thomas Oliver.

DAVID B. MATNEY, farmer, Sections 30 and 31, P. O. Rosedale; came to Kansas in the fall of 1858; located in Shawneetown; lived there until 1863. In 1862, Quantrill raided the town at midnight, and burned most of the houses, seventeen in number. They raided Mr. Matney's business house, piled up on the counter all the combustibles they could gather, and fired them, but the fire was extinguished before it had done any considerable damage; but in July, 1863, Quantrill made a second attack and burned Mr. Matney's residence, and the rest of the town; he still preserves a bureau that was saved from the flames, but it bears the marks of fire, being badly scorched. In 1863, he moved to Westport, where he farmed until the fall of 1865, then came to his present location, where he has cleared, improved and cultivated a farm of 200 acres ever since. Mr. Matney is recognized as one of the best farmers in Shawnee Township, and has served as School Treasurer five or six years. He is a representative man, an old settler and a useful citizen; is a worthy Mason, and he and wife are both consistent members of the Union Baptist Church. He was born in Tazewell County, Va., August 3, 1836, son of Charles and Abigail Matney. He lived on what is known as Rich Lands on Clinch River, Va., until 1844, when he moved to Platte County, Mo., where he farmed two years, then to Jackson County where he farmed until 1857, when he went with an ox-train to Fort Union; again in 1859, started to Pike's Peak; on reaching Fort Lyons, Bent Co., Colo., sold out and returned. He again started across the plains in 1864, this time in the employ of other parties, with a mule train of twenty-five wagons; on reaching Cow Creek, 250 miles this side of Fort Lyons, news was received of the massacre of men on Walnut Creek, twenty miles further on. The train on Walnut Creek was fired into by Indians, who were riding along conversing in a friendly manner with the drivers. Besides the ten killed, two were scalped alive and taken prisoners; they afterward made good their escape, and recovered; news of this disaster reached Mr. Bryant's train on Cow Creek, just in time for them to corral, and as soon as this was effected the Indians were seen approaching in a cloud of dust, five or six hundred strong; but with a force of only twenty-seven men, the train men held them at bay fourteen days with a loss of only two in number. A well was dug inside the corral to furnish the train with water. The Indians finally scattered and disappeared. The train moved on, but after about six days' journey, and 125 miles this side of Fort Lyons, they were again attacked by Indians just before day, and ninety-three mules were captured and carried off; the wagons were not molested, and in about two days another train belonging to Mr. Byrant came up; the teams were divided and the wagons pulled into Fort Lyons. Mr. Matney remained at the fort six days, and returned, reaching home September 16, 1864. He was married at Westport, Mo., January 26, 1860, to Emily M. Puckett, a native of Tazewell County, Va., and daughter of John and Mary E. Puckett. They have four living children—John R., Elisha M., George H. and Joseph D.

GEORGE Q. A. MATNEY, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Rosedale, came to Kansas in the fall of 1854; took a claim on the Wakarusa River, southwest of Lawrence, but sold it soon afterward. He made Shawneetown his first stopping place in the State; made a trip across the plains to old Fort McKey in 1854, another to Fort Laramie in 1855, and had profitable journeys both times. He next went in the employ of other parties with an ox-train to Fort Union in 1857. He came to his present location in 1861, where he has been engaged ever since in clearing, improving and cultivating his farm of 120 acres; his home is pleasantly situated on one of the finest roads leading out of Kansas City. He was born in Tazewell County, Va., September 28, 1831, son of Charles and Abigail Matney. He has made farming his principal occupation through life, and lived thirteen years in his native county in Virginia; farmed one and a half years in Platte County, Mo., fifteen years in Jackson County, and since then in Johnson and Wyandotte Counties, Kan. He was married at Westport, Mo., January 6, 1859, to Frances Jane Johnson, daughter of David Johnson; she died the same year, and his second marriage took place at Westport, April 8, 1860, to Susan M. Broomfield, native of Virginia, and daughter of Jordan and Emily Broomfield, by whom he had two children—Charles and Minnie Matney. She died February, 1867, and he was a third time married in Shawnee Township, February 2, 1868, to Fannie T. Carter, native of Virginia, and daughter of William and Sarah Carter, by whom he has four children—Sarah, Hattie, David and an infant.

JOHN R. MATNEY, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Rosedale, came to Westport on the Kansas and Missouri border October, 1846, and engaged in farming until 1865. In 1854, made one trip with a private ox train to Old Fort McKey, on the Arkansas River; found no settlements on the route. What is now a wealthy and populous State was then a wild waste of prairie land; he moved to his present home in March, 1866, and has been engaged in farming ever since. He has served as Township Clerk two terms, also served as Township Treasurer; has served on the School Board five years; has twice been honored as a delegate to State Conventions. He was born in West Virginia January 23, 1834, son of Charles and Abigail Matney; left his native place when only ten years of age, and moved to Platte County, Mo., near Parkville, and in the fall of 1846 moved to Westport, near the Kansas line; was married at the latter place March 15, 1855, to Missouri Matney, daughter of William and Sarah Matney. She was born in the State of Missouri, while her parents are natives of Mississippi. They have nine children—Sarah, William, David, Ella, Henry, Albert, Alexander, Minnie and Edith. Mr. Matney is a worthy Mason and one of the wealthy and influential men of Wyandotte County. He has a large farm of 283 acres, 185 acres in cultivation, and the rest in blue grass pasture. He has made very fine and substantial improvements on his farm; his residence is a new, large two-story frame, well finished and furnished throughout, and is located on one of the finest roads leading out of Kansas City, about five miles from that place.

JOHN S. PAYNE, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Shawnee, Johnson County, came to Kansas in the winter of 1855, and worked by the month for a wealthy and intelligent Indian named Jackson Rodgers. About five months afterward, his father rented a place, and cultivated it one year. He lived with his father during the year, and moved with him in the spring of 1857 to a claim which he pre-empted on the Kaw Bottom, near where Turner is now located. Remained on this farm three or four years, and then removed again with his father to a tract of Indian land which he had purchased, and which they cleared and improved. In July, 1863, a squad of bushwackers came to the house near midnight, called the father out of bed, and on his opening the door they shot and killed him in the presence of his family, and then plundered the house, carrying off all the valuables. Previous to this time, John S. Payne, the subject of our sketch, enlisted in Company B, Second Kansas Cavalry, on March 1, 1862. Was in nearly all the engagements of his command, including Cane Hill, Prairie Grove, Honey Springs and many skirmishes. In October, 1862, captured a battery at Fort Wayne, in the Cherokee Nation, and his company was organized into the Third Kansas Battery. He served as Corporal through the war, and was mustered out in March, 1865. He was born in McDonough County, Ill., February 25, 1840. At two years of age, moved with his parents to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he remained about twelve years; then moved to Jackson County, Mo., in 1854, and the following winter came to Kansas. He was married on the place which he now occupies, May 24, 1866, to Sarah Webb, daughter of John A. and Barbara Webb. They have one adopted child, William, born November 20, 1878.

PETER J. PRETZ, farmer, Section 32, P. O. Turner, came to Kansas February 1, 1857, and has been engaged in farming in the following places, consecutively: Two miles west of Wyandotte, one year; Charles Armstrong's place, one mile from the old Delaware Mission, one year; Franklin County, Kan., one year; near Wyandotte again, two years; and again near the Delaware Mission one year; then bought of an Indian named Charlie Tooley, the farm which he cleared and improved, and has cultivated ever since. He has been a member of the School Board for five years. He was born in Germany, January 18, 1820, son of Peter and Adelheid Pretz. He was raised in the city of Limburg, on the Lahn River, where he was educated, and where he learned the painter's trade. He worked at his trade two years, and was engaged in the manufacture and sale of woolen goods ten years. He then sailed for America, remained in New York City one year, worked at the painter's trade in Macounta, Ill., two years, and Kansas City two years, and then commenced farming in Kansas, near Wyandotte. He was married in St. Clair County, Ill., in September, 1854, to Augusta Erhart, a native of Siegmaringen, Germany, daughter of George and Elizabeth Erhart. He has six children—Adelheid, Annie, Theresa, Henry, George and August Pretz. Mr. P. is a member of the Catholic Church, and one of the successful farmers of Wyandotte County, and an influential citizen.

JOSEPH BOSTON STEEL, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Argentine, was born in Tazewell County, Va., June 10, 1828, son of William and Mary Steel. His grandfather, Ralph Steel, was a veteran of the war of 1812. He lived until sixteen years of age in his native county, then moved to Jackson County, Mo. Farmed two years, and then in the spring of 1855, moved to a new place on the Wakarusa Bottom, southwest of Topeka, in Shawnee County, Kan., where he remained eighteen months, during which time his mother died, and he returned to Jackson County, Mo., but in 1857, fall of the year, he moved into Wyandotte County, Kan., and engaged in teaming four years. He then rented a farm four miles from Kansas City, and after cultivating it four years, he bought it and greatly improved it, and five years afterward sold out and purchased the farm which he has cultivated ever since. His home consists of 120 acres of land, in a high state of cultivation, and well improved. Mr. Steel has served four years as Township Trustee, and is the present incumbent. Has also served eight years as Road Supervisor, and two years as Director of school district. He was married in Shawneetown, Johnson County, Kan., July 21, 1861, to Mary L. Peart, native of Jackson County, Mo., and daughter of Jonathan and Ouey Peart. They have five children, viz.: John F., Edward, Lizzie, William C. and Ophelia. Mr. Steel is one of Wyandotte's best citizens.

WHITE CHURCH.

White Church, nearly in the center of the county, about ten miles west of Wyandotte, is a pretty little hamlet, and is the historical scene of the old Delaware mission and the building of the "White Church," for the Indians' benefit. Four miles north is Pomeroy, on the Missouri Pacific Road, is its nearest station. White Church contains a good school, a Masonic hall, two churches, and half a dozen stores.

The Presbyterian Church was organized April 19, 1869. Its membership numbered forty. The pastor is Rev. A. A. Allen. The Sunday school has been maintained thirteen years, and averages a membership of twenty-five.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has an organization and church property.

The Masonic Lodge was chartered October 20, 1870, membership, twenty-five. Officers, W. M., T. W. Noland; S. W., Gus Hovey; J. W., J. C. Gnute; Treasurer, Joshua Blankonship; Secretary, P. C. Hinton.

The Presbyterian Church, of White Church, was organized April 19, 1869, with membership of forty, A. A. Allen, pastor. Value of church property, $1,200. A public school has been maintained here thirteen years, with an average attendance of twenty-five pupils. There are two Sunday schools in the place, average attendance, thirty. There is also a Masonic Lodge, chartered October 20, 1870, with a membership of thirty-five. Its officers are: T. W. Noland, W. M.; Gus Hovey, S. W.; J. C. Gnute, J. W.; Joshua Blankonship, Treasurer; P. C. Hinton, Secretary.

The Methodist Episcopal Church South, and Methodist Episcopal Church, have an organization and a good church property.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—QUINDARO TOWNSHIP.

JEFFERSON F. BARKER, farmer, Section 22, P. O. Quindaro, was born in Mercer County, W. Va., January 24, 1860. Is a son of Joseph and Eliza A. Barker; was reared on a farm and attended the public schools in his native county until he came to Kansas in 1877, March 31. He settled on the farm where he now lives, consisting of 212 acres of fine fruit and farming land, all in cultivation except about seventy-five acres of timbered pasture. He has twenty acres in fruit. His residence commands a fine view of the Missouri River and an extensive landscape of varied beauty. His father was a native of Virginia, and died March 5, 1862. His mother, who lives with him at present, is a native of Illinois. Her maiden name was Nichols. Mr. Barker is quite young, only twenty-two years old. Has only been a resident of the State five and one-half years, but has won an enviable reputation.

ROBERT J. BARKER, merchant and grain dealer, Pomeroy, came to Kansas September 20, 1870. Located in Wyandotte County; taught school nine years, and in 1879 opened a general store at Pomeroy, where he has been engaged in merchandising ever since. He has also served as agent for Missouri Pacific Railroad Company at this place three years, and is still employed in that capacity. He was appointed Postmaster in April, 1882. He was born in West Virginia April 28, 1848, son of Messina C. and Julia A. Barker. He was reared on the farm, but attended and taught school much of the time until he came to Kansas in 1870. He was married in Wyandotte County, December 31, 1871, to Melissa Malott, daughter of Hiram and Susan Malott, and a native of Missouri. He had by his first wife one child, still living—Maud O. Barker. His wife died March 26, 1874. He was married again in Wyandotte County, February 26, 1877, to Bettie K. Palmer, a native of Indiana and daughter of Wilkinson and Guinna Palmer, by whom he has two children—Ella E. and Frederick C. Barker. Mr. Barker is District Deputy Grand Master I. O. O. F., of District No. 88, also P. C. K. of P. He carries a large stock of general merchandise and occupies, in addition to a capacious salesroom, an extensive wareroom and commands the entire trade of the place. He also deals in wood, grain and country produce of all kinds.

ANDREW J. BATES, farmer, Section 26, P. O. Quindaro, was born in Cherokee County, Ga., December 18, 1837. Son of Frances Marion and Sarah Bates. He left his native State and moved to Pine Bluffs, Ark., in the spring of 1856. Though Southern born and raised, he was true to his country and determined if possible to reach the Union lines, and on the night of July 10, 1862, left Pine Bluff, in company with two others, and crossed the river by night, traveled through swamps and cane, resting only by day; took their route up White River, passed through the rebel pickets in the dark; at one time went three days and nights without food, slept on the wet ground in the rain; on account of exposure one of the company took sick and was very low for a week, but after many hair-breadth escapes and perilous adventures they at last, on the 5th day of August, espied the old stars and stripes and at once enlisted in Company H, First Michigan Artillery. Served till the close of war. Was with Grant at Vicksburg, Sherman at Atlanta and Thomas at Nashville; was under fire 300 days during the war; was in all the engagements of his command and was mustered out last of June, 1865. In September of same year, came to Kansas; settled where he now lives and has been engaged in farming ever since. He was married in Unadilla, Mich., August 15, 1865, to Mary Cleveland, a native of Michigan, and daughter of John and Nancy Cleveland. He has two children—James and Elizabeth Bates. Mr. Bates is erecting a fine two-story residence, which will be another ornament among the many fine country homes which adorn the vicinity of Wyandotte. He and wife are consistent members of the Congregational Church.

FRANK H. BETTON, P. O. Pomeroy. The subject of this sketch is a lineal descendant of Matthew Thornton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and President of the convention which assumed the government of the colony of New Hampshire. His father, Thornton Betton, was a prominent lawyer and a graduate of Dartmouth College. His grandfather, Hon. Silas Betton, was a graduate of the same institution, and a Member of Congress. His grandmother, the wife of Hon. Silas Betton, was the daughter of Matthew Thornton, who signed the Declaration. He was born in Derry, N. H., August 1, 1835; is a son of Thornton and Mary E. B. H. Betton. Eight years of his early life were passed in Derry, two years in Newburyport, Mass., one year at Portsmouth, N. H. a short time in Dover, N. H., and three years in Boston, Mass. At the latter place he engaged as clerk in a mercantile house. He then went to Petersburg, Va., where he remained two years, and in May, 1856, came to Kansas. He landed at Leavenworth City on the 8th day of May, and at once went about finding business. He had $2,000 in money to invest, and, proceeding to the old historic town of Easton, he fell in company with others who agreed to interest themselves with him in building up a town on Red Vermillion Creek. The new town was to have at once a hotel, store, blacksmith shop, and saw-mill. After the suffering the privations and disappointments common to such an enterprise in a new country, Mr. Betton found the project abandoned by the others, and himself the owner of a saw-mill in a town and country without inhabitants. He returned to Leavenworth, and during the winter engaged in a general speculating business, dealing principally, however, in Geary City town property, by which he realized about $500. He attended the sale of town shares (10 lots) in Wyandotte, advertised to take place March 1, 1857, the first 100 shares to be sold at $500 a share. He bought share No. 92. There was a perfect craze for these shares. People came from far and near, and it was by chance that he managed to buy an interest. Isaiah Walker's store was the only frame building in the town at the time. It still stands on the north side of Nebraska avenue, below Fourth street. Silas Armstrong's brick residence stood on the hill, near the corner of Fifth street and Minnesota avenue. Ike Brown's log house stood where Dunning's Hall now stands. The land office building was located nearly opposite, and Joel Walker lived in a log house near Jersey Creek. The Widow Splitlog's cabin occupied the hill south of Minnesota avenue, and the Cotter's lived at the ferry, and those houses constituted the city of Wyandotte in 1857. Mr. Betton was offered $750 for one lot while on his way to Leavenworth, just after the purchase, but refused to take it. Wyandotte had her collapse, and values shrunk amazingly. Mr. Betton disposed of his interest at a sacrifice. He next entered a claim of 160 acres of farming land, and forty acres of timber, near Osawkie, on the Delaware Trust Lands. He also speculated in claims, and was very successful in this enterprise. After Osawkie land sales, he returned to Leavenworth, but the same fall located in Wyandotte and engaged in lumbering and logging for a saw mill, and in December, 1859, bought it. It was located where the town of Argentine has since been built up. In 1860, he bought forty acres of land, and built a house on it, which is still standing. The smelting works are now located on this forty acres, which he sold in 1863 for $500, now worth over $100,000. In 1863, the mill was moved over to the Missouri River, near Nearman Station, where he continued the business until the fall of 1867, his family living in the meantime at Wyandotte. In company with Mr. Overton, he bought a half section of land of Alexander Caldwell and Lucien Scott, near Pomeroy, and in June, 1868, located a new saw-mill at that place. The mill exploded the first day's run, killing one man and injuring another. The mill was immediately rebuilt, and other lands were subsequently bought, until Overton & Betton were the owners of 1,100 acres of fine timber land. They and their employes, mill hands and wood-choppers, were the only white settlers in the vicinity. Mr. Betton solicited the County Superintendent to lay out a school district, which was done immediately. Bonds were voted to build a schoolhouse. They were purchased by Overton & Betton, and the commodious school room was erected, which still stands to do credit to the enterprise of its first proprietors. They also built a side track on the Missouri Pacific Railroad at their own expense, erected a store room, and secured a post office. The store room was first occupied by Derrick Stone, Pomeroy's first merchant. In 1873, they erected their three-story flouring-mill, called Maple Cliff Mills. They also sold lands to the amount of about 400 acres, and still retain about 700 acres. The mill was operated by Overton & Betton until 1878, when Mr. Young purchased the half-interest of Mr. Overton, and the mill was owned and operated by Betton & Young until the spring of 1883, when they disposed of their entire interest to the Pomeroy Milling Company. Mr. Betton has striven to do his part in the labors which, in a period of twenty-five years, have served to carve out of the wilderness the foremost county in his State. He has been identified with many enterprises, public and private, and, like most old settlers, has reaped but a moderate reward. He has written much for the press since his residence in Kansas, and displays a literary ability remarkable for a man who has been so actively engaged in business pursuits. He was married in Wyandotte, March 8, 1860, to Susanna Mudeater, an accomplished and educated daughter of Matthew Mudeater, head chief of the Wyandotte nation. Her father was educated at the Methodist Episcopal Mission, Upper Sandusky, Ohio. Her mother was educated at the same mission. Both were exceedingly fair and handsome. They emigrated with the Wyandottes to Indian Territory in 1843. Mr. Betton has six children—Florence, Frank H., Cora E., Matthew Thornton, Susanna W. and Ernest L. He has been Grand Master of the R. W. Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., State of Kansas, and its Grand Representative in the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the United States; also, Grand Chancellor of the Grand Lodge of the K. of P. of the State of Kansas, and its Representative to the Supreme Lodge of the United States.

DANIEL BRAMAN, farmer and merchant, Section 35, P. O. Braman Hill. Came to Kansas January 12, 1858. Located here, and has made this his home ever since. From 1867 to 1878, was in the colporteur work for the American Tract Society. His field was confined part of the time to Johnson, Wyandotte and Leavenworth Counties, but the remainder of the time was colporteur at large for the northern half of Kansas and border counties of Missouri. He then resumed farming, and in connection with this has carried on a country store, dealing in general merchandise and country produce. He enlisted in Company G, Sixth Kansas Cavalry, and was mustered in at Leavenworth, in November, 1861. He did border service, scouting, hunting bushwhackers, etc., but was in several heavy engagements, such as Maysville, Ark., Prairie Grove, and Cane Hill, Mo., and many others. Was in active service until mustered out, November, 1864. He enlisted as a private, but was several times promoted, and was last commissioned as Second Lieutenant, which commission he held until his term of service expired. He was born in Waterford, New London Co., Conn., May 16, 1832. He is a son of Daniel S. and Mary L. Braman. He was educated in the public schools of Waterford. At the age of sixteen, he went to New London, and worked at the sail-maker's trade seven or eight years. He also spent a short time in Brooklyn, N. Y., just prior to his removal to Kansas in 1858. He was married, in Waterford, Conn., September 11, 1853, to Sarah H. Moore, an intelligent and accomplished lady, a native of Connecticut, and a daughter of Enoch and Mary L. Moore. They have four children—Mary Eva, Ida Florine, Edward Everett and Dottie Lizette, and seldom are children blessed with such parents, both of whom exhibit a Christian culture rarely to be found. They are consistent members of the Baptist Church. He was elected to the office of Treasurer of Quindaro Township in November, 1877, and has been re-elected each year since, and holds the office now. He was chosen Deacon of the Baptist Church, 9th of December, 1867, and has filled that office since that time.

ABRAM H. BROWN, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Quindaro. His grandfather was a veteran of the war of 1812, and his father beat the roll call on Bunker Hill at La Fayette's visit to America in 1824. The subject of this sketch was born on Bunker Hill, Charleston, Mass., July 26, 1826, son of Jonathan and Mary Brown. His parents moved to Adams County, Ill., in the spring of 1833. He was brought up on a farm till seventeen years of age, then moved to Quincy, Ill., and learned the brick-layer's trade, worked in Quincy two and a half years, then went to Peoria, Ill., where he contracted brick work and plastering for two years. He then started with an ox train as wagon master for Santa Fé, N. M. Struck the Kansas line in the spring of 1847. He was taken down with the cholera at Black Jack, on account of which the train was detained three days. Six train men had the cholera, only one of whom died. They reached Santa Fé July 26, 1847, and the two years following, he was engaged in burning and furnishing lime for the Government uses and was superintendent of the laying of rock for the State House at Santa Fé. He next accompanied Capt. Love's expedition to the Gila River, prospecting for gold, but the enterprise failing on account of hostile Indians, he returned to the old copper mines at Ft. Webster, where he laid up about four months and then returned to Santa Fé to spend the winter. The following spring he came back to Kansas and from there went to New York, where he was married, February 17, 1857, to Lydia M. Ward, a teacher and a native of New York, and daughter of Lemuel and Hannah Ward. He then returned with his bride to Kansas City and made that his home till 1878. But enlisted in Company C, Vanhorn's Battalion, attached to Twenty-fifth Missouri Volunteer Infantry; was taken prisoner at Lexington, Mo., was Quartermaster Sergeant, acting as Quartermaster at the time. After his parole, he was made Wagonmaster for Capt. Case, Assistant Quartermaster, and was in active service as Master of Transportation for Capt. Case till nearly the close of the war. On his return to Kansas City, he resumed his business as a contractor and did the brick work on Plankington & Armour's original packing house. He was also contractor for the brick work and plastering on the first schoolhouse built in Kansas City, Kan. He moved to his present location in 1878, where he has engaged in farming ever since. He is P. G. I. O. O. F.

HENRY BUTTERWECK, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Wyandotte. He was born in Furstenthum Waldeck, Germany, October 8, 1834; son of Stephen and Mary Butterweck. Attended school in his native town till about fifteen years of age; he then worked in a factory at Brownson three years, after which he was engaged in a blacksmith and wagon shop four years, and March 7, 1857, left for America, settling on a farm near Uniontown, Fayette Co., Penn., and in August, 1860, moved to Ohio, where he engaged in farming until the breaking-out of the war, when he enlisted at London in Company C, Fortieth Ohio, September 11, 1861. He was in many of the hardest fought battles of the great rebellion, among which were the engagements at Franklin, Tenn., Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge and Pine Mountain and many others; was under Garfield in Kentucky, and was with Sherman in the famous march through Georgia as far as Atlanta. He was mustered out October 8, 1864. At the close of the war, he returned to his old home in Pennsylvania, spent the winter, and then moved to Ohio, where he resided until he came to Kansas September, 1868. He was married in Uniontown, Penn., December 25, 1864, to Malinda McLaughlin, a native of Pennsylvania, and a daughter of Joseph and Mary McLaughlin. They have six children, viz.: Mary M., Lidie C., Sallie Adaline, Henry Rinehart, Joseph T. and George Edwin. Mr. Butterweck cleared the farm which he now owns and cultivates, and has made all the improvements, which render it one of the most comfortable homes in the vicinity.

LYMAN COMSTOCK, farmer, Section 35, P. O. Braman Hill. Came to Kansas December 12, 1866. Lived near Nearman Station till the spring of 1872, when he purchased the farm on which he has lived ever since. During the winters of 1866-67 and 1868, he was engaged in getting out wood and ties for railroad companies. He has served on the School Board for three years. Is one of the solid men of Wyandotte County. Was born in Coshocton County, Ohio, March 31, 1833, son of Lyman and Harriet Comstock. Attended the public schools until fifteen years of age, then went to Cleveland, Ohio, and made brick three years; thence to Clarion County, Penn., where he engaged in tie making over one year, manufacturing lumber two years, farming and boat-making about nine years, and then moved to Kansas in the fall of 1866. He was married in Pennsylvania, April 1, 1856, to Sophia McLain, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth McLain. He has six children—Millard Fillmore, Harriet E., George W., John Wesley, Sarah Ellen and Mary Frances. Mr. Comstock and wife are worthy members of the Congregational Church.

THOMAS CROOKS, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Braman Hill; came to Kansas April 2, 1857. First worked as a farm hand for an educated, wealthy and influential Indian, named Francis Cotter, one year. Then rented Cotter's farm and worked it two years; then went to Pike's Peak and returned the same summer; cleared a piece of timber land during the winter; taught school the next spring and summer until harvest, and then enlisted in the army in the summer of 1861. He enlisted in Company E, Fourth Kansas Cavalry, and was afterward transferred to Kansas Sixth. He was mustered in as Orderly Sergeant, and in January, 1863, was made Second Lieutenant, and six months afterward, by petition of his company, he was commissioned as Captain and served in that capacity until the close of the war. He was in all the engagements of his command and was mustered out April 14, 1865, when he resumed the more agreeable occupation of a farmer, locating three and a half miles west of Wyandotte City, where he has given special attention to fruit growing and has one of the many fine orchards of Wyandotte County. He was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, September 8, 1831. Is a son of Henry and Catharine Crooks. He grew up on a farm in his native county, was educated at Hagerstown Academy, and came direct from his native town to Kansas in 1857. He was married in Clay County, Mo., April 11, 1867, to Julia A. Farnesworth, native of Wheeling, Va., and daughter of Isaac and Louisa Farnesworth. They have three children—Carrie L., Lillie May and Adeline Inzie. They are both members of the Congregational Church.

WILLIAM W. DICKINSON, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Quindaro, was born in Heath, Franklin Co., Mass., December 27, 1831. Is a son of Solomon and Eunice S. Dickinson. He attended the common and select schools of his native town, and afterward Shelburne Falls and Amherst Academies. He then taught during the winters and farmed through the summers, and to some extent engaged in civil engineering, until the spring of 1856, when he came to Kansas. On his way to Kansas, he accidentally took the same steamer at St. Louis on which a company of South Carolina ruffians had taken passage. They were armed to the teeth, and were intending to reach Kansas in time to participate in the sacking of Lawrence. The steamer landed at Kansas City on the very day that Lawrence was sacked. The border ruffians had established a kind of custom house at Westport, by which all baggage was examined, and if destined for Kansas was not allowed to pass if it came from any of the Free States. When Mr. Dickinson arrived at Westport, the hack stopped for dinner at Smith's Hotel, and his trunk, marked Franklin County, Mass., and his surveyor's compass were piled up with other baggage to be examined by the custom house officers. While waiting for dinner, he managed, while standing near his trunk, by a dexterous movement of his heel, to disfigure the abbreviation of Mass. so as to have more of the appearance of Mo., and this passed his trunk, while S. C., for surveyor's compass, on the box containing that article, passed for South Carolina, and Mr. Dickinson was thus enabled to pass Westport. But a short distance on the road to Lawrence, he was met by hordes of ruffians coming from the disgraceful affair which had desolated Lawrence the night before, and was compelled to return to Kansas City, where he met at Eldridge House A. D. Richardson, of literary fame. The Eldridge House was headquarters for the Free-State men remaining over night here. He took a steamer the next morning for Nebraska. He remained in Omaha, Neb., one year, and taught the first school ever taught in that city by a male teacher. He then returned to Massachusetts, and was engaged for awhile in settling up his father's estate. April 1, 1859, he started again for Kansas, arriving in Quindaro April 9, where he engaged in the mercantile business until the fall of 1861, and has been engaged in farming ever since. He was elected to the first Kansas State Legislature in 1861. Served one term. He has twice been elected County Superintendent of Public Instruction, serving four years in that capacity. He is a worthy member of the Congregational Church. He has sixty acres of fine farming land, six acres in fruit and lawn. His residence, a large two-story frame house, is beautifully situated in the pretty little village of Quindaro, three miles from Wyandotte, and commands one of the most charming views in the State of Kansas. His grounds are handsomely laid out, and tastefully decorated with ornamental trees and shrubbery, making one of the most desirable among the many pleasant homes which adorn the vicinity of Wyandotte.

ASA ELLIS, farmer, Section 29, P. O. White Church, came to Kansas in the spring of 1869, settled in Quindaro Township, and for eleven years carried on a farm two miles east of where he now resides, and then came to his present location, where he has continued farming ever since. He proposes to engage quite extensively in fruit growing. He enlisted in Company F, Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, in December, 1863, at Fort Leavenworth. Was living at the time in Platte County, Mo. In February, 1865, was sent on an expedition to Powder River, Montana. Left Leavenworth February 14, went to Powder River country, and down the river till they came in sight of the Yellowstone. Was then ordered to return, and was mustered out December 19, 1865. He was born in Montgomery County, Mo., November 7, 1842, son of David Ellis. His mother died when he was an infant. He came to Platte County in the fall of 1858, and farmed there till his removal to Kansas in 1869. Was married in Platte County, Mo., September 2, 1861, to Catherine King, daughter of Andrew C. and Elizabeth King. They have seven children, viz.: Mary, Elizabeth, Francis M., Flora, Ellen, Floyd and Asa.

WILEY W. ENGLISH was one of the substantial citizens of Wyandotte County, and was universally esteemed for his many excellent traits of character. He was born in Tennessee in November, 1817. His parents moved to Louisville, Ky., when he was quite young, and his boyhood days were spent in and near that city. He came to Independence, Mo., when quite young, and learned the saddler's trade. He remained at Independence several years, and then moved to St. Joseph, Mo., where he carried on a harness shop for seven or eight years. He then moved to Platte County, Mo., and engaged in farming sixteen or seventeen years, after which he moved to Weston to educate his family, and remained there about four years, doing a general trading business, and in May, 1868, came to White Church, and engaged in farming until his death, April 8, 1880. He was married November 3, 1839, in Platte County, Mo., to Martha J. Downing, daughter of John H. and Eliza Downing. She is a native of Lincoln County, Mo., and is still living on the old homestead. Is the mother of the following children: Eliza Jane, Martha B., Theodore Warner, Wiley W., Angie M. and Davie English. In connection with this sketch, Wiley Worth English is worthy of especial mention. He is the sole executor of his father's estate, farmer, Section 31, P. O. White Church. Was born in Platte County, Mo., April 14, 1858. Was educated principally at Weston, Mo., and came to Kansas in the spring of 1869, and attended school in Leavenworth City about one year and six months, and attended Palmer's Academy in Wyandotte one year. He is unmarried, and is engaged in farming and stock-raising. Is considerably above the average in intelligence and moral worth, and is destined to figure in the future history of Kansas.

R. M. GRAY, merchant and horticulturist, has been Postmaster at Quindaro ten years; home farm, Section 29, thirty acres, fruit and lawn, also farm in Section 13, P. O. Quindaro. He came to Kansas in the spring of 1858, and located where he now lives. Engaged in farming till 1861. Then entered the Government service, and was connected with the Quartermaster's department during the entire war. Started with the Kansas Second. Was with Gen. Curtis' army from Pea Ridge to Helena, and was afterward with Grant's army, Second Division, Fifteenth Army Corps. Went via New Orleans, La., to the mouth of the Rio Grande River. Curtis' Red River expedition failing, he was ordered back to New Orleans, where he remained till the close of the war. Returning to Quindaro, he engaged in farming till January, 1873, when he opened a general store, and has been merchandising ever since. He was born in Erie County, N. Y., December 29, 1821, son of Isaiah and Mary Gray. He was reared on a farm till about nineteen years of age. Came West as far as Chicago in 1840, and spent the winter of that year at Elgin. In the following spring, he moved to Waukegan, and engaged in merchandising until 1858, when he came to Kansas. He was married in Waukegan, Ill., June 10, 1847, to Susan G. Doust, daughter of Samuel and Hannah Doust. They have four children, viz.: Eldrid M., Mary Ann, George M. and Joseph M. Mr. Gray commands the entire trade at Quindaro. He occupies a sales room 20x50, ware room 20x45, and cellar 40x50. Carries a heavy stock of general merchandise, and deals to some extent in feed and country produce. At the same time, he manages a fruit farm of thirty acres of fine fruit.

WILLIAM P. HOGARTY, Lieutenant. U. S. A., retired, residence and P. O. Quindaro. He was born in New York City February 16, 1840. Is a son of Patrick and Hannah Hogarity. When three years of age, his parents moved to near Elmira, Chemung Co., N. Y., where they both died in 1849. He remained here until the breaking-out of the rebellion, when on the 1st day of April, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Twenty-third New York Volunteer Infantry. Was mustered into service May 16, 1861. He belonged to what was known as the Iron Brigade, Army of the Potomac. Was most of the time on detached service with Battery B, Fourth Artillery, commanded by Capt. John Gibbon, afterward Gen. Gibbon. He was in all the engagements of his command. Was in the battles of Cedar Mountain, Rappahannock Station, Sulphur Springs, Groveton, second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and several engagements of minor importance. He lost his arm December 13, 1862, at the battle of Fredericksburg, Va. Was discharged January 29, 1863, on account of disability. Was appointed Second Lieutenant Veteran Reserve Corps, January 30, 1865, and brevetted First Lieutenant and Captain of Volunteers, March 2, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war. Was appointed Second Lieutenant Forty-fifth United States Infantry, July 28, 1866, and was retired December 31, 1870, on account of loss of arm from wounds received in battle, and partial deafness resulting from exposure in line of duty; he was brevetted First Lieutenant, United States Army, March 2, 1867, for gallant and meritorious service in the battle of Fredericksburg, Va. His service in the regular army since the war has principally been in the Freedman's Bureau, in Kentucky and Tennessee, capturing ku-klux, guerrillas, and desperadoes who infested that section of the country after the war; also paying bounties and establishing schools. At the time of his retirement he was on recruiting service at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Mr. Hogarty is a man of considerable literary ability, and has several times engaged in the discussion of military measures being considered by Congress. He was largely instrumental in defeating the Hon. E. S. Bragg's amendment to the army appropriation bill, stopping all further argument of longevity allowance for service in retirement. He has now on hand an important fight in Congress, on the bill 1,555, Forty-sixth Congress, which provides "that any Lieutenant of the army retired from active service on account of the loss of an arm or leg from wounds received in line of duty, and who has been in the military service of the United States fifteen years, shall have, upon the retired list, the rank of Captain in the same arm or department of service in which such loss of limb was incurred." He has discussed with much ability the ethical principles involved in this measure, in letters to Senators Logan, of Illinois, Plumb, of Kansas, and Bragg, of Wisconsin, also in the columns of the Army and Navy Journal. Through his personal efforts was secured the favorable indorsements to this measure from Gens. U. S. Grant, W. T. Sherman, W. S. Hancock, Phil. Sheridan, and the Secretary of War, and although the military committee reported adversely upon this bill, it was placed on the calendar of Congress. He expects, however, to prosecute the effort to a successful issue. He was married in Kansas City, Mo., August 8, 1872, to Harriet R. Carr, a native of Chemung County, N. Y., and daughter of Wyatt S. and Ann Carr. She is an accomplished and intelligent lady and presides with queenly grace and dignity over the household. They have four children—Sadie H., Ella T., Maggie J. and Kate E. They have lived since their marriage, in Kansas City one year, in Independence, Mo., three years, and at their present location six years. Everything about their home is expressive of taste and culture. Capt. Hogarty was educated at Alfred University, New York, where he was a student when he entered the army in 1861.

ELFONZO HOLLY, farmer, Section 24, P. O. Braman Hill. Came to Kansas in the fall of 1859, locating near Wyandotte and engaged in farming at that place about seven years, then purchased the farm on which he has lived ever since. During the first three winters spent in the State, he was engaged in getting out and furnishing wood and ties for the railroad company. He has served two terms as Township Treasurer and about ten years as member of the School Board. Was born in Ellisburg, Jefferson Co., N. Y., September 27, 1827; son of Alonzo and Rebecca Jane Holly. He left his native place August, 1844; went to Wisconsin and two years afterward settled on a farm near Albany, Green Co. About the year 1851, returned to New York and remained four years, and then returned to the same county in Wisconsin and purchased another farm, on which he lived until he moved to Kansas. He was married in Dane County, Wis., December 4, 1856, to Maria Vandawark, daughter of John and Catherine Vandawark; she is a native of Ellery, Chautauqua Co., N. Y. They have two children, viz.: Luella, wife of Adolph Miller, and Viola, wife of Frank Miller.

WILLIAM F. HOUGHTON, farmer and horticulturist, Section 30, P. O. Quindaro, was born in Saratoga, N. Y., June 17, 1833. Is a son of William and Hannah Houghton. He was reared in Mechanicsville until eleven years of age, where he attended school with Col. Ellsworth, afterward killed at Alexandria, Va. He went with his parents to Dreffield, Yorkshire, England, May, 1844, and remained there three and one-half years, and in the fall of 1847 he engaged as an errand boy in a seed store in Liverpool, and in 1849, emigrated with his father to America. Settled in Troy, N. Y., and clerked for his aunt in a resturant for two years, and afterward in a clothing store for five years; then came to Illinois and worked a short time on a farm in McHenry County. Went from there the same season to Lake County, Ill., and clerked in Waukegan until 1860, and in the spring of that year came to Quindaro, and in company with R. M. Gray, Mr. Priestly, Frank Sluman and others, went to Denver, and after a short prospecting tour in the mountains, he returned to Chicago and engaged in mercantile business as clerk until September 7, 1861, when he enlisted in Company H, Eighth Illinois Calvary. He served as clerk for his Captain about three and a half months, and December 23, 1861, was honorably discharged on account of disability. He returned to Chicago and engaged to clerk for the same firm which he had served before, viz., H. & E. Goodrich, Desplaines street, remaining with them one year and then engaged in book-keeping for Kirby, Carpenter & Co., lumber manufacturers at Menominee, on the shores of Green Bay, Upper Peninsula of Michigan, where he remained until he came to Kansas in the spring of 1866. He located his family at Quindaro and clerked at Lawrence for about seven years, his family residing in Lawrence about a year and a half of that time. The remainder of his time in Kansas from the spring of 1875 until the present has been spent at his home in Quindaro, with the exception of about six months, during which time he engaged in clerking in the wholesale department of Bullene, Moore & Emery's dry goods establishment in Kansas City, Mo. He is at present engaged in fruit raising and gardening, which he makes quite profitable. He was married in Chicago, Ill., November 4, 1862, to Mary L. Butrick, a native of Illinois, and a daughter of Hiram and Mary Butrick. They have two children living—Frederick B. and Carrie; two dead—William H. and Lotta. They are both active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Their home is a model of tidiness and exhibits the taste and refinement and Christian culture which characterize the family.

GEORGE U. S. HOVEY, merchant and farmer, Postmaster at White Church, Section 31. Came to Kansas in the summer of 1869; located at White Church, and has been engaged in farming and merchandising ever since. Has served as Justice of the Peace and Notary Public ten years. Has several times been a delegate to the State Convention. He was born in Ulster County, N. Y., July 19, 1842; son of Alfred L. and Elizabeth Hovey. He left his native place when about nineteen years of age, and went to New York City; was educated in Ward School No. 3; returned to farm about the winter of 1857. Left home again in 1859, and after stopping a few weeks in Brooklyn, took a steamer for California via Nicaragua. While in the State of California, he made his headquarters at Petaluma, and engaged in farming and stock dealing until 1868, when he came overland to Wyandotte, Kan. He prospected about one year and finally settled at White Church, where he still resides. He was married in New York City, February 10, 1870, to Ella Jane Jones, daughter of John and Ellen Jones. Their children are Ellen Jane, John P., Emma (dead), Josephine B., George U. (dead), Anna T. and Alfred Clement. Mr. Hovey and wife are members of the Christian Church. He has a full stock of merchandise, deals also in grain and stock, and is one of the most influential men in Wyandotte County.

MARCUS HURLA, farmer, Section 33, P. O. Wyandotte. Came to Kansas City March, 1857, and kept a boarding house three years, then moved to Johnson County, Kan., and farmed nine years, after which he came to his present location, where he owns 137 acres of very fine land, with fine improvements. His residence, a large two-story brick house, well finished and furnished, is located about one mile from the city of Wyandotte and commands a fine view of Wyandotte and surrounding country. He was born in Baden, Germany, April 19, 1822; son of Georick and Arich Hurla. Was educated in Germany and learned the tailor's trade, which he followed till he emigrated to America in 1850. He settled in Rochester, N. Y., and remained there three years, then moved to Chicago, where he worked at his trade three years and then came to Kansas City and finally to Kansas. He was married in Rochester, N. Y., April 24, 1850, to Frances Propst, a native of Germany, by whom he had one child, Theodore Hurla. His first wife died September 16, 1852. Was again married in Rochester, May 16, 1853, to Benhartina Merkle, also a native of Germany, by whom he has six children—Mollie, Lewis, Lena, Rosa, Marcus and Mary Hurla. Mr. Hurla and wife are both members of the Catholic Church.

CALVIN E. KLINE, blacksmith and proprietor of the Keystone Carriage Works, Quindaro. Came to Kansas March, 1879; located in Wyandotte; worked in the Kansas Pacific Railroad shops seven months, then came to Quindaro and purchased a wagon shop. Occupied this shop from February till October, and found business so increased as to demand a larger shop; tore away the old buildings and erected the commodious shops which he now occupies. He was born in Luzerne County, Penn., December 9, 1851, son of Leonard and Mary Ann Kline. Moved to Columbus County, Penn., in the spring of 1861, where his father ran a farm and blacksmith shop about seventeen years. He lived at home till sixteen years of age, then worked in Snyder Bros'. foundry and machine shops at Williamsport, Penn., two years and nine months, after which he returned home and worked at his trade about four years. He then moved to Hughesville, Lycoming Co., Penn., where he worked one year, then took charge of his father's shops at home one year, and from there came direct to Wyandotte, Kan. He was married at Rohrsburg, Penn., December 25, 1873, to Laura L. Preston, a native of Pennsylvania, and daughter of James L. and Carrie T. Preston. They have four children—Emma, Carrie, Wilbur and Lizzie. They are both worthy members of the Congregational Church. In connection with this sketch we mention as worthy a place in this department of our work, Mr. Marcus L. Kline, blacksmith, and one of the proprietors of the Keystone Carriage and Wagon Works, who came to Kansas November, 1878, settled in Wyandotte; worked in the Kansas Pacific Railroad shops two years and four months, and has since been a partner in the Keystone Carriage Works. He was born in Luzerne County, Penn., November 3, 1857, son of Leonard and Mary Ann Kline. He lived with his parents till seven years of age, then with his grandparents, Harman and Sarah Labour, in Columbia County, till their death in 1869. He then went to Rohrsburg, Penn., where he was educated and began his trade; worked at his trade one year here and six months at the town of Espy, on the north branch of the Susquehanna River; returned home and put in two years' hard, faithful, steady work at his trade, after which he farmed two years. He then went to Williamsport, Lycoming Co., and worked in Rhen & Co.'s Keystone Carriage Works one year, and in Gottchal's Empire Works nine months, thence to Roaring Branch same county, and did general blacksmithing six months, after which he returned to Williamsport and remained one year, and from thence came to Kansas visiting and prospecting on the way at Erie, Penn., Cleveland, Ohio, Detroit, Mich., Michigan City, Ind., Chicago and other places, landing in Wyandotte September 7, 1878; thence to Quindaro, where he has remained ever since. Kline Bros. are enterprising and prosperous business men; are running three forges, have five men employed in shops and have a capacity of turning out twelve lumber wagons per month.

HIRAM MALOTT, farmer, Section 27, P. O. Wyandotte. Came to Kansas, April 2, 1865. Settled in Quindaro Township, and has engaged in farming ever since. Was elected County Commissioner of Wyandotte County in 1868, and served two years. In 1871, he was elected Representative from his district, and served one term. In 1877, he was elected County Commissioner, and has served as chairman of the board ever since; is now serving on sixth year. In the spring of 1862, he enlisted in Company E, Thirty-seventh Missouri State Militia, and served as First Lieutenant of his company till some time in 1863, when a reorganization of militia took place, which made him First Lieutenant, Company E, Third Missouri Provisional Militia. He served in this company about two months, and on November 10, 1863, was commissioned by Gov. Carney, of Kansas, as recruiting officer. He recruited Company F, of the Sixteenth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and was commissioned First Lieutenant, January 21, 1864. He served in this regiment till March 8, 1865, when the war closed, but was on detached service most of the time. He was born in Madison County, Ky., September 5, 1819, son of Joseph and Mary E. Malott. Came to Clay County, Mo., in fall of 1829. His father died in this county in 1834, and his mother in 1837. He then moved to Platte County, and made it his home till he settled in Kansas in 1865. On the 9th of April, 1850, he started overland, with a train of three ox wagons, to California. He reached his destination after the usual hardships attending such an undertaking, remained in California about one year, and came home via Panama and New Orleans, touching at Havana. He was married in Platte County, September 8, 1844, to Susan E. Rupe, a native of Missouri, and a daughter of William and Sarah Rupe. They have six children—Mary E. (wife of T. W. Noland), W. R. Malott, David Ann (wife of N. J. Myers), Martha Jane (wife of T. J. Barker), Loretta E. (wife of W. P. Hinton) and James Raven Malott. Mr. Malott is deservedly one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Wyandotte County. He and wife are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM GEORGE MILLER, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Quindaro. Came to Kansas in the fall of 1870, and engaged in gardening, near Wyandotte. In the fall of 1873, he moved to Quincy, Ill., and remained there three years, then returned to Kansas, farmed in Quindaro Township three years, and in Wyandotte Township, near White Church, one year, then came to his present location. He was born in Quincy, Ill., December 28, 1847. His mother died when he was an infant. He was the son of Herman Miller. He was reared in Quincy until eleven years of age, and then went on a farm with his father ten miles from Quincy. Remained there until twenty-one years of age, then went to Cincinnati and remained there two years, and in 1870 came to Kansas. Was married in Kansas City, Mo., February 8, 1873, to Mary Winker, a native of Germany, and daughter of Christian and Margaret Winker. She came to America when only eleven years old. They have four children—Albert H., George W. Charles E. and Matilda A. They are both worthy members of the German Methodist Episcopal Church.

ISAAC P. MOORE, printer and horticulturist, Section 31, P. O. Kansas City; place of business No. 12, West Missouri avenue, Kansas City, Mo. His residence, a fine three-story stone building, is situated near Quindaro, Wyandotte Co., Kan., three miles from Wyandotte, on one of the finest carriage drives in the State. His home of fifty-three and three-quarters acres of choice land is divided into orchard, garden and lawn. He has forty-five acres of fruit. The lawn is tastefully decorated with evergreen and forest trees and ornamental shrubbery, and presents one of the many pleasing views which greet the eye on driving from Wyandotte out to the suburban village of Quindaro. Mr. Moore came to Kansas City in February, 1868, and for about one year and a half had charge of the Kansas City Journal job rooms. Resigning his position, he established an independent job printing establishment, which he carried on for about two years. Having sold his office, he bought into the Kansas City Journal of Commerce, and was its President and Business Manager for six years. He then sold out in Kansas City, and came to his present location, where he has resided ever since. After about one year spent on his fruit farm, he again entered the printing business, and now operates an extensive book and job printing establishment in Kansas City, Mo. He occupies three stories with his business, which includes book-binding and the manufacture of blank books; runs three large hydraulic-power presses to their fullest capacity. He was born in Clinton County, N. Y., February 25, 1835. He is a son of Abram B. and Bridget Moore. When four years of age, his mother (his father having died about one year previous) moved to St. Clair County, Ill., and thence to St. Louis, where he was brought up and educated, graduating at St. Xavier College in 1846. He remained in St. Louis until December, 1848, part of the time engaged as clerk in a drug store, and the remaining time in a printing office. In January, 1849, he began the drug business in Cincinnati, Ohio, and followed it one year, and from 1850 until he came to Kansas City, in 1868, was engaged in printing establishments in various sections of the United States. He was married in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 2, 1861, to Mary D. Hagen, a native of Ohio, and daughter of Joseph and Ellen D. Hagen.

CHARLES MORASCH, farmer, Sections 29 and 32, P. O. Wyandotte. Came to Kansas in the fall of 1855, and settled on Mill Creek, Wabaunsee County. Alma, the county seat of Wabaunsee, County, is now located on the land which he entered. He spent about two years in that county, then moved to the thriving town of Quindaro. About 500 men were working on the streets and grades. A large saw mill with three boilers and six saws could not supply material fast enough for the building that was then going on. He engaged in business at Quindaro till 1860, then moved to his farm, two and a half miles from Wyandotte, where he still resides. He has served as Director of School District No. 4, over six years, also served as Coroner of Wyandotte. He was born in Germany November. 4, 1832, son of Jacob and Mary Morasch. Left his native country April 1, 1846, came direct to America, settled in Jackson County, Ind., and remained there until he came to Kansas October, 1855. He was married in Jackson County, Ind., February 8, 1859, to Sarah Winkler, a very intelligent and accomplished lady, and a native of Indiana. They have eight children—Charles C., Otto, William, Frederick, Frank, Jennie, Louisa and Tiny. Mr. Morsch belongs to the order of Masons, also I. O. O. F. His home is one of the finest in the county. The residence is two stories high, built of brick, large and commodious; the architectural design is pleasing, the arrangement is convenient, and altogether it furnishes one of the most comfortable homes in the vicinity.

PEREANDER C. NEWTON, physician, farmer and merchant, White Church. His home farm is in Section 5, but he also has land in Prairie Township. He manages two farms, practices medicine and carries on a large country store. Came to Kansas March 12, 1855, and with his father lived one mile and a half from Atchison City, engaged in farming until 1863. Then attended the St. Louis Medical College eight months, Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Penn., six months, at which he graduated, and Nashville Medical College several months. He began the practice of medicine at Nashville, Tenn., and practiced there about two and a half years, then returned to Kansas and located at White Church, Wyandotte County, where he has practiced medicine and farming ever since, and from 1870 to 1872, ran a saw mill and then opened a general store, which he is still conducting. He occupies a salesroom 20x32 feet and a wareroom 10x32 feet. Carries a heavy stock of general merchandise and also deals in stock. He was born in Robinson County, Tenn., June 11, 1842, is a son of Robert H. and Martha C. Newton. His parents moved to Logan County, Ky., in the winter of 1844, and to Holt County, Mo., in the winter of 1850. After farming one year in Holt County, his father took the management of the Government Mission Farm at Highland, Kan., one year. He next farmed in De Kalb County, Mo., and then moved to Buchanan County and remained there until he came to Kansas in 1855. The subject of this sketch was married in White Church, Kan., September 14, 1873, to Hattie English, daughter of W. M. and Martha English, by whom he had one child, Jennie Newton. His first wife died June 9, 1879. He married a second time in Prairie Township November 23, 1881, to Julia Donahue, daughter of Henry and Sarah Donahue.

ELISHA SORTORE, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Quindaro. Came to Kansas March 20, 1857, located in Quindaro, engaged in teaming five years, then kept a wood yard on the Missouri River and supplied steamboats with wood, also sold to Government contractors; was in this business about five years, next went to farming and has been engaged at it ever since. He has 150 acres all under cultivation, with fine improvements, only three miles from Wyandotte City. He has thirty acres in orchard. He helped to organize Quindaro Township, and was a member of the original Township Board. He has also served on the School Board two or three terms. He served in the Kansas State Militia as Second Lieutenant, and was in the battle of Westport, during the Price raid. He was born in Belmont, Allegany Co., N. Y., February 24, 1823, son of William and Cynthia Sortore. He was raised and remained on a farm in New York until he came to Kansas in 1857. He was married in Allen, Allegany Co., N. Y. September 21, 1845, to Effie A. Brundage, daughter of Mathew and Fannie Brundage. Her mother's maiden name was Knickerbocker. They have four children living, viz.: Cynthia, born June 26, 1851; Henry E., born March 25, 1866; Charles R., born August 8, 1858; Fred, born July 6, 1861. They have lost six, viz.: Fannie A., born March 25, 1847; William A., born October 4, 1849; Willis M., born May 20, 1854; Effie, born January 9, 1866; George, born August 5, 1867; Elisha, Jr., born August 12, 1869. Mr. Sortore and wife are worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

MARTIN STEWART, farmer, fruit and vegetable grower, Section 33, P.O. Wyandotte, came to Kansas May 1, 1857, located in the city of Wyandotte, and engaged first in teaming until he could find a suitable farm. In the spring of 1858, he took charge of a farm known as the Clark farm, which once belonged to an Indian chief by the name of Clark. He cultivated this farm one year, and during this year bought the place where he now resides, consisting of 129 acres of choice land, twenty acres of which are in orchard. His residence, a fine two-story house, is beautifully situated in a grove of natural trees, only one and a half miles from the city of Wyandotte, on one of the finest roads leading out of the city. At the first election after his arrival in Kansas, he was made Constable, and the following year was elected Justice of the Peace. In the year 1866, was elected County Commissioner, and served two years. He was born in Baden, Germany, November 11, 1825; is a son of Christian and Frances Stewart. When three years of age, he came with the family, consisting of father, mother, one brother and three sisters, to America. On landing at New Orleans, his father was taken down with yellow fever, and died and was buried in New Orleans. The family continued their journey to Cincinnati, where they remained until 1857. Mr. Stewart was brought up and educated in the Catholic schools of Cincinnati. When eight years of age, he was put to hard work, and earned his living after that. He engaged in drafting until twenty-one years of age, and then for ten years followed market gardening, and in the spring of 1857 came to Kansas. He was married in Cincinnati, Ohio, May 28, 1848, to Catharine Maninger, a native of Germany, and daughter of John Henry and Catharine Maninger; they have seven children living—Martin W., Catharine A., Rose S., Elizabeth H., George A., Caroline Cecelia and Henry Edward; three dead, viz., Mary Frances, Joseph and Emma Theresa. They are both members of the Catholic Church, and recognized leaders in society.

ISAAC TURNER, son of Thomas G. and Mary Turner, was born in Spartenburg District, South Carolina, December 22, 1841. His father moved to Polk County, North Carolina, in 1856. He was brought up on a farm, where he labored until October, 1862, when at his country's call, he enlisted in the Confederate States service in Company G, Sixtieth North Carolina Volunteers, under Col McDowell and Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, where he served with distinction until the close of the war in 1865. He then returned to his former home, and engaged in farming. Here he formed and cultivated the acquaintance of Mrs. Nancy A. Wilson, daughter of Ambrose and Phalby Mills, whom he married July 9, 1865. They were prosperous, and in the spring of 1870 moved to Kansas, settled and engaged in farming where they now reside. By industry and economy, they have acquired an ample competency, as well as the esteem and confidence of their acquaintances. They are members of the Missionary Baptist Church, and Mr. Turner is a Knight and P. G. in the I. O. O. F.

WILLIAM HENRY YOUNG, proprietor of Maple Cliff Flouring Mills and practical miller, Pomeroy, came to Kansas, November, 1865. Made Wyandotte his headquarters, and was a tie contractor on the Kansas Pacific and Missouri Pacific Railroads for about eight months. He then engaged in the lumber business at Wyandotte for a few months, and was afterward engaged in railroad service, by which he lost his right hand by an accident at Lawrence, about seven weeks after he began, and as soon as he was able for duty was employed by the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, as receiving and shipping clerk at Fort Scott. Served in this capacity about seven months, then went on a visit to Illinois, but soon returned to Kansas, and, after prospecting for over a year, finally engaged as traveling salesman for Maple Cliff Mills, which was then operated by Overman & Betton; at the end of one year, he purchased a half interest of Mr. Overton, and since May, 1875, in company with Mr. Betton, owned and operated the mills. He enlisted in Company C, Sixteenth Illinois Volunteers, ninety days' service, April 26, 1861; served full time, and was mustered out July of the same year. He re-enlisted in Company B, Tenth Missouri Infantry, November, 1861. He was in all the engagements of his command; was slightly wounded at the battle of Corinth, Miss., and was mustered out January 22, 1863, but immediately re-enlisted in Company A, Cavalry, Mississippi Marine Brigade, under Gen. Elliott. He served in this brigade as First Duty Sergeant until the close of the war. He was taken prisoner while carrying a message from Gen. Elliott, at Yazoo City, to Gen. McCarthy, at Brighton; he was picked up on the road, taken to Canton, Miss., where he jumped from the third-story window, and broke his right foot in an attempt to escape. Was re-captured, and taken to Jackson Miss., and soon after taken to Vicksburg and exchanged. He was slightly wounded twice in the battle of Lake Beaver Dam, but never left his post. He was born in East Tennessee, near the Kentucky line, May 2, 1841; is a son of George H. and Sarah Elizabeth Young. His father was a Methodist minister and physician, and moved to Cairo, Ill., about the year 1848. Remained only one year at Cairo, and then moved near Decatur, Ill., and three years later to Columbus, Ill. Here the subject of this sketch attended school until 1856, when he removed to Doddsville, and two years afterward to Middleton, where he farmed one year, and then worked in grist and saw mill about three years, and when the war broke out he enlisted in the service, and at its close was employed by Col. Rees to take charge of seventeen men engaged in getting out wood and timber at Etlah, Mo. Then came to Kansas. He was married at Conner, Kan., October 1, 1878, to Martha E. Gephart, daughter of William and Elizabeth Gephart; she is a native of Indiana; they have two children, viz., Henry Edmond and Maude May. Mr. Young and wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he is P. G. I. O. O. F., Subordinate Lodge, and P. C. C. K. of P., Camp Lodge, also R. W. C. T., I. O. G. T., and a member of the G. A. R. and the A. O. U. W.

PRAIRIE TOWNSHIP.

JOHN CUMMINS, otherwise John O'Brien, farmer, Section 30, P. O. Lansing, came to Kansas, spring of 1861, and was the first settler in Fairmount Township, where he lived till 1878, when he came to present location in Wyandotte County. He belonged to Kansas State Militia during the war, and was called out during Price's raid. Was in the engagement at Westport. He was born in Ireland, June 22, 1818; son of Daniel and Mary Cummins. In 1838, he went to England and remained there till 1853, and then sailed for the United States, and settled in LaSalle, Ill.; from there he moved to Alton, and during the winter of 1855, engaged in railroading; the next spring, moved to Keokuk, Iowa; lived there till 1861, when he came to Kansas. He was married in London, England, July, 1851, to Catherine Sullivan, who is a native of Cork, Ireland. They have ten children—Michael and Dennis, born in London, John, born in Iowa, Ellen, born in Kansas City, Mo., Katie, born in Leavenworth County, Kan.; Mary, born in Kansas City, Maggie, Daniel, Julia and Steven, born in Leavenworth County. Mr. Cummins and wife are consistent members of the Catholic Church.

MRS. ADELL FISHER, Section 18, P. O. Conner, came to Kansas City, 1859, where her husband Abel Fisher, engaged in the manufacture of sash and blinds until the breaking-out of the rebellion, when he enlisted in the Federal Army, was taken prisoner at Lexington, Mo., afterward paroled and immediately went into hospital service, and there remained until the close of the war. In 1872, the family moved to Wyandotte County, where they have remained engaged in farming ever since. Mrs. Fisher was born in Hinckley, Medina Co., Ohio; her maiden name was Bullard; she was the daughter of Curtis and Sarah Bullard. She was married at Sheridan, Putnam County, Ohio, February, 1858, to Abel Fisher, son of Abel and Ruth Fisher. He was a native of Newburgh, Cuyahoga Co., Ohio, and departed this life, July 17, 1877. Mrs. Fisher has a comfortable home beautifully situated on a commanding eminence overlooking the Missouri River and an extensive landscape of diversified beauty. On leaving her native place, she came direct to Kansas City. She has seven children—Charley Fisher, born November 13, 1858, died September 15, 1859; Anna J., born June 17, 1866, died October 8, 1866; Susan M., born December 17, 1861; Curtis Abel, born April 11, 1869; Alexis, born December 27, 1871; Augustus James, born February 21, 1874, and Sarah Mabel, born March 9, 1877. The last five are all living.

JEPTHA H. HOLLINSWORTH, farmer, Section 13, Township 10, Range 23 east, P. O. Conner, came to Kansas, November 10, 1868, and settled on Delaware lands, where he has resided ever since. The farm which he now cultivates was purchased of James Conner, chief of the Delaware tribe. It was the chief's home, and the buildings which he occupied are still standing. Mr. Hollingsworth has engaged in farming ever since he came to Kansas. He has been engaged in every public-spirited enterprise that sought the development of his neighborhood and county from the organization of his school district down to the present time. He organized the district and was appointed its first clerk. He also helped to organize Prairie Township, and was elected its first clerk. He has been a member of the school board for nine years; was at one time unanimously nominated by two conventions for County Attorney; was also a Democrat to the Congressional convention which convened in Wyandotte, in 1878. He helped to organize Col. Cummins' battalion of Confederate soldiers in Bates County, Mo., in 1861. He served in different capacities during the entire war, first, as Major, then as Commissary, and afterward as Quartermaster. He was in the engagements at Pea Ridge and Drywood, and in many skirmishes of minor importance. He was born in Todd County, Ky., March 17, 1829. He is the son of Jeptha and Mary B. Hollinsworth. He left his native home May 14, 1852, and came West to Liberty, Clay Co., Mo., engaged in the practice of law at Liberty until 1857, then moved to Bates County, Mo., and practiced law at Butler about four years; then entered the army, his family moving to Texas, and remained there until the close of the war. At the close of the war, he came back with his family to Bates County, Mo., accepting fully the result of the conflict, and fully resolved to do all in his power to heal the breach and to promote the peace and prosperity of the country, but his life was threatened by a band of outlaws, who ordered him to leave the country under penalty of death. He moved over to Clay County one year, and then to Platte, where he lived two years, and then came to Kansas, where he has remained ever since. He received a collegiate education at Elkton, Ky., and was there a class-mate of Benjamin H. Bristow, Secretary of the Treasury, of Grant's Cabinet. He was married in Elkton, Ky., June 16, 1853, to Sarah F. Jessup, niece and adopted daughter of Col. Thomas S. Jessup, who, for twenty years was Quartermaster General of the United States Army. She was a native of Kentucky. They have seven children—Thomas J., Mollie C., Elizabeth V., Ruth, B., Virgil H., Ella B. and Fannie Eugenia. He is a consistent member of the Baptist Church, while his wife is a worthy member of the Cumberland Presbyterian. Mr. Hollingsworth organized the first Sunday school ever organized in this school district; has continuously for the last five years been Superintendent of Conner Sunday school; was voted a member of the Kansas State Historical Society in 1872.

OLA JOHNSON, farmer, Section 13, P. O. Connor, came to Kansas in the spring of 1870; lived four years and six months at Kansas City, Kan., during the corporation of that place, then moved to his present location, and has engaged here in farming ever since. He was born near Malmo, Sweden, February 3, 1843; is a son of John Nelson and Boel Nelson; he lived with his parents until he left Sweden, in 1869; he served an apprenticeship at the cooper's trade, but afterward followed house carpentering. He left Sweden in the spring of 1869, and the same year settled in Illinois, but the following spring removed to Kansas. He was married in Kansas City, Mo., November 7, 1870, to Cecilia Nilson, daughter of Nils Swanson and Hannah Pearson. She is a native of Sweden. They have three children, viz.: Bettie, Hadda and Ellen. Mr. Johnson and wife are worthy members of the Lutheran Church.

ALEXANDER KELLY, farmer, Section 15, P. O. Conner, came to Kansas in the fall of 1856, settled in Delaware, Leavenworth County, and came to his present place fourteen years ago and engaged in farming ever since. He belonged to the Kansas State militia during the Price raid; was in the engagement at Westport. He was born in Boone County, Mo., August 1, 1829; is the son of Benjamin and Debiby Kelly. He left his native place in 1841, and moved to Linn County, Mo.; remained there nearly four years, and in 1844, moved to Platte County. In 1846, he went with Gen. Harney's command as a teamster. Left Ft. Leavenworth with twenty-seven, wagons, accompanied by Gen. Harney's army, and went through what is now the State of Kansas, then a wilderness of prairie, and occupied by the Indians, to old Bent's Fort, in New Mexico. The round trip occupied three months and five days. On his return, he resumed farming in Platte County, and in 1856, came to Kansas. He was married in Platte County, in May, 1845, to Agnes Finley. He has five children—Ellen, Francis, Emeranda, Mary and William.

B. R. McCLOUD, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Maywood, came to Kansas, spring of 1878; settled where he now resides, and has been engaged in farming ever since. He was born in Cattaraugus County, N. Y., January 1, 1840, the son of Abram and Eveline McCloud. At an early age his parents moved to Union County, Ohio, and after a short stay in Ohio, moved to Illinois and lived in that State about eighteen years. On the first day of April, 1860, started from Genesee, Ill., with emigrant train for California. The trip was made in about seven months, via Des Moines, Omaha and Salt Lake to San Francisco, and was attended with considerable danger from hostile Indians. Lost some cattle and two horses. Two men were killed by Indians. After reaching California, Mr. McCloud engaged in freighting and mining; spent about eighteen months in Placer Diggings, Forest City, Cal., and in Ophir mines, Virginia City; he then went to Idaho, and from there to Oregon, spending about two years in each place. His mining operations netted him about $10,000. He then returned to Illinois and farmed five years, and in 1878, came to Kansas. He was married in Henry County, Ill., 1867, to Jemima Riley, daughter of James and Sarah Ann Riley, by whom he had three children—Elmer, Arthur and Minnie. His wife died March 19, 1873, and he was married a second time August, 1877, to Isaline Miles, daughter of John and Cynthnia Miles. She is a native of Illinois. This last union has been blessed with one child—Flora May.

WILLIAM LYON McKENZIE, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Maywood. He was born in Canada West, August 31, 1824. He is the son of William and Jane McKenzie. He left his native place in September, 1840, and went to Fowlerville, Livingston Co., N. Y.; engaged there in cabinet-making four years, then returned to Canada and remained there about four years and moved to Waukesha, Wis.; seven months afterward, he moved to Montello, Marquette Co., Wis., where he resided until he came to Kansas, in the fall of 1865. He enlisted at Kingston, Marquette County, October 18, 1861, in Company C, Third Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry, served three years and four months, and was mustered out February 17, 1865. In March, 1862, was ordered to St. Louis, thence to Leavenworth, Kan., and a few weeks later the second battalion under command of S. B. Henning, was ordered to Ft. Scott. From this time on, he did border service, hunting and fighting bushwhackers, scouting, escorting trains, etc. He was in the engagement at Baxter Springs, where the notorious guerrilla, Quantrill, with a force of about 300 men, surprised the camp, and but for the coolness of one man would have slaughtered the entire Federal force. Fifty Union soldiers under command of Captain Pond were sent from Fort Scott to Baxter Springs, where about 100 colored troops under command of Capt. Cook were already stationed. On the morning after their arrival at Baxter, about twenty-five of the best mounted men in camp were sent out into Missouri on a foraging expedition. They crossed Spring River about one-fourth of a mile from camp, and taking one road, Quantrill came in on the other and crossed the river at the same point. The camp was off guard and the men were either in their tents or eating dinner. Mr. McKenzie happened to be the only man out and unengaged at the time the attack was made. The first note of warning was a volley of fire and a yell from the woods adjoining. Mr. McKenzie cried "To arms!" and while the camp was in confusion, he voluntarily took command of the south side of the camp while Capt. Pond directed the north side. In a few moments, the bushwhackers charged right through the camp, then back again and joined the main force who were skulking along the edge of the woods. Seven Federals were killed and four guerrillas bit the dust, two of whom were shot by Mr. McKenzie himself. But for his cool, self-possession, promptness and bravery in sounding the alarm and in organizing and directing the movements of the little command, the entire force would have been surprised and slaughtered. Quantrill's entire command took the Ft. Scott road, and just over the ridge and out of sight of Baxter Springs, three-fourths of a mile from Pond's camp, they met and surprised Gen. Blunt's body-guard, consisting of 125 men, killed 86 of Blunt's men, burned the band-wagon, massacred the band, only one of whom escaped, covered the drummer boy with music books and other combustibles, and literally burned him to a crisp. Quantrill's men then scattered and escaped south. The survivors of the massacre, including Gen. Blunt, scattered and came in small squads in Pond's camp. Thus ended one of the most touching and sad events which has ever transpired on Kansas soil. Mr. McKenzie enlisted as a private and was elected first Sergeant, and refusing further promotion served in that capacity until the close of the war. He came to Kansas in the fall of 1865, worked at his trade in Leavenworth City for a few months, and in the spring of 1866, went to farming as a renter. He farmed for two years in Wyandotte County before purchasing, then bought the home which he now occupies. He has 320 acres of fine farming and pasture land, and has one of the most beautiful country homes in Kansas. He was married in Paris, Canada West, by Rev. A. Cleghorn, April 25, 1850, to Elizabeth Dixon, daughter of James and Martha Dixon. His wife is a native of Canada and of Scotch descent. They have five living children—William, Henry, Frank, Charles J., Robert and Mary Maranda. Mr. McKenzie and wife are members of the Baptist Church.

ALONZO F. MORROW, farmer, Section 9, P. O. Lansing, came to Kansas September, 1866. Settled in Leavenworth City, and engaged in gardening and fruit growing until spring of 1881 when he moved to his present location, where he is engaged in farming. He was born in Brady's Bend, Armstrong Co., Penn., March 1, 1857, son of John and Elizabeth Morrow, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1865, moved to Queenstown and remained one year, then came to Kansas. Mr. Morrow is unmarried. Has eighty acres of choice land, well improved, and is an industrious and enterprising young man, and will doubtless be prominently identified with the future history and development of Kansas.

HERMAN SCHLAGEL, farmer, Section 14, P. O. Connor, came to Kansas March 4, 1868, and settled in Leavenworth City, and for the first year and a half was engaged in furnishing ties for the construction of Missouri Pacific Railroad, after which he came to Wyandotte County, and settled where he now lives. He also owns a farm in Leavenworth County, and is extensively engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is a German by birth, but is thoroughly American in his tastes and in his habits of thought and action. While a stirring, active business man, he devotes some time to reading, and takes a lively interest in educational matters. Has been a member of School Board ever since he settled in Wyandotte County. He was born in Germany, February 2, 1837, son of John and Mary Schlagel. His father died in Germany, and at the age of six years he came with his mother to America, and settled in St. Louis, Mo. Remained there about ten years, and in 1853 moved to Illinois, where he remained till spring of 1868, and then came to Kansas. He was married in St. Louis, November 16, 1864, to Isabell Snyder, by whom he had two children—Jessie Isabel, and Charles Edgar Schlagel. His first wife died February 28, 1879, aged thirty-three years, two months and ten days. He was married a second time in Kansas, March 31, 1881, to Mary Donahoe, a widow lady, whose maiden name was Kincade. She is a native of Ohio. Mr. Schlagel is a member of the Lutheran Church.

THOMAS P. WILLIAMS, farmer, Section 27, P. O. Maywood, settled in Wyandotte County in 1865, and has engaged in farming in same county ever since. He was born in East Tennessee February 4, 1834, son of Joseph and Nancy A. Williams. His parents moved to Tama County, Mo., in 1836, and remained there till 1857, and in June 13, 1855, the subject of this sketch enlisted in the United States Regular Army. Was sent to Fort Leavenworth in August, same year, and first set foot on Kansas soil as a soldier, August, 1855. Was soon after sent with a company of twenty-five men under command of Lieut. McIntosh, in pursuit of a band of hostile Comanche Indians, who had been trying to rob a stage coach, and had committed other depredations on the frontier settlements, and after three days' ride from Fort Leavenworth came up with them, surprised them in camp, killed fourteen out of a force of 300, took 114 ponies, and captured all their arms, consisting principally of bows and arrows. Found only two guns among them. Only one white man wounded, and that only a slight finger wound. The command then returned to Fort Leavenworth, where Mr. Williams was honorably discharged on account of disability, having served about six months. He moved to Arkansas in 1857, and remained there till 1861, when he enlisted in the Confederate Army, Company H, First Arkansas Cavalry. He served during the entire war, and was in many of the heaviest engagements. At the close of the war, he came to Kansas, and has lived here ever since. He was married in Tama County, Mo., March 4, 1855, to Mary Ann Roberts, a native of Brown County, Ind. They have seven children, viz.: Calvin V., Minerva J., George T. N., Tilghmon H., Joseph M., William Jasper and Vinila. They are both members of Missionary Baptist Church.

EDWARDSVILLE.

There are several neat little stations and hamlets scattered throughout the county, the largest being Edwardsville, located about fourteen miles west of Wyandotte, on the Union Pacific Railroad. It was named for Hon. John H. Edwards, then General Passenger and Ticket Agent of the road, since then a State Senator from Ellis County, Kan. The land where this rural village now stands was once the farm of Half-Moon, a Chief of some degree among the Delawares. He sold the land to Gen. T. Smith, of Leavenworth, and others, who in turn sold it to William Kouns. A post office was established here in 1867. The Methodist Episcopal Church effected an organization here in 1868, and had quite a large membership. In 1868, through the personal influence and direct labors of William Kouns, the County Commissioners, created the town of Delaware, in which Edwardsville is located. It was platted in 1869, the proprietor being Mr. William Kouns. Some time in 1870, the Christian Church was organized here, and now numbers sixty members. There is only one church organization in the town now, the Methodist Episcopal Church having disbanded because of the removal to the adjoining cities of so many of its members. Composit Lodge, No. 152, A., F. & A. M., was organized here in 1872, but in 1877 surrendered its charter. The station now consists of thirty or forty dwellings, a number of business houses, a good depot and fine school.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—DELAWARE TOWNSHIP.

FRANCIS MARION DOWNS, physician and merchant, Tiblow, came to Kansas February, 1876. Located at Lanape, and practiced medicine there until June, 1879, then came to Tiblow, where he continued the practice of his profession and engaged in merchandising. Has served as Treasurer of School District No. 27, two years. He was born in White County, Ind., November 13, 1850; is a son of Eli and Caroline Downs. In the fall of 1865, he moved with his parents to Lafayette County, Mo. He soon afterward engaged in clerking, and continued in that business nearly three years. During this time, he read medicine, and afterward attended the medical college at Keokuk, Iowa, from which institution he graduated February 17, 1875. He then returned to Lafayette County, Mo., and remained one year, and early in 1876 came to Lanape, Kan., and began the practice of medicine. Besides doing a good mercantile business, he enjoys a successful and lucrative medical practice. He was married in Wyandotte, Kan., September 6, 1882, to Mary Kane, who is a native of the State of Pennsylvania. Dr. Downs carries a very complete stock of drugs and general merchandise.

JOHN A. FLIGOR, carpenter and builder, Edwardsville, came to Kansas April 9, 1859. Settled in Wyandotte City, and boarded on the old steamer St. Paul, which was tied up at Wyandotte landing, and used as a hotel. Built one of the first business houses in the city, which was intended for a hardware store. In June, 1858, he came out into the Delaware Nation, and built the first residence in the neighborhood of Edwardsville, for James C. Grinter. Remained in the Delaware Nation about two years, then went to Leavenworth County, and labored about one year, and then to Johnson County, and labored there some two years, after which returned to Wyandotte County, and remained there ever since. He has worked in this district of country ever since, visiting, however, in the State of Pennsylvania, during the winter of 1863, but returning in the spring of 1864, and continuing his trade until the present time. He was born in Westmoreland County, Penn., September 26, 1829; is a son of William and Sarah Fligor. He moved to Hardin County, Ohio, in the spring of 1855, and the following fall moved to Clyde, Ohio, and worked here at his trade during the winter, and in the next spring went to Fremont, the same State, and after working here about one year moved to Kansas, in company with Maj. Downs, afterward Superintendent of Central Branch of the U. P. R. R. He was married in Wyandotte City, September 2, 1871, to Marie E. Fray, daughter of Benjamin and Eliza Fray, and a native of Doniphan County, Kan. They have two children—Libbie E., born March 22, 1873, and Maggie E., born March 29, 1876.

D. S. HAINES, merchant, Edwardsville, came to Kansas in the fall of 1871. Taught school in Johnson County one year, and then came to Edwardsville and taught one year; then entered mercantile business, and has engaged in merchandising ever since. He has served as Township Clerk seven years, and has twice been honored as a delegate to the State Conventions. He was born in Guernsey County, Ohio, March 31, 1847. Is a son of Joseph and Mary Haines. Moved to Illinois August, 1870. Remained one year, and then came to Kansas. He was married in Edwardsville June 18, 1874, to Miss Ella J. Kouns, daughter of William and Sarah Kouns. She was born in Ohio August 14, 1851; they have two children—Alta May and Metta K. Mr. Haines has been Postmaster at Edwardsville ever since 1874. Carries a large stock of general merchandise and drugs, and also deals quite extensively in grain.

JOHN C. McGEE, Jr., farmer and stock-raiser, dealer in native breeds and breeder of fine grade cattle, P. O. Loring, was born and reared in Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1869, he settled in this State and has been prominently identified with his present industry here since; his farm contains 400 acres of valuable land, devoted to the production of hay and grain and stock-raising; is surrounded and divided by nice wire fences; has beautiful dwellings and stables, and equipped with all the modern improved machinery. Mr. McGee's breeding ranch contains the short-horn Durham stock principally. John McGee, Sr., deceased, father of the above, was born in Kentucky; was prominently identified there in insurance business until the war, when his political creed made it necessary to seek a home in the North, and he settled in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he was actively engaged in the insurance business until his death, which occurred in 1868. He is buried in Greenwood Cemetery, leaving a wife, Mrs. Agnes McGee nee Carson, who was born and reared in his native State, and has two sons and seven daughters.

JAMES M. MICHAEL, farmer, Sections 27 and 28, P. O. Tiblow, came to Kansas April 1, 1865, and settled where he now lives. Engaged in farming two years, then opened a stock of general merchandise at Edwardsville, and continued that business eight years; then moved back to the farm, and has engaged in farming and stock-raising ever since. He has served as Township Clerk two years, and as Township Treasurer eight years; has been a member of the Township Board ever since the township was organized. Was made an Elder of the Christian Church at its organization in 1868, and has served the church in that capacity ever since. He began preaching in 1875, and has held several remarkable meetings, among which we mention his first protracted meeting at Edwardsville in February, 1876, at which forty-one were added to the church, and another at the same place in 1879, at which twenty-six were added, and, immediately after, at Fall Leaf, where forty-three were added to the membership. He has been actively engaged in preaching ever since he began the work; has done a large amount of gratuitous labor, and his work has been blessed with an abundant fruitage. He has a pleasant home, and an intelligent and happy family, who sympathize with him in his work. He was born in Monroe County, Ohio, January 10, 1830, son of Daniel and Margaret Michael. In 1838, his parents moved to Washington County, Ohio, where they farmed about eighteen years, then moved to Lawrence County, Ohio, and after a residence of ten years there, Mr. Michael moved to Kansas. He was married in Noble County, Ohio, June 26, 1851, to Catherine McPeek, daughter of Daniel R. and Elizabeth McPeek, by whom he had four children, viz., Mary E., Rosana, Addison H., Martha K. His wife died February 15, 1859, and he was married again in Lawrence County, Ohio, November 20, 1862, to Sarah A. Marks, daughter of T. W. and Frances E. Marks; she is a native of Ohio; he has by his last wife six children—Eva A., Daniel T., Ulysses P., Francis E., James E. and Honema.

DR. DAVID C. MURPHY, physician and farmer, Section 25, P. O. Edwardsville, came to Kansas August 1, 1874, and settled in Edwardsville, and has engaged in the practice of medicine ever since. He has served as Township Treasurer two terms, Township Trustee one term, School District Treasurer two terms, and has been honored as delegate to State Convention. He was born in Ross County, Ohio, March 25, 1847; is a son of Robert and Hannah Murphy. In the fall of 1866, he moved to LaFayette County, Mo., and engaged in farming and studying medicine. Had a residence of eight years in LaFayette County, during which time he attended Keokuk Medical College, situated at Keokuk, Iowa, and graduated from this institution December 17, 1874, soon after which he came to his present location and began the practice of his profession, in which he has gained an enviable and well-deserved reputation. He was married in Edwardsville November 16, 1876, to Margaretta E. Thompson, daughter of Moses L. and Sarah G. Thompson. She is a native of Connecticut. Dr. Murphy and wife are both members of the Christian Church.

JOHN G. PRATT, farmer and minister of the gospel, home farm of 320 acres in Section 10, also 160 acres in Section 9, P. O. Maywood, came to what is now the State of Kansas, April, 1837, then called Indian Territory. He was sent here and sustained by the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. He first located a few miles south of the Kansas River, and about three miles from the Missouri line, near Shawneetown. An alphabet was invented, and with the help of others a number of elementary books were written and published for the Shawnee and other tribes. Mr. Pratt had charge of the printing press, and not only published books for his own, but also for other missions. He labored among the Shawnees at this point from 1837 to 1844. He then moved to a point four miles south of Fort Leavenworth, where a band of Green Bay Indians had settled for a time, waiting for the United States Government to set apart some promised lands for their occupancy further south. He here preached to the Indians, conducted a school, and continued the publishing business. The Green Bays were quite intelligent, having originated near Stockbridge, Mass., and having come direct from Green Bay, Wis., where they had already been partly civilized. The Government failing to make the promised allotment of land to them, they became discouraged and nearly all moved back to Wisconsin, and after about four and a half years' labor among them, Mr. Pratt moved to his present location among the Delawares. He here took charge of a boarding school for the Indians, built, furnished and sustained by the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. The Delawares showed that much appreciation of educational advantages, that they requested the Government to set aside a certain part of their annuities for educational purposes, to the amount of $25 per year for each pupil in school. This was to clothe, feed and furnish the pupil and sustain the teacher, leaving the deficiency, of course, to be furnished by the mission board. In this school was taught all the elementary branches of an English education, together with algebra, natural philosophy and some of the academic branches. The result of Mr. Pratt's large experience in teaching and preaching among the Indians is the opinion that if taken when young they are susceptible of a high degree of mental and moral culture. The small children were about as apt as white children of the same age, but after they became older, while not wanting in mental capacity, they have not the application necessary to insure rapid progress. From 1864 until 1867, Mr. Pratt acted as United States Indian Agent for both the Delawares and Wyandottes. He paid the Delawares for their land in Kansas, and removed them to the Cherokee Nation in 1867, and has since been engaged in farming and stock-raising. He preaches considerably since, doing a kind of home missionary work on his own account. He was born in Hingham, Mass., September 9, 1814; is a son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth Pratt. His father died when he was quite young, and when four years old, he went to live with his grandfather, Mr. Aaron Pratt, a sea captain, living at Cohassett. At the age of fourteen, he entered an academy at South Reading, now called Wakefield, and attended there two years. Then matriculated in Andover Seminary, entering the classical department. He finished the entire course, theological included, and graduated in the fall of 1836. He was licensed, at Andover, to preach the Gospel, and was immediately employed by the Baptist Missionary Society, and sent to the Indian Territory. He continued in the service of this society, laboring among the Indians, thirty years. He was married in Reading, Mass., March 26, 1837, to Olivia Evans, daughter of Amos and Catharine Evans, and a native of Reading. They have three children living, viz., Mrs. Flora J. Black, of Leavenworth City, whose husband is a conductor on the Leavenworth, Topeka & South-western Railroad; Mrs. Rosamond O. Burt, also of Leavenworth, whose husband is a proprietor in the Great Western Foundry; Eber H. Pratt, who is now engaged in an extensive mercantile and milling business among the Cherokee Indians. Mr. Pratt had also another son, who is now dead—Lucius B. Pratt, educated at Granville College, Ohio. His wife was educated at the same college, and was the daughter of the Indian Chief, Journey Cake. She is but quarter blood, however, and remarkably beautiful. She is at present largely interested in an extensive business among the Cherokees, aided in part by her brother-in-law, E. H. Pratt. Mr. John G. Pratt, the subject of this sketch is widely known and universally esteemed for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart. He is a man of fine culture, and has a wife who is in every way fitted to be the companion of such a man. Their home is a model of neatness, taste and refinement.

GARRETT TRANT, farmer, Section 26, P.O. Edwardsville, came to Kansas in May, 1868, purchased the farm on which he now lives, and has engaged in farming ever since. Though quite an old man, his mind is still active, and he takes a lively interest in new improvements and enterprises, and is especially interested in educational matters, having served as School Director three years. He was born in County Kerry, Ireland, August 3, 1810; is a son of Thomas and Ellen Hickson Trant. He was raised on a farm until about sixteen years of age, when he obtained a clerkship in a general store, and afterward in salmon fishery; but as soon as he was of age, he joined the Irish constabulary, and served his country in that capacity for fourteen years; was then honorably discharged on compensation, as a non-commissioned officer, at his own request, and after spending the winter at a watering place, he embarked for America. He first went to Hamilton, Canada West, where he visited about three months, and then left for Southport, Wis., now called Kenosha. He engaged at this place in the grain business for two years, and then moved to Peoria, Ill., where he conducted for eighteen years three branches of trade, viz., grain dealing, pork packing and merchandising, doing an extensive business in each branch. In 1867, he went by way of New York and Aspinwall to California, and returned early in the spring of 1868 by the same route to Peoria. He then made an extensive prospecting tour through Illinois and Iowa, to Omaha, Neb., and thence down the river by the first boat of the season, in the spring of 1868, to Kansas City, Mo. Just at this time, the Indians were being removed from Delaware Reserve, and he bought the farm which he has cultivated ever since, consisting of 160 acres of choice farm and orchard land. The country was then a wilderness, without roads or bridges, and the only inhabitants were a few straggling Indians, and the very lowest and laziest class of poverty-stricken whites, who had been living among the Indians. He was married in Princeton, Ill., September 9, 1851, to Bridget Carroll, daughter of Thomas and Catharine Carroll. She is a native of County Louth, Ireland. They have four children dead, viz., Thomas, Mary and two infants; and three who are living, viz., John, James and Katy. Mr. Trant and wife are consistent members of the Roman Catholic Church. John has been serving as an officer in the United States Army for several years. He is stationed on the Yellowstone River, M. T.

RUSSELL P. TWIST, farmer and horticulturist, Sections 16, 17, 20 and 21, P. O. Tiblow, came to Kansas in the spring of 1871. He settled where he now lives, and has engaged in farming and fruit-raising ever since. He has 800 acres of fine farming and pasture land, all under fence, 300 acres of which are in cultivation, 80 acres in fruit, 100 acres in timber, and the balance in pasture. He proposes to engage extensively in canning and evaporating fruit. His orchard is just coming into bearing. He enlisted in Company E, Sixteenth Ohio Volunteers, April 14, 1861. Served as Sergeant three months, and then recruited the Sixteenth Ohio Battery. Was elected its Captain, and retained command until the close of the war. He was in all the engagements of his command. Was in the battle of Phillipi, and chased the rebels from Bealington to Carrick's Ford, marching forty miles, and wading Cheat River sixteen times in a single day. Battery left Springfield, Ohio, September 5, numbering 166 men; arrived at Cincinnati the same evening. Mustered into United States service the same evening. Left Cincinnati the same evening for St. Louis. Arrived there on the 7th, after many changes, severe marches and much suffering from sickness, fatigue, poor water, short rations, etc. The battery having marched through Missouri and Arkansas, and joined the Army of the Southwest, under command of Gen. Curtis, were in the engagement of Cotton Plant, Ark., where 140 confederates were killed. After two expeditions up White River, the battery embarked at Helena on transport for Milliken's Bend, April 12, 1863. Joined Gen. Grant's army and marched through Louisiana; crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg, and by forced marches arrived in time to take part in the battle of Port Gibson. Fought the enemy here the afternoon of their arrival until dark, and as night closed round, the enemy retreated. The battery expended 350 rounds of ammunition in this afternoon's engagement. His battery was also in the battle of Champion Hill, and finally took position in the rear of Vicksburg May 21, and did good execution through the siege, expending 6,594 rounds, dismounting seven guns, with a loss of but two wounded, and had the honor of throwing the last shot into Vicksburg from the land batteries. They went, after the fall of Vicksburg, to Jackson, Miss., and were under fire five days without loss. They were in active service during the entire war; wore out one set of guns and made considerable use of another set before they were mustered out, August 2, 1865. He was born in Buffalo, N. Y., July 3, 1827. Is a son of Peter and Catharine Twist. At about ten years of age, moved to Ohio and remained in that State until he came to Kansas. Part of the time was contractor and house builder. He ran a machine shop at Yellow Springs, Ohio, six years. Burned out there, and moved to Springfield, where he resided two years. He was married in Springfield, Ohio, June 21, 1851, to Nannie E. Foreman, daughter of William and Nancy Foreman. They had six children—Elnora, William Fremont, Ella Eliza, Willie Star, Emma Lilly and Charles Albert. His first wife died February 1, 1875, and he was married a second time, in Wyandotte County, Kan., January 16, 1876, to Willahamina Kern, daughter of John and Elizabeth Kern. She is a native of Ohio. He has by his last wife five children, viz., Dora Elizabeth, John R., Franklin A., Lonie Pearl and Katy, all living. Mr. Twist belongs to the Bible Christians, and also the G. A. R.

HENRY C. WARNER, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Tiblow, came to Kansas in the winter of 1866, settled in the city of Wyandotte, and for three years engaged in the grocery and general merchandising business. He then moved to a farm near Wyandotte, and engaged in arming two years, after which he came to Tiblow, and from 1871 to 1878, kept a general store and post office in this place, but since 1878 he has been engaged in farming. He was born in Greene County, N. Y., March 20, 1832. Is a son of William B. and Marchie Warner. About 1853, he moved to Ohio, and was engaged in manufacturing chairs for a chair company in Bedford, Ohio. After three years of this business in Bedford, he moved to Princeton, Bureau Co., Ill., and for ten years was engaged in the furniture business at that place. He then came to Wyandotte, Kan. He was married, in Charlotteville, N. Y., January 15, 1857, to Mattie E. Howie, daughter of James E. and Eliza Howie, and a native herself of New York. They have two children, both living, Frank and Mark. Mr. and Mrs. Warner are worthy members of the Christian Church.

JACOB T. WILLIAMSON, farmer and potato specialist, Section 26, P. O. Edwardsville, came to Kansas in the fall of 1858, and settled near Stanton, Franklin County, and remained there two years and moved to Ohio, but again came to Kansas, and has lived in Wyandotte County ever since. He came to his present location February, 1882. He has a very fine potato farm of 300 acres, choice land, well improved. Markets about 4,000 bushels of sweet potatoes a year, and raises from seventy-five to one hundred acres of Irish potatoes yearly. He has recently added a small fruit department, with his brother, J. K. Williamson, as superintendent, and is constructing a large pool (supplied with water from some of the most magnificent springs in the State), from which to draw water for irrigating his strawberry plantations. He proposes adding a general nursery, and also an experimental department, for the testing, production and introduction of new varieties of cereals, fruits and vegetables. He enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, May, 1864. Served four months, and was mustered out September, 1864, having enlisted in what was known as the hundred day service. He was born in Pike County, Ill., July 10, 1838. Is a son of Amos and Clarissa Williamson. In the fall of 1854, he moved to Des Moines County, Iowa, and from there, in 1858, to Kansas. He was married, at New Burlington, Ohio, October 4, 1863, to Rebecca A. Chadwick, daughter of Cyrus and Elizabeth Chadwick. She was born in Hamilton County, Ohio. They have six children, viz., Lillie, Park A., Roy C., Alice May, Edna Walker and Ora Kilborne. Mr. Williamson and wife are worthy members of the Christian Church.

OTHER TOWNS AND STATIONS.

Maywood is a small hamlet, prettily situated in the midst of a beautiful prairie country, five miles west of White Church.

Connors is the extreme northwestern station on the Missouri Pacific Road, twelve miles northwest of Wyandotte. It was platted in February, 1868, the owners of the town site being Alfred W. and William S. Hughes. The village contains several stores, a schoolhouse, in which religious services are held, and a small hotel.

Pomeroy, the next station southeast of Connors, was platted in the spring of 1871, William P. Overton and Frank H. Belton being the proprietors of the town. It contains several stores, and a steam, flour and saw mill.

Muncie, on the Union Pacific road, is six miles west of Wyandotte, being named from the old Muncie Indian settlement here. Opposite, on the other side of the Kaw, Chouteau established his trading post, in 1825. Near it is found a fine variety of magnesian limestone.

Tiblow, the station on the Union Pacific next west of Edwardsville, shows signs of prosperity in a good brick schoolhouse, and several flourishing business houses. It was platted in November, 1870, John McDanield being proprietor of the town site.

Loring is the last station in the county on the Union Pacific Railroad.

Turner is a few miles west of Argentine, on the A., T. & S. F. Road, containing a schoolhouse and several stores.

MARION COUNTY.

BOUNDARIES, TOPOGRAPHY, ETC.

MARION County is situated nearly in the center of the organized counties of Kansas, the center of population being, according to the census of 1880, twelve miles west of the western boundary line of the county.

The original location of Marion County, as created by an act of the Territorial Legislature February 17, 1860, is as follows:

Commencing at the southeast corner of Township 21, Range 5; thence north to the northeast corner of Township 18, Range 5; thence west to the northeast corner of Township 18, Range 4; thence north to the southeast corner of Dickinson County; thence west to the Sixth Principal Meridian, thence south to the southwest corner of Township 21, Range 1; thence east to the place of beginning.

By this location its area was 864 square miles. Its present area is 954 square miles, having an increase by Township 22, of Ranges 3, 4 and 5, and a decrease of the east tier of sections in Towns 20, 21 and 22, of Range 5, these sections having been attached to Chase County. Under this act, there was no organization, for the population of the county in 1860 was but 74; in 1865, it was 162. It had then but 200 cultivated acres.

A special act of the Legislature February 22, 1865, extended the northern boundary of the county on the line between Townships 16 and 17 to the west line of the State, making its west boundary identical with the State line, and also its southern to the west line of Butler County (then including Cowley). But Marion County comprised all Southeastern Kansas but a few months, for in June of the same year, in response to a petition from the inhabitants, the Governor restored the boundaries previously established and ordered a separate organization of the county.

The face of the country here shows much variety—valleys, bluffs, plains and wooded dells, alternating in a most picturesque degree, and rendering Marion County one of the most beautiful in the State. The average width of the bottom lands exceeds a mile; the surface of the country away from the streams is gently undulating for the most part, though apparently there are extensive level tracts. It may be classified as 15 per cent of bottom; 85 per cent upland; 3 per cent timber; 97 per cent prairie.

The Cottonwood River rises in the northwest part of the county, and flows through it in a southeasterly direction. Its principal tributaries from the north are Mud, Clear, Martin's and Bruno Creeks; from the south, French, South Branch, Catlin and Doyle Creeks. Three other large creeks have their head-waters in this county—Middle, Lyons and Turkey Creeks. No county in the State has a more abundant water supply. Much timber grows along the valleys of the streams, mainly cottonwood, elm, hackberry, hickory, oak, sycamore and walnut trees. There is also much cultivated timber.

The soil in the bottom lands comprises a rich loam of from two to ten feet in depth, underlaid by a bed of sand, which acts as a natural sewer. The upland is a dark loam, on an average a foot in depth. Pure and strong salt water has been discovered at Peabody, at a depth of 640 feet. In this neighborhood, gypsum beds have been found, and hydraulic cement, mineral paint, fire, pottery and brick clay exist in very considerable quantities. Pure magnesian limestone of different shades in great quantity and of excellent quality abounds.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

The first settlement made in the county was by an Irishman of the name of Moses Shane, who located at the spot where now stands Florence, early in the spring of 1858. He built a log house, broke several acres of ground, and resided there until his death, which occurred in 1859. Patrick Doyle, in the year 1859, located near Florence, on what is now called Doyle's Creek, but soon afterward returned to Leavenworth, from whence he came. In the lapse of a few years, he returned to the place, and lived where he first located.

In August, 1859, the first white child was born in the county, and was of Irish extraction, by the name of Welsh. The birth occurred on what is known as the Potter place, two miles from Florence. Its parents emigrated to Kansas from Wisconsin.

At Lost Springs, which is located on Section 21, Town 17, Range 4, Clear Creek Township, a trading post was established in the spring of 1859. It was located on the great thoroughfare from Independence, Mo., to New Mexico and the Territories, which was largely traveled by the emigrants in quest of gold, and by freighters who took supplies to the Western forts. J. H. Costello was Postmaster at Lost Springs in 1861. On July 4, 1862, Robert Bailey, on Clear Creek, was killed by the premature discharge of a gun. This was the first death among the settlers. Late in the year 1859, on his return from a Pike's Peak adventure, Thomas J. Wise, Sr., made a settlement on Clear Creek. December 28, 1862, the first marriage in the county occurred, that of J. H. Costello and Abigail Wise. Reuben Riggs and Mahlon Riggs settled on Clear Creek in 1864, but afterward removed to the Cottonwood, near Florence. In the spring of 1864, T. J. Wise, Sr., purchased a mower and reaper, at Lawrence, which was the first one brought into the county. On Clear Creek, in 1864, Miss Maggie H. Norris taught the first school that was organized in the county, having obtained her teacher's certificate in Chase County. She is now the wife of Mr. J. C. Rath, who is the Postmaster at Antelope.

In the late autumn of 1859, A. A. Moore established a trading post at what was called Cottonwood Crossing, and later known as Moore's Ranche. In the spring of 1861, Mr. Moore was made Postmaster at this place; and in the month of April there was an attempt made to organize Marion County, under and by virtue of the Territorial law of Kansas. A meeting of the settlers was called and a proclamation was issued for an election to be held at this place. The polls having been opened on the day set apart for the election, an Election Board was organized, a few ballots were cast by those present, when the fact presented itself that there were not enough men in the county qualified to fill all the offices of honor, profit and trust.

Early in 1860, W. H. Billings, George Griffith and William Shreve settled at or near Marion Center; C. R. Roberts, an Episcopalian, from Rutland, Vt., came October 1, 1861, and Nelson Miller established a hotel north of Marion Center on the east side of Muddy in 1862, which for years was the main objective point for food and shelter for the traveler, after leaving Council Grove, as he wended his way across the plains in a west, southwesterly course, on the great Santa Fé trail.

The post office at Marion Center was established in 1862, W. H. Billings, Postmaster. This place was on a mail route from Cottonwood Falls to Moore's Ranch. A store was started here by Mr. Billings and A. A. Moore in 1861; a schoolhouse was erected in 1862; here was the first Methodist Episcopal Church building of the county, and on July 4, 1863, there was a patriotic celebration of the ninety persons of the county at Billings' Park, where the feathered songsters united their songs of rejoicing with those of the hardy pioneers.

Wilson Campbell was the first settler in Wilson Township. He located in 1870. The first birth in this township was that of Hans Olsen, in March, 1871.

In October, 1872, the first water grist mill erected in the county was put in operation by Messrs. Moore & Fuller, on the Cottonwood, nearly two miles west of Marion Center. Its site is in the southeast part of Gale Township. If ever the grasshopper was specially a burden to any people, the early settlers of Marion so realized it in August, 1874, as they came swooping in like the rushing of mighty waters, with the besom of destruction, destroying the vegetation of the county, and causing destitution terrible in the extreme. County Relief Bonds to the amount of $10,000 were issued March 13, 1875, as a partial mitigation of the loss of crops.

In the summer of 1868, the Cheyenne Indians committed depredations in the northern portion of the county, many of the settlers losing cattle and horses, though it may be said that during that period many horses were taken by white thieves assuming the dress and appearance of the wild Indian. Many of the settlers came to Marion Center and sought refuge in the stone building used as a store by J. H. Costello, which stands on the southeast corner of Main and Fifth streets. Mr. David Lucas, a former County Commissioner, in some indirect manner, learned of the intended line of pursuit of the Indians, and he lost no time in riding his horse with the utmost speed to Council Grove, to inform Maj. E. S. Stover, the Kaw Indian agent, of the probable Indian attack, and this warning served to avert the possible disaster that might have ensued but for the thwarting of the plans of the aggressive barbarous foe. Often has the head of a family gathered his loved ones about him at night and found refuge in a corn-field, for fear of an Indian raid upon the house.

Marion County has a funded indebtedness for bonds issued to the Kansas & Nebraska Railroad, a line surveyed from the northeastern to the southwestern portion of the county. The proposition was for the sum of $200,000, one-half to be paid in thirty-year bonds with interest, when the grading was completed to Marion Center from the north line of the county. The grade has been made, but it is not known when there will be a road, as per expectation. This is the main financial burden resting on the county.

The county has had a conviction for murder, and it has sent a prisoner to the State Penitentiary for twenty-one years. It was for a cold-blooded murder committed at Peabody, February 14, 1872, by Lewis Crawford upon the esteemed citizen, Mr. C. H. Davenport.

The county, aside from these instances, may be said to have been measurably free from debt and crime.

In 1870, the municipal townships of the county were Center, Clear Creek and Doyle; in 1875, the additional ones were Branch, Grant, Peabody, Risley, Summit and Wilson; in 1880, the additional ones were Catlin, Fairplay, Gale and Liberty; in 1882, Durham Park, East Branch and West Branch, which are two townships created from "Branch." Peabody is the most densely settled township, having forty-four people to the square mile; Durham Park the least densely settled, having about two to the square mile.

Marion County has three good towns—Peabody, in the southwest in the central part of Range 3; Marion Center, centrally located from north to south, in the west part of Range 4; Florence, near the southeast part of the county in the west part of Range 5, and east part of Range 4.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION, ELECTIONS AND OFFICERS.

In June, 1865, Gov. Samuel J. Crawford received a petition forwarded to him by citizens of Marion County, praying for the detachment of Marion from Chase County, and that the same be organized into a separate government. The petition was granted, and in July, 1865, William H. Billings, Thomas J. Wise, Sr., and Levi Billings were appointed the first Board of County Commissioners. Their first meeting was held at the house of W. H. Billings, Marion Center. There were present, W. H. Billings and Mr. Wise, and they appointed R. C. Coble County Clerk. The county was formed into three municipal townships—Marion, in the north; Cedar, in the southeast; Santa Fé in the southwest.

The first election of county officers was held August 7, and the vote was canvassed August 10, 1865. There were twenty-three votes polled. W. H. Billings was elected County Commissioner and Probate Judge; T. J. Wise, Commissioner and County Treasurer; Levi Billings, Commissioner; R. C. Coble, County Clerk and Register of Deeds; John C. Snow, Sheriff; W. P. Shreve, County Surveyor; Mr. Wise, being ineligible to the office of Treasurer, the board appointed A. A. Moore. Reuben Riggs was elected County Attorney. The first county seat was established at the northeast quarter of Section 6, Town 20, Range 4.

At the annual election in November, 1865, Reuben Riggs was chosen Senator, receiving twenty-five votes in the county, and 230 votes in the Senatorial district, having a majority of sixty-five in a vote of 395. A. A. Moore was elected Representative and County Treasurer; Reuben Riggs, County Attorney; R. C. Coble, County Clerk; G. C. Coble, Sheriff; C. R. Roberts, Surveyor and Coroner; E. Hoops, Register of Deeds; Assessor, B. Gibson; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Levi Billings; County Commissioners, W. H. Billings, Charles O. Fuller, William Renfro. Newton Rodgers was afterward appointed to the positions of Assessor and County Superintendent, the persons elected declining to qualify. In August, 1865, it was found that Chase County owed Marion County $85.49, and $25.40 was paid Chase County for the assessment of Marion, and $22.95 for record books obtained of John S. Doolittle.

At an election held December 29, 1866, the county seat was located on the public square at Marion Center. The name of the county and the shire town perpetuates the memory of Gen. Francis Marion, a South Carolina patriot of the Revolutionary period, whose valorous deeds and devotion to the principles of universal liberty have made his name famous in story and in song.

The court house and school building at Marion Center were one and the same, and on December 19, 1867, the county appropriated for this building the sum of $999. The building is in the rear part of the present court house, which was completed in 1881. A county seat election was held April 27, 1881, and the vote cast for Marion Center was 1,165; for Hillsboro, 745. June 14, 1881, on a proposition to vote $5,000, to aid in building a court house, the vote was 790 for; 520 against. The building is made of the Marion Center magnesian limestone, and the new front is an attractive, convenient structure of two stories. The whole upper story is the District Court room, the east side of which enters into the jail, which has been remodeled from the original court house, and is very substantial, having good cells, like those of the county of Chase. The court room is admirably and conveniently arranged for the officers of the court, the jurors and the spectators, its dimensions being 32x54 feet. In the lower story, on the north side of the hallway, are the offices of the Register of Deeds, Probate Judge, Superintendent of Public Instruction; on the south side are the offices of County Clerk, County Treasurer and Surveyor. The building is well arranged and is a monumental evidence of the economy and good sense of the people of the county.

The Senatorial district of which Marion County has been a part, has been represented by Marion County men as follows: In 1866, by Reuben Riggs; 1868, A. W. Moore; 1875, Samuel R. Peters; 1881 and 1883, R. M. Crane. In the House the representation of the county has been as follows:

1866, 1867 and 1871, A. A. Moore; 1868, C. O. Fuller; 1869, A. E. Case; 1870, Levi Billings; 1872, Frank Doster; 1873, J. K. McLean; 1874, B. Pinkney; 1875, R. C. Bates; 1876, G. W. Campbell; 1877, J. N. Rodgers; 1879, F. H. Kollock; 1881, W. W. Waring; 1883, J. Ware Butterfield.

S. N. Wood, the first Judge of the Ninth Judicial District, was the first attorney to practice law in the county in an action of replevin, July 10, 1865, at Marion Center, which was the first law-suit in the county. The first papers filed in the office of the Clerk of the District Court were by Isaac Sharp, Esq., of Council Grove, Morris County, October 5, 1867, who appeared as an attorney for the plaintiff in the case. S. N. Wood was then Judge. Judge W. R. Brown presided over the first term of the District Court, and it commenced Tuesday, May 5, 1858. There was a summary disposition of many cases at this term of the court. The Ninth District, composed of the counties of Butler, Chase and Marion, polled at the election in 1867, 431 votes, of which Marion cast 73. The counties of Greenwood, Elk, Chautauqua, Cowley, Sumner, Sedgwick and Reno had been at first attached to Butler County for judicial purposes; McPherson, Rice, Stafford and Pratt to Marion. In 1872, the counties of Butler, Greenwood, Elk, Chautauqua, Cowley, Sumner and Sedgwick, made up the Thirteenth Judicial District, which cast 10,230 votes; McPherson was in the Fourteenth Judicial District, and cast 481 votes, while the Ninth was made up of the counties of Chase, Marion, Harvey, Reno and Rice, polling 2,747 votes; Marion casting 819.

Judge Brown was re-elected in 1872, and in 1874 was elected to Congress. Samuel R. Peters, of Marion, succeeded Judge Brown on the bench of the Ninth Judicial District. Judge Peters was last elected to the position in 1879, having then the nine additional counties of Barton, Pawnee, Stafford, Pratt, Kingman, Barbour, Edwards, Ford and Rush. The Legislature of 1881 reconstructed judicial districts, and eliminated one-half of the counties of the Ninth District, leaving therein Chase, Marion, Harvey, Rice, Reno, Kingman and Harper. The terms of court for Marion commence the first Tuesday of May, and the second Tuesday of November. The court officers in the year 1883 are Thomas Jefferson Smith, Sheriff; Samuel Bowen, Clerk; T. A. Bogle, County Attorney. The attorneys of the county are C. Reed, retiring County Attorney; L. F. Keller, former County Attorney; C. W. Keller, Frank Doster, T. A. Bogle, R. M. Crane, A. E. Case and C. H. Frybarger, of Marion Center; J. Ware Butterfield, J. R. Crouch and A. M. White, of Florence; G. W. Camp, J. M. Holcomb, A. B. Knowlton, F. H. Kollock, J. Hudson Morse and James Hamilton, of Peabody.

The county officers not above named in office in January, 1883, are as follows: Commissioner of First District, J. N. Rogers; Second District, D. J. Frazer; Third District, Thomas Osborn; County Clerk, W. H. Hamilton; County Treasurer, F. L. Frazier; Judge of Ninth Judicial District, L. Houk; Register of Deeds, T. L. Fife; Probate Judge, B. F. Brockett; Superintendent of Public Instruction, W. B. Zercher; County Surveyor, W. C. Nye; Coroner, T. J. Conroy. Samuel T. Howe was elected Clerk of the District Court in 1874, 1876 and in 1878. In 1879 and in 1881, he was elected County Treasurer, and soon after entering upon his second term in October, 1882, he was elected to the office of Treasurer of the State of Kansas, his vote on the 7th of November in Marion County being 1,314; that of C. E. Gifford, Democrat, was 348; J. H. Ludlow, National, 133; in a vote of 1,795, Howe received a majority of 833.

Center, Wilson, Gale, Risley and Durham Park Townships form the First District; Clear Creek, Grant, Doyle, Summit and Fairplay, the Second; Peabody, Catlin, Wilson, East Branch and West Branch in the Third.

The Presidential vote of Marion County has been as follows: 1868, Grant 52, Seymour, 47; 1872, Grant 676, Greeley 148; 1876, Hayes 860, Tilden 369, Cooper 224; 1880, Garfield, 1,229, Hancock 539, Weaver 271. In 1876, Green Clay Smith, received twelve votes.

The vote on the prohibition amendment to the State Constitution, November 2, 1880, was 1,020 for; 825 against.

Frank Doster, as the National candidate for Congress in 1878, received in Marion County 595 out of 1,577 votes. In 1872, he received in the county 579 out of 812 votes, for Judge of the Ninth Judicial District.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

Marion County, "a howling wilderness" in 1865, had in the centennial year, 74 organized school districts, though in 1871 it had but three schoolhouses. It had eighty in 1882, of which there is one joint district with Chase, one with Dickinson and one with Harvey. In 1882, it had four teachers of grade one; sixty-two of grade two; thirty-five of grade three. The number of children of school age is 4,359; number of male teachers, forty-two; female, fifty-four; average age of teachers, twenty-two. The average monthly pay of male teachers is $36.73, of female $32.48. Mrs. J. M. Sharon held the position of County Superintendent of Public Instruction for the term January, 1875–1877. The average school district tax levy for 1882 was fifteen mills. The bonded indebtedness for schoolhouses is about $35,000. Hillsboro employs two teachers; Florence and Peabody four each; Marion Center, five; the other districts one each. There are ninety-seven rooms used for school purposes.

The following is the statement of the acreage in different grains in 1877: Winter wheat, 18,141; rye, 1,222; corn, 26,769; oats, 7,264; Irish potatoes, 571; sorghum, 199; flax, 264; broom corn, 21; Hungarian and millet, 1,306; timothy, 94; clover, 14; prairie hay, 2,159. Acreage in the same grains in 1880 was as follows: Winter wheat, 48,790; rye, 1,869; corn, 54,557; oats, 10,371; Irish potatoes, 751; sorghum, 373; flax, 314; broom corn, 64; Hungarian and millet, 2,454; timothy, 170; clover, 53; prairie hay, 10,877.

In 1882, Marion County is the eighth in rank in the production of winter wheat, its crop being reported 1,219,750 bushels. Its preferred varieties are Fultz, May, Odessa and Russia. Isaac Kuhn, Marion P. O., reports twenty-five acres of wheat; yield, sixty-two bushels per acre; George Overholtzer, Peabody, forty acres, forty bushels per acre, for the year 1882. The herd law is in operation in this county; about one-fourth of the land is open range. Prairie hay is secured at $2.50 per ton; the cost per head for grazing cattle is $1.50 for the season. Besides Crane's ranche, which comprises 10,000 acres of land, there is Hon. David Christie, a member of the Canadian Parliament, has a ranche three miles square, about a dozen miles northwest of Marion Center, which is managed by his sons.

Mr. Abram Williams, near Lincolnville, has some 3,500 acres of land, which is mostly fenced with hedge. His specialty has been high grade beef stock, but in 1882 he raised about 10,000 bushels of wheat. In the county there is much available cheap land; of unsold school lands, 13,500 acres, in the Wichita Land District. Of lands located in Townships 21 and 22 in Harvey County, there are upward of 7,000 acres; on October 1, 1882, there were 32,187 acres, 178,664 acres having been sold within the last ten years. In 1877, there were 2,664 horses; in 1882, 5,607. Milch cows in 1877, 1,836; in 1882, 4,444. Other cattle in 1877, 4,162; in 1882, 10,245. Sheep in 1877, 2,980; in 1882, 12,709. Swine in 1877, 5,811; in 1882, 11,354.

In 1867, the assessed valuation of the county was $106,447; in 1870, $640,320; in 1873, $987,702; in 1875, $1,499,128; in 1876, $1,499,128; in 1880, $2,112,247.45; in 1882, $2,292,776.38. Of the 610,560 acres of land in the county, about 150,000 are under cultivation, and in 1880, 561,720 were taxable.

The percentage of increase of population in the county from 1870 to 1875 is 555; from 1875 to 1880, it is 142; from 1870 to 1880 1,522 per cent. In 1880, Marion Center had a population of 857; Florence 954; Peabody 1,087.

MARION CENTER.

Marion Center is on the north bank of the Cottonwood River, at the point of the confluence therewith of Mud Creek. Its first settlement was made in 1860. December 8, 1866, the laying-out of Marion Center, proper, was made, in accordance with the forms of law. It was the first town in the county. Billings & Bower's Addition, on part of the east half of the southwest quarter of Section 32, Town 19, Range 4, was made March 15, 1871. On March 27, another small addition was made. July 12, 1872, W. H. Billings and Atlantic A. Moore conveyed parts of Sections 5 and 6 of Town 20, Range 4. Freeborn's Addition was made January 2, 1873, and Beebe's July 10, 1873

West Marion, located on the east side of the southwest quarter of Section 31, Town 19, Range 4, was laid out June 24, 1879. and a southern addition was made by Lawrence Weldon on the north half of the northeast quarter of Section 5, Town 20, Range 4, was made November 10, 1879. Billings & Case made a subdivided addition, and July 16, 1872, there was filed an amended plat of Billings & Bowen's Addition.

The lay of the town is one of the most peculiar in Kansas. Entering it on the Marion & McPherson Railroad from Florence, which road passes along the valley of the Cottonwood on the east, the road crosses Mud Creek near the southeastern part of the town, and running mainly in a northwesterly direction, it leaves the town a little north of its northwest corner, and for twelve miles has a due west course. The depot is located on the bottom south of the business portion of the town. At the left of it is an extensive switch, along which are capacious elevators, where there are immense quantities of grain handled. G. F. Roberts is the station agent and telegraph operator. Northwest from the depot, north of the track, stands the Marion City Mills, which is a roomy, substantial structure, fitted up in an admirable manner with all necessary modern mill machinery.

Coming northward from the depot, the court house, on the east side of First street, is the main objective point, which is but a few steps from Main street. Nearly all the business is done on this street, and the beautiful stone structures standing thereon, with the best ones not yet finished, justly gives the town the appellation of "Stone City," for there are in public buildings, business houses and residences, nearly half a hundred built of this material of beautiful colors, prized at home and used largely abroad. This material is used in the new court house at Abilene, Dickinson County.

Passing on the main street east on an iron bridge across Mud Creek, over on the hill to the right stands the pride of the city—the elegant and convenient stone school building, which cost about $15,000. Its height is thirty-three feet; its dimensions 56x60. It has a hip roof, from the center of which arises a belfry, in which is hung a fine-toned bell of 500 pounds weight. There are two fine school rooms and two recitation rooms in the lower story; in the upper, there is a hall and two recitation rooms and a large, airy auditorium. There is no building in the county that can be seen so far and from so many directions. At the west of it, on the creek, is the beautiful school park, with its wealth of forest trees and grasses, assuming a magnificent verdure during the period of vegetation. May 11, 1872, terminated a long-standing contest on the location of this schoolhouse site; the vote for locating it on the hill was 84; in the bottom, 56. George A. Boyle is the present Principal of the school.

In the southwestern suburbs of the city, on the farm of W. H. Billings, is one of the most beautiful peninsular parks in the State of Kansas. It is entered on the north by a roadway of just enough ground at its neck to prevent a union of the waters of the Cottonwood on the east and on the west of it to form an island. Here are about twelve acres of ground, with a fine carpet of grass; growing on it are hundreds of the choicest hackberry trees, making it, with flowers, shrubbery and an entertainment hall on the grounds, a royal place for out-door meetings, being literally a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Swings, pleasure boats and croquet grounds are among its attractions.

Marion Center became a city of the third class August 17, 1875. In 1882, its Mayor was Thomas W. Bowen; Clerk, Charles S. Triplett; Police Judge, C. W. Keller; City Attorney, L. F. Keller.

Linking the old to the new civilization, in front of the substantial court house stands one of the first log dwellings of the town, and northwest of the model grist mill stands a log house, 12x14 feet, erected by E. Lewis in June, 1865. He came from Macoupin County, Ill., and brought with him apple sprouts, which he set out around his cabin, and to this day stand a dozen of his apple trees.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The Presbyterian Church has a prosperous organization here. Its handsome church edifice, built of stone, stands on the summit of the hill above the town. Rev. O. J. King has for a long time ministered to this church, and R. C. Coble is the Superintendent of its Sunday school.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has nearly 150 members here, and in 1881 they completed a good brick edifice on the north of Main street, at a cost exceeding $2,000. Its Sunday school averages ninety members, and its earnest Superintendent is E. W. Hoch, of the Marion Record. The pastor of the church is Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, a son of the late Rev. D. P. Mitchell, who in his day and generation was a power in the Kansas churches.

The Church of the Disciples has about twenty members, and they have a neat white frame structure, erected in 1882. Dr. McQuiller Green is the Superintendent of the Sunday school.

There is quite a number of Roman Catholics in and about Marion Center, and they expect to have a good house of worship during the year 1883. There are a few Protestant Episcopalians in the city. C. R. Roberts, an early settler, a native of Rutland, Vt., is prominent among them.

Masonic orders, Odd Fellows societies, temperance and martial organizations, here abound. The Odd Fellows are building an excellent hall, on the northeast corner of First and Main streets, and they are very prosperous.

Center Lodge, No. 147, A., F. & A. M., was organized in 1875, and it now has about fifty members. Samuel R. Peters was its first W. M. In 1882, E. N. Ebey is W. M., W. H. Dudley, Secretary.

Delta Chapter, R. A. M., holds its regular convocations each alternate Wednesday evening in its chapter room over the Cottonwood Valley Bank. W. H. Dudley is Secretary; Charles B. Mitchell, H. P.

Marion Lodge, No. 104, I. O. O. F., was organized in 1870, with thirty members. Its membership January, 1883, was about forty-five. F. Lewis is Secretary, R. H. Baker, N. G.

Pioneer Lodge, No. 264, I. O. G. T., was organized in the autumn of 1872. Its membership is nearly fifty. Its officers are: George Howe, W. C. T.; M. O. Billings, P. W. C. T.; P. C. Mitchell, P. R. T.

Pollock Post, No. 42, G. A. R., was organized March 27, 1872, with eighty charter members, J. C. Walkinshaw, Deputy Commander, organizer. Its membership January, 1883, is nearly 100. Its officers are: F. Doster, P. C.; F. Lewis, Adjutant.

The Press.—In July, 1869, an organization composed of W. H. Billings, A. E. Case, Levi Billings, J. H. Costello, A. A. Moore and J. N. Rogers, was formed for the purpose of securing a paper at the county seat, and these gentlemen effected an arrangement with A. W. Robinson, of Detroit, Dickinson County, whereby he came to Marion Center in September, 1869, and started a paper, calling it the Western News. It was small enough to be designated a "Handkerchief Sheet;" it was printed a page at a time, on an inferior jobber. In April, 1871, Mr Robinson sold the office to John E. Murphy, who changed the name to the Western Giant. In September, 1871, C. S. Triplett, a newspaper man of experience, bought the interests of Mr. Murphy, and changed the name to the Marion County Record. Mr. Triplett continued as publisher until October 10, 1874, enlarging and improving the paper, when he sold to the Hock brothers. It is now the official paper of the county, and has the benefit of a good subscription list, and an excellent advertising patronage. E. W. Hock is editor; W. F. Hoch, business manager. It is Republican in politics.

The Marion Banner, E. D. Hunt editor and proprietor, was published at Marion Center, about two years. His paper was issued in the interest of the National Labor party. He removed it to London, Osage County, and from there went to Scranton. October 9, 1872, his wife, two boys and one girl were killed by the falling in of the dirt roof of their cabin upon them while asleep. Mr. Hunt narrowly escaped the same fate. The dwelling was about one and a half miles from Marion Center.

Marion Choral Club.—Music and literature have their votaries at Marion Center. A choral club was organized at the residence of Mr. A. W. Brewerton November 11, 1882, by the vocalists of the city. The officers elected are as follows:

President, A. W. Brewerton; Vice President, R. Calhoun; Secretary, Miss Mary Smith; Assistant Secretary, Miss Nellie Turner; Treasurer, William Brockett; Leader, Edward Coles; Assistant Leader, W. H. Dudley; Organist, Miss Bell Coble. The club meetings are Tuesday evening of each week.

Marion Center has three banks, three hotels, three real estate agents, three druggists, three physicians, three milliners, three boot and shoe dealers, three lumber dealers, three livery stables, three butchers, three harness and saddle makers and dealers, nine general merchants, two insurance agents, two billiard halls, two bakers and confectioners, two hardware dealers, two barbers, two painters, two blacksmiths, three carpenters and contractors, three stone cutters and contractors, two dentists, one book seller, one jeweller, one gunsmith, one furniture dealer, one brick-maker, one photographer, one tailor, one plasterer, one mantua-maker. The Marion City Flouring Mills, thirty-four feet high, 34x65 feet, went into operation May 1, 1882, Strowig and Weber, proprietors. A. Comstock, living one mile east of Marion Center, is an extensive lime burner, using the Osage shaft coal. His market is extensive at home and abroad. E. M. Rugg & Co. erected in 1881, on Block 38, a sugar factory at a cost of $3,000. Sugar-making did not succeed with them.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN AUMANN, blacksmith, was born in Hesse-Darnstadt, Prussia, in 1843. Came to America in 1857. He began learning the trade of a blacksmith, which he has continued ever since. He came to Marion in 1878, and at once began working at his trade. In February, 1867, he married Miss Magdalena Eby, of Canada, by whom he has had seven children. Mr. Aumann is a member of the I. O. O. F., and a respected and influential citizen.

REV. J. R. BAKER, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, came to Marion from Council Grove, Kan., where he had been Principal of the schools of that place during the winter of 1881 and 1882. Was born in Huntingdon County, Penn., July 1, 1849. He began life as a school teacher, teaching thirteen years in his native State, and having charge for three years of the academy at Shade Gap, Penn. He began studying for the ministry under the care of the Presbytery of Huntingdon, in the spring of 1878. His first charge was three churches, two in Morris County and one in Davis County, Kan., in the summer of 1882, since which time he has been pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Marion. His father, Jacob Baker, was a prosperous farmer of Huntingdon County, Penn., where the subject of this sketch was married, May 13, 1873, to Miss Mary E. Grazier. Eight older brothers served in the United States Army during the war of the rebellion.

COL. R. C. BATES was born in Dauphin County, Penn., October 23, 1322. Remained there until about 1858, when he went to Philadelphia; worked on the canal and railroad as State agent for the State. Gov. Bigler appointed him aid-de-camp, with the rank of Colonel. Remained there until June, 1861, and went to Washington City, where he remained during the war in the Quartermaster's Department. At the threatened invasion of Washington, took command of a company of colored troops; finally helped to organize a regiment, and was appointed Major, commanding regiment. Continued in the service until the close of the war. He was appointed Superintendent of United States Burial Corps, and established a national cemetery in West Virginia. In January, 1868, was appointed Forage Master in the regular army, and reported at Fort Leavenworth, and was sent to Forts Harper, Lyon and Hayes. Resigned May 1, 1871, and came to Marion County. Was elected to the Legislature in 1874, on an independent ticket. Was married, in 1842, at Philadelphia, Penn., to Miss Maud A. Boner, who died about 1851; had two children—William G. and Katie. He was married again, in 1852, to Miss Leah Gilbert. Is G. C. of I. O. O. F., Grand Lodge, member of the State and County Grange, and G. A. R.

WILLIAM M. BENWARD, proprietor of Marion Bakery, was born in Warren County, N. J., January 7, 1850. In 1865, he left there and went to Clinton, DeWitt Co., Ill., where he worked on a farm for six years and four months, and then returned to New Jersey, where he remained six years in the employ of the Central Railroad Company, of New Jersey, coming to Marion, Marion Co., Kan., in 1878. Worked in the stone quarry for two years. Becoming tired of that business, started his present business, in 1882, which has been a success. Was married, at Dover, N. J., in 1873, to Miss Ellen Eathorne, from England.

WILLIAM H. BILLINGS was born in Broome County, N. Y., September 6, 1812. When about three years of age, moved with his parents to near Rochester, and there attained his majority. Mr. B., in 1837, emigrated to Ohio, settling in the extreme northwest township of the State, in Williams County, and there built the first cabin in the township, and cleared a farm. He had previously been married, in New York, to Miss Angeline Butler. He remained in Williams County about twenty-one years, and during a portion of the time kept a country store. In 1860, he again emigrated westward, and came to the then wilderness of Kansas, locating his claim on Cottonwood Creek, about one mile west of the present town of Marion. He afterward pre-empted the land which he now occupies. He was the first actual white settler in Marion County, and built the first cabin. Mr. Billings has experienced all the different phases of Kansas life. In the very outset, he met with many difficulties, which he now recounts to his favored listeners. The beautiful town of Marion is built on his land, and there is no fact in the progress of the town and county with which he is not familiar. Mr. Billings, with his many acquirements, has a natural taste for adorning and beautifying his home and grounds. On every hand are seen evidences of this fact. Flowers of every hue, ornamental and shade trees, surrounding a fountain built by his own hands, with almost every variety of fruit trees, may be seen. There is, perhaps, no more thrifty orchard in the county than his. Having given the subject of fruit-raising years of study, with years of experience as to the varieties best adapted to Kansas climate, we cannot wonder at his success in this line. Mr. B.'s first marriage did not prove a happy one. He was married to his present wife in 1863. One child resulted from the first marriage—Chauncy. Mr. B. has held the office of Justice, Probate Judge, County Commissioner, Register of Deeds, and Postmaster of Marion. His home is a model of neatness and comfort, well worthy the occupant—the pioneer, through whose privations and hardships a happy, prosperous community has been founded to honor his memory when he shall have been laid away to rest.

FRANK BOWER, Postmaster, came to the State in 1868, locating here, and engaged in mercantile business about four years. Was appointed Postmaster in March, 1870, and has held the position since. Was born in Yorkshire, England, January 24, 1842. Came to America with his parents, and located in Lagrange County, Ind. Left there, at the age of fourteen, and went to St. Joseph County. There remained until enlisting in the army, in January, 1862, in Company L, Ninth Michigan Cavalry. Was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland, under Burnside, in Tennessee and Kentucky, and was in Gen. Kilpatrick's Division in Sherman's Atlanta campaign. Was mustered out in August, 1865. Then returned to Michigan, and farmed until coming to Kansas. Was married, December 29, 1870, at Topeka, Kan., to Miss Caroline Woolpert, of Miami County, Ind., and has one child living—George B. Was elected Register of Deeds, and served one term. Has been Township Treasurer one term. Is a member of Center Lodge, No. 147, A., F. & A. M., K. of H., No. 1,986, and I. O. O. F., No. 104, and Pollock Post, G. A. R.

THOMAS W. BOWN, real estate, loans and collections, was born in Columbus, Ohio, July 9, 1838; removed to Cincinnati, where his youth and boyhood was spent. Learned the trade of decorating and designing with his father, and removed to Clark County, Ohio, with his father, in 1860. Entered the three months' service, in Company C, Fifth Ohio Infantry, as Orderly Sergeant. At the expiration of his term of service, he returned home, and assisted in organizing the Fifty-second Ohio, but was assigned to the Seventy-first Regiment, as Captain of Company K. Was in Sherman's Division of the Army of the Tennessee, and in the battle of Shiloh. Afterward went into the One Hundred and Forty-sixth Regiment, as Major. Was mustered out at Camp Dennison, Ohio, in 1864. Came to Marion County, Kan., in the spring of 1869. Was elected County Clerk the same year, and held the position eight years. Was appointed by Gov. Harvey, in 1871, as member of the Board of Commissioners to audit and settle Indian raid claims; also served on the State Relief Committee, to receive clothing from the Government for those made destitute by grasshoppers. Has held the position of Mayor, and member of the City Council of Marion. Was married, in 1874, at Marion, to Miss Belle C. Smith, of Missouri, and has three children—Nellie F., Gertrude B. and Morton. He is a member of Marion Lodge, No. 104, I. O. O. F.

SAM BOWN, Clerk of the District Court, was born in Chillicothe, Ross Co., Ohio, February 5, 1848. His father was a plumber and tinner by trade. When Mr. B. was quite young, his father moved to Columbus, where he remained some eight years, and from thence to Cincinnati, where he lived ten years. Removed from there to Clark County, and farmed until 1870, when he came to Kansas, locating in Marion. For about three years, engaged in farming and stock-raising; for the following four years taught school in various districts. Was elected Clerk of Court in 1880, and re-elected in 1882. Was married, September 15, 1879, at Marion, to Miss Hattie Howard, of Warren County, Ind., who died February 27, 1883. One child survives—Maud. Mr. B. is a member of Pioneer Lodge, No. 104, I. O. O. Reed, and has one child—Edith Viola, aged five years; is also engaged in cattle business.

B. F. BROCKETT, Probate Judge, was born in Gallatin County, Ill., August 23, 1818; when an infant, his parents removed to White County, Ill., where he remained until twenty-four years of age; worked on a farm and learned the carpenter's trade; he then removed to Memphis, Tenn. He was married in that city, in 1850, to Miss Lenora B. Mixon, of Bolivar; returned to White County, Ill., the same year, and remained until 1862, when he enlisted in Company I, Eighty-seventh Illinois Infantry, as First Lieutenant. At the end of three months, he was promoted to Captain; went to Memphis, and thence to Vicksburg, where he received injuries from which he has never recovered, while in the line of duty in command of a foraging party. He was discharged for age and disability December 15, 1863, at New Iberia, Miss. He returned to Illinois, where he was unfortunate in building a mill, and lost most of his means. In 1866, he removed to Garnett, Kan. In 1873, he removed to Peabody. He was elected Probate Judge in November, 1880. While in Peabody, he held the position of Police Judge and Justice of the Peace. Mrs. B. died in 1860; six children resulted from this marriage, four of whom are still living; John O., the eldest, held the position of Principal of Schools at Peabody for some two years prior to his death, which occurred in September, 1877. The four now living are Anna, now Mrs. Dr. Buck, of Peabody; Hettie L., student of the State Normal, Emporia; Lenora A., now Mrs. Frank Ruland, of Augusta; and William F., of Marion. Judge Brockett was again married at El Dorado, in June, 1875, to Mrs. Sarah A. Keve, and they have one daughter—Lola May.

J. H. COSTELLO, dealer in general merchandise, was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, about 1832; removed to Canada when quite young; remained there a few years, and removed to New York. Enlisted on Governor's Island in 1846, and served in the war with Mexico as a musician; re-enlisted in the Mounted Rifles, and served five years. In the winter of 1860, came to Marion County, and located a ranch at Lost Springs, on the old Santa Fé trail; suffered some damage by depredation from Indians. Mr. C. relates many thrilling narratives of escape from Indian depredations. In 1863, the Arapahoes, led by Big Mouth, surrounded his ranch, fired his hay stacks and destroyed his grain, and several days elapsed before the siege was raised. One night in April, 1862, Bill Anderson's gang of guerrilla's called at his ranch, dismounted and entered. In the crowd, Mr. C. recognized Yeager, who probably saved his life. At another time, a nude woman on horseback came to his ranch, having made her escape from the Indians. Mr. C. was married January 30, 1862, to Miss Abigal A. Wise, who died in 1878; was married to Miss Fannie Patton, of Fulton, Mo.; had four children by first wife—Addie, John W., Lee and Valley. Mr. Costello opened the second store in Marion in 1867. Has acted as Clerk of District Court, Mayor, Police Judge and Councilman.

HON. RICHARD M. CRANE, banker, was born in the town of Mt. Pleasant, Racine Co., Wis., October 7, 1843; lived there until he was eight years of age, then spent one winter at Janesville; afterward his home was in Rutland, Dane Co., Wis., until 1871, when he entered the law department of the Wisconsin University (from which he graduated), having previously pursued literary studies in the same institution, and at a date several years prior to that he had attended the Evansville and Union Schools, the latter, conducted by the well-known instructor, Prof. Searing, afterward State Superintendent of Public Instruction. After attending these schools, Mr. Crane enlisted March 30, 1862, in Company D, Seventh Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, doing active service until May 25, 1864, when, at North Ann River, after five days' fighting in the battle of the Wilderness, he was permanently disabled, but was not discharged until May 20, 1865, having participated, however, in nearly all important engagements of his command. After his return to Wisconsin, and recovering sufficient health to enable him to labor, he worked on the farm for a while, and attended the Wisconsin University, as before mentioned. After graduating from the law school, he spent one year in the law office of J. H. Carpenter, one of the best lawyers of the State; then for three years he was employed in the pension office at Madison; leaving that position, he came to Kansas in August, 1876, locating at Marion Center. After devoting two years almost exclusively to the practice of law, he purchased an interest in the Bank of Marion Center, and became cashier thereof, holding that position until the spring of 1880, when a friend of his from Illinois, Mr. A. W. Brewerton, became associated with him, and they purchased the institution, at that time changing the name to the Bank of Marion, Crane & Brewerton, proprietors. Mr. Crane continues to transact the legal business of the bank, and does some general practice, notably for non-residents, correspondents of the bank, etc. He was elected State Senator in November, 1880, although he has never been an aspirant for political honors; he has made for himself, however, a remarkable record for ability and success as a legislator. He was married at Madison, Wis., August 5, 1873, to Mary Ella Shultz, a native of Indiana. REV. CHARLES B. MITCHELL, A. M., son of Rev. D. P. Mitchell, was born in Allegheny City, Penn., August 27, 1857, and at the age of five years he came with his father's family to Kansas. After completing the high school course, and receiving further preparations in the classics by his sister, Mrs. L. B. Kellogg, at the age of eighteen, he entered the freshmen's class at Mount Union College, Mount Union, Ohio, and in two years completed the first three years of the college course. He then left that school for Allegheny College, Meadville, Penn., a school of higher grade, and entered the senior class and graduated in June, 1879. While at the latter school, he was editor-in-chief of the "Crescent," the official organ of the Delta Tau Delta Greek letter fraternity. He graduated with the honors of his class, being "master orator." Immediately after graduation, he commenced preaching as a supply under the Presiding Elder, his father, having been licensed to preach while in college. In March, 1880, he joined the South Kansas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church as a probationer, and is now an ordained Elder in that church. He has served as pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Churches at Coyville, Burton and Marion; remained three years, the limit of the term, at the latter place. On the 6th of July, 1882, he was married in Pittsburgh, Penn., to Miss Clara Aull, of that city, daughter of James Aull and sister of Major William F. Aull, State Senator from the Pittsburgh District. In June, 1882, the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by his Alma Mater. He has one of the largest and best selected theological libraries in the State, it being a legacy from his father.

REV. DANIEL P. MITCHELL, deceased, was born near Phillipi, Barbour Co., W. Va., February 2, 1821, and died suddenly on the cars near Newton, Kan., August 24, 1881, in his sixty-first year. His parents were among the solid yeomanry of that mountainous country, and from them he inherited a strong physical organization and endowments of brain and heart which promised for him a prominent position among men. Under the preaching of the pioneer Methodist preachers of that day, he was in early life led to Christ, and at the age of twenty-three years entered the Pittsburgh conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In that conference of strong men, he soon became known as a young man of promise, and in a brief period took a foremost place in the church. His appointments were Kingwood, Murraysville, Johnstown, Coshocton two years, Normal two years, Cadiz two years, Carrollton two years, South Common Church, Allegheny City two years and Presiding Elder of Allegheny District two years; the latter appointment being a mark of distinction in those early days. His last appointment in that conference was Jonnston, Penn. Bishop Ames, who knew him best of any of the older Bishops, selected him for the Kansas work, and charged him to come to Kansas, and help build up a conference for God and Methodism. He was first appointed to Leavenworth, where he attracted the leading men of the State, preached to large audiences, conducted large revivals and built up the property interests of his church in that city. The next two years were spent as Presiding Elder of the Leavenworth District, followed by two years as pastor of the Second Methodist Episcopal Church of that city, and Chaplain of the Penitentiary. In 1870, he was re-appointed to the First Church in Leavenworth. Following this, he was pastor of the First Church of Topeka two years, then Presiding Elder of the Fort Scott District four years, then two years Presiding Elder of the Emporia District, then one year Presiding Elder of the Independence District, and then his last charge Hu[illegible]inson, making thirty-three years of active service, and leaving a record of work acco[illegible]ished, that few men have equalled. He was a member of the general conference, the [illegible]w making body of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at four different times, representing each of the three conferences with which he had been connected, and was for several years the representative of his general conference district in the missionary society of that church. At different times he was a prominent candidate for Governor of Kansas, and for Congress. At one time he received the solid vote of his party for United States Senator, against his own wishes and best interests. He was urged by his party for the above positions. He was universally recognized as the head of the National Greenback party of this State, and when the head died the body died also. In all his political career, there were no opponents to his views who were disposed to meet him in debate. Some of the strong leading men who were opposed to his political position, testify that his career was not derogatory to him, either as a man or as a minister of the Gospel. During his residence in the State, he was universally regarded as the leading man of the church in Kansas. As a preacher, he was vigorous and oftentimes eloquent. As a reasoner, he was clear and concise. As a debater, he had but few equals whether on the conference floor, the platform, the pulpit, or in the open field, warding off the sophistries of infidelity. He was a constant worker, and literally worked himself to death. He left a wife and eight children. Mrs. Mitchell was a help-meet in all his itinerant toils. She is a woman of deep piety and marked intellectuality. She is the daughter of Rev. Henry Baker who was a prominent member of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The oldest son, Henry B., is both a civil and locomotive engineer, but now employed in the State Auditor's office as draughtsman. Mrs. L. B. Kellogg, the oldest daughter, is a practicing attorney in Emporia, and is the first woman admitted to the practice in the Supreme Court of the State. Joseph T. is one of the officers of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and resides at Portland, Oregon. Annie E. has been book-keeper at G. W. Newman's, Emporia, for the past six years. Charles B. is a minister and member of the Southwest Kansas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. George T. Guernsey, is the wife of a banker, and resides in Independence, Kan. Dove and Nettie, the two youngest, live with their mother. For full particulars of the life of D. P. Mitchell see "Sisson's Life of Mitchell."

PEABODY.

The first settlement made in Peabody Township was in the autumn of 1870, the pioneers coming in advance of the railroad, and living for several weeks in tents. A colony from Wisconsin consisting of J. E. Cone, W. C. Nye, C. D. Bradley, F. H. Hopkins and M. Birdsall had filed for record February 15, 1871, a plat of a town named Coneburg, located on the east half of the northwest quarter, and the northeast quarter of Section 4, Town 22, Range 3. In June, 1871, the town of Peabody as platted and filed, was located on the south half of Section 4, Town 22, Range 3. S. N. Robinson was President of the town company; R. K. Taber, Secretary.

April 27, 1872, Coneburg practically became North Peabody. A revised plat of Peabody was made July 5, 1875, and a supplemental plat of North Peabody was made April 27, 1878. May 10, 1879, there was still a location made on the southwest quarter of Section 34, Town 21, Range 3. Peabody, as it now exists, is located on Doyle Creek, Spring Creek running irregularly through it. F. H. Hopkins, Esq., was appointed Postmaster in February, 1871, and until about the first of July he carried the mail to and from the post office at Florence. At that time regular trains began running on the road, and the town gained a new impetus. B. Pinkney is the Postmaster at Peabody.

The city was named in honor of F. H. Peabody, of Boston, formerly President of the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad Company, who erected a fine library building on a commanding square of ground, Block 84, located on the corner of Walnut street and Division avenue, donated by the city for that purpose. It is kept open every afternoon and evening, a lady librarian—Mrs. Kincaid—having the management of the same. New books are constantly added to the library, and the reading room is well supplied with newspapers and periodicals.

The city authorities for 1882, are as follows: Mayor, F. C. Bush; Councilmen, G. W. Neal, C. A. Hanlenbeck, F. B. McKercher, A. K. Stewart and D. J. Roberts; Police Judge, J. M. Holcomb; City Attorney, G. W. Camp; Clerk, G. W. Camp; Treasurer, F. H. Kollock; Marshal, E. S. Crisfield.

Prof. L. M. Knowles, one of the State's best educators, has charge of the school as Principal, and there are four other teachers. A large stone structure was built in 1872, for school purposes, but the school increasing then very rapidly, a large frame building was erected just north of it in 1879.

Peabody has a Quartette Band, a Cornet Band, a Lotus Club, a Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, organized July 10, 1882, Knights of Honor, Odd Fellows and Masonic organizations. It has a Co-operative Temperance Union, organized July 16, 1882; R. L. Cochran, President. Frank McKircher is the station agent; J. M. Amborn has the nursery west of the city; the Marion County Agricultural Society have located their fair grounds here. There are twenty acres, very well arranged for such a purpose. There is a neat half mile track very nearly circular in form.

Incorporated in 1879, the town has made rapid strides since it became an organized city of the third class. As a market place, it has an advantage of having western as well as eastern outlets. Butter, eggs, poultry and baled hay, find their way day by day to the mining towns of Colorado and New Mexico, and the half score of elevators and the cattle yards, point as evidences of the extensive grain and stock shipments to the East.

CHURCHES, SOCIETIES, THE PRESS, ETC.

In January, 1871, the people of the burg assembled themselves together for the worship of the Lord, and in 1882 there are Baptist, Christian, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal and United Presbyterian societies here, with their church organizations.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1872. It has a membership of about 120. Rev. E. D. Walker is pastor; G. P. Vandenberg, Sunday school Superintendent. They have a frame church building, valued at $3,000.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has upwards of 100 members. They built a good frame house in 1874, at a cost of $3,000. Rev. Thomas Auders is their pastor; Dr. L. E. Disney, Superintendent of their Sunday school.

The Baptist Church erected a neat frame building, costing about $2,000, in 1873. George W. Shute [illegible] their Sunday school Superintendent.

The Lutheran Church, containing about eighty members, erected a building in 1878. It was named St. Paul's Church, and cost about $3,500.

The Christian Church contains about fifty members. Their house of worship, erected in 1881, cost about $2,500. Rev. Alexander Ellet is their pastor.

Knights of Pythias—J. H. Lyon, P. G. C., assisted by Knight John Burns, organized Tuesday, November 14, 1882. The members are R. S. Riehl, S. B. Chilcote, S. A. Stauffer, A. Hyman, F. Medlam, C. D. Rogers, H. B. Robertson, H. C. Rushmon, H. Rolfs, Guy Johnston, J. C. King, G. C. Nold, Thomas O'Meara, F. B. Landon, Henry Storch, Charles E. Thomas, R. A. Enfly, W. F. Richardson, H. S. Minor. Officers—H. B. Robertson, P. C.; Guy Johnston, C. C.; C. D. Rogers, V. C.; F. B. Landon, K. of R. and S.; H. C. Bushmore, M. of F.; Thomas O'Meara, M. of E.; F. Melam, M. at A.; J. C. King, I. G.; H. Minor, O. G.

Newspaper History.—J. P. Church, on May 1, 1873, issued the first number of the Peabody Gazette. In December, 1873, the Atchison Globe office, where the Gazette had been printed, having ceased to be, the Gazette was suspended until April, 1874. The Shaft, a twenty-eight-column paper, had been established by W. H. Morgan, in August, 1871. In April, 1874, he also put material in Peabody to establish the Gazette, continuing the publication of the Shaft. The Gazette, having been under the management of Church & Morgan, Mr. Morgan retired from it in November, 1874, selling to Mr. Church. For a period of about three years, several changes had been made in the proprietorship, and W. H. Walker taking the helm in September, 1877, running it until January, 1880, when H. D. Morgan became associated with him. Henderson & Briggs obtained the office in March, and in September Mr. Briggs retired from the firm, leaving Mr. Henderson sole owner. Mr. W. H. Morgan, in 1875, sold the Osage City Shaft to J. P. Campbell, who enlarged it to a six-column quarto, and changed its name to the Free Press. Mr. Morgan, in 1876, re-purchased the office and continued its publication, in 1878 enlarging it to a fifty-six-column paper. In April, 1881, he sold the Free Press to J. V. Admire. In December, 1880, he had bought of Mr. Henderson the Peabody Gazette, and, after selling the Free Press, he moved to Peabody and made that place his home. Enlarged the Gazette until it is, in 1882, a fifty-six-column paper. He is still its publisher, and he makes it a credit to himself, to the city in which he lives, and to the great Southwest. A. B. Knowlton started the Peabody Post in 1882, and published No. 22, the last number, August 24. He sold it to Mr. Morgan, of the Gazette, who merged it into the Gazette. Both papers were Republican in their politics.

Peabody has three hotels, two banks, four drug stores, seven general stores, one flour and feed store, two barber shops, four real estate, insurance and loan agencies, two meat markets, four blacksmith and wagon shops, two grocery establishments, two bakeries and confectioneries, two hardware and farm implement establishments, one foundry and machine shop, one carriage and paint shop, three millinery establishments, one livery stable, two dealers in books, periodicals and stationery, six carpenters and builders, one auctioneer, one photographer, one dentist, three physicians, one merchant tailor, two boot and shoe makers, one mason and contractor, three lumber dealers, two coal dealers, one house painter and paper-hanger, one jeweler, one gunsmith, one furniture dealer and undertaker, one veterinary surgeon, one poultry yard proprietor. The Peabody Flouring Mills is one of the best, and it is tributary to a great wheat-raising region, the Russian settlers making wheat a special crop.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

AYERS & WAREHAM, wholesale and retail dealers in baled hay, grain and coal; have been in business four years; shipped 163 cars of grain and hay in 1882. Are agents for the Osage shaft coal, of which they sold fifty-four cars from September, 1881, until May 10, 1883. C. H. Wareham was born in Oswego County, N. COL. DUNCAN McKERCHER, engaged in loan, insurance and real estate business. Col McKercher came to Peabody in the fall of 1870, virtually before there was any town, and as a member of the Wisconsin Kansas Colony, but subsequently withdrew from that organization, and improved a farm northeast of town two miles, on Section 34. This was his home until 1877, when he removed to the town. Col. McKercher was born in Livingston County, N. Y., January 14, 1819. His father, John McKercher, was a farmer. His mother's maiden name was Margaret McMartin. His early schooling was obtained at Temple Hill Academy, Geneseo, N. Y. At seventeen, he showed an aptitude for mechanical work, and was apprenticed to a carpenter, and learned the trade; removed to Perry, and in 1843 was married to Miss Betsey Benedict. In 1846, he, with his family, moved to Oconomowoc, Waukesha County, Wis.; there worked at his trade until about 1856, when he moved to Juneau County, Wis., where he remained until he was enrolled by the Governor of the State of Wisconsin, on the 29th of July, 1861, and commissioned as Captain, and ordered to raise a company, which, when raised, was assigned to the Tenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and was, with the regiment, mustered into the United States service at Milwaukee, Wis., on the 5th of October, and left the State from that point on the 9th of November following; they went to Kentucky, and were under the command of Gen. Mitchell. Was at the taking of Bowling Green, Nashville, Murfreesboro and Huntsville, Ala., where we cut the communication between the two rebel armies about the time the battle of Pittsburg Landing was fought, in April, 1862. Soon after, he was at Bridgeport, where the Union forces drove the enemy across the bridge, and they burned one-half of the same. In September, of the same year, he was in that retrograde movement of Gen. Buell from Huntsville to Louisville, and the first day out his regiment, with a Michigan regiment, had a fight with the rebels at Stevenson, while transferring some trains. They were twenty-two days on that march, and it was extremely hot and dusty, and suffered much. Col. McKercher was present with his regiment at the battle of Perryville on the 8th of October, and out of 276 men he lost 145 in killed and wounded in two and a half hours, and had six men killed within six feet of him, and two of them he caught in his arms as they fell. He was at the battle of Stone River on the 31st of December, 1862, and the first days of January, 1863, and did considerable scouting and skirmishing during the following summer; was at the battle of Chickamauga, Ga., on the 19th and 20th of September, 1863. On the first day of the battle, in a charge, his horse was shot and killed. On the second day his brigade held a good location, and had repulsed the enemy four times, and at 4 o'clock P. M. he received orders from Col. Scribner, who commanded the brigade, to hold the line that night, if possible. He held it till about sundown, while the Union forces were forming a new line in the rear, when the enemy concentrated a heavy force and charged them. They held their ground till the enemy came right in amongst them, and captured a large number, the Colonel among the rest; was sent to Richmond, Va., and put in Libby Prison, on the night of the 30th of September, 1863, and was there till the 10th of May following, when he, with others, was sent to Macon, Ga.; was there till about the middle of July, when 600 of the officers of the highest rank were selected, to be sent to Charleston, S. C. Col. McKercher was of that number, to be placed before the fire of our own guns, for the protection of that city. He remained there till the 5th of October. Some time before that date, the yellow fever had broken out among the officers in the prison, and on the above date they were removed to Columbia, at which place he remained until Sherman came through, when he, with the others, were sent to Raleigh, and from there were sent to Wilmington, N. C., where they were paroled, and sent to our lines on March 1, 1865. From Wilmington he went to Annapolis, Md., where he was mustered out on account of expiration of his term of service. Col. McKercher at once tendered his services again to the Governor of Wisconsin, but before taking the field again the rebellion was virtually broken, and he did not leave the State. On his return from the service, he moved to Ripon, and was appointed Postmaster of that city by President Johnson, which position he held for four years. He had previously held the position of clerk of the District Court of Juneau County. Col. McKercher has been connected with the municipal government of Peabody nearly constantly since his residence in the city. He is the father of four children, three of whom are living—Sarah (now Mrs. William Holmes, of Chicago), Emma (now Mrs. Lockwood, of Kansas City), Frank B., (agent Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad at Peabody), Helen (Mrs. William Cole, of Olathe, Kan., died January 1, 1881, aged thirty-six years). Kimball's Addition was made April 30, 1871, containing the northeast quarter of Section 12, Town 21, Range 4. Barker's Addition was made June 30, 1871, and J. B. McAfee's July 6, 1871, taking in the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of Section 6, Town 21, Range 5. This is the oldest railroad town in the county, situated at the junction of Doyle Creek and the Cottonwood. Was incorporated as a city of the third class on June 12, 1872. This is an important eating station on the A., T. & S. F. R. R. The road has a south branch from this place, running into Butler County. Surrounding this place are the finest and most available stone quarries that have been opened in Western Kansas.

W. M. Mitchell and John McReynolds, in April, 1871, removed the material of the Miami County Advertiser from Paola to Florence, and began the publication, April 23, of the Florence Pioneer. C. H. and J. A. Kurtz came into possession of the paper the following autumn, but in the spring of 1872 the property was in litigation, the Kurtz Brothers were ejected, and a Mr. Aller, a banker, assumed the control, until in the spring of 1873, when he absconded. At the solicitation of the people of Florence, E. W. Hoch issued the paper for six months, awaiting the result of the trial, and then because of its unprofitableness discontinued its publication. In the spring of 1874, the Messrs. Kurtz recovered possession of the property, removed it to Augusta, Butler County, where they now publish the Southern Kansas Gazette.

June 23, 1876, Isaac Howe and H. D. Morgan started the Florence Herald. April 15, 1882, Mr. Morgan, then sole proprietor, sold to White & Hanchett, and in the latter part of May J. B. Crouch became editor and proprietor.

There are four church organizations, and all but the Baptists have a house of worship. Rev. J. A. Heagy is the pastor.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was completed in 1881; it cost about $3,500. Its membership is about sixty. Rev. J. Hartman is pastor.

The Presbyterian Church was rebuilt in 1882. It has about fifty members. Rev. P. J. Leenhouse is pastor.

The Catholics have a neat house of worship, erected in 1871. Rev. N. Fowler, pastor.

Banner Lodge, No. 386, K. & L. of H.—Meetings every alternate Tuesday evening at Knight's Hall.

There are four teachers in the Florence public schools, all females: Miss Frankie Davis, Principal. There are 360 children of school age, and they are distributed in three different buildings. The old school building was erected in 1868. The new substantial stone edifice will cost $7,500, and will be opened in 1883.

The Marion Bank has a capital of $50,000. Charles Barker, President; P. B. Plumb, Vice President; R. T. Batty, Cashier. Here is a superior water-power flouring mill, six hotel keepers, four grocery stores, four general stores, three meat markets, three livery stables, three dealers and quarrymen of Florence stone, three blacksmiths, two druggists, two lumber dealers, two cattle shippers and grain dealers, two milliners, three coal dealers, one hardware merchant, one boot and shoe dealer, one saddle and harness maker, one baker, one auctioneer, one photographer, one jeweler, one dentist, four physicians, one pork packer, one billiard saloon, one furniture establishment, two wagon-makers, four loan, insurance and real estate agents.

W. W. Stanford is Postmaster.

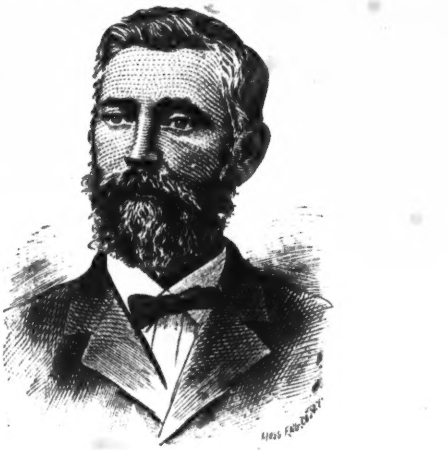
G. J. Hartman is station agent and Mayor of the city; W. F. File, Pension Agent and City Clerk; A. Z. Hamilton, City Treasurer; James Carter, Police Judge; J. Ware Butterfield, City Attorney; G. F. Minturn, Marshal; P. Hinkle, President Board of Councilmen.

FLORENCE CREAMERY.

The Florence Creamery, which is destined to become one of the most important manufacturing interests of Marion County and of the flourishing city of Florence, was completed and began operations in May, 1883. The enterprise owes its existence to the joint efforts and capital of the citizens of Florence, as the cash capital, $7,000, was all contributed by the business men of the place. The contract for the building and machinery was let to John W. Hall, of Osceola, Iowa, and the creamery is built after the model of the Wellington Creamery. The main building is 32x46, and the ice house 30x50, with a capacity of 400 tons of ice. The churn and vat room is 26 feet square, containing two revolving churns, which will hold 275 gallons of cream each. In this room are also located the vats, two in number, which will hold 400 gallons each. Adjoining this department on the north are two rooms for working butter, 14x16 feet in size. In the first is located an immense circular butter worker, from which can be turned off 75 pounds of butter in ten minutes. The entire machinery is operated by a ten horse-power engine of the most approved pattern. Hot and cold water is supplied to all parts of the apparatus by pipes connected with pumps and the engine. Mr. Charley Miller is President of the association.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

T. P. ALEXANDER, dealer in hardware and agricultural implements, came to Emporia in 1870, and came from there to Florence in May, 1871. Opened a small stock, but has built up a fine trade, and now has as complete a store as can be found in the county. In 1878, he built his present commodious store room, which is of stone, 25x125 feet. In the rear, and separated from the store, is a stone ware room, 25x50 feet. His stock will average in value $12,000. He was born in Eugene, Vermillion Co., Ind., August 26, 1840. When seventeen, he removed to Danville, Ill., where, in 1861, he enlisted in the Eleventh Indiana Infantry. He participated in the engagements of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Fort Gibson, Champion Hill, Winchester, Va., Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek. Was wounded at Champion Hill, and was in the hospital five months. Rejoined his command at New Orleans, and remained with it until mustered out. Was promoted to Second Lieutenant in May, 1865. Was married at Danville, Ill., in 1868, to Miss Esther Stewart. Mr. Alexander was the first Mayor of the city, and now holds that position. He has been Township Treasurer since 1872, and School District Treasurer since 1877. Mr. A. has four children—James, Lucy, John and Mary. His father, William Alexander, was a pioneer of Eugene, Ind., locating there in 1838. His mother, Esther Henry, was born in Morristown, Penn. Mr. Alexander is one of the Board of Directors of the Florence Creamery.



Thos J. Conry, M. D.

CHARLES BARKER, farmer and stock-raiser, located here in the fall of 1866, and before the Santa Fe Railroad was built he had to drive his cattle to Abilene for shipment. Sold part of his land to the Florence Town Company. On the organization of the Marion Bank in 1873, Mr. B. became President, and has since held that position. Mr. B. was born in Boone County, Ind., July 15, 1834. His father and mother were natives of North Carolina. Removed to Lee County, Iowa, in 1842, and remained four years, and removed to Wayne County, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising until coming to Kansas. Mr. Barker was married there in 1855, to Miss Lucinthia Fouts, of Putnam County, Ind. They have four children—Diana, Lafayette, Bert and Anna. Was elected County Commissioner in 1867, and held the office six years. He is one of the stockholders of the Florence Creamery.

R. T. BATTY, Cashier of Marion Bank, was born in Providence, R. I., September 16, 1849. When nine years of age, his parents located in Topeka. There Mr. B. learned the tinsmith's trade, and engaged in that for some three years. Afterward, he went with a freighting outfit to Colorado, being absent about two years. On his return, he engaged in the hardware trade in Topeka, and in 1871, in partnership with his brother, engaged in the hardware business at Florence. In 1875, he became Cashier of the bank, and has since held that position. He was married May 15, 1880, at Florence, to Miss Mary E. Riggs, daughter of James D. Riggs, one of the early settlers of Marion County. They have one child—Andrew F. He is a member of Advance Lodge, No. 114, A., F. & A. M., Florence.

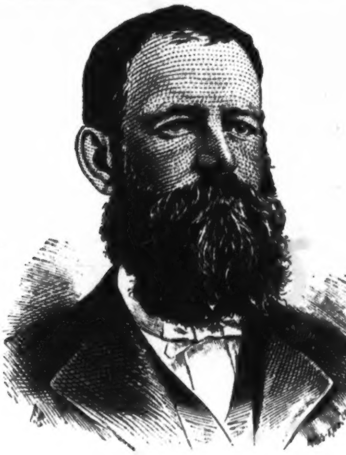
DR. T. J. CONRY, physician and surgeon, located here in May, 1871; was born in Buffalo, N. Y., November 24, 1839. His father, Capt. John W. Conry was Captain of the ship Milwaukee, a vessel of the Evans line, and was shipwrecked at the mouth of the Kalamazoo River in Lake Michigan in November 1842. After his father's death, his mother moved to Carroll County, Ohio, in 1843. Dr. Conry returned to Buffalo in 1860, and engaged in the book business there until 1868, when he came West to Kansas City, Mo., where he graduated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1871, and afterward attended lectures at Rush Medical College, Chicago. He was married at Carrollton, Ohio, in 1862, to Miss Maggie Nivin, and has three children living—William H., of Topeka, Daisy and Lizzie A. His wife died in 1877, and he was married to his present wife in 1878, Miss Gussie A. Holmberg, who graduated from the Women's Medical College in Chicago in 1881, and who is now practicing her profession with her husband. Dr. C. was appointed United States Medical Examiner in 1872. He is a member of the Kansas State Medical Society; is also a member of the A., F. & A. M., R. A. M. and K. of H., and is a stockholder in the Florence Building Association and Creamery.

J. B. CROUCH, attorney at law, Florence, came to Marion County in 1881. He was born in St. Albans, Kanawha Co., W. Va., September 17, 1851; and in 1869, entered the newspaper business in Charleston. In 1874, he married Miss Lida E McIntire, a native of Gallipolis, Ohio, and in the following year removed to the latter State and took a position on the Cambridge Jeffersonian. Returned to his native State in 1878, and in partnership with William Lawrence, son of ex-Congressman Lawrence, of Ohio, founded the Grafton Eagle. He held the position of Committee Clerk in the West Virginia Legislature at its session in 1879, after which he sold his interest in the Grafton Eagle and commenced the publication of the Moundsville Commercial. This paper was one of only three or four in the State that supported the action of A. W. Campbell in resisting the Conklin expulsion resolutions in the Chicago Convention; but Republican sentiment in the State was soon reversed by the more thoughtful members of the party, and in a short time Mr. Crouch witnessed a demonstration in the city of Wheeling, at which the correctness of his position was acknowledged by the highest commendations being bestowed upon Mr. Campbell. While publishing the Commercial, Mr. Crouch was admitted to the bar upon examination by the Supreme Judges of West Virginia, and in December of the same year he returned to Cambridge, Ohio, and accepted an editorial connection with the Jeffersonian. Owing to ill health of self and wife, he severed his connection with that paper, came to Kansas, and took a position on the editorial staff of the Atchison Evening Globe. In 1881, he established the Hillsboro Intelligencer, and in April, the following year, he bought the Florence Herald, and consolidated the two papers. January 20, 1883, he sold the Herald to A. M. White, since which time he has devoted himself to the practice of law.

D. C. DESMOND, photographer, located here in August, 1882. He was born in Geneva, N. Y., November 8, 1853. Moved to La Salle County, Ill., when quite young, and remained three years. Then removed to Dubuque, Iowa, and remained until 1876, when he moved to Malvern, Iowa. He there learned the photographic art, and traveled with a car through Iowa, Nebraska, Texas and New Mexico. He was married in April, 1881, to Miss Martha Billups, of Missouri.

J. C. DWELLE, attorney at law and real estate agent, located at Cedar Point, Chase Co. Kan., in 1870. Was born in Ontario County, N. Y., April 10, 1846. Resided there until 1866, engaged in farming, and removed to Jackson County, Mich. Entered the law department of Michigan University the same year, and pursued his studies, some two years since moving to Kansas, and has been engaged in farming and stock raising. Was admitted to practice in the December term, 1882, of the District Court of Chase County, before Hon. S. R. Peters, Judge. In 1875, he ran for Representative of Chase County, against the notorious S. N. Wood, and has been connected very prominently with the politics of the county until recently. Has been extensively engaged in raising fine wool sheep for the last six years, and now has a large ranch in Chase County. He was married January 8, 1868, at Gorham, Ontario Co., N. Y., to Miss Amelia A. Lake, of that county. They have six children—Johanna M., Harold L., James C., Horatio S., Frank A. and Louis. Mr. Dwelle was active in all matters of substantial interest in Chase County during his long residence there. He is a member of the M. E. Church.

REV. W. F. FILE born October 16, 1848, in Bond County, Ill.; married Miss Sinah M. Rankin, April 24, 1873; was educated in the common schools of the county principally, but spent some time in the Greenville High School and at Shurtleff College; taught school a number of years before entering the ministry; was ordained to the Baptist's ministry January 16, 1876; came to Kansas immediately afterward; settled first as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Wichita; remained pastor from June, 1876, to February, 1877, when he resigned and moved to Marion County, when he became pastor of the Zion Star and Catlin Valley Churches. In July, 1879, he purchased the Florence Herald, and was editor and proprietor of that journal until December, 1880, when he severed his connection with the paper and became pastor of the First Baptist Church; resigned after serving more than a year to take a mission field embracing Chase and part of Marion Counties; has been an active worker in the temperance cause, and has stood fearlessly for his opinions at all times.



J. C. Dwelle

REV. EDWARD P. FOSTER, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was born at Bloom Furnace, Scioto County, Ohio, October 5, 1853. Removed to Kentucky when quite young, and when seventeen years of age removed to Marietta, Ohio, where he entered college, graduating in the class of 1874, then spent three years at Yale and Union, N. Y., theological seminaries, graduating at Union in 1877. His first church was at Florence, where he came the year of his graduation, and remained until 1880, when he visited Europe, attending lectures six months at each of the great universities—Berlin and Leipsic. On his return to this country, he was supply of the Eureka church four months, and Caldwell for one year, and came thence to Florence again. He was married June 28, 1882, to Miss Julia Fitch.

REV. NICHOLAS FOWLER, pastor of the Holy Catholic Church, was born near Luxemburg, Germany, May 8, 1857. Studied at the Gymnasium of Treves. Following this, studied at Aimea, Belgium, and from thence entered the American University at Lourain, his entire course of study occupying about ten years. Came to America in September, 1882. Has charge of the Florence Church and some four other churches located near here. The church is in a flourishing condition.

C. M. HEATH, livery, feed and sale stable, came to the State in 1874, and located on a farm four miles north of Florence. In 1876, built his present commodious barn, and removed to the town. Was born in Merrimac County, N. H., May 13, 1842, his father being David G. Heath, and his mother's maiden name Sarah S. Moore, both natives of New Hampshire. His great-grandfather Col. Jesse Heath, was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and cleared the farm where two generations have since resided. Mr. Heath attended Franklin Academy, and in 1861, enlisted in the Third New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry as wagonmaster. Was at the bombardment of Port Royal, and was commissioned First Lieutenant in 1862, but detailed as Division Wagonmaster, and remained until 1863. He returned to Franklin and engaged in mercantile business until 1865, and then went to Boston, Mass. He came west to St. Joe, Mo., soon after, and took a freight train to Denver. He remained in the territories two years, and then returned to New Hampshire, and was appointed State Agent for New Hampshire of the Phœnix Mutual Life Insurance Company, which he held three years, after which he engaged in mercantile pursuits at Franklin, N. H., until coming to Kansas. He was married March 11, 1874, at Frauklin, to Miss Ellen M. Colby, of Henniker, N. H. Mr. Heath was Deputy Sheriff under Mr. Howe, of Marion County.

PHILLIP HINKLE, Justice of the Peace and Collector, also proprietor of extensive stone quarries near the city. Located in Florence in 1873. Engaged in mercantile business until 1879. Was born in Bucks County, Penn., June 14, 1836. In the spring of 1861, he enlisted in the Fifty-second Pennsylvania Infantry. At the expiration of his term of service, he re-enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Fourth Pennsylvania Infantry, and was commissioned First Lieutenant. He was in Key's Army Corps, Cozier's Division, Army of the Potomac. Participated in all the battles of the Peninsula campaign, and was afterward on detached service. Was promoted to Captain after the battle of Seven Pines, and was mustered out at Harrisburg in 1864. Returned to Bucks County and learned the trade of a plasterer. After coming to Kansas, he resided in Topeka and Emporia, before removing to Florence. He has been a member of the City Council, and Police Judge; his stone quarries are among the most important industries of Florence, the pay-roll amounting to $1,000 per month. Mr. Hinkle is a member of Grand Valley Lodge No. 127, I. O. O. F., A., F. & A. M., and G. A. R.

S. W. HOWE, insurance and real estate, located in Kansas in 1873, at first engaged in Government land survey, and afterward assisted in appraising A., T. & S. F. Railroad lands. Was elected Sheriff of Marion County in 1877, and held the office two terms. Was born in Caledonia County, Vt., April 18, 1843. He enlisted in the army in July, 1863, in Company D, Sixth Vermont Infantry, and participated in the engagements of Cold Harbor, Petersburg, and the Shenandoah Valley campaign, and was mustered out June 26, 1865. He removed to Madison, Wis., and engaged in general merchandise until coming to Kansas. He was married November 13, 1879, in Dane County, Wis., to Miss Elizabeth Colby, a native of New York. They have one child, Edith. While on the frontier engaged in surveying lands, Mr. Howe and party had some hair-breadth escapes from hostile bands of Indians, and August 24, 1874, six of the party were surprised, captured and massacred by the Indians. Mr. Howe is a member of the A., F. & A. M. of Florence.

THOMAS H. KELLY, conductor on the Douglas Branch of the A., T. & S. F. Mr. K. is a veteran with the company, and there are few, if any, that have been with them longer; he commencing in 1873, as an engineer on the main line. At that time it had no branches. He continued in that capacity up to 1877, in which year a terrible casualty befell him three miles west of Elmdale. In this accident, his engine jumped the track, went down an embankment, and being unable to extricate himself, was badly scalded by the escaping steam, besides being severely bruised. After three months, he had sufficiently recovered to again be on duty, and was assigned the conductor's position on the main line, and on the completion of its branch to El Dorado, took the route he now runs. Since coming to the State, Mr. K. has been a resident of Topeka, Emporia, El Dorado and Florence. He was the engineer that pulled the first train into Pueblo, Colo., which was in 1876. The subject of this sketch was born at Hales Corners, Milwaukee Co., Wis., August 25, 1847; was educated and reared in Sheboygan County, Wis. In 1864, he made his departure in railroading with the C. & N. W., running between Chicago and Janesville. Previous to 1873, had been for a time on the Central Railroad of Iowa. Mr. K. was married in Albia, Iowa, to Miss Addie Wilson. They have one child—Frankie.

CHARLES W. MILLER, dealer in general merchandise, began business here in 1874 with a small stock of goods, but has steadily increased his stock, until he now enjoys a fine trade, and carries a stock of from $12,000 to $15,000, and his annual trade will reach $50,000. He was born in Monroe County, Mich., in 1842. In 1861, he enlisted in the Fifth Indiana Light Artillery. Was with his command at Shiloh, Chickamauga, Resaca, Mission Ridge, Stone River and Perryville; at the latter engagement, he was wounded by the explosion of an ammunition chest, and was promoted to Sergeant. Returned to Cold Water, Mich., and clerked five years. He was married at Cold Water, Mich., in 1867, to Miss E. J. Lincoln, of that city. They have three children—Harry, Fannie and Maud. Has been a member of the City Council several terms and Mayor three terms. He is also at the present time President of the Florence Creamery Association, a chartered company, with a paid up capital of $7,000.

F. S. MITCHELL, dealer in furniture and undertaking goods, came here in 1871, locating in Chase County. Engaged in farming until 1876, when he came to Florence. He carries a stock of about $3,000, and his annual trade wil reach $6,000. Mr. M. was born in Orange County, N. Y., November 6, 1845, and when ten years of age moved to McHenry County, Ill., and learned the trade of a cabinet-maker. Enlisted in 1862, in Company G, Second Battalion Eighteenth United States Regulars. Was at Missionary Ridge and in the Atlanta campaign. Mustered out in 1865. He was married May 1, 1868, at Mechanicsville, Iowa, to Miss Matilda McMullen, of Ohio, and they have two children—Myrtie and Mabel. Is a member of the City Council and M. E. GNADENAU.

Gnadenau town site is Section 11, Township 20, Range 2. It is in Liberty Township, a little southeast of Hillsboro, one street from east to west runs through its center. The town lots in fact are town farms; each lot is about half a mile long, having a front of 150 feet. The four center lots, two on either side of the street, are for a school, church, store and public hall. After religious services on Sunday, these people—the Mennonites—consider every kind of public business; improvements are ordered, and all must bear an equitable portion of the labor and expense incident thereto. The heads of households enact the laws and regulations of the colony.

Menno or (Simonis) the founder of this sect, was a contemporary of Martin Luther. This man's votaries were gathered in Holland, and in 1790 their first settlement was made in Russia. In 1873, the Mennonites sent out from Russia delegations to explore the United States and Canada. After the return of their agents, a few single families of considerable wealth, heeding the advice of their delegates, came to Marion Center, and selected several sections of land, in the vicinity of their town, Gnadenau, which, having a liberal translation, means "Valley of Mercy." In 1876, 80,000 acres were sold to a colony of Bohemians, the land being in Town

18, Ranges 3 and 4. The Mennonites have large settlements in Towns 19, 20 and 21 in Range 1, and in Towns 19 and 20 in Range 2. They are honest, industrious people, and many of them are very wealthy. They are attracted to Kansas because the laws exempt them from military duty, and they have their own titles in fee simple to so many valuable, attractive homes.

Gnadenau has two blacksmith shops, a store, the keeper of which is elected, and the tenure of office is conditioned upon the satisfaction he gives. He is not permitted to sell tobacco or any intoxicating liquors.

Hoffnungsthall and Moscow are Mennonite communities. The Russian Baptist Church was built in Gnadenau, 1876.

HILLSBORO.

Hillsboro, ten miles from Marion Center, on the Marion & McPherson Railroad, has J. F. Hay for its station agent; Christian Ramsier for its Postmaster. The town of Hillsboro was laid out on the north half of the southwest quarter of Section 34, Town 19, Range 4, June 24, 1879. Beebe's Addition to Hillsboro was laid out on the south half of the northwest quarter of Section 34, Town 19, Range 12, August 3, 1880; Kliever's Addition to Hillsboro is a recent enlargement of the town. The town is improving quite rapidly. Funk & Son opened up one of the best steam mills in the West, in April, 1882. It stands about thirty rods west of the station. Here are four grain shippers, two lumber dealers, two physicians, three hardware stores, four general stores, two blacksmith shops, two banks, one restaurant, one meat market, one drug store, one hotel, one furniture store. The Methodist Episcopal Church has an organization, and there are several Mennonites in the town, also some German Catholics. Here is School District No. 82. The school building is a two-story stone structure; W. P. Rife is the Principal. Prof. Burgdorph has a private German school; it is well patronized.

The Phonograph was started by the Groat Brothers; W. J. Groat was editor in chief; J. T. Groat, local editor.

J. B. Crouch, now of the Florence Herald, purchased the Phonograph. The enterprise did not promise the necessary success, and it was abandoned in May, 1882, about thirty-five numbers having been published.

OTHER TOWNS.

Burns is ten miles southeast of Florence, on the El Dorado Branch of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad. It is a thriving little station. Josephus Collett is Postmaster. St. Francis City is somewhat more than a mile south of Burns. This place was located September 28, 1882, by the Franciscan Brothers, a Catholic order, on part of the west one-half of the southeast quarter, and the east one-half of the southwest quarter of Section 33, Town 22, Range 5. Lincolnville, Bethel and Lost Springs are post offices in Clear Creek Township. I. F. Shupe is the merchant at Lost Springs; Lincolnville has a general store, a blacksmith shop, a fine school building, and is a center of an excellent agricultural region. It was located by Robert F. McAllister on the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of Section 14, Town 18, Range 4, May 11, 1872. L. L. Evans is Postmaster at Bethel; W. H. Evans, at Lincolnville; A. Terry, at Lost Springs.

Lehigh.—Alden Speare, of Boston, filed a plat of this burg, August 23, 1881. It is located on the northeast quarter of Section 27, Town 19, Range 1. It is six miles west of Hillsboro. L. Monninger is Postmaster and merchant here. Mud Creek is a post office in Gale Township; G. Hutchins, Postmaster. Youngtown is in Grant Township, L. D. Pierce, Postmaster. Creswell is in Liberty Township, C. E. Whitney, Postmaster.

DURHAM PARK.

Nearly in the geographical center of Durham Park Township is located the great cattle ranche of the State owned by Mr. Albert Crane, of Chicago, the proprietor of Durham Park, and the owner of the best families of thoroughbred bulls, and of Airdrie Dutchess third, and of Airdrie Dutchess second, the cost of both $44,600. The present Postmaster at Durham Park is William Hallowell.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJ. J. K. McLEAN is a native of Guilford County, N. C. He was born July 31, 1823. His boyhood and youth were spent on the farm, during which time he received a common school education. At the age of twenty, he was married to Miss Mary P. McLean who, a few months after her marriage, died. Mr. McLean then left North Carolina to seek his fortune in the far West, as Illinois was then known. He settled in Bond County, of that State, and in 1847 was married to Miss Elizabeth A. Donnell, of Greenville, Ill., with whom he lived till her death, which occurred early in 1879, near Florence, Marion Co., Kan. This lady was the mother of his five children—the eldest, Mary P. and the youngest, Henry A., Superintendent of the city schools of Wellington, Kan. In the fall of 1880, Maj. McLean was married to Mrs. D. J. Rankin, of Donnellson, Iowa. For more than twenty years, Mr. McLean was a citizen of Bond County, Ill., during which time he was extensively engaged in agricultural and mercantile pursuits. For two terms, he was Treasurer of his county. At the breaking-out of the war, he enlisted in Company D, Third Illinois Cavalry, and upon its organization was elected First Lieutenant. After two years of active duty, he was appointed Captain of his company. In July, 1865, he received the appointment of Major. He served in many of the important battles of the Southwest. He was among those ordered to the protection of the Northwest against the Indians, who were giving trouble in Minnesota and Dakota. In October, of 1865, he was mustered out at Fort Snelling, Minn. In 1868, with his family he located in Topeka, and after a two years' residence in the capital he moved to Florence, where he established the first store. In 1871, he was appointed Postmaster of Florence, which position, having been elected a member of the State Legislature, he resigned in 1873. He is one of the oldest settlers of Marion County, and has been much connected with municipal affairs. He is now a farmer and stock-raiser, located on his beautiful farm called Silent Shades, located one mile northeast of Florence.

ALONZO G. REYNOLDS, farmer, located four miles from Florence, on Section 21, Township 21, Range 4, Fairplay Township, P. O. Florence, was born in Erie County, N. Y., in 1827. Resided there until 1868, engaged in farming. Was married in 1850, in Monroe County, N. Y., to Marinda C. Munson, and has six children. In 1868, moved to Wisconsin and engaged there in farming until the fall of 1870, when he came to Kansas. Has held the office of Township Trustee since the fall of 1879.

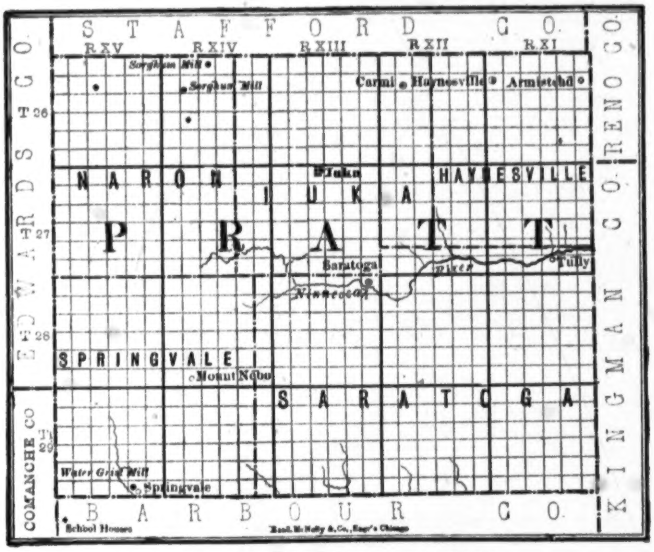
JOHN C. ROTH, farmer, Section 22, Clear Creek Township, P. O. Marion Center, was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, March 3, 1835. Came to Kansas when about nineteen years of age. Was married in May, 1866, to Miss Mary A. Wise, of Virginia, and has two children—Gaby and Charles.

PRATT COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

PRATT County is located in the second tier of counties from the south line of the State, and is in the first tier of counties west of a central line drawn through the State from north to south. Iuka, the county seat, is 180 miles east of the west line of the State, and 220 west of the east line. The county is bounded on the north by Stafford County, on the south by Barber, on the east by Kingman and Reno, and on the west by Edwards and Comanche Counties. It is twenty-four miles north and south by thirty east and west, containing 460,800 acres, or 720 square miles. For local government purposes, the county is divided into three commissioner districts and four municipal townships.

The greater portion of the county is a beautiful rolling prairie, many portions of it being, apparently, quite level. This description of the surface, however, does not apply to the northern portion of the county, as the north tier of Congressional townships is quite rough and broken, except a tract in the extreme northwest which is excellent farming land. This rough strip in the north is a succession of sand knolls, some much higher and larger than others, but all huge piles of shifting sand. This strip of sand hills or broken land does not extend into the county further south than about four miles. At the west side of the county, north of the center, there is a strip of sand hills about five miles wide and eight miles long, that is exceedingly rough. This cluster of hills is part of a chain that extends westward into Edwards County. With these exceptions, the surface of the county, except in the vicinity of the Ninnescah, is one grand, undulating prairie, without either a hill, bluff or knoll. It may be said that the county is destitute of timber, although in the southwest corner there is a little cluster of trees around the head of Turkey Creek.



There are few streams in the county, the only creek of any note being the Ninnescah, which has its rise about nine miles east of the west line of the county, and a little south of a central line drawn from east to west. Its course is almost due east, and, being fed by springs, its water is pure and clear. It is a stream about forty feet wide, and, no matter what the character of the season, it never goes dry. The Chikaskia, an important stream that flows through Kingman and Sumner Counties, has its rise in the southeast corner of Pratt County, about six miles north of the south line of the county, where it forms two branches, which are about six miles apart and called forks. Elm Creek, a tributary of Medicine Lodge Creek, also takes its rise a little north of the south line of Pratt County, and these creeks and branches constitute all the water-courses in the county. The purest of well water can be obtained without much difficulty, at depths ranging from thirty to eighty feet. In the northern portion of the county, wells have to be sunk about thirty feet; in the central portion, from forty to fifty feet; and in the southern portion, from seventy to eighty. Water is always found, however, and when found is of the purest kind and inexhaustible.

POPULATION (FEDERAL CENSUS).*

(ORGANIZED IN 1879.)

Haynesville Township	532
Iuka Township	1,039
Ludwick Township	81
Naron Township	155
Spring Vale Township	83
Total	1,890

*All the townships organized in 1879, from original territory.

Excepting a strip in the northern portion of the county about four miles wide, and another in the western portion, both of which have been referred to in the topographical description, the soil of the county is of a dark mulatto loam, slightly mixed with sand. It differs in depth from four to eight feet and is very productive. In general, the subsoil is a sandy loam of a yellowish color, and in some places gypsum is found at a depth of from eight to ten feet. A peculiarity of this gypsum is, that it pulverizes readily, and, by mixing it with water, makes excellent mortar for plastering purposes. All kinds of cereals can be raised on the soil without difficulty, and in no country can crops be successfully cultivated with as little labor. As an evidence of the productiveness of the soil, it may be stated that in 1882 wheat that did not yield thirty-five bushels to the acre was an exception, and in most cases forty bushels was the average yield, and in one case ten acres yielded 528 bushels, or fifty-two and four-fifths bushels to the acre. Seventy bushels of oats to the acre were harvested, and corn, though the season was unfavorable, yielded as high as fifty-five bushels. Nearly all kinds of roots are of easy cultivation, and fruit grows finely. Efforts to cultivate small fruit, such as berries, grapes, etc., have thus far proved failures. Trees grow rapidly, and under the timber culture act, immense quantities are being planted. The soil of Pratt County is well adapted for agricultural pursuits, and farming judging from past years, can be successfully and profitably followed as a business. While it is an excellent agricultural county, it has also superior advantages for stock-raising. True, its streams are few, but good well-water is easily obtained, and one well, with the use of a wind mill, is capable of watering 500 head of cattle, and this system of providing cattle with water is preferred by stockmen to the streams and creeks.

EARLY HISTORY.

Pratt County was first organized in 1873, and with that transaction commences the narrative history of the county. The organization that took place then has become familiarly known as the "fraudulent organization." It was accomplished by a party from Hutchinson who traveled through the country with a tent, going from county to county organizing them as they went. Pratt was one of the counties thus organized. At that time there was not a bona fide settler in the county and the organization could only be accomplished by false returns and representations to the Governor. These men even went so far as to issue bonds and elect a nonentity to the Legislature, but the Representative thus chosen never took his seat, and the bonds issued were never sold. The organization thus effected, being procured by fraud, was never recognized, and the county remained unorganized territory until 1879.

The first actual settler in the county was A. J. Johnson, who located in the southwestern corner of the county, in the vicinity of Springvale, in the fall of 1873. Johnson was the first man in the county to break sod and raise a crop. J. W. Black and A. Kelly were the next to settle in the county, and they also located in the southwest corner of the county. I. M. Powell was the next to locate in the county, he also going to the southwest corner in September, 1875. The first male child born in the county was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Black, in September, 1875, and being the first born in the county was named Pratt. The first female child born in the county was born to Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Powell, in 1875, and was named Laura.

In the early part of 1874, a man known as "Skunk Johnson," who followed trapping and hunting for a living, selected a spot near the head of the Ninnescah Creek, where he prepared himself a dugout, which became and is still known as Skunk Johnson's cave. It is one of the curiosities or interesting points in the county. The cave is very artistically made. It is cut in the side of one of the bluffs that marks the course of the creek. The entrance is a small hole, but the interior is divided into two compartments—one used for a kitchen and the other for a sleeping apartment. The walls of the cave are a kind of hard clay or soapstone, capable of being chiseled into any form. In the kitchen a very artistic fire-place was made, from which a spiral chimney was cut, terminating in a small orifice at the surface of the hill. Over the fire-place a neat mantel-piece was cut, and in one corner a hole was sunk in which he kept his water-pail.

Johnson was a character, and became noted far and near. In 1874, bands of Indians went prowling over the country, and woe betide the white man they met in their path. In one of their expeditions they came across Johnson, who was out on a hunt, and chased him to his cave. There were about twenty of the Indians, but Johnson's aim was sure and his rifle deadly, and every savage that came within its range was sure to bite the dust. After he had killed several of them, they were extremely cautious about getting in front of the entrance to the cave. They tried to smoke him out from above, but the smoke escaped through the entrance, and when they tried to smoke him out at the entrance, he would ascend the spiral chimney and open the orifice above. For fifteen days he was thus besieged, until finally the Indians, finding themselves outwitted, and after losing several of their number, moved away. While thus besieged, it so happened that Johnson had a number of skunks in his cave which he was compelled to eat, and from this he derived the name of "Skunk Johnson." Buffalo becoming scarce, Johnson abandoned his cave and moved West, but it served a grand and noble purpose, for it became a retreat for freighters who accidentally got caught in a storm or benighted. "Skunk Johnson's" cave became as well known to ranchmen and freighters in Southwestern Kansas as Niagara Falls are to tourists, and as many as fifteen men have been known to find shelter in it for three days at a time during a storm. The cave is a curiosity in itself, and a person can interest himself considerably by reading the inscriptions on the walls.

Although the settlers in the county in 1876 were exceedingly few, and confined, chiefly, to the southwest corner of the county, yet they did not get along altogether peaceably. A. Kelly, who came to the county with J. W. Black early in 1874, boarded with the latter's family and owed him about $75 for board. Kelly was making preparations to move on to his own claim, and had built thereon a little house. When the house was finished, Black took possession of it for the board money owed by Kelly. The latter ordered Black to surrender and quit the premises, when Black told him he could have possession when he paid his board bill, whereupon Kelly drew his revolver and shot Black, killing him instantly, and Kelly immediately fled the county.

Few, if any, settlers came to the county in 1876, but 1877 brought a great many. Early in the spring of that year, several new-comers located in the northeast corner of the county, two men named Haynes being among the first. During the summer of that year, quite a large settlement came from Iowa and moved to what was then the center of the county, where they took claims and located the town of Iuka. With this colony came Robert Anderson, J. W. Ellis, Rev A. Axline, Eugene Ellis, Charles Dunn, Dr. Greenleaf, Fred Frazee, A. W. Ellis, John Stephens, Dr. Hughes, R. T. Peak, Mrs. Spruill, J. W. Byerly, O. L. Peak, Miss Annie Risley, Clyde McCann and Charles Abbott, who were followed that same year by large numbers of people from Davis, Appanoose and Van Buren Counties, Iowa. This, virtually, was the commencement of the real settlement of the county, for up to that time no settlers had ventured into the center of the county. Over 100 families settled in the county in 1877, most of whom came from Iowa, but this was no comparison to the settlement that took place the following year.

In 1878, settlers pushed into the county from all sections, and the officials in the United States Land Office were kept busy entering up preemption claims. The abundant crops of that year added greatly to the immigration, and during the fall of 1878 and spring of 1879, new settlers located in the county by the hundred. The years 1879 and 1880 were unpropitious for crops, and a good many of the new settlers left the county. In 1881, the county about held its own, but the following year the tide of emigration set in again and a great many new-comers located in the county. The county is yet without any railway facilities, and, there being no stone in the county that can be used for building purposes, building material is only obtained by much difficulty, lumber having to be hauled from sixty to eighty miles. This makes it very difficult to build houses, and poor people make themselves either sod houses or dug-outs, of which there are a great many in the county. The people of the county, generally, are progressive, industrious, frugal and hospitable, and all that is required to make Pratt County a prosperous agricultural county is railroad facilities.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND COUNTY SEAT CONTEST.

By the partition of Stafford County in 1874, the two southern tiers of Congressional townships of that county were annexed to Pratt, but, in 1879, Stafford was restored to its original boundaries, and the townships that had been annexed to were severed from Pratt. The population of the county had so increased by the spring of 1879 that in April of that year, the Governor was memorialized to organize the county. A census-taker was appointed by the Governor to take the census of the county, and upon his report being made, the Governor issued a proclamation organizing the county of Pratt, and locating the temporary county seat at Iuka. He also appointed John Sillin, Thomas Goodwin and L. H. Naron, County Commissioners, and L. C. Thompson, County Clerk.

The Commissioners appointed by the foregoing proclamation held their first meeting at Iuka, July 29, 1879, and were sworn to a faithful performance of their duty by J. W. Ellis. They then organized by electing L. H. Naron Chairman.

Various opinions are expressed by the early settlers as to what became of the first Commissioners' journal, but whatever the facts connected with it may have been, certain it is that it mysteriously disappeared, and the business transacted by the first Commissioners is written in this history from information given by the early settlers who are acquainted with all the details. About the only business of their first meeting was to divide the county into five municipal townships and three Commissioner districts, and to designate various voting precincts. A special election was ordered to be held September 2, 1879, to perfect the organization of the county, by electing a full set of county officers, and to permanently locate the county seat. The officers chosen at that election were John Sillin, L. H. Naron and Thomas Goodwin, County Commissioners; L. C. Thompson, County Clerk; Samuel Brumsey, Clerk of District Court; James Neely, Probate Judge; R. T. Peak, Treasurer; Samuel McAvoy, Sheriff; M. G. Barney, County Attorney; A. H. Hubbs, County Superintendent of Schools; Phillip Haines, Register of Deeds; J. W. Ellis, Surveyor, and P. Small, Coroner All the interest in the election was centered in the contest for the county seat, for which there were three competitive points—Iuka, Saratoga and Anderson. The fight was hotly contested, but when the Commissioners met to canvass the vote, the returns of three townships were thrown out on account of irregularities, and Iuka was declared the county seat. This result gave great dissatisfaction to the people of Saratoga, and they sued out a writ of mandamus in the Supreme Court, by which the Commissioners were compelled to count the votes of the three townships they had thrown out. The result of the re-count was that neither place had a majority of the votes cast, and a new election was ordered, Anderson being dropped from the list of competitive points.

The second election on the county seat question was ordered to be held on August 19, 1880, and the people of Iuka and Saratoga exerted themselves to the utmost. Means not recognized as being altogether legitimate were resorted to, and one of the champions for Saratoga, named W. F. Gibbons, went down to Medicine Lodge, in Barbour County, and agreed with W. H. Weidner to pay him $40 if he would take about fifteen cowboys into Pratt County thirty days before the election to vote for Saratoga. Each cowboy imported was to receive $5, free whisky and a free dance at Saratoga on the night of the election. Weidner located the cowboys and furnished a list of the names to Gibbons, as per agreement, and received $25 as part payment. Before the election took place, another party from Saratoga, named W. F. Foster, went down to see the cowboys, and to make sure they were all right. While there he saw Weidner, who demanded the balance due him on the contract, $15. Foster told him he ought not to charge so much, that he had had very little trouble, and that he ought to be satisfied with the $25 he had received. Weidner contended that a contract was a contract, and insisted upon Foster paying the balance due. Foster said that Gibbons had instructed him to pay no more. "All right," said Weidner, and he went away, remarking that he would have his pay. He then revealed the whole scheme to George Orner, of Medicine Lodge, who guaranteed him his $15, which was paid. When Gibbons failed to comply with his agreement with Weidner, the cowboys all left Pratt County, and Saratoga lost their vote. The election took place upon the day ordered, and the result of it was that Iuka had an overwhelming majority, and was declared the permanent county seat.

SCHOOLS, THE PRESS, ETC.

There were in 1882, twenty-one organized school districts in the county, and only eight school buildings, each building containing one room. The schoolhouses are all very inferior buildings, the greater portion of them being built of sods. Some of these sod schoolhouses are quite comfortable, being plastered on the inside and reasonably well furnished with seats and benches. In some of the districts, school is held in private houses. The great difficulty in getting material with which to build is one reason why the school buildings are not of a better class. In 1881, the school population of the county, that is, children between the ages of five and twenty-one years, was 365, of which the females outnumbered the males by five. In 1882, the school population increased to 506, a gain in one year of 141, which would indicate quite an advance in the population of the county. The increase was about evenly divided between males and females, the former numbering 249 and the latter 257. The number of pupils enrolled in 1881 was 342, and in 1882 the enrollment was 371. The average daily attendance in the former year was 200, and in the latter 220. In 1881, the number of teachers employed in the county was fifteen, of whom two were males and thirteen females, and in 1882 the number employed was eighteen, the males being five and the females thirteen. The average wages per month paid teachers in 1881, was, males $22, and females $14.86, and in 1882 the pay of male teachers was the same as the preceding year, while that paid females was advanced to $15.53. In 1882, the number of districts sustaining public schools for three months or more during the year was fifteen, and the number failing to sustain school for three months was six. The assessed valuation of the county per school district in 1882 was $7,141, and the number of mills levied for school purposes was fifteen. The school bonded indebtedness was $1,591, and the estimated value of school property in the county was $2,416. In 1882, there were twenty persons examined for teachers, and seventeen certificates granted, of which seven were of second grade, and ten of third. On August 1, 1881, the amount in the hands of the District Treasurer was $68.77; the amount received during the year following from district taxes was $711.69; from the apportionment of State and county funds, $213.68; from sale of bonds, $381; from all other sources, $186.45, making a total received during the year for all school purposes of $1,561.59. The amount paid out during the year, for teachers' wages and supervision was $864.03; for rents, fuel, repairs, etc., $71.23; for sites, buildings and furniture, $18.35; for all other purposes, $123.53, making a total of $1,077.14, leaving a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on July 31, 1882, of $484.45. The first school established in the county was at Iuka, in 1878, and the person who taught the school was Miss Laura Long, whose wages were paid by private subscription.

Pratt County Press was established in August, 1878, by M. C. Davis and J. B. King, who continued to publish it until the spring of 1880, when King retired, leaving Davis sole editor and proprietor, by whom the paper was published until November, 1880, when he sold it to B. F. Lane and A. S. Thomson. In May, 1881, Lane sold his interest in the paper to H. P. Cooper, after which it was published under the firm name of Cooper & Thomson, until September, when Cooper parted with his interest to Thomson, by whom the paper has been published since that time. The paper is a seven-column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of about 300.

Pratt County Times, was established in October, 1881, by H. P. Cooper, with C. T. Warren as editor and publisher. In September, 1882, Mr. Warren purchased the paper and became sole editor and proprietor, and by him the paper still continues to be published. The paper is a five-column quarto, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of about 500.

Excepting two flouring mills, there are no manufactories of any kind in the county. One of the flouring mills is located at Springvale, in the southwest corner of the county, a little south of the head-water of Turkey Creek, on which creek it is located. It is a small water mill, having two run of stone, and was built by Johnson & Stiles, in 1879, at a cost of $10,000.

The other mill in the county is located at Iuka, the county seat, and was erected in 1883, by Knapp, Casebolt & Co. This mill is operated by steam-power, and has four run of buhrs. The building is 30x60 feet, and three stories high, and is valued at $12,000.

STATISTICS OF GROWTH.

The growth in the population of the county has been rather slow, owing to certain causes that operated against its settlement. All the land in the county, except the northern tier of Congressional townships, being embraced in the fifty-mile strip included in the Osage Reservation, or Trust Lands, left only a strip of six miles wide across the northern portion of the county subject to homestead, and that that was so subject, was about the poorest portion of the county, and hence it was not desirable land for homesteaders. The remainder of the county was subject to pre-emption, but in order to pre-empt required the payment of $1.25 per acre, and settlers did not deem it necessary to pay this so long as Government land was to be had for nothing. Another drawback to the settlement of the county was the long distance it was from a railroad, the nearest railroad point being forty miles away. The absence of fuel was another serious drawback. Notwithstanding all these drawbacks, however, two or three settlers did locate in the southwestern portion of the county as early as 1873. Actual emigration, however, did not take place until 1877, and during that and the two years following, the emigration to the county was quite large. The United States census for 1880 shows the population of the county that year to have been 1,890. During the next two years there was a falling off, as shown by the Assessor's returns for 1882, of 366, but in the summer of that year the tide of emigration turned again, and by the spring of 1883, the population had grown to over 2,000. The following statistics, taken from the compiled record of 1882, will tend to show what progress the county has made in material wealth. The number of acres in farms that year was 48,334, of which 15,900 were under cultivation. For assessment purposes, these lands were valued at $113,437, or about one-fifth the actual value. During the year ending March 1, 1882, there were erected fifty-three farm dwellings, valued at $5,135, or about $97 each. Very many of these houses were made of sod, and hence the low average value. The winter wheat sown in 1881 was 2,935 acres; rye, 117; spring wheat sown in 1882 was 67 acres; corn, 7,500; oats, 293; buckwheat, 23; Irish potatoes, 71; sweet potatoes, 75; sorghum, 787; broom corn, 569; millet and Hungarian, 2,372; pearl millet, 18; rice corn, 301, and prairie pasture, 656. This average has been greatly increased since the above returns were made. The tons of tame hay cut in 1881 were 387, and of prairie hay there were cut 2,232 tons. The value of garden products sold during the year was $373, and of eggs and poultry, $1,408. There were only 170 pounds of cheese made in the county during the year ending March 1, 1882, while the amount of butter made was 28,377 pounds. The live stock in the county was represented by 447 horses, 148 mules and asses, 570 milch cows, 1,429 other cattle, 16,488 sheep, and 952 swine. These figures have been greatly augmented during the past year, the sheep alone trebling in number, and cattle more than trebling. The animals sold for slaughter during the same period amounted in value to $8,618, and the wool clip was 32,497 pounds. Considerable progress has been made in the cultivation of fruit trees, of which there were in bearing 455 apple trees, 2,132 peach trees, 18 plum, and 182 cherry. The number not in bearing was 440 apple, 6 pear, 32,870 peach, 936 plum, and 333 cherry. But very little fencing has been put up in the county, the aggregate being only 5,008 rods, of which 212 are board, 660 rail, 25 hedge, and 4,111 wire. The value of agricultural implements in the county was $13,181. Forest trees have been planted to the extent of 227 acres, but during 1882 a great many timber claims were located, and thousands of trees planted.

IUKA.

Iuka, the county seat, is located on the northeast quarter of Section 4, Town 27, Range 13 west, of the Sixth Principal Meridian. The land on which the town is situated was a claim that had been taken by Rev. A. Axline, but subsequently a town company was formed consisting of Rev. A. Axline, J. W. Ellis, Robert Anderson, Eugene Ellis, A. W. Ellis, Charles Dunn, Calhoun & Sidorn and Annie Risley, and to the company thus organized the claim was deeded. The town site was surveyed and platted in July, 1877, by J. W. Ellis, after which the lots were equally divided among the company, except that Mr. Axline received two lots for every one received by each of the other members. This division having been made, the company then deeded half of the lots to the county, with a view of securing the county seat. The first building erected on the town site was put up by William Daum in August, 1877, who also, about the same time, put up a store building, he having been the first man in town to sell goods. About the time Daum put up his store, J. W. Ellis put up a small land office and also erected a dwelling house. Simultaneously with the going up of these buildings, Mr. Axline built the Iuka House, a building 16x32 feet and two stories high. This was the first, and thus far, is the only hotel in town. Hotel purposes were not the only purposes served by the erection of the Iuka House, as during the fall and winter of 1877, the office was used for a church and Sunday school. Several other buildings were put up during 1877, among them one built by Charles Dunn, one by Eugene Ellis, one by A. W. Ellis, a drug and grocery store built by J. D. Sherwood, a grocery store put up by S. C. Calhoun, a printing office by Davis & King, and two or three residences. The town company that located the town of Iuka was composed of people from Iowa exclusively, from the counties of Davis, Van Buren and Appanoose, but chiefly from Davis County. A good many others soon followed, and so far as the people are concerned, Iuka is an Iowa town out and out, only located in Kansas. For some months after the town was started, the people were without mail facilities, they having to go to Hutchinson, a distance of sixty miles, for their mail. This was a great inconvenience, but in the fall of 1877 this was removed by the establishment of a post office in the town, Rev. A. Axline being the first Postmaster. In 1878, the town made but little progress, but during that year the first schoolhouse, not only in town, but in the county, was opened, with Miss Laura Long as teacher. The immense crops that were raised in Kansas in 1878 caused great immigration to the State, of which Pratt County and Iuka received a goodly share. In the fall of 1878 and spring of 1879, the population of Iuka was considerably increased by the arrival of new comers. In the latter year, quite a number of new buildings were put up, but the chief improvement of that year was the erection of the Presbyterian Church, as up to that time there was no church edifice in the town. There were several church organizations, however, and services were regularly held, Rev. John Prey, of the Baptist Church, preaching the first sermon ever preached in the town. The first church organized in town was the Presbyterian, which was organized in the fall of 1877, by Rev. A. Axline. Two years subsequently, they built a very fine frame church, at a cost of $1,500, capable of seating 400 persons. The church has now a membership of fifty, and Rev. A. Axline continues as its pastor. The year 1880 was a very prosperous one for Iuka, and that year the town improved rapidly. A fine one-story store building, 24x80 feet, was put up by E. L. Maxwell, now used by Briggs & Son as a dry goods and grocery store. The building now used as a court house was put up in that year by Cooper & Anderson, and a large two-story building that stood several miles from Iuka, at a place named Anderson—one of the competing points for the county seat—was purchased by Mr. Cooper and moved into Iuka, where he had it converted into a drug and dry goods store, being the one now occupied by Stephenson & Stewart as a dry goods store. The building now occupied by Dr. O. L. Peak as a drug store was built that year by J. A. Gray, and Seneca Taylor about the same time built the one in which the post office is now located. The improvements of 1880 were not confined to business houses, as quite a number of residences were put up, and a very fine livery stable, which was built by A. P. Johnson. During the years 1880–81, the population of the town was considerably increased by people who had located upon Government claims, moving in after having proved up on their land. The year 1882 was one of little, if any, progress. The accessions made that year, either in population or in buildings, were limited to the smallest possible number. One improvement was made, however, worthy of mention in the history of the town. That year the ownership of the Iuka House passed to Robert Anderson, who, a few months after it came into his possession, had it enlarged to about three times it original size, making it sufficiently commodious to meet the wants of the public. Having enlarged the house, the name was changed from Iuka House to Lindell Hotel, by which it is now known. Never has a year opened more auspiciously for a town than 1883 has for Iuka. The Methodists, although having an organization since 1878, were at the commencement of 1883 without a church building, but about the beginning of the year work was commenced on a very neat frame edifice, which was completed in April. The building is of good size and neatly finished, and is not only quite an improvement, but an ornament to the place. The church was built at a cost of $2,000, nearly all of which was subscribed by the inhabitants. The Methodist Church at Iuka was organized with but very few members, in the spring of 1878, by Rev. Guy Hamilton, but since that time has grown to be quite strong. The Baptists and Christians have also organizations in town, but no edifices. J. A. Craig has just completed a very neat store building; H. P. Cooper has just finished a small drug store; L. C. Thompson is now erecting a fine two-story business house; Samuel McAvoy is putting up a residence; Knapp, Casebolt & Co. have about completed a fine flouring mill, and L. Creps has just established quite an extensive lumber yard, so that 1883 gives promise to be a year of unprecedented prosperity and progress. Iuka is quite a mail center, having one daily, two tri-weekly and five semi-weekly mails. The business of Iuka is represented by one grocery and hardware store, one general merchandising store, one grocery, one dry goods, hats and caps, one notion and stationery store, one harness shop, one tin shop, two drug stores, one dealer in agricultural implements, one livery stable and one lumber yard.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ROBERT ANDERSON, attorney at law. William and Elizabeth Anderson, the parents of Robert, were both natives of Pennsylvania, in which State, in Indiana County, Robert was born on October 10, 1844. His school education was such as he acquired at the common school. On October 10, 1861, he celebrated his seventeenth birthday by enlisting in Company C of the Nineteenth Infantry of the regular army, in which he served for three years, and was discharged October 10, 1864. While in the service, he was engaged in the battles of Stone River, Mission Ridge, Resaca, Dallas, Chickamauga, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta and Jonesboro. In the spring of 1865, he went to Iowa, and located in Davis County, where he located upon a farm and commenced farming. On October 21, 1867, at Bloomfield, Davis Co., Iowa, he was married to Miss Julia P. Edmondson, a native of Illinois, by which marriage children have been born to him as follows: Charles P., born in Davis County, Iowa, July 16, 1868; Cora E., same place, September 27, 1870; Nellie B., same place, February 19, 1873; Robert E., born at Iuka, Pratt Co., Kan., January 2, 1882, died September 25, 1882. For some years, in Iowa, Mr. Anderson was a very active member of the Grange, and was the purchasing agent for the Co-operative Association of Davis County, which he resigned to accept the general agency of the manufacturing establishment of P. Yrich & Co., of Pekin, Ill. In June, 1877, he moved to Kansas and located in Pratt County, pitching his tent upon a claim on the 15th of that month, the nearest house to him being fifteen miles distant. January 19, 1880, he was appointed Probate Judge to fill a vacancy, and at the general election of that year, was elected to the office, to which he was again elected as his own successor in the fall of 1882, and is now serving his third term. In the years 1878–79–80, he studied law, and was admitted to practice at the bar in June, 1881, and now follows his profession, in addition to attending to the duties of his office as Probate Judge.

C. S. CALHOUN, merchant, was born in Beaver County, Penn., July 22, 1853. When five years old, he moved with his parents to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he remained until October, 1860, when he went with his parents to Bates County, Mo., returning to Van Buren County in June, 1862. There he lived until February, 1878, when he moved to Kansas and located in Iuka, in Pratt County, where he engaged in the mercantile business, being the second man to open store and sell goods in the town. Mr. C. was married at Iuka, March 26, 1879, to Miss Laura E. Long, of Fairfield, Jefferson Co., Iowa. One child was the issue of this marriage, Laura C., born at Fairfield, Iowa, February 13, 1880. Nine days after the birth of his child, Mr. Calhoun was left a widower, his wife dying on the 22d of February, 1880. Mr. C. has studiously avoided taking any active part in politics, and confined himself strictly to business, but in the fall of 1882 the people elected him to represent the county in the Legislature, and in January, 1883, he took his seat as a member from Pratt County in the third biennial re-union of the Kansas Legislature.

HENRY P. COOPER, attorney and counselor, was born at Chepstow, Monmouthshire, England, April 27, 1830. His father was a barrister and counselor. He received his education at home, under the instruction of a family tutor. When eighteen years old, he commenced to read law with his father, and in 1850 he came to the United States, and located in the city of New York, where he entered a law office and resumed the study of law, and in 1859 was admitted to practice at the bar. In 1857, Mr. Cooper returned to England, and was there married, on the 5th of April of that year, to Miss Ellen Scruton, a native of Goldsborough, England. By this marriage two children were born to him—Charlotte E., born at the city of York, England, April 10, 1858, and Ellen M., born at Goldsborough, England, February 22, 1860. He came back to the United States in the spring of 1859, and in the fall of that year returned to England, returning again to the United States in August, 1860. His wife dying in 1866, he again returned to England, where, on December 4, 1867, he was married to Miss Sarah A. Dobbs, in Gloucester. In March, 1868, he again returned to the United States, and, in 1869, came to Kansas, and located in Washington County, where he tried farming about a year, after which he opened a law office in Waterville, where he resumed the practice of his profession. In 1878, he moved to Salina, Kan., where he remained until August, 1879, when he removed to Pratt County and located at Iuka. Mr. Cooper has held several important and lucrative positions. For three years he was clerk to the Commissioner of Taxes in New York City. He has served as attorney to the city of Waterville. He was one of the directors and attorney for the Marshall County, Kan., Savings Bank, and served as County Attorney of Pratt County, to which office he was elected in the fall of 1880.

LA FAYETTE CREPS, lumber merchant, was born at Fort Madison, Lee Co., Iowa, August 19, 1855, being the third child and second son of Reuben and Catherine Creps. He received his education at the common schools and academy of Fort Madison, entering the latter in 1868, and graduating in 1871. Leaving the academy, he entered a shoe store as clerk, where he remained eighteen months, when he went to Chicago and entered the business college of Bryant & Stratton. Leaving that, he went to Burlington, Iowa, and engaged in the shoe business, at which he remained five years, when he went to Red Cloud, Neb., and engaged in the general mercantile business under the firm name of Johnson & Creps. Remained in Red Cloud two years and four months, and then went to Colorado, where he remained six months, and then returned to Red Cloud and opened a broker's office, and was engaged in the brokerage business for eight months, when he moved to Kansas and located at Iuka, in Pratt County, where he opened a lumber yard and is now dealing in lumber.

GEORGE HELSEL, farmer, P. O. Iuka, was born at Dayton, Ohio, February 3, 1847. His education was received at the common schools, and when seventeen years old, on May 4, 1864, he enlisted in Company C, of the One Hundred and Thirty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served until the close of the war. Leaving the army, he returned to his home, and learned the trade of carriage-making. In 1869, he moved with his parents to Allen County, Ind., and located on a farm. Was married in Allen County, October 2, 1872, to Miss Melissa Powers, a native of Indiana, by which marriage five children have been born to him, as follows: Ada J., born in Allen County, Ind., September 8, 1873; Anna L., same place, December, 1875; Benjamin F., same place, December, 1877; Charles, same place, December, 1879; and Edward W., born in Pratt County, Kan., July 9, 1881. In 1878, Mr. Helsel was elected Constable in Allen County, but he resigned the office in the fall of that year, and removed to Kansas, locating in Pratt County, where he filed a claim and settled upon it and commenced farming, which he is now pursuing successfully, and by industry and frugality has succeeded in accumulating a considerable number of stock.

THOMAS MARTIN, farmer and Deputy County Clerk, P. O. Iuka, was born in Indiana County, Penn., August 31, 1832. His father was a farmer, and Thomas remained at home attending school and working on the farm until he was twenty years old, when he entered Jacksonville Academy, Indiana County, which he attended for three years, leaving which he taught school during the winter seasons, and worked on the farm during summer. On May 10, 1861, in Armstrong County, Penn., he married Miss Anna Maria Bryan, a native of Indiana County, Penn. Mr. Martin had two brothers, both of whom entered the army early in the war, his elder brother dying in Andersonville. Thomas enlisted March 10, 1865, in Company B, Sixty-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was mustered out with his regiment July 1, 1865. Leaving the army, he returned to his native place, where he lived until March, 1878, when he moved to Kansas, and located in Pratt County, where he settled upon a claim. In 1882, he was appointed Deputy County Clerk, in which capacity he is now serving.

OSCAR L. PEAK, physician and druggist, was born in Dallas County, Mo., November 20, 1849; when three years of age, he moved with his father to Davis County, Iowa, his mother having died a short time previously. His early education was received at the public school, and at seventeen years of age, he entered the Troy Academy in Davis County, which he attended about a year, when he removed to Camden County, Mo., and became engaged as a clerk in a store, at which he remained nearly a year, when he went to Illinois, and entered Shurtleff College in Madison County, which he attended for three years, when he went to Bloomfield, Davis Co., Iowa, and commenced the study of medicine, which he pursued for three years, when he went to Cincinnati and attended a course of lectures in the Cincinnati College of Medicine and Surgery, after which he went to Missouri, where he entered upon the practice of medicine, following his profession until the following winter, when he returned to Cincinnati, and attended another course of lectures, taking also a private course in the Cincinnati Hospital, graduating in February, 1878. Having graduated, he came to Kansas, and located at Iuka, in Pratt County, where he resumed the practice of his profession. He was married April 13, 1880, at Iuka, to Miss E. Viola Moore, a native of Davis County, Iowa, by which marriage two children have been born to him—Burt T., born February 22, 1881, died February 28, 1882, and Bird C., born May 24, 1882. In February, 1879, he was appointed United States Examining Surgeon for Pensions, and in November, 1882, he was elected County Superintendent of Public Instruction, both of which positions he now occupies.

GEORGE W. STEWART, merchant miller and stock farmer, was born in Putnam County, Ind., January 27, 1847, and is the son of Ichabod and Rebekah S. Stewart. His father was a farmer and dealer in stock. When five years old, George W. moved with his parents to Centreville, Appanoose Co., Iowa. His scholastic education was received at the common school. He attended school and worked on the farm until he was nineteen years old, when he became engaged in buying and selling stock. On November 28, 1869, he was married at Centreville, Iowa, to Miss Sarah E. Shaw, a native of Indiana. The issue of this marriage has been Ora B., born at Centreville, Iowa, November 16, 1870; Lela E., born at same place March 30, 1873; Ada C., at same place, October 14, 1875; and Maud E., born at Iuka, Kan., September 17, 1879. In March, 1878, he moved to Kansas, and located in Pratt County, where he engaged in the business of farming and stock-raising. While at Centreville, he served one term in the Common Council, and in November, 1879, was elected to the office of Register of Deeds of Pratt County, Kan. Mr. Stewart is interested in a flouring mill at Iuka, and is also a member of the mercantile firm known as Stephenson & Stewart.

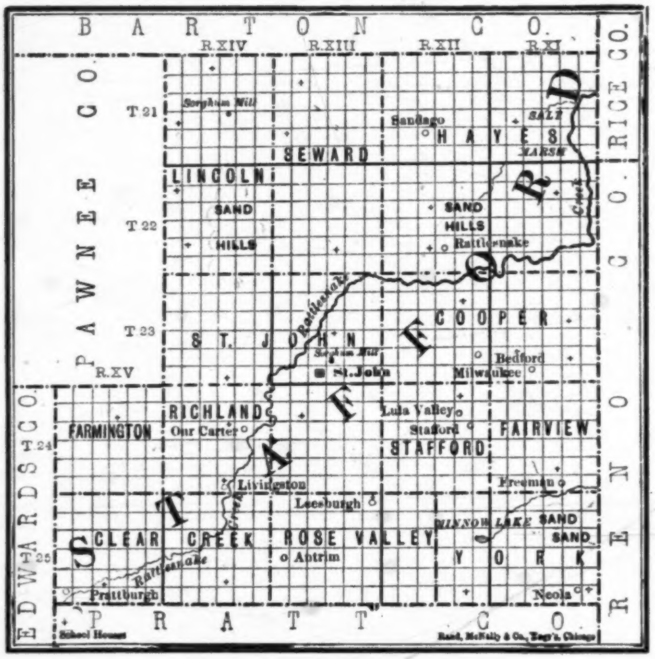
LEWIS C. THOMPSON, contractor, was born at Meredosia, Morgan Co., Ill., August 20, 1851. He attended the common school of his native place until of age to work, after which, for some years, he would attend school in winter and work on the farm during summer. In 1876, he moved to Spencer County, Ind., where he remained about a year, when he moved to Kansas, and located in Pratt County. Was married in Iuka, Pratt County, May 19, 1881, to Miss Ellen Mary Cooper, a native of England. Upon the organization of Pratt County in July, 1879, Mr. Thompson was appointed by the Governor, County Clerk, to which he was afterward elected twice in succession, and received a commission as Notary Public in 1882.

CHARLES T. WARREN, County Attorney, was born in Sunbury, Northumberland Co., Penn., April 22, 1859. He is the son of Rev. George Warren and Louisa Warren, both natives of Pennsylvania. Charles T. received his early education at the public school, and at the age of seventeen years he entered the printing office of the Mountain Echo, in Chickahinny, to learn the printing trade. He remained in the office a little over a year, when he entered the Dickinson Seminary, located at Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Penn., where he remained two years, taking a special course in scientific and classical studies, graduating in 1881. Having graduated, he entered the office of Hazelton Daily Sentinel as local editor and proof-reader, where he remained two months, when he entered the law office of C. W. Kline, at Hazelton, and commenced the study of law. In October, 1881, he moved to Kansas, and located at Iuka, in Pratt County, where he took charge of the Pratt County Times, in connection with which he continued to read law, and in June, 1882, was admitted to practice at the bar. In September, 1882, he purchased the Times, which he still continues to edit and publish, and in November, 1882, he was elected to the office of County Attorney, in which capacity he is now serving.

STAFFORD COUNTY.

LOCATION, TOPOGRAPHY, ETC.

STAFFORD County is a portion of that wide stretch of territory of the State of Kansas embraced in the great bend of the Arkansas River. At a point twelve miles south, and thirty miles west of the southwest corner of the county, the river takes a northeasterly direction, which it follows for a distance of about seventy miles, until it reaches a point seven miles north of the center of the north line of Stafford County, when it turns to the southeast, which course it pursues until it reaches a point about twelve miles south and sixty miles east of the southeast corner of the county, from which point its course is almost due south. Stafford County is centrally located in the territory embraced within this bend of the river. It is in the third tier of counties from the south line of the State, and in the first tier west of a central line drawn through the State from north to south. The county seat is 180 miles east of the west line of the State, and 220 miles west of the east line. The county is bounded on the north by Barton County, on the south by Pratt, on the east by Reno and Rice, and on the west by Edwards and Pawnee Counties. It contains 506,880 acres, or 792 square miles, and, for municipal purposes, is divided into twelve civil townships, and for local government into three Commissioner districts.



The surface of the county is one vast level plain, except that at intervals there are long lines of numerous sand hills, some of which reach a considerable altitude. One line of these hills extends diagonally across the entire county, from the northeast to the southwest, and another line stretches across the northern portion of the county. To a person unacquainted with the country, these hills, at a distance, look like great belts of timber, and so deceptive are they in appearance that absolute observation is required to dispel the illusion. The county is almost without either streams or creeks, the only one of any importance within its borders being Rattlesnake Creek, which runs diagonally across the county from the southwest to the northeast. An abundance of good well water, however, can be had in almost any part of the county at various depths, from ten to thirty feet. Farmers living away from the vicinity of the stream, experience no difficulty in finding ample water for stock from wells, the pumping being done by wind-mills, with which nearly every farmer having stock is supplied. The county is utterly destitute of timber, and substitutes for fuel are found in corn cobs, corn stalks, and other material, which answer the purpose very satisfactorily. Coal can be had by going to the railway stations, but the long distances it has to be transported by rail and wagon makes it rather expensive.

York Township	775
Total	4,746

* All the townships organized from original territory in 1879.

The nature of the soil is light and extremely sandy, and in many portions of the county it is so sandy as to be utterly unfit for cultivation. The untillable portion, however, is confined to the sand hill elevations, and although the small valleys between the sand hills are also of a very sandy character, they are yet capable of cultivation, and are quite productive. Beneath the surface are various kinds of sub-soil; in some places it is a kind of bluish colored loam, and in others it is loam of a yellowish hue. In some places gypsum forms the sub-soil, and in a few considerable alkali is found.

The soil seems to be suitable for the raising of all kinds of cereals, and wheat, oats and rye yield abundantly. Sorghum is a never-failing crop, and one that can be relied upon with certainty in all seasons. The entire county is sub-irrigated, and in sinking wells a sheet of water is invariably struck at various depths, corresponding with the elevations of the surface. In the flat or level places it is usually met with at a depth of from ten to twelve feet. This subterranean water is not in veins, but one vast sheet from three to four feet in depth, and is confined to no particular locality, but underlies the entire county. Like most of the western counties in Kansas, Stafford is excellently adapted to stock-raising, and to this industry farmers are turning their attention, many having herds of cattle numbering from 200 to 800 head. A good deal of attention is also given to sheep raising, there being over 30,000 head in the county, in flocks ranging from 300 to 2,500. In most part the grass is that kind known as "buffalo," but in some places bluestem exists. The abundance of these grasses, and the facility with which a never-failing supply of good, pure fresh water can be had, give the county superior advantages for stock-raising.

EARLY HISTORY.

The boundary lines of Stafford County were defined by the Legislature of 1870, and for several years the county remained unorganized. The Legislature of 1875, with the intention of obliterating the county from the map, partitioned the territory embraced in Stafford County, and added that portion included in Towns 21, 22 and 23, Range 15 west, to Pawnee County, and that portion included in Ranges 11, 12, 13 and 14, of said towns, was annexed to Barton County, while the south half of the county, excepting that portion embraced in Range 15, Towns 24 and 25, was added to Pratt County. By this division, it was thought that Stafford County was wiped out; but after each of the counties mentioned had taken its apportioned part, two Congressional townships remained, being Towns 24 and 25, Range 15, so that, while Stafford County did not lose its identity, its dimensions were cut down to a strip of territory six miles east and west by twelve north and south. This was the condition of the county until 1879, when, by a decision of the Supreme Court, the act of the Legislature dividing the county was declared unconstitutional, and the county was restored to its original boundaries.

In the meantime, a good many settlers had located in the county, W. R. Hoole taking and settling upon the first claim entered in the county in May, 1874. His claim was the north half of Section 4, Town 21, Range 14 west, where he prepared himself a dugout in which he lived. In June, 1874, John Birbeck located on the southwest quarter of Section 10, Town 21, Range 14 west, upon which he built a frame house, and this was the first frame building erected in the county. About the same time, Martin Fitzpatrick and James O'Connor entered claims, upon which they located, followed soon after by Elisha Williamson, Ed. Williamson, F. Williamson, Abe. Lash and H. Campbell, all of whom settled in the northern portion of the county, while J. C. Stone, R. M. Blair, Jesse Vickers, E. B. Crawford, Ed. Hadlock and W. Z. Nutting settled in the eastern portion of the county, and James Neeland and two or three others in the southwestern portion. These were among the very earliest settlers of the county, but these were not the only settlers who came to the county in 1874, as there was a settlement of some ten or twelve families settled in the eastern portion of the county, that was known as the "Missouri settlement," and a few families were also located some distance north of what is now St. John. The first prairie broken in the county was by John Birbeck in 1874. The first child born in the county was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hoole, on April 8, 1875, a boy, whom they named Edwin.

In the spring of 1875, a large settlement of Mormons, or Latter-Day Saints, located in the county, in the vicinity of what is now St. John. There were about forty families in the settlement, and they named the place Zion Valley. Here the first post office in the county was established, with William Bickerton as Postmaster. This William Bickerton was the prophet of the community. Shortly after their settlement, they erected a frame temple, about 40x70 feet; but, dissentions entering the flock, it became scattered, and a few years later the temple was sold to Swartz Bros., who converted it into a hardware and drug store.

In 1876, but few settlers came to the county. No attempt at settlement in the northeast portion of the county had been made prior to that year, but during 1876 a few moved into that locality and located in the vicinity of what is known as the "Salt Marsh," F. M. Morgan being one of the first. The "Salt Marsh" is a tract of land in the northeastern portion of the county, extending in a southwesterly direction, about eight miles long and ranging from one to four miles wide. In 1876, a company was organized for the purpose of manufacturing salt, but ascertaining by experiment that its manufacture would be unremunerative, the undertaking was abandoned, and the marsh became an excellent pasturage for stock, several parties in the township having from 300 to 800 head of cattle. The first schoolhouse built in the county was erected in the summer of 1876, on Section 4, Town 21, Range 14 west, and was known as the Hoole Schoolhouse. It was a frame building, and the first teacher was Miss Ella Miller.

The principal industry of the county during the first two or three years of its settlement was gathering the buffalo bones that lay thickly scattered all over the county. Men would go out with their teams and wagons, some of whom had racks made for the business, and gather up the bones, which they would haul to the nearest railroad station, where they would sell them at prices ranging from $3 to $9 a ton. Very good wages could be made at the business at first, but the bones were soon all gathered within distances at which it could be followed profitably, and then bone-gathering was discontinued. During the years 1877–78, a great many new comers settled in the county, and by 1879 the population was sufficient to have the county organized.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

The county having been restored to its original boundaries, a memorial was presented to the Governor, asking for the organization of the county, and on the 2d day of July, 1879, a proclamation was issued by the Governor, appointing J. C. Towsley, Fred Baumgardner and M. B. Walker, County Commissioners, and Frank Cox, County Clerk, and designating the town of St. John as the temporary county seat.

The Commissioners appointed by this proclamation met for the first time, July 14, 1879, and organized by electing J. C. Towsley Chairman. At that meeting, the county was divided into six municipal townships, named Hayes, Seward, Lincoln, St. John, Clear Creek, York and Stafford. A special election was ordered to be held August 18, 1879, to perfect the organization by the election of county and township officers, and to permanently locate the county seat. At that special election, the officers elected were C. M. Johnson, Representative; G. M. Detwiler, F. R. Baumgardner and J. C. Towsley, Commissioners; S. M. Nolder, County Clerk; J. B. Smith, Treasurer; George W. Hovey, Probate Judge; Berlin Zenor, Register of Deeds; J. W. Miles, Sheriff; George W. Bausman, Clerk of the Court; F. M. Morgan, County Attorney; W. S. Tyrrell, Coroner; H. L. Fitch, Surveyor, and N. L. D. Smith, County Superintendent.

There were five contesting points for the county seat, as follows: St. John, Stafford, Newburg, Livingston and Center. The total vote cast at the election was 822, of which St. John received 411, lacking just one of a majority, and that one was in town, but either through carelessness or laziness the man did not vote. There being no choice, St. John was continued as the temporary county seat. Another special election on the county seat question was ordered to be held April 5, 1882, and on the 12th of the same month the board met to canvass the vote, but owing to some omission or irregularity in the return of Stafford, the vote of that township was thrown out, and another election ordered to be held April 14. The total vote cast at that election was 697, of which St. John had 290 votes, Stafford had 214, and Bedford had 193. None of the places having received a majority of the votes cast, Bedford was dropped from the list of competitors, and another election was ordered to be held April 18, 1882, the competitive points being St. John and Stafford. At the election held in compliance with this order, 799 votes were cast, of which St. John received 431 and Stafford 368, and the former place was declared the permanent county seat.

The Representatives that have served in the Legislature from Stafford County have been C. M. Johnson, elected in 1879; J. C. Towsley, elected in 1880, and E. B. Crawford, the present member, elected in 1882. The county officers for 1883 have been as follows: E. H. Young, J. B. Cook, E. W. Dewey, County Commissioners; T. A. Hays, County Clerk; J. Neelands, Treasurer; E. M. Broughton, Probate Judge; C. S. Mace, Sheriff; C. B. Weeks, County Attorney; W. Dixon, Clerk of District Court; J. A. Steelman, County Superintendent; W. S. Tyrrell, Coroner.

The following appropriation for the benefit of Stafford County was made in March, 1883, by the Legislature:

"For the payment of the expenses incurred in restoring Stafford County to its original boundaries, the sum of $1,000. Said amount to be paid out as follows: To E. B. Crawford, $650; to Jesse Vickers, $250; to Samuel R. Estle, $250; to Joseph W. Tyrrell, $250. Provided, that said sums appropriated to Messrs. Crawford, Vickers, Estle and Tyrrell shall be received as full compensation for any and all claims against the State of Kansas arising out of said restoration of Stafford County."

Since Stafford County was organized, there has not been as much as one single criminal case tried in the District Court, nor are there any on the docket for trial. The county has a bonded indebtedness of $18,000, but no floating indebtedness, and her scrip is at par, with money in the treasury to pay every warrant upon presentation.

SCHOOLS AND THE PRESS.

The first schoolhouse erected in Stafford County was in the summer of 1874, and was built on Section 4, Town 21, Range 14 west. It was known as the Hoole Schoolhouse, and the first person to teach school in the county was Miss Ella Miller. There are now in the county thirty-seven school buildings, some of which are sod constructions and the remainder frame. The total school population of the county in 1881, between the ages of five and twenty-one years, was 1,331, of which 704 were males and 627 females. In 1882, the total school population was 1,309, of which 705 were males and 604 females, showing an increase of 1 male and a decrease of 24 females, being a decrease in the total school population during the year of 22. The number of pupils enrolled in 1881 was 707, males 384, females 323, and in 1882 the number enrolled was 832, males 442, females 390. The average daily attendance in the former year was 428, and in the latter 456. While there were, in 1882, only thirty-seven school buildings in the county, there were fifty organized districts, so that thirteen of the districts had no schoolhouses. The whole number of teachers employed in the county in 1881 was 45, of whom 16 were males and 29 females. In 1882, the number decreased to 39, of which 19 were males and 20 were females. The average salary per month, in 1881, paid teachers was, males $23.21, and females $17.05, and in 1882 for the former it was $25.27, and the latter $22.34. The school bonded indebtedness of the county in 1882 was $2,451, and the number of districts that sustained public school for three months or over during the year was thirty-six, and the number failing to do so was fourteen. The average assessed valuation of each district was $5,624, and seventeen mills were levied for school purposes. There were 42 persons examined for teachers in 1882, and 40 certificates granted, of which 6 were first grade, 19 second grade, and 15 third grade. There were in the hands of the District Treasurer, on August 1, 1881, the sum of $673.58; the amount received from district taxes was $2,991.36; from State and county funds, $1,054.84; from sale of school bonds, $437, and from all other sources, $655.64, making the total receipts during the year $5,812.42. The expenditures during the year were, for teachers' wages, $3,084.14; rents, repairs, fuel, etc., $949.10; school apparatus, $19.78; for sites, buildings and furniture, $449.81; for all other purposes, $121.23; total paid out for all purposes, $4,624.06, leaving a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on August 1, 1882, of $1,188.36.

The Stafford Citizen was the first paper established in the county, and was started at Stafford in November, 1877, by T. L. Kerr. It lived about eight months and then passed out of existence.

The News was started in April, 1879, at St. John, by C. B. Weeks, but its existence only covered a period of four months.

The Herald was established in the summer of 1879, at Stafford, by Joel Reese, who continued to publish it until November, 1881, when it passed into the hands of R. M. Blair, who has continued to publish it since that time. It is a five-column quarto, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of about 400.

The Advance was established at St. John in March, 1880, by T. C. Austin, in whose possession it remained until September of that year, when C. B. Weeks took charge and control of the paper, and continued to publish it until April 1, 1881, when W. R. Hoole succeeded to the ownership, and published it until August, 1882, when he disposed of it to F. B. Gilmore, who remained at its head until March 12, 1883, when it passed into the possession of W. K. P. Dow. At that time Mr. Dow was publishing the Bee, but on getting possession of the Advance, he merged the former into the latter. It is a seven-column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of about 450.

STATISTICS OF GROWTH.

The population of the county has not increased very rapidly, and some years it decreased rather than increased. By taking the population in 1882, which was 3,413 according to the returns of the Assessors, and dividing it by nine, the number of years that have elapsed since the first settlement was made in the county, the average yearly increase is shown to be 379. The years 1878–79 witnessed great immigration to the county, and the census of 1880 shows the population that year to have been 4,519. The following year it dropped to 3,215, showing a loss in one year of 1,304. The next year the tendency was upward, as the census of 1882 shows the population of that year to have been 3,413, again over 1881 of 198.

As to the material growth no comparisons can be made with former years, as prior to 1880 the county was without statistical records, having been partitioned and attached to other counties. The first claim taken in the county was in the spring of 1874, but the real settlement of the county did not take place for several years afterward, so that all the material advancement that has taken place in the county, has virtually occurred within the last five years. The statistical records of the county show the number of acres in farms in the county in 1882, to have been 142,994, valued for assessment at $402,148. There were erected in the county during the year ending March 31, 1882, farm dwellings to the number of 104, which were valued at $18,111. The acreage of winter wheat sown in 1881, was 8,068 acres, and in the spring of 1882 there were planted to corn 17,671 acres; oats had 562 acres, buckwheat, 22; Irish potatoes, 103; sweet potatoes, 43; sorghum, 2,495; tobacco, 23; broom corn, 3,942; millet and Hungarian, 8,107; pearl millet, 167; rice corn, 1,565, and the grass in cultivation and under fence, 16,190, showing a total acreage of field crops in 1882 of 58,083 acres. The tame hay cut in the county in 1881 was 4,027 tons, and the prairie hay 5,454 tons; garden products were sold to the amount of $960, and eggs and poultry to the amount of $12,640. The cheese product was 800 pounds, and that of butter 113,003 pounds. The livestock in the county in 1882 was represented by 1,125 horses, 354 mules and asses, 2,954 milch cows, 6,241 other cattle, 30,059 sheep, and 1,881 swine, while the value of the animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter was $40,502, an increase over the preceding year of $25,641; cows, cattle and sheep more than doubled what they were in 1881, while all the other animals, excepting swine, showed a considerable increase. The wool clip for the year ending March 1, 1882, was 29,499 pounds, being four times greater than the year preceding. Considerable improvement has taken place in the shape of orchards, although but few of the trees have reached a bearing state. The trees in bearing in 1882 were apple, 286; pear, 1; peach, 6,815; plum, 1; and cherry, 88. Not in bearing there were apple, 1,495; pear, 122; peach, 37,543; plum, 563; and cherry, 1,120. There is but very little fence in the county, all told being only 15,631 rods, of which 337 are board, 2,960 hedge, and 12,334 wire.

The agricultural implements in the county in 1882 were valued at $23,496. The acres devoted to artificial forestry were 1,244, of which 108 were planted to walnut, 2 to honey locust, 929 to cottonwood, and 205 to other varieties.

ST. JOHN.

St. John is the county seat of Stafford County, and is named after Ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas. Where the town now stands was formerly known as Zion Valley, this name having been given to it by a settlement of Latter-Day Saints that located in the vicinity. Its location in the county is about two and a half miles south of the center. The town is located on Section 33, Township 23, Range 13 west, and was surveyed and platted by H. L. Fitch in 1879. The land embraced in the town site was formerly the claim of Fred Hawkins, he having entered it as a homestead some years previous. After the county was restored to its place among the counties of the State in 1879, a party, consisting of W. C. Belzer, C. B. Weeks, William Dixon, William Glasscock, J. Westwood and George Breckenridge, organized themselves into a town company, and purchased Hawkins' claim. Of this company, W. C. Belzer was President, and C. B. Weeks, Secretary. Having purchased the claim, they had it surveyed and platted, and when this was done they named it St. John. This name was given to it with the expectation that it might exercise some influence in having it declared the temporary county seat, when the time came to temporarily organize the county. There was only one building on the town site when it was surveyed, and that was a good sized frame building put up by the Latter-Day Saints as a church, and known among the people as the Mormon Temple.

The first building erected in St. John was put up by Henry Rohr, on the west side of the square, in September, 1879. Prior to this, however, one or two buildings had been moved on to the town site from the country. One of these was a building owned by John Askew, which he moved in in June, 1879, and converted into a hotel, and which is still used for such purposes, and is now known as the City Hotel. Another, that was moved in a little later, was that of John Fish, in which was opened the first store in town, he having commenced selling goods a few weeks prior to Mr. Rohr. Mail for people at St. John in the early part of 1879 came to Zion Valley Post Office, but in May of that year the office was moved to St. John, and on the first of July, 1880, the name of the office was changed to correspond with that of the town, C. B. Weeks being the first Postmaster, who held the office until September, 1881, when he was succeeded by W. R. Hoole, the present incumbent.

The first settlers in St. John were C. B. Weeks, John Askew and family, John Fish, Henry Rohr, J. B. Smith, Frank Cox, W. R. Hoole and Mr. Alexander. These are the seventy-niners. In the spring of 1879, a small frame schoolhouse was built, in which school was commenced in the summer of that year, the first teacher being Miss Ida M. Forman. The building becoming too small to accommodate the number of school children, it was sold in February, 1883, and preparatory steps are now being taken to erect a commodious brick building. School is now held in the court room.

The first child born in town was St. John Cox, his birth occurring in September, 1880; and the first death was that of Alice A., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Smith. The first couple married in town was Fred Hawkins and Miss Delilah Kendall, the marriage taking place in September, 1879. In 1882, E. R. and F. C. Swartz located in town, and purchased the Mormon Temple, which they moved to the west side of the square and converted into two store rooms, one of which they occupied themselves as a hardware store, and the other is used by Mr. Sparks as a drug store, and by Mr. Hoole as a post office and savings bank. They also put up two very fine residences that fall. That same fall, the town company erected a goodly sized two-story frame building, the first floor of which they finished and partitioned into offices, and the upper story as a hall, the free use of which they gave to the county for county purposes for five years.

As yet the town has no church edifice, but there are several church organizations, including Methodists, Baptists, United Brethren and Latter-Day Saints, all of which meet for worship alternately in the court room. The Methodists, however, have just commenced the erection of a frame church, the estimated cost of which is $2,000. Preparations are also being made for the opening of a brick yard. The town contains about fifty buildings in all, and the business of the place is represented by the general merchandising store of Henry Rohr, which was the first erected in town, and is quite an extensive two-story frame building; general store kept by Lovejoy & Glasscock; one of the same kind by I. W. Reeves; a furniture store by Charles Smith; a drug store by A. Sparks; a hardware store by Swartz Brothers; a savings bank, established in 1879; one hotel, a restaurant, three blacksmith shops, and two livery stables. A good weekly newspaper is published in town, the Advance, owned and edited by W. K. P. Dow.

On October 1, 1882, De Long Post, No. 103, G. A. R., was organized at St. John, with eighteen charter members. The first officers were: H. H. Smith, P. C.; Charles Bristol, S. V.; C. S. Mace, J. V.; George Bousman, Adjt.; W. R. Hoole, O. D.; Lewis Estle, O. G.; Frank Cox, Q. M. George Breckenridge, S. M.; William Glasscock, Q. M. S., and R. M. Blair, Chaplain. The Post has now a membership of twenty-two, the officers being the same, except that C. S. Mace is S. V.; Jonathan Taylor, J. V., and Henry Rohr, Adjt.

The town is beautifully located on dry, undulating prairie, and derives trade from an extensive stretch of country. While the place is yet small, there is an air of thrift and neatness about it which bespeaks taste and progress. The stores and houses are all painted, and the manner in which the stores are stocked indicate a prosperous business with the merchants. The population of the place does not exceed 150.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN T. ASKEW, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Macksville, was born in Will County, Ill., May 3, 1853. His parents, Thomas and Isabella Askew, were English. In 1855, he moved with his parents to Iroquois County, and lived with them there until 1873, when he moved to Kansas and located in Rice County, where he remained but six months, when he went to Colorado, returning to Kansas in the fall of 1875, and locating in Stafford County, where he engaged in farming and stock-raising. He was married at Zion Valley, Stafford Co., December 25, 1877, to Miss Carrie Sievert, a native of Indiana. By this marriage one child has been born to him—Inez I., born in Stafford County, Kan., September 1, 1880. At present, Mr. Askew is both Clerk and Treasurer of the township in which he resides.

WILLIAM DIXON, Clerk of the District Court. The parents of the subject of this sketch were William and Rebecca Dixon, the former a native of England, and the latter of Ohio. William Dixon, Jr., was born in Wheeling, W. Va., February 4, 1853, where he lived until June, 1878, when he moved to Kansas and located at St. John in Stafford County. He received his education at the common schools of Wheeling. In the fall of 1879, he was elected Clerk of the District Court of Stafford County, as which he served until December 6, 1880, when he resigned, and was immediately appointed Justice of the Peace, in which capacity he served until November, 1882, when he was re-elected Clerk of the Court. In connection with his official duties, he studied law, and on December 13, 1881, was admitted to practice at the bar. On June 22, 1876, at Wheeling, W. Va., he was married to Miss Josephine Driller, a native of West Virginia, by which marriage one child has been born to him, a son, named William, the date of his birth being January 14, 1878.

W. K. P. DOW, editor and farmer, son of Warren D. and Lydia D. Dow. His father, Warren D., was a native of Maine, and his mother, Lydia D., a native of Virginia. W. K. P. was born at Bethany, Brooke Co., Va., June 20, 1852. In 1859, he moved with his parents to Clarke County, Mo., where he remained until 1877, when he removed to Kansas, and located in Stafford County. A desire to enter the field of journalism caused him to purchase an office and learn the printing trade, and in January, 1882, he established the Stafford County Bee, which he edited and published until March, 1883, when he purchased the St. John Advance, merging the former into the latter. On March 7, 1875, in Clarke County, Mo., Mr. Dow was married to Miss Laura E. Clay, a native of Missouri, by which marriage four children have been born to him—John, born in Clarke County, Mo., December 16, 1875; Emma, in Stafford County, Kan., October 31, 1877, died February 20, 1879; Clarence, at the same place, January 17, 1880, and Samuel C., born at the same place February 11, 1882. Mr. Dow has served as township officer in various capacities, and was for three years Postmaster at Milwaukee, Stafford Co., Kan.

FRANK B. GILLMORE, Register of Deeds, was the seventh child and fifth son of Benjamin P. and Mariam S. Gillmore, and was born in Lake County, Ill., June 1, 1853. Both his parents were natives of New York State. His father was a farmer. The common schools of his native State furnished the only sources from which he derived his education. He lived with his parents on the farm until he was fifteen years of age, when he entered a store as a clerk, which occupation he followed for nearly three years. He then learned the painting trade, and followed this until November, 1877, when he moved to Kansas and located in Stafford County, where he took a homestead claim and embarked in farming. On April 3, 1876, at Waukegan, Ill., he was married to Mary Ann Ellis, a native of England. The issue of this marriage has been—Robert E., born at Waukegan, Ill., February 12, 1877; Lois M., born at Ellinwood, Barton Co., Kan., September 19, 1879; Libbie, born at Sandago, Stafford Co., Kan., January 31, 1881, and Edna, born at St. John, October 13, 1882. From February, 1880, until March, 1882, Mr. Gillmore was Postmaster at Sandago; and from August 21, 1882, to March 12, 1883, he was editor and manager of the St. John Advance, a Republican weekly newspaper, published at St. John, Kan. He also served as Township Treasurer for three successive terms, and in the fall of 1881 was elected to the office of Register of Deeds of Stafford County, in which capacity he is still serving.

WILLIAM R. HOOLE, Postmaster and cashier of the St. John Savings Bank, was the fourth child and third son of Joseph and Lucy Ann Hoole, and was born at Rising Sun, Ohio Co., Ind., March 30, 1846. His father was a native of Sheffield, England, and his mother a native of Ohio. William R. received his education in the public schools, and lived with his parents until he was fifteen years and six months of age, when he enlisted in Company G, of the Sixty-sixth Illinois Infantry, the date of his enlistment being September 14, 1861. He served three years and nine months, and was mustered out at the close of the war. The engagements in which he took part were: Mount Zion, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, battle of Corinth, Iuka, Corinth, Hatchie River, Chattanooga, Snake Creek Gap, Resaca, Kenesaw Mountain, Lay's Ferry, Rome Cross Roads, Ball's Bluff, Jonesboro, Atlanta, and was with Sherman's army in the march to the sea, participating in the attack on Savannah. Mr. Hoole received injuries at Rome, Ga., while in the discharge of his duties, which he is yet suffering from. For many years after leaving the army, he passed his time in traveling, partly for pleasure, but chiefly for health. In the spring of 1874, he moved to Kansas and located in Stafford County, taking the first Government claim that was entered in that county. He took a very active part in having Stafford restored to its place among the counties of the State, and was one of the founders of the town of St. John, of which he is still a resident. On September 6, 1881, he was appointed Postmaster, which position he still occupies. He is also cashier of the St. John Savings Bank. Mr. Hoole was married at St. Louis on October 14, 1874, to Miss Augusta Henderson, a native of Illinois, of which marriage one child has been the issue—Edwin, born in Stafford County, Kan., April 28, 1876.

CORNELIUS S. MACE, Sheriff and farmer, was born in the State of Maine, November 19, 1842. His father, Benjamin B. Mace, and his mother, Rhoda Mace, were both natives of Maine. Cornelius lived with his parents on a farm until he was thirteen years old, when he went to live with his sister at Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind., where he remained for six years, when he returned to his home in Maine. He received his education in the common schools of his native county, the high school at Winchester, Ind., and the Farmington Academy, of Maine. In October, 1861, he enlisted in Company E, of the Twelfth Maine Infantry, and served three years and two months, having been mustered out December 5, 1864. While in the army, he took part in the siege of Port Hudson, the battles of Winchester and Cedar Creek, and participated in the attack on Petersburg. At Port Hudson, he was severely wounded in the leg by a fragment of shell. After leaving the army, he went to Muirton, Grundy County, Mo., where he engaged in mercantile business, and was Postmaster of the place from 1868 to 1870. Giving up the mercantile business, he purchased a farm, and engaged in farming. In 1877, he moved to Kansas and located upon a farm in Stafford County. On October 4, 1868, at Muirton, Mo., he was married to Miss Jennie L. Duff, a native of Iowa. The issue of said marriage—Jennie I., born at Muirton, Mo., August 5, 1869; Eugence C., born at the same place, May 4, 1871; Annie R., at the same place, December 20, 1872; Mary M., same place, September 10, 1877, and Edward D., born at St. John, Stafford Co., Kan., October 13, 1881. Mr. Mace had held various school and township offices, and in the fall of 1881 he was elected Sheriff of Stafford County, Kan., which office he at present occupies.

JAMES B. SMITH, banker, is the son of Henry and Keziah Smith, and was born in Fayette County, Penn., November 19, 1826. His father was a farmer, and J. B. was raised to work on the farm. His means of receiving an education were rather limited, being confined to the old district school of fifty years ago. On February 4, 1849, he was married in Fayette County, Penn., to Miss Mary Bryson, a native of that State, six children being the issue of the marriage—Alice A., born in Fayette County, Penn., January 5, 1850, died July 30, 1881; Emma A., born in the same county, March 31, 1852; William B., born in Van Buren County, Iowa, March 4, 1855; James H., same county, January 1, 1857; Sarah E., same county, born September 8, 1859; and Charles F., in the same county, January 17, 1861. In 1854, Mr. Smith moved to Van Buren County, Iowa, where he continued farming until 1870, when he went to Henry County, Mo., where he resided until April, 1876, when he removed to Kansas and located in Stafford County. In the fall of 1879, he was elected to the office of Treasurer of Stafford County, and was re-elected in the fall of 1880. In 1881, Mr. Smith was one of a company that organized and established the St. John Savings Bank, of which he is now President.

JESSE A. STEELMAN, M. D., County Superintendent. David L. Steelman and Rosetta Steelman, the parents of Jesse A., were both natives of New Jersey. Jesse A. was born in Atlantic County, N. J., June 18, 1848. His early education was received at the common school. The teachers' profession he followed for three years, at the end of which time he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, where he pursued his studies for three years, and then, after graduation, commenced the practice of medicine in his native county. In 1878, his health failing, he moved to Kansas and located at what is now St. John, in Stafford County. On October 6, 1880, he was married to Miss Annie J. Somers, a native of Atlantic County, N. J., but their wedded life was only of short duration, his wife dying in the following April. In the fall of 1879, he was elected County Superintendent of Stafford County, to fill an unexpired term of thirteen months, and was re-elected to the same office in the fall of 1882.

CHARLES B. WEEKS, County Attorney and real estate agent, is the son of Joseph M. and Martha Weeks, the former a native of Maine, and the latter of New York State. Charles B. was born in Will County, Ill., February 10, 1846, where he lived until after the death of his father in 1859, when the family moved to Chicago. His education was received at the public schools of his native county, and Well's Grammar School, of Chicago. In December, 1862, not then seventeen years old, he enlisted in Phillips' battery, and served until the close of the war. On October 21, 1864, he was commissioned Second Lieutenant. He was engaged in both the battles of Bristol, and also in that of Nashville, besides numerous severe skirmishes and unimportant engagements. Leaving the army, he returned to Chicago, where he entered the machine shops of the Chicago & North-Western Railroad Company, and learned the machinist's trade. In 1867, he commenced the study of law, which he pursued until 1869, when he engaged in the brokerage and real estate business. In October, 1876, he moved to Kansas and located at what is now St. John, in Stafford County, where he entered upon the practice of his profession, and in September, 1880, was appointed County Attorney, which office he held until November of that year, and to which he was re-elected in the fall of 1882. He also served as Postmaster at St. John, from May, 1879, until September, 1881. Mr. Weeks was married at St. John, September 11, 1880, to Miss Mary J. Dixon, a native of Virginia. The issue of this marriage has been a son, George D., born at St. John, July 4, 1881. Two children have been born to him by a former marriage—Alice H., born at Chicago, September 17, 1869, and McCleary Weeks, born at same place, February 27, 1871.

ELLSWORTH COUNTY.

LOCATION AND TOPOGRAPHY.

ELLSWORTH County is comprised in that portion of the State of Kansas which commences at the east line of Range 6, west of the Sixth Principal Meridian, running thence west to the west line of Range 10, and embracing Townships 14, 15, 16 and 17. The county is twenty-four miles north and south, and thirty miles east and west, and contains 460,800 acres, or 720 square miles. This territory is divided into eight civil townships, and three commissioner districts.

The boundary lines of the county are straight, except that the north half of the county appears to be pushed over to the westward about one-fourth of a mile, which causes the east line of the south half of the county to be a little further eastward than the corresponding line of the north half, and, correspondingly therewith, the west line of the north half is a little westward of the same line of the south half. The geographical position of the county is central, the exact center of the State being about a mile east of the south west corner of Township 17, Range 9, of Ellsworth County. A line drawn across the center of the State, from east to west, would pass along the southern boundary line of the county, while a central line from north to south would pass through Range 9 in said county, and close to the west line of said range. The county is bounded on the north by Lincoln County, on the south by Rice County, on the east by Saline and the northern portion of McPherson, and on the west by the south half of Russell County and the north half of Barton. The east line of Ellsworth County is one hundred and eighty miles west of the east line of the State.

The surface of the county is somewhat diversified, and may be divided into bottom land, upland, and land that is bluffy. The bottom land is confined to the margins of streams and creeks, and are denominated valleys. These valleys are very limited in extent, not exceeding one mile in width at the widest part, and in many places being as narrow as one-fourth of a mile. The aggregate of these valleys is not quite equal to one-eighth of the area of the county. Township 14, Range 6, which is the northeastern township of the county, is exceedingly bluffy. In Township 14, Range 7, a long line of bluffs extends from the north line of the township, as far south as Section 28, following the east bank of the Elkhorn, while from the west bank of the creek, long stretches of bluffy land extend westward. The north half of the northwest township of the county is beautiful undulating prairie, but in the south half of the township there is a chain of bluffs which extend to the west line of the county, about a mile or so north of the Smoky Hill River. In the extreme southwest of the township, there is a cluster of bluffs, known as Cedar Bluffs, the average height of which is over one hundred feet.

In Township 15, Range 10, a range of bluffs extend along the north bank of the Smoky, which run as far east as the east line of Section 35, in Range 8, varying in distance from one-fourth to a mile from the river. Commencing at the west line of the county, and immediately south of the Smoky, which is the northwest corner of Township 15, Range 10, there is a chain of bluffs which extend as far east as Blood Creek, and at this point they make a turn and follow the west bank of the creek as far south as Section 16. Another line of bluffs extend from the west bank of Blood Creek north to the Smoky, and thence south to Section 24, when they change to a southwestern direction, running as far as Section 27.

Commencing again at the southeast corner of Section 13, the land is bluffy to the south line of the township. In Township 15, Range 9, besides the bluffs on the north of the Smoky, there is a range beginning at the west line of the township, which runs in a southeastern direction as far as Section 29, when they take a northward turn as far as Section 21, and thence to the east line of the township. Section 25 of this township and range is extremely bluffy. The eastern portion of Township 15, Range 6, is exceedingly bluffy, with here and there large ledges of rock.

The southern half of the county is mostly undulating upland, except that there are some bluffs along Ash Creek and on both sides of the Smoky, and the southeastern township of the county which is very bluffy, as it is also in the vicinity of Bluff Creek, in Township 17, Range 7. The remainder of the county, which is by far the greater part, is beautiful rolling prairie and table land.

The face of the county is considerably scarified with creeks, all of which, with the exception of Elkhorn on the north, and Plum Creek on the south, empty into the Smoky Hill River, the course of the latter being from the northwest to the southeast. The timber land of the county, taken altogether, does not equal one per cent of the whole area, and what there is, is confined entirely to the streams, although not all of these have timber upon them. The timber is not in heavy bodies, but in narrow strips along the Smoky Hill River, and Buffalo, Oak, Elkhorn, Blood, Turkey, Oxhide, Ash, Thompson and Bluff creeks. That on the Smoky is chiefly cottonwood, but on the other streams it is a mixture of box elder, hackberry, walnut, ash, elm and oak.

STREAMS, SOIL AND MINERAL RESOURCES.

The principal stream in the county is the Smoky Hill River, which, entering the county about six miles south of the northwest corner, flows in a southwesterly direction until it reaches Fort Harker, located in nearly the center of the county, when its course becomes due south for about three miles, when it makes a sudden turn northeast, which course it follows about five miles, when it makes another sudden turn to the southeast, and pursuing this direction for nearly two miles, it again turns northeast, which following for a few miles, the next turn it makes is to the southwest, following which it makes a curve and runs towards the northeast, when it again bends and takes up its southeasterly direction until it leaves the county about five miles north of the southeast corner.

The Smoky is fed by several tributaries, chief of which is Mule, Bluff, Thompson, Ash and Turkey creeks from the south, and Elm, Clear, Oak, Buffalo and Wilson from the north. Besides these are numerous minor streams both north and south, which occasionally help to swell the Smoky, but which are as often without water as with it. The only stream in the county that does not empty into the Smoky, is Plum Creek, which has its rise in the western portion of the county, and, after flowing about ten miles in a southeasterly direction, leaves the county and enters Rice County on the south, where it empties into Cow Creek. There are several very excellent springs in the county, chief of which is the Bradley Spring in the south, and Rock Spring in the east. Good well-water can be found anywhere in the county without much difficulty, at depths varying from fifteen to fifty feet.

The soil is of about the same character as that of most counties in Central Kansas—a black loam. In the bottom lands or valleys along the streams, the soil is very deep. These valleys, however, are very limited in extent, being long, narrow strips, along the margins of the creeks, located sometimes on one side of the streams, and sometimes on the other, alternating in accordance with the changes in the direction of the water courses.

(a) Organized in 1874, from part of Ellsworth. (b) In 1873, part detached to form Wilson; in 1874, part to Columbia; in 1878, part to Valley. (c) Organized in 1880, from part of Valley. (d) Organized in 1880, from part of Valley. (e) Organized in 1880, from part of Wilson. (f) Organized in 1878, from part of Ellsworth; in 1880, parts detached to form Green Garden and Lincoln. (g) Organized in 1873, from part of Ellsworth; in 1880, part detached to form Noble.

The soil in these valleys is of great depth and richness. In the higher lands, however, it is far different. In the center of the county, the soil on the table-lands is not over eighteen inches in depth, while in the southeastern portion it goes to a depth of two and a half or three feet, and in the southwestern portion much deeper. In the northeast again, it is very shallow, while in the northwest, north of the line of bluffs that mark the Smoky, the soil is excellent.

Different sub-soils are found in different portions of the county. In one place it will be clay, in another sand, in another limestone and in another sandstone. The county, however, is included in the "Golden Belt," and, in proportion to the acreage in cultivation, yields immense crops. The extensive stretch of beautiful rolling prairie which includes about the west three-fourths of the south half of the county, is as magnificent a country as the eye ever rested upon. So beautiful is it that a portion of it has been given the name of "Green Garden."

The soil is well adapted to the cultivation of all kinds of cereals, and with a moderate rainfall, yields abundantly. Ellsworth County, however, is one more adapted by nature for sheep and stock-raising, than it is for agriculture, but that portion which may be termed agricultural possesses every advantage that nature could give it.

So far as yet developed, coal has been the only product in the mineral line yet discovered, and this has been found in different portions of the county. Where a country is so destitute of timber as is Ellsworth County, no happier discovery could have been made, and none of greater value to the people, or from which greater benefits could flow. By this discovery, fuel was brought within easy reach of a great many settlers, and within a reasonable distance of all, at reasonable rates and in sufficient quantity to meet all home demands. At present, seven banks are being worked with a considerable degree of success. Three of these banks are located immediately south of Wilson, in the bluffs south of the Smoky. These banks are located within a distance of one-half mile. One of them is owned by the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, but is leased to and operated by, John Balridge. The output from this bank in 1882 was about two thousand tons.

Another of these banks is operated by the Smoky Hill Coal Company, composed of Messrs. Eckert, Hines and Latshaw. The product of this bank in 1882 was fifteen hundred tons, valued at $4,500. The wages paid to employes engaged by this company was $3,500.

The third one of these banks is owned by H. Carhartt, but is operated by Jacob Sackman. The output from this bank during 1882, was not as large as that of either of the others, an approximate estimate setting it down at twelve hundred tons.

To what extent the coal deposits underlying the bluffs exist, has not been demonstrated, and whether they will develop into extensive fields, or prove to be mere pockets, is yet to be determined. The next bank in point of importance, is that of L. H. Westerman, located on Elkhorn Creek about nine miles from Ellsworth. This bank is developing well, and at present (January 1883,) gives employment to thirty hands. The product of this bank in 1882 was one thousand tons. Another bank, but not so well developed, is worked by J. D. Sibley, on Spring Creek, about three miles west of the east line of the county. In 1882, this bank yielded two hundred tons; and another bank, operated by J. Shoemaker, in the northeastern portion of the county, yielded a similar amount.

The quality of the coal mined thus far, is rather inferior, although it burns freely, and answers admirably for fuel. The method pursued in mining is rather primitive, being that system known as drifting, or digging in from the face of the bluffs. There have been no shafts sunk, nor has the work of getting the coal been facilitated by the aid of machinery, all the work, so far, having been done by manual labor. The coal, so far as it has been discovered in the county, runs from two to two and a half feet in thickness.

In some portions of the county a very fair quality of pottery clay is found, but no efforts have been made to utilize it. A clay, said to be terra cotta, is found in the eastern portion of the county, from whitch "Terra Cotta," a station on the Kansas Pacific Railway, derives its name. Some efforts have been made at making brick, and with considerable success, but the demand not being sufficient to make the business profitable, put a stop to brick-making. The brick in the Grand Central Hotel, court house and schoolhouse, the only three exclusively brick buildings in the county-seat, were made at Ellsworth. There is an abundance of good limestone in the county, alike excellent for building purposes and for making lime.

EARLY HISTORY.

Ellsworth County was organized in 1867, but, ante-dating this by ten years, attempts were made at settlement in portions of the territory now embraced within its borders. Some discrepancies exist as to the date of attempted first settlement, some placing it as early as 1857, and others not sooner than 1860. There is no disagreement, however, as to the names of the parties who attempted the first settlement of the county. It is conceded t[illegible] M. Thompson, known by the early settlers, as "Smoky Hill Thomp[illegible]eph Lehman, D. H. Page, Adam Weadle and D. Cushman, were t[illegible]ho attempted permanent settlement in the county. Upon this there is no difference of opinion, the discrepancy, as before stated, being as to the date. This settlement was made on Thompson Creek, which took its name from Thompson, the leader of the party mentioned, and who was the first to discover the creek.

The next attempt at settlement was made by Henry and Irwin Farris, S. D. Walker, C. L. and J. J. Prather. This party came in 1860 and located on Clear Creek. H. Wait and H. P. Spurgeon came to the county late in 1860, the former locating in the Thompson settlement, while the latter cast his lot with the Farris party. Up to August, 1861, there was not a white woman in the county, but in that month a man named T. D. Bennett, moved from Dickinson County with his family, and located in the Thompson settlement, so that Bennett's wife was the first white woman that ever resided in the county.

These parties supported themselves, chiefly, by hunting, although some attempts at farming were made upon a small scale. At that time game of all kinds was abundant. Herds of buffalo roamed all over the country, and organized parties from other counties would come to enjoy the sport of the hunt, and also for the profit to be derived therefrom. Swarms of wild turkeys inhabited every stream and creek, and antelope grazed upon the hills and in the valleys in immense droves.

In the fall of 1862, a man by the name of Lewis, with his family, located in the Thompson neighborhood, and to this man and his wife was born the first white child ever born in Ellsworth County, the birth taking place in February, 1863.

In the summer of that year, the Indian trouble, which had been anticipated for some time, commenced, the first attack of the savages being made upon the settlers on Cow Creek. By treachery the Indians lured Walker, one of the early settlers in the Farris settlement, into a snare, and instantly killed him. The white men replied to the fire of the Indians, and killed three of their number. Knowing that the Indians greatly outnumbered them, and fearing that they would renew the attack during the night, they made their escape, and succeeded in reaching the stage station on the Smoky late in the afternoon. From this point word was sent to every settler in the county, to apprise them of the approaching danger. Page's ranch, located on the Smoky, at a point where the military road crossed the stream, was considered the best place from which resistance could be offered in case of an attack, and there the settlers all centered. Sentinels were posted, and a sharp lookout was maintained throughout the night, but the only attack they encountered was a false alarm, to the effect that hosts of Indians were coming over the hill to attack the ranch. The settlers held a consultation, and concluded that their lives were more dear to them than the amount they had at stake, and next morning, after packing up all of their worldly goods that they could take with them, took their departure, and Ellsworth County relapsed into its primitive condition where the buffalo, deer, elk and antelope could roam without the foot of a white man trespassing upon their native domain.

As to how Ellsworth County received its name has often given rise to some doubt, and many have believed that it was named in honor of Col. E. E. Ellsworth, who was shot and killed by Jackson, in Alexandria, Va., in his attempt to pull down a Rebel flag at the commencement of the war. The belief that the county was so named is erroneous, as will be seen from a letter addressed to Mr. F. G. Adams who was at the date of the letter, Secretary of the State Historical Society, of which the following is a copy, the original of which is still on file in the office of the State Historical Society:

> "ELDEN, IOWA, February 20, 1878.
>
> "F. G ADAMS:
>
> "Sir:—
>
> "Some time ago I received a letter from you asking for information concerning the history of Fort Ellsworth. You are correct as to the Adjutant's report. I was mustered in as Second Lieutenant, Company H, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, July 13, 1863, at Davenport, Iowa. I was in service in Kansas, and I am the man who established Fort Ellsworth, in June of 1864. I was stationed there with about forty men, and built that block-house. General Curtis gave it its name in July of the same year, when he came up to the fort. He was then in command of that division. We were ordered out on an Indian expedition I had about twenty men, and a Company of the Fifteenth Kansas was with us. At Fort Larned, while on dress parade, General Curtis read the name of Fort Ellsworth.
>
> "ALLEN ELLSWORTH."

Where this Lieutenant Ellsworth was stationed with his Company, and where he built the block-house or fort, was at Page's deserted ranch on the Smoky, about three-fourths of a mile southwest of where Fort Harker was afterwards located. Fort Ellsworth soon became known, not only in Kansas, but in other States, and hence, when the boundaries of the county were defined by the legislature in 1867, and the county was named, it was given the name of Ellsworth.

The second settlement of the county began in 1865, when Harry Anderson took a claim and located on Clear Creek. In 1866, Rev. Levi Sternberg came to the county, having been preceded by one of his sons, Dr. George Sternberg. Shortly after the elder Sternberg came, he was followed by another son, Frederick, who took a claim, and located on the Smoky. In the spring of the following year, two more of his sons, Charles and Edward, arrived, this family making quite a settlement in itself. In 1866, Fort Ellsworth was abandoned, and a large military post was established about three-fourths of a mile northeast of where it stood. Four large frame buildings were erected for barracks for the troops, two on each side of the square, while a third side was occupied by buildings erected for officer's quarters. Several large stables were erected, and a good-sized guard house, two stories high. A magnificent stone building was erected for a hospital, at a cost of $80,000. The military reservation upon which this post was located embraced sixteen sections of land, being four miles square.

At that time, General Hancock was in command of the Division of the Mississippi, and named the post Fort Harker. The first year after the post was established, the cholera broke out, and caused fearful fatality among the troops and government employes. This was a terrible calamity to strike the county in the first year of its existence, and nearly every settler that could get away sought refuge from the scourge.

The first marriage ceremony performed in the county was by Henry New, on the 2d day of April, 1868, when, in his official capacity of Justice of the Peace, he united in the bonds of matrimony, George W. Hughes and Miss Rusha Maxson.

The year 1873 witnessed the departure of the military from Fort Harker. This was the distributing point for all military posts further west, and was one of the most important military stations west of the Missouri River. The advent and extension of the Kansas Pacific Railway put an end to its usefulness, and in the fall of 1873 it was abandoned, and the reservation on which it stood was thrown open to settlement. The roofs of some of the buildings were taken off and sent to Leavenworth, and the remainder of the buildings were sold in the spring of 1882 to a man named Johnson. The officers' quarters and some of the barracks still stand intact, as also the stone guardhouse and wooden stables, but in a short time all these will disappear, as the material is being sold as rapidly as purchasers can be found, and in a few years nothing will be left to indicate where once stood the great military post of Fort Harker.

For several years immigration to the county was exceedingly slow, but yet scarcely a season passed without bringing more or less new settlers. A great portion of those who came up to 1876 were foreigners, and consisted chiefly of Swedes, Bohemians and Germans. The Swedes settled chiefly in the southeastern portion of the county, and the Bohemians in the western portion, while the Germans distributed themselves more generally over the county, a great many of them, however, locating in the southern portion. In 1877 a large immigration of Bohemians set in, who located chiefly east, west and south of Wilson.

While among the new settlers the foreign element greatly predominated, quite a good many came from States further east and north. In the spring of 1878 a very large settlement arrived in the county from Pennsylvania, under the leadership of Samuel Killian. They came in a body and numbered over two hundred souls. This settlement located around Wilson, some of them going over into Russell County. Since that time immigration has been gradual, and although a good many have come to the county, the population during the last two years, if it has not decreased, has not increased. By comparing the population of the county in 1882, as returned by the respective township assessors, with that given by the United States census for 1880, there has been a considerable falling off. As returned by the assessors, the population in 1882 was 7,347, whereas, in 1880, the United States census shows it to have been 8,485. This falling off, if such really has been the case, can be traced to causes other than any inherent in the soil or climate. The county is noted for its superior advantages for stock-raising, and during the last two years, stock men have come in and bought up large tracts of land, in many cases buying out the settlers who moved out of the county.

A few instances will serve to show how the opening up of these large ranches affects population. The "Elkhorn Ranch," owned by H. C. Adams, contains 4,000 acres, on which at present he has 5,000 head of sheep. The ranch is well supplied with sheds and good buildings. The "Eden Ranch" on the Smoky, owned by Mr. Collins, contains 9,000 acres, all under fence and is well stocked with cattle. "Idaville Ranch," on Bluff Creek and the Smoky, owned by Capt. Millett, contains 18,000 acres, all under fence. At present there are between 4,000 and 5,000 head of cattle on the ranch. "White Bluff's Ranch," on the Smoky, owned by Richardson & Bates, contains 3,000 acres, on which there are 3,000 head of cattle. "Black Walnut Ranch," on Thompson Creek, contains 5,500 acres, and is owned by H. B. Clark. At present it is stocked with 7,000 head of sheep and 250 head of cattle. "Monte Cenario Ranch," on Mulberry and Alum creeks, contains 7,000 acres, and is owned by Mr. Wellington. This ranch is stocked with sheep, on which, at present, there are 9,000 head. The place is very highly improved. It is all under fence, and $16,000 were expended in the erection of sheds and buildings, the residence alone costing $8,000. These six ranches represent one-tenth the entire area of the county, and in order to get such large tracts of land in one body, a good many settlers had to be bought out. Besides these, there are several smaller ranches, ranging from 1,000 to 2,000 acres. The immense amount of stock on these ranches adds greatly to the wealth of the county, but such extensive bodies of land being in the hands of a few individuals, precludes population, and to the establishment of these gigantic stock farms is to be attributed whatever difference there may be between the population of 1882 and that of 1880.

In October, 1881, the entire community was startled by the news of one of the most cold blooded murders ever perpetrated in Ellsworth or any other county. The terrible tragedy was enacted in the southeast part of the county, Andrew Weir and his son, Bennie, being the victims, and Lewis A. Rose and wife the murderers. Rose and Weir lived upon adjoining farms, and some enmity arose between them over the division of some crop, in which both were interested. This feud had existed for some time, until one day Weir went to the house of Rose, when an altercation of words arose, and as Weir started out to go home, Rose followed and shot him dead. Weir was a widower and lived alone with his son Bennie, a little lad about twelve years old. The boy thinking his father was staying away unusually long, started over to Rose's to see if he was there, and when Rose and his wife saw the lad coming, they consulted together and concluded that it was necessary to their own safety to kill the boy. When the lad reached the house and inquired for his father, Rose took him to the barn, and there knocked out the innocent boy's brains with a club and threw him into a manger. After dispatching little Bennie, Rose went out to a field and dug a hole, in which he buried father and son, and having covered them over with earth he harrowed the field so as to escape detection. The neighbors, however, began to miss Weir and his boy, and suspicions of foul play began to be bruited in the vicinity. Finally a search was instituted, which led to a discovery of Weir and his son in the place where Rose had buried them. Rose and his wife were arrested, tried and convicted, he for murder, and she as accessory to the crime.

The trial took place in May, 1882, and both Rose and his wife are now in the penitentiary, she serving a term of eighteen months, and he serving the preliminary year, at the end of which his case is subject to the decision of the governor, whether his further punishment shall be death by hanging or imprisonment for life.

Scarcely had the people recovered from the shock occasioned by this terrible murder, when they were startled by another. This occurred in November, 1882, on the farm owned by Rev. Levi Sternberg, about five miles east of Ellsworth. The farm was worked by one of Doctor Sternberg's sons, named Fred, who had in his employ a hired man named Hughes. The forenoon of the day on which the murder was committed, young Sternberg and Hughes were out in the field gathering corn, at which they worked until noon, when they went to the house for dinner. What occurred between them, if anything, will, probably, never be known, but as they were returning to the field after dinner, and just as they had crossed the bed of the Smoky, Sternberg drew a revolver and shot Hughes, causing him to fall from the wagon, and while lying on the ground, Sternberg jumped down from the wagon and shot him again, although he was dead at the time, as it was proven at the coroner's inquest that it was the first shot that killed him. Sternberg immediately surrendered himself, and is now in jail awaiting trial, and no excuse can be offered for the commission of the deed, except that Sternberg was insane, which, people believe, must have been the case.

The opening of 1883 found Ellsworth County in a prosperous condition. The bountiful crops of 1882, not only bettered the condition of the agricultural classes, but was of immense benefit to all those engaged in mercantile pursuits. There are sixty-six schoolhouses in the county and six churches, and several church organizations, besides several other societies, benevolent, literary and sociable. The financial condition of the county is good. The assessed valuation of the county is $1,500,000, and the real valuation, $5,000,000. The county bonded indebtedness is $34,000, and it has no floating debt. County warrants are at par, and are paid by the County Treasurer upon presentation, which would indicate that the county government has been honestly and economically conducted.

Only one railroad traverses the county, the Kansas Pacific, which enters from the east at Rock Spring, and follows a due west course until it reaches Ellsworth, when, following the course of the Smoky Hill, it takes a northwestern direction and leaves the county at Wilson, three miles south of the northwest corner. The principal stations on the road are Ellsworth and Wilson. The road was built through the county in 1868.

COUNTY ORGANIZATIONS AND COUNTY BUILDINGS.

After its limits had been defined, and the county named by the Legislature, as elsewhere detailed, Governor Crawford, appointed J. H. Edwards, V. B. Osborn and Ira Clark to be Commissioners of the county, E. W. Kingsbury to be Sheriff, and M. O. Hall, Clerk. The Commissioners met for the first time at Ellsworth on July 9, 1867. The following is a copy of the record entry of their first meeting:

"Ellsworth, July 9, 1867. Board met; present: J. H. Edwards, V. B. Osborn, and Ira Clark, who had been appointed Commissioners by Gov. Crawford; E. W. Kingsbury, Sheriff; M. O. Hall, Clerk. After being duly sworn in it was ordered that an election be held on August 10, 1867, for township and county officers, to serve till next general election, one polling place to be at Ellsworth, another at the house of Mr. Merriman, on Elkhorn Creek, also one on Thompson Creek, at the house of Mr. Clark, and one at Clear Creek, at the house of Mr. Farris"

In pursuance of this order, an election was held on the 10th of August, 1867, at which the following-named persons were elected to the respective offices:

Commissioners, V. B. Osborn, W. J. Ewing and J. H. Blake; Sheriff, E. W. Kingsbury; Clerk, M. O. Hall; Probate Judge, J. C. Hill; Register of Deeds, Thomas Delacour; Treasurer, M. Newton; County Attorney, J. H. Runkle; Superintendent of Public Instruction, C. C. Duncan; Surveyor, J. C. Ayers; Coroner, M. Joyce; and Assessor, J. E. New. These were the first regularly elected officers in the county. This perfected the organization of the county, prior to which it had been attached to Saline County for municipal purposes. The next meeting of the Board was held August 21, 1867, of which the record shows the following entry:

"Rented upper part of H. R. Johnson's house on the following condition, to-wit: The county rents it for three months from August 19, 1867, with the privilege till May 1, 1868. If the county only retain possession for the three months, Mr. Johnson is to put in a partition across the room as the Commissioners may direct, and the county is to pay $100 per month in advance after first payment, which will be paid on the 10th of September. If the county keeps it till May 1, 1868, they are only to pay $85 per month for whole term of lease, and Johnson is to plaster or ceil it when called upon.

V. B. OSBORN }
W. J. EWING } Commissioners."
J. H. BLAKE }

In the early part of 1871, the question of building a court-house began to be agitated, and after having been discussed pro and con for nearly a year, the question of voting bonds to the amount of $12,000 for that purpose was submitted to the people by the Commissioners. The greatest interest was not centered in the court house itself, but as to what particular place in the town of Ellsworth it would be located. Some wanted it one place and some another and for a time the contest waxed warm. The vote on the question of issuing the bonds took place on April 20, 1872, and the fact that the proposition was carried by only twenty-one majority will show how strongly the proposition was contested. The bond question having been settled in favor of their issuance, all interest became centered in the question as to where the court house should be erected. Some wanted it here and some wanted it there, and petitions and counter-petitions were presented to the Board on the subject. The question was finally settled by the Commissioners on June 7, 1872, by the passage of the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Board that it is better to locate the court house in a business part of the city, and that when said building is not sufficient for a court house it will sell for money enough to build a larger building, and whereas, Mr. Arthur Larkin having by his warranty deed, donated two lots to the county for such purposes, therefore it is ordered by this Board, that the court house shall be erected on Main street on lots, number one and two, in block number eighteen, in the town of Ellsworth, formerly known in the plats as the first addition to the said town, and that the County Clerk be instructed to accept the warranty deed of Mr. Larkin for said lots, and immediately place the same in the County Register's office for record.

It was thought that this action of the Board would end the contest, and steps were taken looking to the immediate erection of the building, but just about this time, J. W. Phelps and others, sued out a writ of injunction restraining the Commissioners from issuing the bonds. After some litigation the injunction suit was dismissed and the bonds were issued on July 30, 1872. The writ having been dissolved, the Commissioners instructed the County Attorney to institute suit against J. W. Phelps, Perry Hodgen and others, to recover damages to the amount of $1,500, sustained by their wrongful suing out of the injunction. How this terminated the records saith not, but the following year the court house was built. The first instrument recorded in the county, as shown by the records, is a bill of sale made by L. C. Palmer to D. Thomas Smith, conveying to him sixty-six yoke of working cattle, fifteen wagons, and yoke chains, sheets, camp outfit and all appurtenances belonging to a train belonging to him at Ellsworth. The consideration was $5,400, and was to be paid in ninety days, and if so paid, then the instrument was to be null and void. Dated August 12, 1867. The county officers for 1883 are as follows: H. F. Hoesman, J. F. Baker, Frederick Deisroth, Commissioners; A. H. Evans, Probate Judge; E. R. Lyons, County Clerk; A. B. Hepperly, Clerk of the District Court; J. A. Wiggins, Treasurer; G. E

Alden, Register of Deeds; S. Hamilton, Sheriff; L. H. Sewer, County Attorney: J. A. Hopkins, Superintendent of Public Instruction; F. W. Rossiter, Surveyor; E. R. Lang, Coroner.

AGRICULTURAL FAIRS, MANUFACTURES, ETC.

The Ellsworth County Agricultural, Mechanical and Fair Association was organized in 1877, for the purpose of advancing the agricultural, horticultural and mechanical interests of the county, and to carry out the objects of the association. Fairs are held annually, at which are exhibited stock, agricultural and horticultural products, cereals, products of the mechanical arts, and the various products of the garden and farm. The fair ground of the association contains forty acres, and is surrounded by a board fence. It is located about one-half mile east of Ellsworth, and about one-fourth of a mile north of the railway track. It is situated on the open prairie, with neither a tree nor bush on the premises. Necessary buildings, stalls and sheds have been erected to accommodate exhibitors, and there is also a good one-half mile track for the convenience of those who wish to interest themselves in trials of speed. Liberal premiums are offered to those who are the successful competitors in the various departments which they enter, and paid to those to whom they are awarded. The fair of 1882 was a grand success, the receipts more than paying all premiums and expenses. The association is under the management of a board of directors, and the present officers are: M. D. Morse, president; A. O. Whaley, secretary, and H. F. Hoesman, treasurer.

The manufactories in the county are very limited in number, and are confined, chiefly, to flouring mills, of which there are five in the county, but of this number there are only four in operation, the other one being just about completed and ready to start. The first mill in the county was built by Foster and Everett in 1876, at the town of Ellsworth. Late in 1879 it was completely destroyed by fire, all that was left of it being the four walls, which were of stone. In the following year it was re-built, and has been in operation since that time. It is a small mill, having only two run of stone, and is operated by steam. It represents a capital of $6,000, and employs six hands.

The next mill erected was by Getty & Larkin in 1879, at Ellsworth. This is the largest mill in the county, and was built at a cost of $12,000. It has five run of stone and one roller, and is fitted up with the latest improved machinery. It gives employment to ten hands.

Latshaw & Bro. erected the next mill in the county, at Wilson. It is a three-run mill and does an immense business for one of its size. It was built in 1880, and supplies a very extensive region with flour. To meet the demands upon it, the proprietors have to run it night and day to its fullest capacity.

A small mill has just been completed and put in operation in the vicinity of Green Garden, and still another has been erected at a small village in the southern portion of the county, named Cain City, which will be ready to be set in motion in the course of a few weeks.

The manufacturing establishment in which the greatest amount of capital is invested, is the sugar-mill at Ellsworth, which was erected in 1881. The amount invested is $25,000. But little has been done yet towards the manufacture of sugar; what little has been done in that direction being more of a test of the works then for profit. There was manufactured in the mill, however, during 1882, thirty thousand gallons of amber cane syrup, pronounced as fine as ever was put upon the market. This mill, as also every other in the county, is operated by steam.

About a mile east of Ellsworth, on the railway line, B. S. Rice has a cheese and butter factory, in which $6,000 are invested. There are two or three creameries in the county, the most important of which is that owned by George Gibson, about five miles east of Ellsworth. This creamery is fitted up with everything necessary to facilitate and perfect the manufacture of butter, of which immense quantities are manufactured, all of which is shipped to the Western market.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

The educational interests are among those to which people, generally, pay the most attention, and the people of Ellsworth County have been no way backward in manifesting an earnest desire for the advancement of education. Whenever, and wherever, it has been found necessary to build a schoolhouse for the accommodation of children in the neighborhood, though few in number, it has been erected. There are in the county sixty-six schoolhouses, of which one is brick, twenty stone, and forty-five frame. Excepting those at Ellsworth and Wilson, they are all located on the prairie, without a tree to shelter them from the storms of winter, or protect the children, in their minutes of amusements, from the burning sun of summer. Naked and exposed they stand, a great many of them without even as much as a fence. In a country where trees are of such easy growth, there can be no excuse for not protecting both the schoolhouses and the children who attend them, by sheltering groves. The number of school children enrolled in 1882 was nearly one hundred less than the number enrolled in 1881. This would indicate a decrease in population, and is accounted for by the fact that parties coming into the county, are desirous of establishing extensive ranches, buy out the settlers, who move away to other counties and States. These transactions have chiefly taken place in the eastern portion of the county, and last year two school districts, in which there were about fifty school children, were, in this manner, completely wiped out. The school population of the county in 1882, between the age of five and twenty-one years, was 2,971, being 1,546 males and 1,425 females. The total number of pupils enrolled, was 2,193, of which 1,116 were males and 1,077 females. Of this number the average daily attendance was 1,465, the males and females being about equal, the former being 747, and the latter 718. The total number of teachers required to supply the schools in the county, was eighty-two, but only sixty-two were employed, forty of whom were females, and twenty-two males. The average salary paid to teachers was: Males, $25.73, and females, $19.72. There were, during the year ending July 31, 1882, seventy-one applicants for teachers' certificates, none of whom were rejected, their average age being nineteen years. Of the seventy-one certificates granted, six were of the first grade, forty of the second, and twenty-five of the third. The receipts for all school purposes during the year, including the balance on hand at the close of the year preceding, was $17,137.82; and the amount expended was $15,878.64, leaving a balance on hand on July 31, 1882, of $1,259.18. The difference between the estimated value of school buildings and grounds in the county, and the bonded indebtedness is $14,464, the former being $39,760, and the latter $25,296. The schools, generally, are well furnished with seats, desks, globes, maps, charts, and other apparatus to aid the teacher and pupils, and facilitate the imparting of instruction.

The following statistics, taken from the latest returns made by the respective Township Assessors for 1882, will show how the county has advanced in material wealth during the decade of its existence, because, virtually, there was little or no agricultural settlement in the county until 1872, and even later. The statistical record in the County Clerk's office shows that the number of acres in farms in the county in 1882 was 257,188, the value of which is set down at $1,528,432. There were ninety farm dwellings erected during the year, valued at $38,510. The number of acres sown to fall wheat in 1881, was 70,220; rye, 19,742. The number of acres sown to spring wheat in 1882, was 2,3 6; corn, 36,191; barley, 209; oats, 5,217; buckwheat, 65; Irish potatoes, 469; sweet potatoes, 49; sorghum, 2,092; castor beans, 33; flax 80; broom corn, 340; millet and Hungarian, 1,795; pearl millet, 31; rice corn, 164. The number of acres of grass in cultivation and under fence, were as follows: Timothy meadow, 125; clover meadow, 22; clover pasture, 2 ; other grasses, 436; and prairie pasture, 88,474. There were cut in 1882, tame hay to the amount of 9,871 tons, and of prairie hay, 7,411 tons. The value of garden produce marketed during the year ending March 1, 1882, was $2,044, and eggs and poultry were marketed to the amount of $8,305. The cheese product amounted to 33,265 pounds, and butter to 188,252 pounds. There were in the county 3,118 horses, 445 mules and asses, 2,946 milch cows, 8,708 other cattle, 16,880 sheep, and 6,283 swine. The value of animals slaughtered and sold for slaughter, amounted to $138,765, and the wool clipped was 72,072 pounds. The interest taken in horticulture was represented by the following number of fruit trees in bearing: Apple, 702; pear, 105; peach, 11,717; plum, 565; cherry, 612. Not in bearing: Apple, 14,343; pear, 1,594; peach, 37,001; plum, 2,980; and cherry, 2,578. The fences of the county represent a value of about $1 .0,000, proportioned as to kind as follows: Board fence, 7,250 rods; rail, 2,062; stone, 9,122; hedge, 34,918; wire, 56,018. Forestry is receiving some attention in the county, the number of acres devoted to this interest, in 1882, being as follows: Walnut, 290 acres; maple, 73; honey locust, 25; cottonwood, 617; and other varieties, 3 8, making an aggregate of 1,308 acres. A good evidence of the adaptability of the soil to arboriculture is given on the farm of W. S. Gile, who resides on Section 36, Township 16, Range 6 west. It is what is called a bottom farm, the "Colonel" having settled upon it eleven years ago. Since then he has set out with his own hands 80,000 trees of different varieties, the oldest of which is now ten years old. Some of these are forty feet high and eighteen inches in diameter, and all are in a good, healthy condition.

* County Seat.

ELLSWORTH.

Ellsworth is the county seat of Ellsworth County, and is located on the Kansas Pacific Railway, about two hundred and twenty miles west of Kansas City. The original town site was surveyed in the spring of 1867, by William McGrath and Col. Greenwood. The town site was selected and laid out by a Town Company, of which H. J. Latshaw was president. As originally surveyed and platted, it was located on the north bank of the Smoky Hill River, and embraced all of the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter, a part of the northwest quarter, and a part of the southwest quarter of Section 28, and a part of the northeast quarter of Section 29, Township 15 south, Range 8 west. There are few towns that had such rapid growth for the first few months of their existence as had Ellsworth. The plat of the town and certificate was filed for record in Saline County, to which Ellsworth County was then attached for judicial and municipal purposes, on the 8th day of May, 1867.

Scarcely was the town site surveyed and platted, when buildings began to spring up like mushrooms, E. W. Kingsbury leading the way by building the first house, which was known as the "Stockade," and which was used in the double capacity of store and hotel. At that time there was scarcely a settler in the county, but the belief that Ellsworth would be the western terminus of the Kansas Pacific road for some time, caused people to flock there by the dozen. No sooner was the way opened, than buildings sprung up as if by magic, and three months after the first house was built, the following parties were engaged in business: Lockstone & Phelps, groceries and provisions; O. Hall, groceries and provisions; Coffin & Haikes, groceries and provisions; J. L. Bell, tinware and stoves; Arthur Larkin, hotel; Geiger & Co., dry goods and clothing; Robbins & Matthews, groceries and provisions; H. F. Hoesman had a building up, but his stock of goods had not yet arrived; Vaughn & Sweezy, groceries and provisions; Andrew Schmitt, boots and shoes; Chick, Brown & Co., and —— Nye, forwarding and commission houses. There was a wonderful growth for less than three months.

In those days, whisky was one of the staple articles of a well-regulated grocery store, and the grocer that tried to do business without it, was not troubled with many customers. At that time there were stationed at Fort Harker, distant some four miles from Ellsworth, about 1,500 soldiers and Government employes, who patronized the grocery stores to a wonderful extent, most of whom consumed what they bought on the premises or carried it away in liquid form. Another source of trade, and not a small one either, was derived from the long trains moving westward across the plains, nearly all of which, at that time, followed the Smoky Hill route.

The Smoky Hill, in Ellsworth County, is dignified by being styled a river, but in dry seasons the stranger will look for it in vain. He will see a small stream of water resembling a brooklet, over which a child might step without wetting its foot, but when it does assume the dignity of a river, it does it in grand style. On the 8th day of June, 1867, it suddenly arose to this dignity, and in a short time the flourishing town of Ellsworth was standing in about four feet of water. Many of the buildings were washed from their foundations, and all kinds of business was brought to a sudden stop. To make the condition of the people still more critical, the Indians, about that time, began to hunger for scalps and plunder, and scarcely had the waters subsided, when a band of Cheyennes began to commit depredations. They killed one man about three miles west of town, and about two weeks afterwards, they killed three men between Ellsworth and Wilson. The citizens formed themselves into reliefs and guarded the town, and one night the Indians came within a quarter of a mile of town and ran off quite a lot of stock.

The flood and the Indians were bad enough, but a still greater calamity awaited them. About the 1st of July, 1867, the cholera broke out simultaneously at Ellsworth and Fort Harker, and made terrible ravages at both places. People fled from the dread plague, as though death was about to seize them. During the two or three weeks the scourge raged, it carried off about three hundred people at the Fort, and about fifty of the citizens of Ellsworth. Out of a population of nearly one thousand, only about forty remained, all the rest having fled.

The Town Company having been brought to a knowledge of their mistake in locating the town on the low ground close to the river, immediately set to work and had Mr. Marian survey and plat a portion of the south half of Section 20, Township 15 south, Range 8 west, which was placed on record July 18, 1867, as the Town Company's first addition. It is on the land embraced in this addition, and subsequent additions made at various times by King, Briscoe, Hodgens and Butler, that the present town of Ellsworth now stands. When the addition of the Town Company was surveyed and platted, lots corresponding with those in the original site were given in exchange to those who had purchased, and all the buildings were moved up to the new site, except that known as the "Stockade," which subsequently was burned down.

In a short time the town was again on the high road to prosperity, and the business men received an accession to their numbers in 1867, by the arrival of M. Goldsomm, who opened up a general outfitting store, and Walker & Co., who embarked in the grocery business. In 1868, however, the railroad pushed westward, and a great many of the merchants of Ellsworth pushed westward with it. In that year, also, the Indians again threatened the place and ran off a quantity of stock, almost from the limits of town, belonging to Sanderson and White, who kept a livery stable at that time. On that raid they killed a man named Dougherty, so that, what with the flood, cholera and Indians, the first year in the history of Ellsworth was a very trying one. As if these were not enough to contend against, right upon their heels came a set of roughs and cut-throats who undertook to run the town, and who, by their desperado deeds, sought to rule the people by establishing a "reign of terror." Two desperate characters, by the name of Craig and Johnson, were the recognized leaders of this gang, and, like all such scoundrels, undertook to govern with a high hand.

Finally the citizens determined to rid the town of this gang of bandits, and, to accomplish this end, a number of them organized themselves into a vigilance committee. They concluded that the speediest way to disperse the cut-throats was to strike at the head, and one night Craig and Johnson, after committing some of their depredations, were seized, carried to the Smoky, and there hung to the limb of a cottonwood tree. The others of the gang took the hint and hied themselves to other regions, and Ellsworth became a peaceable town.

In 1868, Ellsworth was incorporated as a village and was governed by a council of five, of which J. H. Edwards was president. The first hotel in town was built by Arthur Larkin in the fall of 1867. It was a frame building and stood on North Main Street, near Lincoln Avenue.

In the fall of 1869 the town was visited by quite an extensive fire which originated in the "Larkin House," of which, at that time, the Betee Bros. were proprietors. The fire spread with great rapidity, and before it could be extinguished, all the buildings in the block in which the hotel was located, and also part of those in the block west, were utterly destroyed. The damage entailed by the fire amounted to over $15,000.

In 1869 a small stone schoolhouse was erected, which was the first school building in town, although prior to that time, school had been taught by a Mr. Wellington in a small frame building south of the railroad track.

In 1868, two strangers came to Ellsworth, and one day, while in a billiard saloon, one of them lay down upon a billiard table and went to sleep. The other, not liking this, took out his revolver and commenced tapping him on the head to wake him up. He succeeded, and upon the man opening his eyes and seeing the other with a revolver in his hands, he immediately ran for the door, and just as he was passing out, the other deliberately shot him dead. Next day the murderer graced the limb of a cottonwood on the banks of the Smoky. Ellsworth was no place for evil-doers at that time, and they soon learned to give it a wide berth.

Except for one or two incidents, 1871, like the year that preceded it, would have been an uneventful one. It happened in that year, that a party of Pawnee Indians were returning northward from a marauding expedition, in which they had been engaged against a tribe to which they were hostile, and had got as far north as Ellsworth, when a Deputy United States Marshal, named Fox, collected a posse and attacked the unsuspecting and peaceable Pawnees. Fox and his gang killed one of the Indians in the streets of Ellsworth, and chased the band to the Smoky, where they killed three more, and took a number of them prisoners and locked them up. The citizens stigmatized the act as uncalled for, cold-blooded murder, and set those at liberty whom Fox and his gang had placed in confinement.

The year 1872 was one of considerable improvement, and some good buildings were erected. In that year the court house was built, a very fine two-story brick building. The lower floor is divided into county offices, and the upper floor is used for a court room. Immediately in rear of the court house a solidly built stone jail was erected, two stories high, the upper story being finished off as a residence for the sheriff, while the lower story is partitioned off into cells.

In that year, also, Minnick & Hounson erected a very neat two-story brick building on South Main Street, the lower part of which was fitted up for a drug store, and the upper part as a hall, which the Masons rented as a lodge room. It was also in that year that Col. Gore erected the "Cottage Hotel" and a livery stable in connection therewith, and not the least improvement of that year was an iron bridge, three hundred feet long, across the Smoky, which was built at a cost of $15,000. Among the many fine improvements of 1872, the most important was that made by Arthur Larkin in the re-building of a hotel, to take the place of the one that had been destroyed by fire in the fall of 1869. This new hotel, erected by Mr. Larkin, was a fine brick structure, large and commodious, well built and neatly finished. It was not built on the same ground occupied by the old "Larkin House," but was moved a lot or two west, and was built on the corner of North Main Street and Lincoln Avenue. The old name was dropped, and the new hotel entered upon its career under the name of the "Grand Central," which it still retains. It has a frontage on North Main Street of 48 feet, and on Lincoln Avenue of 90 feet. It was the grandest improvement made in the city up to that time.

The year previous the town had been advanced a grade, by being promoted to the rank of a city of the third class, of which H. F. Hoesman was honored by being made first mayor. After the first year of its existence, the town had no spasmodic growth, but grew slowly and steadily, those who came, coming with the intention to stay. The progress of the place, up to 1872, was not confined to the building of business houses alone, as a great many very neat and comfortable residences had been built in different portions of the city, but chiefly north of the railway track.

Population had so increased that the small stone schoolhouse which had been built in 1869, became altogether inadequate in 1873 to meet the demands of the community for school facilities. To supply the deficiency existing in this regard, bonds to the amount of $9,000 were voted, and a very fine school building, not large, but neat and ample, was erected. It is a two-story brick building, surmounted by a cupola, and contains six rooms, which, with the old building, which is still used as a primary department, furnishes ample accommodation for all the pupils that attend school.

The year 1874 was more remarkable for disasters than for progress. That was the year of the grasshopper raid, the effect of which was felt by the merchants of Ellsworth, but, in addition to this, a disaster more direct and tangible in its results occurred on the 8th day of August of that year in the shape of another destructive conflagration. How the fire originated is not clearly shown, but its disasterous effects were none the less felt. It swept away the entire block of frame buildings on the east side of Douglas Avenue, between First and North Main streets, and also several on North Main Street. The loss occasioned by that fire is set down at not less than $25,000. No sooner was the fire extinguished than the work of clearing away the debris began, preparatory to the erection of other buildings. George Seitz, Andrew Schmitt, Z. Jackson and Leo Herzig, immediately set to work and erected, simultaneously, and side by side, fronting on North Main Street, four one-story stone buildings, or rather, one building containing four store-rooms. That of George Seitz stands on the corner of Douglas Avenue and North Main Street, which is handsomely fitted up and occupied by him as a drug store. The one adjoining this on the east, is owned by Andrew Schmitt, and is occupied by him as a boot and shoe store. To the eastward of these are the two rooms put up and owned by Z. Jackson and Leo Herzig.

In the fall of 1873, the cattle trade commenced coming to Ellsworth, and with it came a new element into society, which, while making business somewhat lucrative, was rather detrimental to morality. In 1874, Ellsworth was the headquarters of the cattle trade, and the place was known as a cow-boy town. The thugs, blacklegs and cut-throats, with the attendant train of prostitutes that usually accompany them, which the cattle trade brought to Ellsworth, made it, for a time, far from being a place in which a piously inclined person would choose to reside. Gambling, drinking, shooting, and those sinful practices in which women lost to every sense of shame and virtue seem to take delight, constituted their greatest pastime. One season of such characters satisfied the people of Ellsworth that the evils of the cattle trade, or rather those that followed it, were more detrimental to the real interests of the place than it was benefitted by any advantages derived from it in point of increased trade, and when, in the following year the cattle men took their trade farther west, the citizens of Ellsworth were very much relieved, and felt greatly rejoiced. During the short time the cattle trade remained at Ellsworth, no less than ten persons were shot and killed either on the street or in some gambling den. The Sheriff of the county, C. G. Whitney, met his death at the hands of one of the desperate characters then infesting the town, named Bill Thompson, who claimed to be a Texan. The revolver or bowie-knife was the arbiter of all disagreements, and were frequently used when all the disagreement that existed was, that one man had a pocket-book and the other wanted it. Thompson and the Sheriff had disagreed about some frivolous matter, and scarcely had they exchanged a half dozen words, when Thompson's revolver concluded the argument by silencing the Sheriff forever.

This dangerous element having been removed, the town settled down to peace and quietness; and if the merchants did not take in quite as many dollars, they, and the citizens generally, breathed a purified moral atmosphere. The destruction of the crops in 1874, made times exceedingly dull in the year that followed, and a great many became discouraged. The worst had not come yet, however, for another disastrous blow was about to fall on Ellsworth that the people little expected. On November 12, 1875, another fire struck the town and carried away an entire block on South Main Street, running west from Douglas Avenue. Minnick's brick building, the upper part of which was used as a Masonic Hall, perished in that fire. The loss occasioned by the fire was not less than $50,000. Prior to that time, South Main constituted the principal business street of the city, but the November blaze wiped the greater portion of it out of existence. It was then abandoned as a business quarter of the city, and the merchants who had been burned out moved north of the railway track, where they re-established themselves, chiefly on Douglas Avenue.

In the spring of 1876, a handsome stone block was erected on the east side of Douglas Avenue, between First and Second streets. This block is two stories high, and was built by E. A. Powers, I. W. Phelps, Arthur Larkin and J. L. Bell. The building on the corner of First Street and Douglas Avenue was built by E. A. Powers for a bank, which he continues to use as such. The institution is known as the Powers Bank, and was established by E. A. Powers in 1870. In 1882 it passed under the control of a company, and was incorporated in November of that year. The capital of the bank is $50,000, and the officers of the institution are: E. A. Powers, president; I. W. Phelps, vice-president; J. W. Powers, cashier, and W. F. Tompkins, assistant cashier. This is the only bank in the city. The next building to the bank is the one erected by I. W. Phelps, and is used by him as a grocery store; the next was put up by Arthur Larkin and is now used by him as a dry goods store; the fourth and last of the block was put up by J. L. Bell, which he uses for a hardware store. These four buildings constitute one of the most substantial and neatest blocks in Central Kansas. Subsequent to the building of this block, Mr. Larkin, finding that his room was too small for his business, widened the store by tearing down the hall partition and added to its depth by building fifty-five feet to the east end. This made the dimensions of the store 26¼x125 feet. Having done this, he built a stair six feet wide from the center of the store to the floor above. The ground floor of the original building is used for dry goods exclusively, while that of the addition is devoted to clothing, hats, caps, boots and shoes. The upper floor is the salesroom for carpets, rugs, mattings and oil cloths, also ladies' cloaks, mantillas, dolmans, sacques, etc. This block, extending from the bank to Bell's hardware store, is the best improvement yet made in the city. That same year, 1876, and adjoining this block on the north, two one-story stone buildings were erected, one by E. G. Minnick and the other by D. B. Long.

The year 1876 was one of substantial improvements, experience having taught the people that wooden buildings were the poorest kind of protection against fire. The fires of 1869, 1874 and 1875, by which property to the amount of $100,000 was destroyed, gave them a lesson of which they took advantage, and the result was, that good, substantial business houses were erected of either brick or stone. Three times during its short existence had Ellsworth been fire-tried, and yet a fourth one was close at hand. In March, 1877, another fire visited the town, carrying away the only remaining block that stood on South Main Street. This was located between Douglas and Lincoln avenues, but the fire made quick work of it and a reminder of it can still be seen in some old stone walls that stand south of the railroad track, a short way from the depot. The loss occasioned by this fire was estimated at $20,000.

If 1877 was a year of some disaster, it was also a year of great improvement. J. Beebe, built in that year a very fine two-story stone building on North Main Street which he uses for a grocery, furniture and hardware store. Two lots east of Beebe's, a similar building was put up by F. Bornschiem, which is now used for a bakery and restaurant. Adjoining this to the west, Dr. Seevert erected a one-story stone building, and next to this H. Rainelsberg put up a very handsomely finished two-story double building, the ground floor of which is in one room and is used by him as a clothing and dry goods store, while the upper floor is used partly for goods and partly for a residence. The erection of these buildings made almost a solid stone block on the north side of North Main Street between Lincoln and Douglas avenues. In 1877, Arthur Larkin built the Golden Belt elevator which is operated by steam-power. Its capacity is between 15,000 and 20,000 bushels. If 1877 started in disastrously, it closed with a good record, and in the number and character of improvements made, far excelled any year that preceded it.

The place was now commencing to bear a citified appearance and to assume an air of solidity and healthful prosperity. Up to that time no substantial improvements had been made on the west side of Douglas Avenue, but in 1877 a commencement was made by Tom May, who erected a two-story stone building on the northwest corner of Douglas Avenue and First Street.

Notwithstanding the great improvement the city had made, and the love of the people for law and order, the ushering in of 1878 found but one church building in town which had been built by the Catholics in 1869. It is a neat frame edifice, the construction of which cost about $1,000. Although there were no church buildings save the one mentioned; there had been for some time two or three church organizations. As early as 1873, Rev. Levi Sternberg organized a Presbyterian Church of nine members. By 1878, this little band had grown to be quite strong, and in that year commenced the erection of a very neat frame church building which was finished in 1879, at a cost of $1,500. The church has now a membership of seventy-five, and the present pastor is Rev. J. S. Carruthers. This and the Catholic Church are the only church edifices in town, although the Methodists and Lutherans have quite strong organizations and resident pastors.

The year 1878 was not very remarkable for any great improvements, those that were made being confined chiefly to the erection of residences. Two elevators were erected that year, one by Schmucker & Work, and one by W. G. Smith. Both are operated by horse-power, and of about equal capacity, 10,000 bushels each. The year 1878 closed with about as many business houses in the place as the requirements of the county demanded, but Arthur Larkin thinking that his "Grand Central Hotel" and the "Cottage House," did not furnish sufficient hotel accommodation, erected the "American House," a very fine stone building which stands on the south side of the railroad track, a short distance from the depot. Shortly after the hotel was built he sold it to John Kelly, who is still owner and proprietor. About the only substantial improvement made in 1879, was a brick building on the west side of Douglas Avenue, north of and adjoining the one erected by Tom May in 1877.

Towards the close of 1879, Ellsworth was doomed to experience another fire, which, though not quite so disastrous as either of those that preceded it was severe enough as it destroyed the only flouring-mill in the county at that time. The mill that was swept out of existence by this fire had been built by Everett & Foster in 1876, and, fortunately for the town, stood far enough away from either the business or resident portion of the place as not to endanger the safety of either. The loss of this mill was a source of great inconvenience to the people, and farmers had to take their grists to other counties to be ground. A company was formed the following year and the mill was rebuilt, and is known as the "Foster Mill." It is of rather small dimensions, has only two run of stone and is operated by steam-power.

The same year that Foster's mill was rebuilt, Getty & Larkins built a more extensive one in the west part of town which is also operated by steam-power. The building is frame, and all the machinery of the mill is of the latest and most improved pattern. This mill has five run of stone, and also makes flour by the roller process. The capacity of the mill is about 150 barrels of flour per day. In connection with the mill is an elevator of 30,000 bushels capacity.

In 1881 the "Ellsworth Sugar Works Company" was formed, and that same year quite an extensive sugar-mill was erected in the western part of town. The capital invested in this mill is $25,000. It is operated by steam, and when running gives employment to seventy-five hands. Its success is, as yet, a matter of speculation, but if properly managed, it cannot fail to be a profitable investment.

Another of the improvements of 1881, was the erection of quite a large block on the east side of Douglas Avenue between First and Second streets, by Z. Jackson. The north, south and west walls of this block are stone and the front wall is brick. The ground floor is divided into three storerooms, and the front part of the upper floor is partitioned off into offices, while the remainder of it is handsomely fitted up for an opera hall. On the west side of the hall is the stage and dressing rooms, and a gallery extends along the entire length of the east side. The hall is seated with chairs and the stage well mounted with scenery tastefully and artistically painted. Four hundred persons can be seated comfortably in the hall, and by a little crowding, five hundred could find room.

The only improvement of any note made in 1882, was the two-story stone building erected by H. Nunamaker, on Douglas Avenue, and an elevator put up by the Foster Mill Company, the capacity of which is 20,000 bushels.

In 1881 there lived in the southeastern portion of the county a man named Phillip Angley. He lived by himself in a "dug out." This kind of a habitation is what constitutes the cellar or basement of an ordinary house, or a hole dug in the ground, over which is placed a roof of prairie grass and earth. Sometimes they are only dug to a depth of three or four feet, but in such cases sod walls are built to about the same height above the ground as the depth of the dug out is below. It was in one of these abodes that Phillip Angley lived, and there his nephew Graham, found him in 1881, when he came to live with him.

Angley had neither wife nor child, and before the advent of his nephew, lived in his primitive abode solitary and alone. Uncle and nephew got along all right until January, 1882, when Angley sold some land to a neighbor' taking the money he received as the purchase price with him to the dug out. It was fatal money to him, because, for it, his nephew taking advantage of him while he was asleep, murdered him, and after getting possession of the money set fire to the rafters that supported the roof and then fled towards Ellsworth. When the rafters were so weakened by fire that they could not support the roof, all the earth on the top fell into the dug-out and covered up the murdered man except his feet. In this position he was discovered a few days after by some of his neighbors who dug him out, and then it was ascertained that he had been foully murdered. Graham, the murderer, was in Ellsworth lavishly spending the murdered man's money when the news of the deed reached town. Suspicion instantly fell upon him as being the perpetrator of the crime, and he was lodged in jail. While in jail he was called upon by another uncle of his, named Shafer, to whom he made a full confession of the crime. That night he was taken from the jail and hung to a telegraph pole along side the railway track nearly opposite the court house. At that time there was another murderer in jail named Rose, and after hanging Graham, the crowd went back to the jail to get him and serve him in like manner, but the Sheriff, anticipating their action, had the prisoner removed to a place of safety.

Having in the foregoing, given briefly the history of the town from its commencement until the close of 1882, it may be interesting to some to be told how the place received the name of Ellsworth. Upon this point, different and erroneous beliefs exist: Some believe that the town of Ellsworth being the county-seat, took as its name that of the county, and that the latter was named in honor of Col. E. E. Ellsworth, who was killed by Jackson in Alexandria, Virginia, and who, it is said was the first victim of the war of the rebellion. The name of the town is not derived from that source, but from a fort that was built during the war about four miles east of the present town site, at a point where the old Santa Fe trail crosses the Smoky Hill. This fort became known as Fort Ellsworth, and from this the town of Ellsworth derived its name. As showing the moving disposition of the people that came to Ellsworth, it may be remarked that the population of the place now, is just about what it was at the end of the first year of its existence. Hundreds came and hundreds went, and each year found the population about the same in number, but different in people. The town receives little or none of this floating population now, and the place has settled down to a permanent, steady growth. Its present population is about one thousand, and those who come now, come to stay. The town is beautifully situated on the northeast bank of the Smoky Hill River, on a wide plateau of second bottom land. To the north of town the ground takes a sudden rise and stretches away into high table-land. To the south is Smoky, with a solitary tree at intervals marking its course, and beyond is the high and broken upland. The business of the place is now so fixed that merchants can make their calculations as to trade, to a considerable degree of certainty. The business portion of the town is mostly substantially built of stone and brick, and some of the stones will compare very favorably with those in much larger places. Those engaged in mercantile pursuits, transact a large amount of business during the year, and the fact that 400,000 bushels of wheat passed through the three elevators in town in 1882, will be sufficient to show the kind of country the merchants have to depend upon for trade. The business of the town is represented by three general merchandising stores; seven grocery stores; two boot and shoe stores; two drug stores; three hardware dealers; one dealer in furniture; two lumber dealers; one millinery establishment; three hotels; one jewelry store; two restaurants; two harness-shops; one wagon and carriage-shop; three livery stables; one bakery; two flouring-mills; one sugar-mill, and three grain-elevators, every branch seeming to be carrying on a prosperous business.

THE PRESS AND SOCIETIES.

Ellsworth Reporter.—This paper was established November, 1870, by M. C. Davis, who continued to publish the paper as sole editor and proprietor for two years, when he sold out to G. A. Atwood, under whose management it remained about three years, when it passed into the hands of Inman & Montgomery, by whom it was published about two years, when it again reverted to Atwood, who held possession about a year, when it passed into the hands of R. F. Kellogg, who retained it about a year, and then sold it to W. A. Gebhardt. Mr. Gebhardt took possession in July, 1879, and in November, 1880, parted with a half interest to George Huycke, since which time the paper has continued to be published with Gebhardt & Huycke as sole editors and proprietors. The paper is a nine-column, four-page weekly, is Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 1,800. The office is well fitted up, and has a steam-power printing and job press.

Rural West.—This paper is published at Ellsworth, and was established in May, 1880, by W. E. Fosnot, in whose possession it still remains, and who continues to publish it as sole editor and proprietor. It is a seven-column, four-page weekly, and has a circulation of 500. In politics it is neutral.

There are three lodges in the town, representing three different benevolent societies, as follows:

Masons.—Ellsworth Lodge, No. 146, A., F. & A. M., was instituted July 21, 1873, under dispensation from the Grand Lodge, dated June 28, 1873. The lodge was organized with ten charter members, and its first officers were: H. F. Hoesman, W. M.; William Micher, S. W.; M. E. Young, J. W.; George Seitz, Treas.; W. H. Brinkman, Sec.; Robert Baker, S. D.; H. W. Vance, J. D.; E. A. Kesler, T.; Samuel Hamilton, S. S.; and James Young, J. S. The lodge has now a membership of sixty-five, and the present officers are: George Huycke, W. M.; Samuel Hamilton, S. W.; R. R. Lyons, J. W.; H. Nunamaker, Treas.; J. A. Wiggins, Sec.; M. K. Brundige, S. D.; George Seitz, J. D.; D. C. Bascom, S. S.; S. Atwood, J. S., and Joseph Kalina, T. The charter of the lodge bears date October 22, 1874.

Ellsworth Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, was instituted in June, 1882, and is yet working under dispensation. The officers are: R. R. Lyons, H. P.; H. F. Hoesman, K.; W. H. Gebhardt, Secy.; J. L. Bell, P. S.

Odd Fellows.—Ellsworth Lodge, No. 109, I. O. O. F., was organized September 3, 1873, with six charter members. The first officers of the lodge were: J. W. Powers, N. G.; M. Amrine, V. G.; M. C. Close, R. S.; James Veatch, P. S.; A. J. Logback, Treas.; A. Houson, Con.; S. G. Pepper, W.; C. E. Bell, I. G.; and Ed. Schermerhorn, O. G. For some time the lodge made but very slow progress, and at one time its condition was such as almost to compel a surrender of its charter. Through the activity of some of its members, a new life was instilled into it, and it is now in a very flourishing condition, and meets weekly in an elegantly furnished hall over the Powers Bank. The lodge has now a membership of forty, and the present officers are: A. Flanders, N. G.; G. A. Collett, V. G.; R. W. Carter, R. S.; N. B. McCammon, P. S.; J. Powers, Treas.; I. E. Lloyd, Con.; T. J. Noble, W.; August Feistal, I. G.; J. P. Nunamaker, O. G.

G. A. R.—Elmer E. Ellsworth Post No. 22, G. A. R., was instituted in September, 1879, with eleven charter members. This post was named in honor of Col. E. E. Ellsworth, who fell in Alexandria, Va., the first victim of the war. The first officers of the post were: J. G. Wiggin, P. C.; John Kelly, S. V. C.; A. Schmitt, J. V. C.; F. Melville, O. of D., William Tibbitts, O. of G.; C. L. Myers, Adjt.; J. Stoddard, Q. M.; G. E. Alden, Chap. The post has now sixty-five members, and the present officers are: W. A. Gebhardt, P. C.; G. W. Sparr, S. V. C.; W. A. Talkadorff, J. V. C.; H. J. Patterson, O. of D.; Mr. Hoagland, O. of G.; C. L. Myers, Adjt.; A. Smith, Q. M.; A. R. Hepperly, Chap.

Ellsworth has been sorely tested by fire, by flood, and by cholera epidemic, to say nothing of the other scourges, in shape of desperadoes and other loose characters with which all frontier towns at some time of their existence have been afflicted. All these have been survived, and Ellsworth now is one of the thriving towns of Central Kansas.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

He was the first Master of the Ellsworth Lodge No. 146, A., F. & A. M., and for several years. He is also a member of Ellsworth Chapter U. D. and Askelon Commandery Salina.

Z. JACKSON, postmaster, was born in Erie County, Pa., in 1831; moved to Knox County, Ill., in 1839, when a boy nine years old; was raised on a farm; taught school; bought out a store and commenced merchandising at Cambridge, Ill., in 1851; built a steam flouring-mill in that town in 1853; went to Washington County, Neb., in 1854; published the Desoto Pilot in 1857-58, and also speculated in real estate; went to Pike's Peak in 1859; there became one of the incorporators of a mountain toll road; was a member of the Legislature under the old "Provisional Government," in 1860; returned to Nebraska and enlisted in the army, in 1862, in Company B, Second Nebraska Cavalry; re-enlisted in the First Batallion Nebraska Veteran Cavalry, and was mustered as Captain of his Company in February, 1864. Was in the Indian service on the Upper Missouri River in 1862-63, was mustered out at the close of the war, in 1865, and came to Kansas the same year. Made the first location at Junction City, Kan., and built a house there in 1866. Went to Mitchell County, in Solomon Valley, the same year, and built the first log cabin in that county, but soon abandoned it and returned to Junction City. First came to Ellsworth County in June, 1867, locating at Fort Harker, where he engaged in the produce, vegetable and fruit business until the spring of 1869, then farmed two years in connection with the dairy business. He then followed general merchandising at the Fort, in partnership with A. Larkin, eighteen months; moved the store to Ellsworth in 1872, and continued in the business three years longer. Was a member of the Kansas Legislature in 1868-69; was County Commissioner in 1871-72. He was appointed postmaster in 1874, holding the office ever since. Has always had a farm. He stands firmly "on deck," taking no thought of the "undiscovered country."

DR. E. R. LANG, physician and surgeon, came to Ellsworth in August, 1881, where he has since continued the practice of medicine. He was born in Knox County, Ohio, February 6, 1848. Educated at Kenyon College, Ohio. Graduated from the medical department of Worcester University of Cleveland, Ohio, 1871. He began the practice of medicine in Marinette, Wis., where he remained six years. He then went to Ottumwa, Iowa, and practiced two years; thence to Ellsworth, Kan. He is now United States Penson Examining Surgeon for Central Kansas. Elected County Coroner in the fall of 1881. He is a member of Masonic Order, I. O. O. F., and Knights of Pythias. Was married June 4, 1873, to Miss Agnes Smith, of Fond du Lac, Wis. They have one daughter—Marion E. His wife died in March, 1877.

ARTHUR LARKIN, merchant, was born in the city of Dublin, Ireland, on the 20th day of August, 1832. He was the third child born to Thomas and Anne Larkin. His early education was received at a Seminary on Wicklow Street, Dublin, under the charge of Mr. William Stapleton, who, prior to the establishment of the Seminary, had been one of the faculty of Trinity College, Dublin. His father was a coal merchant and Arthur, while yet a boy, assisted his father in his business, by attending to his collections. When sixteen years old, seized with a desire to try his fortune in the New World, he left Dublin and proceeded to Liverpool, where, on the 6th day of July 1848, he engaged passage on a sailing vessel bound for New York, and arrived at the latter city in July. Shortly after his arrival he hired to a farmer residing at Cranberry Neck, N. J., for whom he went to work. After trying farming for about a year, he enlisted in the regular army and served as a Texas Ranger during two terms of service under Captain Ford, and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in 1861. After leaving the service he married Miss Alice Baird, in Leavenworth, who was a native of Indiana. By this marriage six children have been born to him, three of whom are dead and three yet living, and all born at Ellsworth, Kan. Thomas, the eldest, was born November 20, 1869, and died April 18, 1870. Arthur, the oldest now living, was born February 28, 1871. Mary Ann, born September 21, 1873; died October 28, 1873. Francis, born June 25, 1875. Eddie, born October 13, 1878; died January 4, 1881. Hubert F., born February 6, 1880. Quitting the army, Mr. Larkin engaged in the restaurant business at Leavenworth, and while thus engaged, he fitted up a wagon train and made a freighting trip to Denver and back. In the fall of 1866 he left Leavenworth and moved to Junction City, where he re-established himself in the restaurant business and continued freighting from there to the end of the Kansas Pacific Railway, which was then at Salina. In the spring of 1867, he moved from Junction City to Ellsworth, where he built and opened the first hotel in that town. In the latter part of 1868, he embarked in the mercantile business, opening up with a line of dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps. Since then he has established a store at Lincoln Center, and another at Little River, in Rice County. In company with Mr. Getty, he built a large flouring-mill at Ellsworth, in which he still has a half interest. He also deals quite extensively in live-stock, and superintends the working of two large farms, which he owns in the vicinity of Ellsworth. This great accumulation of wealth in the short space of twenty years, is the result of hard work, energy, industry and economy.

IRA E. LLOYD, of the law firm of Lloyd & Evans, was born in De Kalb County, Ill., in May 25, 1850. Self-educated; began study of law in 1868; admitted to the bar at Emmetsburg, Iowa, in 1872, where he commenced practice. Came to Ellsworth, Kan., in 1873; held office of County Attorney in 1875-76-77-78. In the spring of 1879 formed partnership with C. J. Evans, in the practice of law, and in the real estate, insurance and collection business. In 1878 he married Miss Etta Huntington, a native of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the I. O. O. F.

R. R. LYONS, County Clerk and County Attorney, first located in Ellsworth, June 8, 1878, where he engaged in the practice of law. Was elected to the present office in the fall of 1880. WILSON.

Wilson, is the name of a thriving town located about one mile and a half north of the Smoky Hill River, in the northwestern portion of the county, and almost on the line between Russell and Ellsworth counties. It is the last station on the Kansas Pacific Railway in Ellsworth County. While the town is known by the name of Wilson, and is so set down on all the maps, the plats and records in the office of Register of Deeds fail to show any such town. The name of the town as shown by the records is "Bosland," but for some reason or other, this name has been discarded and "Wilson" substituted, and by the latter it is generally known.

The originators of the town were impressed with the idea that it would become the greatest cattle point in the West, and in casting about for a name, struck upon "Bosland" as being the most appropriate, believing it would be as attractive to cattle as the co-bos, co-bos, of the milkmaid is to the cows. This idea proved to be rather delusive, because "Bosland" never became famous as a cattle point, and the name was soon lost in that of Wilson. The town was located and surveyed in September, 1871, by the National Land Company, but prior to that time, it had been known as Wilson Station, the railway company having built a depot there in 1868. This name was derived from the township in which the depot was located, that being Wilson.

The first building erected in town after the site was surveyed and platted, was built by Phillip Gabel, on the west side of Michigan Avenue near the railroad track, in which he opened the pioneer store of Wilson. The first settlement around Wilson was made in the spring of 1871, about six months before the town of Wilson was located, and the first person to make permanent settlement on a piece of government land in the vicinity was J. T. McKittrick, he having located on the northeast quarter of Section 20, Township 14, Range 10, west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. The town of Wilson proper is situated on the west half of the northeast quarter of Section 19, Township 14, Range 10. Subsequently, Tyler's addition was added, and February, 1879, Eckert's addition to Tyler's addition was added.

Wilson has had a good, healthy growth since it first started; people who came, came with the intention of making their settlement permanent. The town has superior advantages to many other towns in Central Kansas. It has an excellent agricultural country to support it, and located as it is in the northwest corner of the county, draws a great deal of trade from the southern portion of Lincoln County and the eastern part of Russell County. It also has an additional advantage in the coal discoveries that have been made in its vicinity, and which are being successfully operated. This advantage, in a country like Central Kansas, where fuel is so very scarce, cannot be over-estimated.

In the fall of 1871 and spring of 1872, a good many settlers located in and around Wilson, most of whom, however, settled upon claims in Russell County, a few miles west of town. These people were mostly from Pennsylvania, and among them were Mr. Himes, with three sons; Jacob Sackman, Michael Ship, John Sellers, Michael Boland, Henry White and John Dellinger. Of this party, Mr. Himes and two of his sons crossed the Ellsworth County line and located in Russell County. The other son, S. P. Himes, remained in Wilson and entered as clerk, in the store of J. Beebe & Co., which had been built and opened a short time previous to his arrival.

At the time Wilson was laid out as a town, a man named George Wright was employed as express agent, and he, in company with one J. Briggs, went into the lumber trade and started a lumber yard. Among the first settlers in town, was Jacob Fowle, since deceased, who put up a building on the south side of the railway track, being that now occupied as a grocery store by Stuckie & Lewis.

Scarcely had anything of a settlement been made in the town, when steps were taken to erect a schoolhouse, and in 1872, the erection of one was commenced, but when it was part way up it was blown down by a wind storm, and work upon it was not resumed until 1874, when a very fine stone school house was erected in the southeast part of town. It is a very neat stone building, surmounted with a cupola. It is rather small, and contains only two rooms, one above and one below. It is only used, however, for pupils that are well advanced in their studies, another building being used for the primary department, and pupils not sufficiently advanced to attend the higher school.

The years 1877–78 were years of marked improvement in the town, and a good many buildings were erected both as stores and residences. These years were also remarkable for an immense immigration into the section of country in which Wilson is located. To accommodate the new-comers, a large wooden building was erected about twenty rods west of the town and north of the track, which was partitioned off into rooms, and there the new comers were quartered, until those who concluded to remain in town could build houses, and those who concluded to homestead it could select claims and put up suitable buildings to live in. This building was known as the "barracks," and when there was no further use for it, it was torn down and converted to other uses.

Like the first buildings in all new frontier towns, those in Wilson were rather inferior, and mostly only one-story high. The "Wilson House" is a stone building, and was built in 1877 by A. Jellison. It is a very neat two-story house and stands on the south side of the railroad track opposite the depot. H. M. Keyser and family arrived in Wilson in the spring of 1878, and upon their arrival, Mr. Keyser purchased two lots, and immediately commenced the erection of a good two-story frame building. This was the first two-story frame building in town.

About as many buildings went up in Wilson in 1878, as had been erected in all the years that preceded it. In the fall of that year, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company commenced the erection of a magnificent stone depot. The lateness of the season at the time of its commencement did not admit of its being finished that year, but in the spring following it was completed. The building is one hundred feet long and thirty feet wide, and is among the finest depots on the entire line of road between Kansas City and Denver.

In regard to improvement, 1879 was nearly a repetition of what had been done in 1878, and while the buildings that went up were not quite as numerous, they were of a better class. To supply a want that was badly felt, H. Greenough erected a steam flouring mill, which he fitted up with the most improved machinery, and set in motion in May, 1879. It is not an extensive institution, but is sufficiently large to supply the demands of the surrounding country. It has three run of stone, and is capable of grinding five hundred bushels of wheat per day. In that year also, Schermerhorn and Thompson put up a very fine frame store building on Michigan Avenue, in which they put a stock of dry goods and commenced business. In the January following, Thompson sold out to Mr. Lang, after which the building was greatly enlarged.

Wilson was now commencing to look something like a town. It had a first class depot, a good schoolhouse, two or three hotels, a flouring-mill, a bank, a printing office, several business houses, two or three church organizations, but no church building. The following year, however, saw a handsome stone edifice erected by the Presbyterians at a cost of $3,000, and up to this time there is no other church building in town. The church has a membership of fifty and is under the pastoral charge of Rev. D. R. Hindman. The Methodist and Evangelical churches have organizations, but no edifices. The former occupy the Presbyterian Church every alternate Sunday, and the latter hold service every other Sunday in the schoolhouse. Rev. Father Kelly, whose residence is at Ellsworth, holds Catholic service at Wilson once a month.

Some substantial improvements were made in 1880, aside from the erection of the Presbyterian Church. Messrs. Nesmith & Walmer erected a fine two-story stone building on Michigan Avenue, as did also Barton & Carbiener. The former is used as a grocery store and the latter as a hardware store.

Wilson is a progressive, prosperous town, and is inhabited by a thrifty, enterprising, and energetic people, who are not discouraged by difficulties, or rendered reckless by prosperity. For a town only twelve years old it has made wonderful progress, and gives evidence of what a few determined people can do. The business of the town is represented by M. H. Keyser, F. Deissworth, Schermerhorn & Lang, and John Tobias, dealers in general merchandise. Jellison & Hindman, Stassen & Danner, Nesmith & Walmer, Stuckie & Lewis, and B. F. Himes, dealers in groceries; N. Lewis, boots and shoes; James Briggs, books and stationery; James Latta, drugs; Barton & Carbiener, hardware and furniture; E. Y. Dollenmeyer, watches, clocks and jewelry; Weatherby & Co., millinery; Claussen & Co., hardware; Anspach & Youngman, bankers; and several others, engaged in miscellaneous business, such as dealers in real estate and agricultural implements, lime and cement, coal, grain, lumber, meat markets, and in fact, every branch of business to be found in a live, progressive town. There are three grain elevators in the place, through which an immense amount of grain passes annually, while the extent of general mercantile business transactions establishes the fact that Wilson is in the full enjoyment of business prosperity. According to the Assessor's return for 1882, the town has a population of 503, but yet it never has been incorporated.

The Wilson Echo, the only paper published at Wilson at this time, was established by S. A. Coover in August, 1879, in whose possession the paper has remained since it was first started, and who still continues to publish it, as sole editor and proprietor. It is an eight-column, four-page weekly, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 800.

The Cain City News is published in the southern part of the county, in a small village containing about seventy-five inhabitants, named Cain City. The paper was started in January, 1882, by Henry Trump, by whom it is still owned, Dr. B. Grant Jeffris being editor. It is a six-column, four-page weekly.

He afterward became a partner in a hardware, implement and harness business, under the firm name of Deissroth & Claussen, which was continued until he began alone. He occupies rooms 20x50 feet, basement and two floors, and carries a stock of $15,000; employs two clerks. Born in Germany in 1846, he came to America in 1865, locating in Philadelphia, Pa., where he followed his trade of stone-mason, contracting and building nine years, when he became principal of the above colony. Married in 1869 to Ernsteina Linsenbarth, of Germany, who came to America with her parents at the age of six years. They have six children—Frederick William, August Rudolph, Charles Henry, Ernestina, Theresa and Daisy. Mr. Deissroth is a member of Ellsworth Lodge, No. 146, A., F. & A. M., and Philadelphia Lodge, 312, I. O. O. F., Order of Seven White Men, and Turner Society, of Philadelphia, Pa. He is County Commissioner for Third District of Ellsworth County.

HIMES & LATSHAW, dealers in lumber and all kinds of building material. They carry a stock of about $10,000. They are also proprietors of Smoky Hill coal banks, which are located two and one-half miles south of Wilson on a river of the same name. Their interests comprise about 200 acres of coal land, the coal of which is of a bituminous nature, and employ about twenty men in their mines in the season for mining it. The Smoky Hill Coal Company is composed of Joseph Latshaw, Ecker and S. P. Himes. Mr. Himes located in Wilson in the spring of 1871, and engaged in general merchandising until 1874, then in the hardware trade until he opened a lumber-yard in 1876. Born in Cumberland County, Pa., in 1851, and was raised and educated in his native State. He opened the first store in Wilson. He has been a member of the Wilson School Board many years. Married in 1878 to Miss Lena J. Claussen, a native of Philadelphia, Pa. They have two children—William J. H. and Edward.

A. C. JELLISON, of the firm of McKenzie & Jellison, dealers in all kinds of grain and farm implements, wagons, buggies, sewing machines, windmills and pumps. Mr. McKenzie opened the grain trade in the summer of 1881, and implement trade the same spring. They carry a $1,500 stock of implements. A. C. Jellison became a partner in the above firm in April, 1882. He first came to Wilson in the fall of 1873, and soon engaged in the lumber trade, which he continued seven years. The first year in Wilson, however, he was in mercantile business. He was born in Wood County, Ohio, in 1858. Moved to La Fayette County, Wis., in 1862 with his parents. Was raised on a farm until 1873. Married in February, 1876, to Miss Nellie Ray, of Pittsburg, Pa. They have one son—Frank C. Mr. Jellison has been City School Treasurer five years, Township Treasurer two years and Town Clerk one year. He has one-half interest in the Wilson Creamery, which is two miles south of Wilson. The building is constructed of stone, 24x36 feet, two stories high and cost $3,000. It has a capacity of 1,000 pounds of butter per day, and contains all latest improved machinery.

W. D. JELLISON, dealer in all kinds of lumber and building material, coal, etc. He opened the business in September, 1882, and carries a stock of about $6,000. He came to Wilson in October, 1873, assisting his father in the stock business, merchandising, etc. He was born in Wood County, Ohio, in 1860. His parents moved to La Fayette County, Wis., in 1862, where they lived until 1873, when the family moved to Kansas. Mr. Jellison's first experience in business began in Wilson; but in the midst of a fine grazing and agricultural country, and full of enterprise and ambition, coupled with good business qualifications, he will make his mark in the business world.

S. B. JELLISON, firm of Jellison & Carhart, dealers in queensware, glassware, groceries, boots and shoes, notions, etc. They opened trade in April, 1882, and carry a stock of $2,000. They also buy all kinds of farmers' produce. Mr. Jellison came to Wilson in the spring of 1874, and farmed until he became interested in the above business. Born in Wood County, Ohio, in 1860. Parents moved to La Fayette County, Wis., in 1862. Moved to Mason City, Iowa, in the spring of 1871, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until he came to Kansas. He is a member of Wilson temperance organizations.

JOHN A. LANG, of the firm of Schermerhorn & Lang, came to Kansas in March, 1879. He went to farming with the intention of going into the stock business. He engaged in the latter business, in which he is still interested. He became a part of the above firm January 24, 1881, and moved to Wilson in February, 1881. He was born in Cape Girardeau County, Mo., in 1840. He was raised and educated in that county, and enlisted in 1861 in Company E, Eighth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry. Was wounded by bushwhackers in Louisiana opposite Vicksburg, Miss., and afterward participated in all the battles of his command, Second Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, in number about fifty-five including the skirmishes. Was mustered out at Atlanta, Ga., in August, 1864. He then returned home and lived there until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1867 to Miss Caroline Nussbaum, a native of Switzerland. He is a member of Wilson Post No. 115, G. A. R. He is a member of the Kansas Benevolent Society.

LATSHAW & GREENOUGH, proprietors of the Golden Belt Steam Flouring Mills. These mills were erected in 1879, size 30x40 feet three stories high; storeroom, 15x40 feet; engine-room, 2 x40 feet; engine, fifty-five horse-power. The capacity of the mills is 100 barrels flour in twenty-four hours; employ four men. The mills were erected at a cost of $10,000. Their principal flour markets are in Colorado. Mr. George Greenough came to Wilson to reside in the fall of 1878, when he started the foundation for the above mills. He was born in Lacon, Marshall Co., Ill., February 8, 1859. Was raised and educated in his native State. He followed the occupation of engineer in Illinois.

JOSEPH LATSHAW, firm of A. Latshaw & Co. The company is composed of three brothers, A., J. and E Latshaw. They are proprietors of the Latshaw Steam Grain Elevator, which was erected in 1876, size of which is 40x30 feet, 30 feet high; capacity, 4,000 bushels per day; employ three men, and shipped 120 car-loads of grain in the season of 1882. They buy all kinds of grain and produce. Mr. J. Latshaw is a part of the company, Latshaw & Greenough, proprietors Golden Belt Steam Flouring Mills, and Hines & Latshaw, dealers in lumber and building materials and proprietors Smoky Hill coal banks. He came to Wilson in the fall of 1876 and engaged in the lumber and grain trade. Born in Paris, Canada West, in 1844. Came to the United States, locating in Kansas City, Mo., in 1869, when he embarked in the grain trade, having erected the first grain elevator in that city in company with his brothers. Their elevator burned down at a loss of $15,000 to them. He soon afterward came to Wilson. Married in 1882 to Miss Mary Bassett, of Berlin, Wis.

JAMES LATTA, dealer in drugs, medicines, paints, oils and druggists' sundries, opened business in November, 1877. He erected his store building in 1877, and occupies rooms 18x54 feet. He carries an average stock of about $2,000. He was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1848; went to Glasgow, Scotland, in 1856 with his father (John Latta), where he was educated; he clerked there in a clothing store; he returned to his native city in 1869 and engaged in bookkeeping until coming to Kansas on account of health; but about six months after he landed he engaged in the above business. Married in 1878 to Miss Janet Mair, of Philadelphia, Pa. They have one son, James Mair Latta. Mr. Latta is a member of the Masonic order, and I. O. O. F. of Philadelphia, Pa.

N. LEWIS, dealer in boots and shoes, and manufactures harness, saddles, etc., began business in 1875; erected his store building in 1878, size of which is 24x40 feet, at a cost of $600; carries a stock of about $3,000. He first came to Wilson in 1872 and followed farming until he began business. He was born in Germany in 1832 and came to America in 1854, locating in Cumberland County, Pa., where he worked at his trade of shoemaking until he came to Kansas. He was married in 1861 to Miss Margaret Finkenbinder, a native of Cumberland County, Pa. They have five children—Fred R., William N., Daniel A., Jennie B., and Samuel A. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. of Pennsylvania.

D. A. McKENZIE, firm of McKenzie & Jellison, dealers in all kinds of grain and agricultural implements. They opened the business in 1880. They shipped at least 240 car-loads of grain in the season of 1882. The capacity of their elevator is about four car-loads per day; employ four men in the business. D. A. McKenzie also owns a farm of 160 acres all under cultivation, which joins the village site on the west. He first came to Wilson in the spring of 1878, when he began farming and dairy business, which he still carries on. He was born in Livingston County, N. Y., in 1858. Was raised on a farm, living in his native State until he came to Kansas. He assisted in taking the United States census of Kansas in 1880. He is one of the best business men in his village.

J. T. McKITRICK, land agent for the U. P. R. R. lands. He has been justice of the peace, notary public and insurance agent since 1873. He first came to Wilson, in April, 1871, moved his family in July of the same year, locating on a homestead one half mile east of Wilson. He now owns 320 acres of land skirting the town site and considerable town property. He has his land all improved and twenty-five milch cows. He was born in Lancaster County, Pa., October 8, 1826. He went to California in 1850, where he worked at the carpenters' trade and followed the sea, making trips to Alaska, Sitka and the Sandwich Islands. On his return home he joined a vessel and went to Calcutta, India, arriving in New York City February 14, 1856, when he returned to his native county. He soon afterward superintended the building of the Union Depot, at Harrisburgh, Pa.; went to Pittsburg, Pa., in March, 1858, and soon afterward to Cincinnati, Ohio. He was married in the fall of 1858, to Miss Sarah M. McVety, of Leeds, England. He remained in Cincinnati until he came to Kansas, where, after prospecting for some time, he finally located in Wilson. He was one of the delegates to the Ohio Soldiers' Colony of Hamilton County Branch. He was also one of five to prospect and locate 600 families under the organization of the above colony. He has been the means of locating many families on homesteads in Ellsworth County. They have four children—Ida, now married to John A. Johnson, Edward, Ella, and Julia. He enlisted in May, 1864, in the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Ohio National Guards, was mustered out in September, 1864. He was Second Lieutenant of Company C, and participated in the battles of White House Landing, Petersburg and Richmond. He was the guide for the Alexis Buffalo Hunting Tournament several years ago.

NESMITH & WALMER, dealers in groceries, queensware and tinware. They began trade in 1879, and erected their store building, 25x70 feet, two stories high, of stone, at a cost of $3,500 in 1879. They carry a general stock of about $3,500. Joseph Walmer came to Wilson in 1877, and engaged in farming until he began in trade. He was born in St. Joseph County, Ind., in 1855, and was raised and educated in his native county. W. L. Nesmith came to Wilson in 1877, and engaged in the grocery business, which he has since continued. They formed the co-partnership in 1879. Mr. Nesmith was born in Van Buren County, Iowa, in 1852, and was raised and educated in his native county. He was married in 1874 to Miss Clara H. Carhatta, a native of Missouri. They have two children—Edgar L. and Joseph Hal.

E. D. SCHERMERHORN, firm of Schermerhorn & Lang, dealers in dry goods, clothing, hats, caps, ladies' and gents' furnishing goods, boots and shoes, etc. They opened the trade April 8, 1879, and occupy rooms 22x70 feet, employ four clerks, and carry an average stock of $15,000. Mr. Schermerhorn came to Ellsworth County in 1866, and clerked in a sutler's store until spring, 1870, thence to Spirit Springs on Solomon River, being sutler for G troops, Seventh Cavalry and Fourth Battery United States Artillery until October 15, same year. He then located twelve miles north of Wilson in the stock business, which he followed one and one-half years. He removed thence to Kaw Canyon, and followed the same business until March 1, 1878, when he went into the employ of a dry goods house in Ellsworth until 1879, when he came to Wilson and began business. He was born in West Stephentown, Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1848; and was married in 1875 to Miss Christine Caline, a native of Sweden. They have one son, Frank J. Mr. Schermerhorn is a member of Ellsworth Lodge, I. O. O. F.

STASSON & DANNER, dealers in hardware, queensware, glassware, groceries, provisions, etc., opened trade in June, 1881, and carry a stock of about $2,000. Ira M. Danner came to Wilson in 1878, and engaged in various occupations until he became interested in the above trade. Born in Farmers City, De Witt County, Ill. in 1847. Was raised on a farm, which business and stock-raising he followed until coming to Kansas. Married in 1868 to Miss Mary Strausbury, of the latter city. They have four children—Clark L, R. Orville, Etna and Bertha. He enlisted in 1863 in Company L, Eighth Iowa Cavalry, participating in all the battles of his command. Mustered out in Macon, Ga., in August, 1865, as Second Sergeant. He is a member of Wilson Post, No. 15, G. A. R.

JOHN TOBIAS, dealer in a general stock of groceries, crockery, boots, shoes and farm implements; carries a stock of about $5,000. He opened the trade in 1877, with dry goods also. Went out of trade in 1881, excepting farm implements. Soon after opened the grocery trade, etc. Born in Bohemia, Europe, he came to America in 1855, and located in Minnesota, where he engaged in the boot and shoe business, and added general merchandise in 1872, which he continued until coming to Kansas. Married January 2, 1867, to Miss Rosalie Pichner, who was born in Bohemia in 1847. They have five children—Joseph F., John C., Emma, Henry, Agnes (deceased) and Frederick. He is at present a Justice of the Peace, also a member of the Reading and Agricultural Society of Wilson, Ellsworth County.

JUDGE G. M. WOODWARD came to Wilson July 31, 1875, and engaged in stock-raising. He has now 200 head of cattle, mostly of Durham stock. He also has a farm in Vernon County, Mo., of 280 acres, well improved. He is, therefore, making agricultural pursuits and stock-raising his business. He is a native of Windsor County, Vt., born in 1822. He moved to Harper's Ferry, Va., when he was young. He was there made prisoner by the celebrated John Brown, of Harper's Ferry fame, in 1859. He was engaged in lumbering on the Alleghany Mountains, in Maryland, a number of years. He then went into the tannery business at New Creek, Mineral County, Va.—it was then Hampshire County, Va.—where his fortunes were reversed, and he lost his property during the war. He then shifted about for several years, was on the extreme border of civilization in Texas, and spent two years in the wilds of that State outside of any mark of civilized country. He then went to Vernon County, Mo., and began agricultural pursuits and stock-raising. He officiated as Judge of the County Court of Vernon County for one term. He was married in 1850 to Miss Abigail Arnold, of Hampshire County, Va. They have one son—David Frank. The Judge was a member of the I. O. O. F., the Independent Order of Red Men, and the Masonic order before the late war.

RUSSELL COUNTY.

TOPOGRAPHY AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

RUSSELL County is one of the central counties of Kansas, it being two hundred and forty-four miles from the Missouri River to the east line of the county, and one hundred and ninty-two miles from the east line of the county to the west line of the State. A line drawn through the center of the State, from east to west, would pass about three miles south of the south line of the county. The county is bounded on the north by Osborne County, on the south by Barton, on the east by Ellsworth and Lincoln counties, and on the west by Ellis County. The county contains 576,000 acres, or 900 square miles, and is divided into eight civil, or municipal, townships, those of Paradise and Fairview embracing nearly the northern half of the county, the other portion being divided into six townships of very unequal size. The county is governed by a Board of three Commissioners, who are elected for three years, and is so arranged that one is elected each year. That all portions of the county may be fairly represented on the Board, the county is divided into three Commissioner Districts, and the election of each Commissioner is confined to the Electors of the District in which he resides.

To all intents and purposes, Russell is a prairie county, and for miles and miles, not a sign of a tree or bush can be seen. Standing upon the highest point in the vicinity of the county seat, which is located very near the geographical center of the county, one sees nothing but a wide extent of prairie to the north, south, east and west, with nothing to break the monotony of the view, but a house here and there at long intervals. Stretch the vision to the farthest extent, and one will look in vain to catch a glimpse of a tree. The prairie appears almost as level as the surface of a lake, except that its undulations can be observed rising and falling like the gentle swells of a rising tide. While the general surface presents this appearance to the eye of a person occupying a central position in the county, he will, by a personal survey, discover considerable bluffs in various portions, but chiefly along the Saline River and Salt Creek. The bluffs along these stream are very high and broken, some reaching an altitude of four hundred feet. Most of the other creeks have very high, steep banks, but not bluffy, as the land extends away from the streams in wide stretches of beautiful upland.

The surface of the county presents no diversity of scenery, except that on Paradise Creek, and Wolf Creek and its branches, in the northern portion of the county, there is some timber, and a little on some of the creeks in the extreme south of the county. The center of the county from east to west is high table land, sloping towards the Smoky Hill River on the south and towards the Saline River on the north. These two rivers run parallel to each other across the county from west to east, at an average distance from each other of about twelve miles, except at the extreme west of the county, where the distance between the rivers is about twenty miles, the Smoky entering the county about two miles north of the southwest corner, and the Saline about six miles south of the northwest corner. After entering the county the Saline runs southeast about seven miles, and the Smoky about seven miles northeast, after which the course of both rivers is almost due east.

The Saline and Smoky are the principal streams in the county, each having several tributaries. Paradise and Wolf creeks are the northern feeders of the Saline, and Salt and Cedar creeks feed it from the south. The tributaries to the Smoky from the north are Big and Fossil creeks, and from the south Langdon, Sellers, Wright, Beaver and Walnut creeks. The Saline and Smoky are almost completely destitute of timber, and that along the other creeks is chiefly confined to long, narrow strips that fringe the streams. The prevailing varieties are cottonwood, elm, ash, and willow, but oak, cedar, and black walnut are found on Paradise Creek. Most of the streams have narrow stretches of bottom land, or valley, on either side, varying from a half to three miles wide. In some portions of the county, but more particularly along the divide between the Saline and Smoky Hill rivers, it is extremely difficult to find well water fit for drinking or domestic purposes, but in others excellent water can be had at a depth of from 15 to 30 feet.

The character of the upland soil is a black loam, and of considerable depth, ranging from three to eight feet, and upwards. The soil of the valleys of the Saline and Smoky is also a black loam, but mixed with a good deal of sand. With anything like ordinary rains all kinds of cereals are of easy cultivation, but the county cannot be relied upon for agricultural purposes, owing to the scarcity and uncertainty of rain. Seasons in which there is a reasonable rainfall, excellent crops are assured, and some immense yields of wheat have been produced in the county. Wheat is more certain than corn, as the spring rains are, generally, sufficient to mature a crop of some kind, but the months when rain is required to make a corn crop are usually the driest, and hence this crop is generally short and very uncertain. As an agricultural county, however, no superior advantages are claimed for it, although there are some very highly improved farms in the county. It may be justly claimed for it, however, that for stock and sheep-raising purposes its advantages are excellent, and these industries are commencing to receive a good deal of attention. There are not, however, a great variety of grasses in the county, the greater portion of the county producing no other kind than buffalo grass. Along the creeks and in the ravines are about the only places where prairie grass for mowing purposes can be found. Hay, however, is not an indispensable article, as but very little of it is necessary for feeding purposes, the buffalo grass furnishing ample grazing through both summer and winter. This buffalo grass grows to about four or six inches in height, and curls over towards the ground forming a regular matting all over the prairie. The characteristic of the grass, is that the bottom grass is always green and fresh, and cattle and sheep can always find plenty to eat. This is one of the great advantages that Russell County has as a stock-raising county. Some attempts have been made at upland farming in the county with more or less success, according to the character of the season, wheat being the principal crop. One great drawback to this kind of farming is the difficulty experienced in finding water for domestic uses, it having in most cases, to be hauled in barrels a distance of two or three miles. Some people have cisterns built of greater or smaller capacity which they fill from distant springs or wells, while others haul daily what they use. This difficulty in finding good water for domestic purposes is one of the great disadvantages to be contended against in upland farming.

The only thing in the shape of mineral yet discovered in the county has been coal, and this has been found, and is being mined, in different portions of the county. It is of rather inferior quality, and is of that kind known as lignite. It possesses none of that brilliancy that characterizes the anthracite and bituminous coal of other States, but yet it burns well and throws out good heat. No happier discovery could have been made for the people, as ninety-nine per cent of the county is destitute of timber. Sufficient developments have not yet been made to establish to a certainty whether the coal deposits exist to any great extent, but the amount mined keeps increasing each year, and each year new banks are opened. The veins yet found run from one and one half to three feet in depth, and the quality of some is much superior to that of others. There are, at the present time, eleven banks worked in different portions of the county, nine by drifting, and two by shaft. Holland Bros.' mine is located in the south center of the county, between the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway and the Smoky Hill River, and is operated by means of a shaft, which is sixty-five feet in depth. Marsh's mine, just south of this, is also operated in the same manner, the shaft being one hundred and three feet deep. All the others are worked by drifting in from the face of the bluffs. These banks are located in various parts of the county, two being located almost at the east line, in the vicinity of Wilson, one at Blue Stem, in the northeast, one in the southwest, near the mouth of Big Creek, one on the Saline, about five miles northeast of Bunker Hill, one a few miles southwest of Russell, one northwest of Russell, and three in the south center of the county, and by being thus distributed, fuel is brought within easy reach of every settler in the county. The price of the coal at the banks is $2.50 and $3.00 per ton. In 1878, the coal mined in Russell County was only five hundred tons, whereas, the statistical record in the office of the County Clerk shows, that in 1882, the amount mined was six thousand one hundred and seventy-five tons, being a little over a ton for every man, woman, and child in the county.

There are some excellent salt springs in the county, but, as yet, no attempts have been made to utilize them.

There is an abundance of stone in the county, well adapted for building purposes and flagging. There is a good deal of limestone of fair quality, the greater portion of which is to be found in the western portion of the county, although it is not confined to that particular locality. In building, the limestone is only used for corners, caps and sills, the walls of the building being made of a soft kind of stone strongly resembling solidified clay. It is of a yellowish color and is entirely free from grit, and can be cut with a knife just like chalk. In nearly every place where there is a depression in the surface of the soil this stone crops out. The stone is quarried in layers and is taken out of the ground in large squares, after which they are sawed and dressed into blocks about the size of an ordinary brick, or larger, according to the taste of the person who is going to build. For building purposes it is excellent, being both beautiful and durable.

GENERAL HISTORY.

Prior to 1869, Russell County was without a settler. In July of that year, one A. E. Mathews settled on a claim at the eastern edge of the county about three miles southwest of Wilson. About that time coal had been discovered in that locality, and the object of Mathews settling there was more to engage in coal mining than farming. Be that as it may, he was the first white person to take up a residence within the borders of Russell County.

In November, 1870, C. M. Harshburger, James Dorman, James Haight and Samuel Janes, took claims on East Wolf Creek, and went into camp and passed the winter hunting buffalo and antelope, of which there were plenty. These were followed in the winter of 1870-71, by C. M. Hibbard, A. C., and Charles Birdsall, N. R. Cowan and John Deering, all of whom, excepting Deering, returned to their homes after selecting their claims. In 1869, some section hands, while at work on the railway, had been killed by Indians, and as roving bands of red men would frequently come to the county on hunting expeditions, Deering deemed it advisable to be prepared for all emergencies that might arise, and to make himself as secure as possible against any attack, he surrounded his shanty with a stockade made of logs, pierced at intervals with loopholes.

The Northwestern Colony, of which Benjamin Pratt was president, was organized at Ripon, Wisconsin, in January, 1871. A committee of three was appointed by the organization to visit Kansas with a view of looking up a location for the colony. Benjamin Pratt, O. P. Reed, and H. S. Hollinbeck constituted that committee. They left Ripon on February 21, 1871, and after traveling about a month, during which time they visited a great many localities, they went back and reported to the association at Ripon. Russell County was decided upon by the colony as the place where to locate, and on the 17th of April, 1871, they left Ripon, one passenger coach being provided for their exclusive use, and arrived at Fossil Station, now Russell, in Russell County, on the 19th of the same month. There were about seventy persons in the colony and among them five families. Excepting a small frame depot and a section house, there was not another building in the county, unless it was the dug-out of Mathews already mentioned. Buffalo and antelope were in full possession, immense herds of which could be seen in almost every direction. Having reached their point of destination, the coach assigned them was switched off, and they found themselves in the center of a vast prairie, without a tree or house in sight. Prior to their arrival, the railroad company had furnished three box cars, and these, with the passenger coach, served as houses for the colonists until they had opportunity to provide themselves with suitable buildings.

From the arrival of this colony may be dated the permanent settlement of the county. Soon after their location at Russell, another colony, but much smaller, arrived from Ohio and located at a point ten miles east of Russell, on the Kansas Pacific Railway, where they started a town to which they gave the name of Bunker Hill. Settlers now began to come in and locate in different parts of the county, and among those who came the first year was Jesse Connell, formerly State Senator from Leavenworth, who was the first person to make settlement on Paradise Creek, in the northwestern portion of the county.

About the same time, another small colony from Ohio arrived, and located on claims which they had taken on the line of railroad between Bunker Hill and Russell. This colony only remained a short time, when they abandoned their claims and dispersed, some returning to Ohio, and others going to other parts of Kansas. Early in 1872, a large colony from Pennsylvania came, who settled chiefly in the eastern portion of the county, in the vicinity of Dorrance.

As yet, the county was not organized, but had, until that time been attached to Ellsworth County for judicial and municipal purposes. In 1872, Governor Harvey appointed J. B. Corbett, John Dodge and E. W. Durkey, County Commissioners, J. L. V. Himes, County Clerk, and Stillman Mann, Justice of the Peace. These were the first officers of the county. In the appointment of the Commissioners, Russell was designated the county-seat. The first meeting of the Commissioners was held on August 18, 1872, and the Board organized by electing J. B. Corbett Chairman. About the only business transacted at that meeting was the ordering of a special election, to be held September 9, to complete the organization of the county by electing a full set of county officers. The officers elected at the special election were John Fritts, John Dodge and Benjamin Pratt, Commissioners; E. W. Durkey, County Clerk; John Hemminger, Sheriff; L. Landon, Treasurer; H. J. Cornell, Probate Judge; H. C. Hibbard, Superintendent of Public Instruction; R. G. Kennedy, Register of Deeds; James Selling, Surveyor, and J. W. Vanscoyc, Coroner. The foregoing were the first officers elected in the county, and upon their qualifying the organization of the county was made complete. In canvassing the vote, the Commissioners ascertained that there were more votes cast at Bunker Hill than at Russell, whereupon the former place was declared to be the county-seat, and what little records they had were moved accordingly. This action of the Board considerably enraged the people of Russell, and a spirit of rivalry, not altogether too friendly, sprang up between the two places. The county-seat question became one of constant agitation, the people of Bunker Hill being determined to retain it, if possible, and the people of Russell as fully determined to recover it.

At the general election, held November 5, 1872, the Commissioners elected at the special election in September, were re-elected, but some changes were made in the other officers. The people of Russell never admitted the removal of the county-seat from Russell to Bunker Hill as being legal, and when the time came to canvass the vote of the November election, two of the Commissioners, Fritts and Dodge, met at Bunker Hill, and the third one, Mr. Pratt, with the County Clerk, Durkey, met at Russell. A quorum of the Board were at Bunker Hill, but they had no Clerk, while the other Commissioner at Russell had the Clerk but no quorum.

The returns of the election from the west half of the county were returned to Russell and those of the east half were returned to Bunker Hill. The two Commissioners at Bunker Hill appointed a Clerk and proceeded to canvass the returns as made to them, and the one at Russell, with the assistance of the Clerk, performed the same operation with the returns they had received. The task was not very laborious to either, as the total vote of the county at the November election was only 169. Neither recognized the action of the other, and the matter finally found its way into court, and finally went to the Supreme Court where, after a delay of about two years, it was decided in favor of Russell.

Pending the settlement of the matter in court, the business of the county, for some time, was conducted in a rather peculiar manner. The two Commissioners continued to meet at Bunker Hill, but Mr. Pratt would not meet with them, and county matters were in rather a chaotic state. While matters were in this shape, the district from which Mr. Pratt was elected held a special election and elected A. B. Cornell, Commissioner, but when he went to take his seat on the Board the other two Commissioners would not recognize him, but held that Pratt was the duly elected and qualified Commissioner. Finally, Mr. Pratt resigned, and the Board appointed A. B. Cornell to succeed him and thus order was restored from chaos.

On March 21, 1874, the Commissioners ordered an election to be held on April 23, for the purpose of re-locating the county-seat, and the candidates for the honor were Russell and Bunker Hill.

At that time the County Attorney was one David Adams, who had made himself very active in the interests of Bunker Hill. Russell had no Attorney at that time to look after its interests, and the citizens appointed a committee to go to some of the towns east of them and employ the services of one. The committee went as far east as Lawrence, and upon consulting with some attorneys there, and others at Topeka, the advice they received was to employ Adams. "Yes, but he is employed by the people of Bunker Hill." "Oh, never mind that, you see him, you can easily fix that." With this advice the Committee started for home and who should they meet on the train but Mr. Adams. One of the Committee became engaged in conversation with him, during which the county-seat question came up. The conversation led up to a certain point, when Adams was asked, how much it would take to silence him during the contest. "One hundred town lots in the town of Russell," was the reply. When the Committee returned, a meeting of the town authorities and business men was held, to whom the proposition of Adams was submitted, and after discussing it pro and con it was agreed to give him seventy-five lots, which offer Adams accepted.

Having silenced Adams the people of Russell devised another scheme in order to secure the votes of those residing in the eastern portion of the county, This was to go a few miles east of Bunker Hill and start another town, and cause to be agitated a plan that had been thought of for some time, which contemplated the cutting out of a new county from the counties of Lincoln, Ellsworth, and Russell, of which Wilson, located almost on the boundary line of the two latter counties, should be the county seat. Should this plan succeed, which a great many believed, then the farther the county-seat of Russell could be removed from Wilson the better, and as the former place was ten miles west of Bunker Hill the votes of many of the eastern residents were secured for Russell. The 23d of April came, the election was held as ordered, and the result was that Russell was declared the county-seat, which it has continued to be since that time.

From 1874 until 1877 the population of the county increased steadily, and although they came neither in crowds nor colonies, each year saw new farms opened up and new dwellings going up over the prairie.

In 1877, quite a large colony of Russians settled in the county, locating south of the Smoky Hill River, about twelve miles southwest of Russell. This colony was followed by two others of the same nationality in 1878, many of whom joined the settlement already located while others located upon claims in different portions of the county. That year a great many other settlers came to the county from Eastern and other States and the close of the year found the county in a very prosperous condition. Many of the new settlers engaged in sheep-raising, and the beginning of 1879 found over 10,000 sheep in the county. Some attention was also given to cattle, but stockmen gave the preference to sheep, the raising of which has increased yearly since that time.

There are now, 1883, not less than 30,000 sheep in the county, and as the business has proved to be highly profitable, the number engaging in it is increasing annually. The number owned by individuals runs all the way from 200 to 3,500, the latter being the largest number owned in the county by any one person. Since 1880, the county has, in point of population, been rather retrogressive, but yet it has made considerable advancement in material wealth.

The railroad facilities of the county are confined to one line, the Kansas Pacific, which runs through the center of the county from east to west, nearly midway between the Saline and Smoky Hill rivers. Russell is the principal station on the line, the others being Bunker Hill and Dorrance to the east, and Gorham, which is located almost on the west line of the county.

The first conveyance recorded in the county, that appears on record, was a deed from the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company to the Russell Town Site Company, granting, selling, and conveying for the consideration of one dollar, the east one-half of Section 27, Township 13, Range 14 west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. The instrument was dated September 1, 1871.

The first marriage in the county, as shown by the record in the office of the Probate Judge, was that of J. E. Brown and Miss Mary A. Shultz, which took place November 20, 1873, the officiating clergyman being Rev. J. J. A. T. Dixon. While this is the first marriage that appears on record it was not the first that occurred in the county, as E. W. Durkey and Mrs. Hattie Burt were married in November, 1871, by Stillman Mann, who was the first Justice of the Peace of the county.

Financially, the county is in good condition, its real valuation being $2,500,000 and its bonded indebtedness only $20,000. It has no floating debt, and there is always money in the treasury to pay all orders upon presentation.

SCHOOLS AND MILLS.

The first school established in Russell County, was a private school in the town of Russell, in July 1871. It was supported by the colonists who located at Russell in April of that year. This school was kept in a small frame building, erected by the colonists for school purposes. It was large enough to accommodate all the pupils there were to attend, because, while the colony numbered about seventy souls, only five families came with it, and only two of these had children of school age. Of this little school Mrs. Annas, wife of Rev. A. H. Annas, was the first teacher. Shortly after this, the colony that had located at Bunker Hill, opened a school, and from this small beginning the school interests of the county have developed until now, 1883, there are sixty-two organized school districts in the county. The report of the County Superintendent, made to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, for the year ending July 31, 1882, shows the school population of the county to have been 2,182. In this number are included all children between the ages of five and twenty-one years. These were divided according to sex into 1,106 males, and 1,076 females. The total number of pupils enrolled was 1,186, of which 626 were males and 560 females. Of these, the average daily attendance at school was 680, the male average being 331, and the female 349. The average salary paid male teachers was $30 per month, and female $25. The number of persons examined during the year was 57, and a corresponding number of certificates were granted, classified as follows:—First Class, 2; Second Class, 31; Third Class, 24. Scarcely any of the school grounds are enclosed, but the schools are, mostly, well supplied with globes, maps and charts, and well seated and furnished. There is nothing that commands more attention than the school interests, and while the schools are generally small, teachers are reasonably well compensated for their labor. Besides the public schools in the county, there are three private schools that have an average attendance of fifty-three pupils. The total school bonded indebtedness of the county is $13,469.87, and the school property is valued at $40,000.

The receipts from all sources, during the year, including the balance on hand July 31, 1881, was $12,946.67, and the expenditures amounted to $11,425.61, leaving a balance in the hands of district treasurers on July 31, 1882, of $1,521.06.

While there are sixty-two organized school districts in the county, there are only fifty-four school buildings, of which twenty-seven are stone, eighteen frame and are set as temporary. Some of the latter are log, some sod, and some, part stone and part sod.

There are, virtually, no manufacturing establishments in the county except flouring-mills. Of these there are five, one at Russell, built by Ames, Chisholm & King in 1875. It is quite a large stone mill and is operated by steam-power. The mill is valued at $25,000.

The next mill was erected in the county in 1878, by Edgar Nichols, and is located on the Smoky, about five miles south of Bunker Hill. It is a small water mill, and was put up at a cost of about $6,000.

The Fairport Mills were the next erected, and these were built in 1879, by Knight & Bradshaw. The mills are operated by both steam and water-power. They are located on the Saline River, about twelve miles northwest of Russell. The building is of stone, three stories high, with a basement, and was put up at a cost of about $12,000.

In 1882 Moore & Sons put up a fine stone flouring-mill at Bunker Hill, at a cost of $18,000. It is operated by steam-power. The Farmers' Mill was also built in 1882, by L. D. Smith & Son. It is three stories high, the two lower ones being stone and the upper one frame. This mill is located on the Smoky, about three-fourths of a mile from the mouth of Big Creek, and ten miles southwest of Russell.

The only other manufacturing establishment of any kind in the county, is Hilder's Broom Factory at Russell. It is not very extensive, but gives employment to three or four hands, and besides supplying the Russell market, ships a great many brooms to other portions of the county and adjoining counties.

THE PRESS OF THE COUNTY.

The first newspaper in the county was established in April 1872, but ante-dating its appearance, a small monthly journal was published and issued by Harbough & Corbett, which was devoted entirely to land business, and was named the Pioneer. That publication, however, is not entitled to any place in the history of the press of the county, as it was an advertising sheet exclusively.

The Western Kansas Plainsman was the first newspaper established in the county, having been started by A. B. Cornell, in April 1872, at Russell, the first issue of the paper appearing on the twenty-fifth of that month. Some months after it was started, the name of the paper was shortened to the Plainsman, and under this name it was published until October 1876, when the paper and office material was sold by Mr. Cornell to Prof. Robinson, who had it removed to Kirwin, in Phillips County. This was a seven column, four page, weekly, and was Republican in politics.

The New Republic.—This was the name of the next paper started in the county, and was established at Bunker Hill in May, 1872, by J. R. Rankin, who run it a few months when he sold it to B. W. Goodhue, from whom it passed to Harbaugh & Corbett when W. B. Christopher became editor. Subsequent to this it passed into the hands of Dollison Bros., with W. T. Dollison as editor. The county seat having been removed from Bunker Hill to Russell in 1874. Dollison Bros. followed with the New Republic the following year, when the name of the paper was changed to the Record. The paper remained in possession of Dollison Bros. until the latter end of 1881, when it passed into the hands of W. A. Lewis & Co., who, in March, 1882, sold it to W. L. Evans, who is now the sole editor and proprietor, and by whom the paper is at present published. The paper is an eight column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 600.

Advance.—The paper that made its appearance under this name, was established in March, 1878, by Johnson & Maxwell, who, in October of the same year, finding their venture rather unprofitable, moved the press and material to Saline County.

Advertiser.—The next paper to make its appearance in Russell County, was the one whose name appears as a side caption to this item. It was started in 1879, at Bunker Hill, by J. B. Powers, in whose possession it remained about a year, when it passed into the hands of Rev. J. J. A. T. Dixon, who changed the name of the paper to that of Banner. Under Mr. Dixon's management the paper lived about two years when, in January 1883, it passed out of existence.

Independent.—This paper was started at Russell in the fall of 1879, by W. P. Tomlinson, who, after running it a short time, sold a half interest to W. A. Lewis, and subsequently sold the other half interest to Asa Kinney, the paper then appearing under the editor and proprietorship of Lewis & Kinney, under whose management it was published for several months, when it passed into the hands of E. S. L. Banton. Six months subsequently, the paper was purchased by Dollison Bros., who consolidated it with the Record which they were publishing at that time.

Hawkeye.—This is the last newspaper venture made in the county, and was established in March 1882, by the Hawkeye Printing Company, with A. B. Cornell as editor, whose name still appears as such at the head of its columns. It is a six column quarto, weekly, Greenback in politics, and has a circulation of 450.

STATISTICS OF GROWTH.

In population, the county has advanced rather slowly, some years being quite progressive and others retrogressive. In 1870, the population of the county was 156, and this was confined entirely to a small locality in the neighborhood of the coal banks on the Smoky at the eastern line of the county. The population at that time was composed of men who were brought to the county for the purpose of opening up coal mines, and outside of these there was not a settler in the county at the time the census was taken in 1870. By 1875, the population had increased to 1,212, and by 1878 it had reached 3,830. The years of 1878-79, were remarkable for the immense emigration that came to the county, and the United States census for 1880, shows the population at that time to have been 7,351. Since that time, however, the population of the county has been gradually and constantly decreasing, until 1882, according to the assessors' returns for that year, the population of the county had fallen to 5,960. These are the figures regarding population that appear on the statististical record for 1882, as found in the office of the County Clerk, although it is maintained by many that the figures are not correct, and that the population is much greater.

Prior to 1872 no attempt had been made at farming in the county. Up to that time the soil remained in its primitive state, not a single furrow having been turned over by the plow. The total area of field crops in 1872 was 601 acres, of which 19 were in wheat, 567 in corn, 2 in barley, 7 in oats, 5 in buckwheat, and one acre in sorghum. This attempt was more of an experiment to test the capabilities of the soil than anything else. The first real attempt at genuine farming was made by Luther Landon, who moved out in the summer of 1871, and located on a claim in the southern part of the county, on what is now known as Landon's Creek, where he erected a stone house, and turned over some prairie, most of which he planted to corn the following year. Others followed in 1873 and 1874, but the grasshoppers in the latter year destroyed the promising prospect. In 1875, the total acreage of field crops was 6,417.54, of which 966.50 were in winter wheat, 310.50 in rye, 584 spring wheat, 1,833 corn, and 507.50 in oats. This increase would indicate that the people were not discouraged by the disaster of the preceding year, and the abundance of the crop gave good encouragement for the future. The following year the acreage increased to 6,487 acres. The three following years the crops were extremely good, and the fact was now established that the soil of Russell County, with ordinary rains, could produce large crops of all kinds of cereals. The statistical record for 1882, compiled from the returns of the various assessors, shows the number of acres in farms, at that time, to have been 214,960, valued at $859,014. This valuation would make the acres in improved farms worth only a fraction over $4 per acre; but to more correctly approximate the real value, the valuation above must be multiplied by three, as the assessed valuation is only one-third of the real value, and in many instances not even that much. The farm dwellings erected during the year ending March 1, 1882, were 30, valued at $5,878. The number of acres sown to winter wheat in 1881, was 34,573; rye, 2,023; spring wheat, 1882, 769; corn, 25,441; oats, 3,724; Irish potatoes, 846; sorghum, 1,089; flax, 164; broom corn, 97; millet and hungarian, 2,687; rice corn, 1,208. Grasses in cultivation and under fence; prairie meadow, 8,036; prairie pasture, 25,002, making a total of 107,264 acres, an increase in acreage of field crops in four years of 56,128 acres. These figures would indicate either an increase in the farming population, or great improvement by those already engaged in that industry. If the farming population has increased, then the loss in population that has taken place in the last two years, as shown by the census of 1880, and the assessors' returns for 1882, must have occurred in the towns and villages, and the populations of the latter show this must have been the case. The statistical record further shows that there were out of tame hay in 1881, one thousand two hundred and forty-seven tons, and of prairie hay nine thousand two hundred and sixteen tons. The value of garden products marketed during the year ending March 1, 1882, was $705, and the eggs and poultry sold amounted to $7,911. The cheese made in the county during the year amounted to only 170 pounds, while the butter product reached 188,058 pounds. The county has made some progress in the live stock line, but sheep-raising is commencing to receive more attention than either cattle or swine. The live stock in the county in 1882, was:—Horses, 2,364; mules and asses, 411; milch cows, 2,412; other cattle, 6,638; sheep, 24,718; swine, 5,590. The value of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter during the year was $50,260. The wool clip for the year was 49,264 pounds. But little progress has been made in horticulture, and for some years no attention whatever was paid to it. The statistical record shows that in 1882, there were only 96 apple trees in bearing, 5 pear trees, 1,822 peach trees, 148 plum, and 329 cherry. The number not in bearing was: Apple, 9,606; pear, 378; peach, 17,190; plum, 806, and cherry 2,567. Thus far in the history of the county, attempts at raising the larger kinds of fruit, such as apples, pears, and peaches, have not been very successful, but the smaller fruits have been cultivated with satisfactory success.

Artificial forestry has commanded some little attention, but far from anything like what the timberless prairies demand. The efforts that have been made in this respect are more of an experimental character than anything else, in order to ascertain to what varieties the soil and climate are best adapted. Walnut and ash have been found to do best thus far. Cottonwood grows well for the first four or five years, and after that dies under the ravages of an insect known as "borer." The total number of acres devoted to artificial forestry in the county in 1883, was 336 as follows: Walnut, 64; maple, 4; honey locust, 2; cottonwood, 126; other varieties, 128. Some of the groves set out are doing remarkably well, while others are not encouragingly promising.

There were in the county in 1883, 46,466 rods of fence constructed of material as follows: Board fence, 1,022 rods; rail, 279; stone, 4,081; hedge, 5,165; and wire, 37,978. This amount of fence would enclose 122 square miles, less a fraction, or an area equal to about one-sixth of the entire county. The agricultural implements in the county were valued at $48,679. While these statistics do not show any wonderful advancement in material growth, they are yet far from discouraging; and when it is borne in mind that only eleven years have elapsed since the first settlement was made in the county, the degree of prosperity that has been attained by the settlers give them good grounds on which to found hopes for a prosperous future.

RUSSELL.

Russell is the seat of justice of the county, and has been since 1874. The town is located on the east half of Section 27, Township 13, south of Range 14, west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. The town was founded by the Northwestern Colony Association, whose headquarters were, formerly, at Ripon, Wis. The Association consisted chiefly, if not entirely, of Wisconsin people, and hence, it has been frequently designated the Wisconsin Colony. This colony arrived at what is now Russell, but what at that time was known as Fossil Station, on the 19th day of April, 1871. The business of the Colony or Association, was conducted by a board consisting of five trustees, of which B. Pratt was chairman and also president of the Association.

Before locating the town site of Russell, the trustees went about five miles east to look up a location, their object being to establish themselves as near the geographical center of the county as possible, having in view the future location of the county-seat. After some time had been spent in useless attempts to discover water by digging and boring, they returned to the colony and reported, and it was then decided to locate at Fossil Station. Among the powers given to the trustees by their articles of association was that of purchasing, holding and receiving by gift, real property, the same to be conveyed as directed by the colony. Under these conferred powers, the trustees received as a gift from the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company, the northeast quarter of Section 27, Township 13, south of Range 14, west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. When this fact was reported to the colony, another difficulty presented itself by the articles governing the association, which prescribed that not less than 320 acres should be procured for a town site. To obviate this, Benjamin Pratt, chairman of the trustees and president of the association, purchased of the railroad company, the quarter section lying immediately south of the one to which the colony had acquired title by gift, and thereupon the survey of the town site was commenced. The site was surveyed and laid off into streets, blocks and lots, in April and May, 1871, and was given the name of Russell. At that time, the entire county was one vast stretch of uninhabited prairie, the only thing in shape of a building being the section house at Fossil Station. The first thing in shape of a house erected on the town site, was a shanty, 16x16 feet, put up by H. W. Tustin and Stillman Mann, which, when completed, was occupied by both their families. They also used it as a boarding-house, where table board was furnished to many of the colonists, who found sleeping accommodation in the cars. The first frame building put up in the town was by L. Bicknell, in the summer of 1871, at the corner of Ninth Street and Kansas Avenue. Several of the colonists had brought with them houses already made and fitted, so that all they had to do when a location was determined upon was to raise them and put them together. Asa Kinney and H. C. Waterman brought these kind of houses with them, and a third one was brought for a company office. Besides these, several were brought for sale. The latter were soon disposed of, and it was not long before Russell assumed the appearance of being quite a village. H. W. Tustin came with the colony, and brought a stock of goods with him for the purpose of going into business. Upon arrival, he found that a man had a small shanty near the railroad track, in which he had a few goods for the purpose of supplying railroad employes. Mr. Tustin immediately purchased the shanty with the stock of goods the man had, to which he added those he had brought with him; and established himself in business, and this was the first store started in Russell.

The colonists put up houses as fast as they possibly could, and these, with others, built by parties who came to try what fortune the new town would bring them, soon gave Russell the appearance of being a thrifty prosperous town. A frame schoolhouse was erected in July 1871, and during the summer one or two small stores were put up and opened. In December, 1871, the first hotel in town was opened, by Stillman Mann, in a small frame building which he had erected on the corner of Main and Ninth streets.

At the close of 1871, or eight months after the town site was surveyed and platted, Russell had a population of about 200 souls. The year 1872 was quite a prosperous one for the town, and a good many buildings went up, but mostly of an inferior character. No settlements had yet been made in the county within miles of Russell, although a few settlers had come in and located on some of the creeks in the northern portion of the county.

A lumber-yard was opened in town by W. C. Hobbs in the fall of 1871, and in the spring of 1872, he erected the first regular store building that was put up in the town. It was a two-story frame building, located at the corner of Main and Seventh streets, the bottom story being fitted up for a store, and the upper one for a dwelling. As soon as the building was completed, it was taken possession of and occupied by H. W. Tustin. That same year, G. A. Hart, with his family, located in town, and in the fall he put up a fine two-story stone business house on Main Street, in which he commenced the business of general merchandising.

The year following was one of but little improvement, although in that year H. C. Waterman put up quite a large frame building on the southeast corner of Main and Seventh streets. The ground floor was fitted up for offices and the upper floor was used for a hall.

Up to that time Bunker Hill had been the county-seat, but the following year it was changed to Russell, and there being no building suitable for county purposes, the one erected by Mr. Waterman was purchased by the County Commissioners, and fitted up into county offices, the hall above being used for a court-room. The building is still used for the purposes for which it was purchased, no attempt ever having been made towards the erection of a more substantial building.

Having been made the county-seat, Russell, in 1874, made considerable advancement. Quite an impetus was given to the town by the fact of it having been made the shire town, and the place grew very rapidly, so much so, that the first school-building erected became altogether inadequate for the number of school children. To overcome this difficulty, bonds were voted to the amount of $5,000 for the purpose of erecting a new schoolhouse, and in 1874, a very fine stone edifice was put up, with two rooms above and two below.

In 1874 the old depot was burned. The following year a fine stone depot was built, followed soon after by a handsome two-story stone block on the corner of Eighth and Main streets. This block was named Union Block, from the fact that the three buildings embraced in it, though belonging to different parties, were erected simultaneously. The first of these buildings, or the one on the corner, was put up by Ackerman & Copeland, the next one by H. Wentworth, and the third one by C. M. Lewis.

The year 1875 may be set down as the commencement of the era of substantial improvements, because, although the town had improved rapidly, the character of the improvements were of rather an inferior order. In 1876, another very fine stone, two-story building was erected on the northwest corner of Eighth and Main streets, by W. D. Hart, now occupied by E. Humphrey as a general store. In that year also, a very fine frame hotel was built by J. J. Helm, and several people put up very comfortable residences. A good-sized elevator was also erected that year by Knight & Bradshaw, and altogther the Centennial year was one of considerable progress. About the only substantial improvements made the year following, was a large two-story stone building on the northeast corner of Main and Eighth streets. It is a large well-finished building, the lower story being fitted up for a store, and the upper story for a hall, which is now used for lodge purposes by the Masonic, Odd Fellows and A. O. U. W, fraternities. The other substantial improvement of 1877 was that made by Stillman Mann in the erection of the new Russell House.

The year 1878 eclipsed any that preceded it in the line of improvement. Up to that time, although there had been several church organizations in town, and services had been held regularly every Sabbath in the schoolhouse, yet the town was without a church-building. In that year, however, the Congregationalists put up a building.

The year 1878 was remarkable for the unprecedented progress made in building, and the superior order of the improvements made. That was the year in which the Opera Block was built by Fargo, Hendershott & Guernon. It is located on Eighth Street, the ground floor being used as a billiard hall and livery-stable, and the upper portion being fitted up as an entertainment hall, with stage, scenery, etc. Up to that year, the town had been without a bank, although Ackerman & Copeland, in connection with their store business, had carried on brokerage on a very limited scale. In 1878, they sold their stock of goods, and devoted themselves to banking exclusively. They erected a handsome two-story stone building on Main Street, between Eighth and Ninth, the lower story of which they fitted up as a bank and the upper story into offices. Immediately north of the bank building and simultaneously with its erection, W. M. Pennell put up a similar building, which is now used as a furniture store and post-office.

While these improvements were being made in the business portion of the town, the residence portion was being greatly improved by the erection of a magnificent dwelling in the south part of town put up by Mr. Copeland. It is a large stone residence, handsomely constructed and of a beautiful style of architecture. An elevator, put up by E. Latshaw, was also among the improvements of 1878. Substantial improvements in town, virtually ended with 1878, although quite a number of buildings of less note have been erected since that time.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Fires.—In 1874, Russell was visited by its first fire, but the only damage done was the destruction of the depot.

In 1880, a fire originated in Mr. Tustin's store, being the one formerly occupied by Ackerman & Copeland, on the southeast corner of Main and Eighth streets, and before it could be extinguished, that, with the adjoining building, owned and occupied by H. Wentworth as a hardware store, were completely destroyed, with nearly all their contents. That fire occurred on March 20, 1880, and by the fall of that year, the buildings were re-placed by others, larger in size and superior in structure to those that had been destroyed. Ante-dating that fire by a few months, Knight & Bradshaw's elevator had met a similar fate.

On the evening of Sunday, October 1, 1882, as the people were assembled at church, they were suddenly startled by a cry of—Fire! The services were brought to a sudden close by the people rushing from the churches en masse, to ascertain where the fire was and its extent. Its locality was soon discovered, as the flames could be distinctly seen from every street in town. The fire originated in one of a row of frame buildings that stood on the east side of Main Street, between Eighth and Ninth, and to save either of them was utterly impossible, as the flames spread with almost lightning rapidity. Six buildings were destroyed by the fire, including a harness shop and store, the Hawkeye printing office, a meat market, a gun shop, a barber shop, and a grocery store.

Churches.—In 1878, the Congregationalists, who had an organization since August, 1872, erected a very neat frame edifice on the corner of Sixth Street and Kansas Avenue, at a cost of $4,000. This church was first organized by Rev. W. B. Christopher, but the first resident pastor was Rev. William Payne. The first sermon ever preached in town was by Rev. A. H. Annas, who came with the colony from Wisconsin. His hearers were the colonists, and his church was a box car.

The Methodists, although having an organization in town since December, 1872, when the church was organized by Rev. John O'Connor; ten being the membership at that time; had no edifice of their own in which to worship until 1880, when they built a very neat frame church on Main Street, at a cost of $5,000. The church has now a membership of 100, and at present is under the pastoral charge of Rev. W. E. Cannon

The Russell House.—This hotel is very neatly built of dressed stone, and is the only three-story building in town. It is located on Main Street, immediately south of the frame hotel erected by the same person in 1871. The house contains thirty sleeping rooms, the original frame building serving for a kitchen, dining room, and office.

Societies.—Russell Lodge, No. 119, I. O. O. F, was instituted August 14, 1874, with nine charter members. The first officers of the Lodge were: A. L. Voorhis, N. G; H. Wentworth, V. G.; W. M. Pennell, R. S.; C. Harshberger, P. S.; G. L. Hart, Treas.; G. A. Hart, W.; J. G. Weekly, I. G., and P. Carrier, O. G. The present membership of the lodge is forty-two, and the present officers are: A. L. Voorhis, N. G.; P. J. Warner, V. G.; G. G. Nichols, R. S.; W. G. Eastland, P. S.; D. E. Winfield, Treas.; H. C. Hibbard, Con.; J. H. Hill, I. G.

Russell Lodge, No. 177, A., F. & A. M., was instituted January 1, 1878, with eleven charter members. The first officers of the lodge were: William Michner, W. M.; H. D. Palmer, S. W.; A. G. Weed, J. W; John Wilson, Treas.; H. C. Waterman, Sec. The present membership of the lodge is forty-nine, and the present officers are: P. L. Hulet, W. M.; J. S. Chadbourne, S. W.; J. M. Brundage, J. W.; A. L. Voorhis, Sec., and A. G. Weed, Treas.

Pioneer Lodge, No. 43, A. O. U. W., was instituted April 28, 1880, with sixteen charter members. The first officers of the lodge were: G. T. Bradshaw, M. W.; G W. Smyser, P. M. W.; F. L Parker, G. F.; C. A. Ames, O.; R. J. Wallace, Recorder; S. J. Kahler, R.; J. S. Chase, F.; L. Banker, G.; R. S. Giddings, I. W.; C. H. Purinton, O. W. The lodge has now a membership of sixty-five, and the present officers are: E. Sutter, M. W.; D. W. McKeen, P. M W.; L. E. Ellithrope, G. F.; J. Jacoby, O.; N. W. Woolcott, Rec.; G. T. Bradshaw, R.; M. K. Ames, F.; W. H. Teed, G.; W. H. Keyes, I. W., and J. J. Corneilson, O. W.

The Russell County Driving Park Association is not an agricultural society, but is a stock company, composed of private individuals. The company owns eighty acres of land adjoining the town site of Russell to the south, the south forty of which is enclosed by a high picket fence. There is a good half mile track on the grounds, and several buildings for the accommodation of exhibitors. Trees have been set out on the grounds, but the prospect of their growing to any size is not very promising. The association was organized in 1879, and three fairs have been held since, in 1879-80-81, but owing to the dry season of 1882, which injured all farm crops, excepting wheat, the managers of the association deemed it advisable to dispense with holding a fair that year and, consequently, none was held.

Business Interests.—For the last three years the town has been rather retrogressive than progressive, and the population is not within by about four hundred as many now as it was in 1880, the assessor's return for 1882, as furnished to the County Clerk, giving the population at 587, whereas, in 1880, it was about 1,000.

The town of Russell is situated on the ridge between the Saline and Smoky Hill rivers, distant from the former four miles, and from the latter seven. While, within a short distance of Russell, good well-water for domestic uses is almost impossible to find, yet, within the limits of the town site, excellent water can be found almost anywhere at a depth of from fifteen to thirty feet. The class of store buildings in town, though few in number, are greatly superior to the average business houses of Western towns. The stores are all well stocked with goods, and those engaged in mercantile pursuits carry on a prosperous trade. The business of the place is represented by four general merchandising stores, five groceries exclusively, two drug stores, two hardware, four millinery establishments, one furniture store, one book and stationery, two lumber yards, three elevators, one flouring-mill, one broom factory, two carriage and wagon shops, and two hotels. The legal and medical professions are also fairly represented. The town has a fine schoolhouse, two churches, and its chief sidewalks are made of beautiful flagging. The town was incorporated in 1872, and its first Mayor was H. C. Waterman, and the present Mayor is W. E. Banks.

He was admitted to bar practice November 16, 1876, in District Court of Russell County.

HON. ASA KINNEY. The parents of Mr. Kinney were Abel and Freelove Kinney, of Cortland County, N Y.; their place of nativity being New London, Conn. They were among the early settlers of Cortland County, N. Y., and the father was a man of influence and prominence. His grandparents were of revolutionary stock, having served their country in the struggle for liberty. Asa Kinney was the fourth son of the family, and was born at Homer, Cortland County, N. Y., May 21, 1810. He received a common school education; was also noted as a debater when a young man. He resided in Homer, N. Y., Preston City, Conn., and Cattaraugus County, N. Y. Previous to coming West, he went to Milwaukee, Wis., in 1836, and settled at Oak Creek on the 5th of July of the same year, where he followed farming. Previous to coming West he had been identified with several town offices, and was promoted Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment in New York. He was one of the first Justices of the Peace in Milwaukee County; was a member of the last Territorial Legislature of Wisconsin, and he was elected as a Representative from Milwaukee County to the Constitutional Convention of 1846, and served on the committee on the organization and affairs of counties and towns; and their powers and duties He was noted for good, solid sense, but not for speech-making. He served in the State Senate in the sessions of 1848 and 1849. In 1852 he went to California and was a member of the Legislature of that State in 1853-54; then returned to Brookfield, Wis., and settled. Was Sergeant-at-Arms of the State Senate in the sessions of 1859 and 1860. He then located at Ripon, where in 1857, he was a member of the City Council, and was two years Street Commissioner. Mr. Kinney settled in Russell, Kan., in 1871, where he has since served as City Clerk, Police Judge, Clerk of the District Court, and has been Justice of the Peace for the last ten years. In 1861 he entered as private in the Ripon Rifles; was mustered into the Fourth Regiment Infantry, and was promoted Quartermaster Sergeant, and in December was discharged on account of ill-health. He was afterward commissioned as First Lieutenant, and Quartermaster in the First Wisconsin Cavalry; joined the regiment at Eastport, Miss., and remained with it until the close of the war. After the war he acted as land and insurance agent for several years. For some time he was a director and agent for the Madison Mutual Insurance Co. Mr. Kinney has been married four times; September 15, 1830, to Miss Diana Spicer, of Preston City, Conn., who died May 8, 1834; January 15, 1835, to Miss Lucretia Grinnell, of Rutledge, N. Y., who died September 21, 1836; March 15, 1837, to Miss Delia A. Rawson, of Oak Creek; November 15, 1878, to Mrs R. C. Wilson, of Albia, Iowa. Thus it is shown that the life of Mr. Kinney has been one of unusual activity, mixed with a wonderful variety of experiences. He has held a large number of civil offices, served in the war, crossed the plains to the land of gold, and has traveled through the Central States and Mexico. It would be hardly possible to give his varied experiences in life. From the above record the reader can imagine, perhaps, a part of his doings with the outside world. He is a man of pleasing address, fluent in conversation, and intelligent on an immense variety of subjects. At the age of seventy-one he is in the enjoyment of good health, with a fair prospect of several years of usefulness in life to the world.

D. W. McKEEN, physician and surgeon, located in Russell, Kan., in December, 1878, where he engaged in the practice of his profession. He was born in Ackworth, N. H., in 1852; began the study of medicine at the age of twenty-one; he was educated at the Kimbal Union Academy of Meridan, N. H., graduating in June, 1875; began reading medicine the latter year; attended lectures at Long Island College, and at the hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1876. U W., and the examining physician for that order. Was married in May, 1882, to Miss Ella B. Loring, a native of Missouri, recently of Wichita, Kan.

STILLMAN MANN, proprietor of the Russell House. Mr. Mann erected the stone part of his hotel in the summer of 1877; it is 25x48 feet, and three stories high. There is also a wooden addition, 26x68 feet. The hotel cost $7,000. Capacity is about seventy-five guests. He first came to Russell in April, 1871, with the Northwestern Colony from Eastern Wisconsin; at that time there was only a section house in the place. He, in company with H. W. Tusten, built a small shanty, and both families lived in that until other arrangements could be made. Mrs. Mann first began to bake bread and sell it to settlers, and finally, after they got more room, they began to lodge people, and that is the way the Russell House first started. The Northwestern Colony were citizens of Ripon, Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, Wis. The biographies of the most active men in this colony will appear in the history of Russell County. Dr. C. W. Bond came with the colony, but remained only a short time and returned to Wisconsin. The only meat the settlers had for over two years was buffalo, deer, antelope and elk, which roamed over the plains in vast herds, and could be shot down in any direction. Mr. Mann was born in Orange County, Vt., in 1825, where he lived until he was twenty-one years old. He went to Wisconsin in 1848, to Fond du Lac in 1852, where he embarked in the boot and shoe trade until 1857. He then clerked some time, then went to Ripon, Wis., and engaged in the grocery business two years, then to Pittsfield, Mass., and clerked in a boot and shoe house some time, then returned to Fond du Lac, Wis., in 1866, and went into the gents' furnishing and clothing business until he came to Kansas, arriving with nothing but his family and able-bodied. He was married in 1855 to Miss Sarah S. Hubbard, of Pittsfield, Mass. She died in 1865. He was again married in 1866 to Miss Addie L. Dunham, of Washington, Mass. They have two children—Roy E. and Gilbert H. Mr. Mann is an active member of the Congregational Church. He served four years as Justice of the Peace and Notary Public. He has been a member of the city school board two years. He is superintendent of the Sunday-school, and assisted to organize the Congregational Church, of which he is a member, in 1872.

Was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, in 1817, and raised as a farmer. Moved to Springfield, Ill., in 1849, and engaged in the manufacture of brooms a few years. He was City Marshal of Springfield for one year, and Captain of the Police in 1860-61. Enlisted as First Lieutenant in Company C, Eleventh Missouri Volunteers, in July 1861. Resigned the next May on account of ill-health, and re-enlisted again in 1862, in the Seventieth Illinois Volunteers, a three months' regiment, and was elected Captain of Company B of this regiment. Served four months. Went to farming in 1863, and was appointed United States Deputy Marshal, under John Logan, in 1869, serving two years. Was also an operative of the Secret Service for the Southern District of Illinois. He was married in 1842 to Miss Roxana Vittium, a native of Ohio. They have five children—Mary, now married to Mr. S. Spindle; E. L., married to W. T. Shaw; Wm. A., married; Lewis A., married, and Clarinda A., now Mrs. J. F. Dollison. He has been Justice of the Peace in Russell for many years.

J. W. ROBB, physician and surgeon, came here in September 1879 where he has since continued the practice of medicine. He was born in Shelby County, Ky., in 1839, and got a common school education in his native place. He then attended the Shelbyville, Ky., Academy, under Prof. J. W. Dodd, graduating in 1858. Began to study medicine in the same year, and after a year or two, attended the University at Louisville, Ky., and graduated from the medical department of that college in 1862. Began the practice of medicine at Shelbyville, Ky., where he continued until 1875. He then took charge of the Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home, at Louisville, Ky. Having charge three years, he soon after came to Russell, Kan. Was married in 1864 to Miss Sallie E. Robinson, a native of Shelby County, Ky. The Doctor is a member and Master of the Russell Lodge No. 177, A., F. & A. M.

EDWARD & EMILE SUTTER, dealers in musical instruments, watches, clocks and jewelry. They opened business in March of 1879, and carry a general stock of $600. Emile Sutter was born in France, October 1, 1855, learned the trade of watchmaker and jeweler in Locle, Switzerland, came to America in 1879, and located in Russell, Kan. He was married May 20, 1876, to Miss Laura Amanda Marchand, a native of Switzerland. They have three children—Henry E., Lina and Jennie. Edward, his brother, is also a native of France, born February 6, 1858. They went to Locle, Switzerland, at the same time and learned the same trade, but Edward came to America in 1876 and located in Wooster, Ohio, remaining there a year. Then he came to Kirwin, Kan., where he engaged in the jewelry business, and thence he came to Russell. He is unmarried. The brothers are members of the Russell Lodge, A. O. U. W.

H. W. TUSTEN, farmer, P. O. Russell, came here with the Northwestern Colony, in the spring of 1871. He opened the first general store and continued merchandising for six years. At the same time he opened a farm of 320 acres, and now has 200 acres of it under cultivation. He makes a specialty in the stock business, dealing largely in cattle and horses. He keeps the Membrino stock of horses. He was born in Ontario County, N. Y., in 1833, lived in his native State until 1841, and then came with his parents to Kenosha, Wis., where they lived about seven years. Thence went to Green Lake County, where they farmed for some time. He then went to Minnesota and followed various occupations for six years. He then engaged in lumbering at Fond du Lac, Wis., for four years, and in merchandising for three years. Thence he came to Kansas. He was married in 1867 to Miss Matilda de Neveu, a native of the latter city. They have four children—Herman W., Hattie D., Arthur E. and Emma. He is president of the town site, member of the City Council, etc.

JOSEPH H. WALKER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Fairport, Russell County, located in Saline Township, Ellis County, August 5, 1882, on Section 20. He has a homestead and timber claim, and railroad land, consisting of Section 20, 640 acres of land, sixty acres of which he has under plow. He has 300 head of cattle, amongst which can be found some fine Durham stock. He first landed in Kansas in April, 1881, and prospected until he located as above named. He was born in West Townsend, Mass., in 1857, and removed to Cambridge, Mass., in 1865. Lived in his native State until 1881, and attended school until he came to Kansas. His ranch is twenty miles northwest of Russell, and twenty-five miles northeast of Hays City. The Saline River has its course through his ranch. This place is known as Lost Canon Ranch. There are many natural curiosities to be found in this vicinity, amongst which are sharks' teeth and many specimens of fossil shells, etc., which are worthy of the attention of the sojourner.

ALBERT YOXALL, farmer. His parents came with the Northwestern Colony from Oshkosh, Wis. to Russell in the spring of 1871. His father opened a lumber-yard in Russell and continued until 1876. Then engaged in farming, locating on Section 32 Has 160 acres of fine land, 140 of which are cultivated. His father, John Yoxall, died in October, 1880. He was a native of England, born in 1815, came to America in 1869, and settled in Oshkosh, Wisconsin where he engaged in lumbering, until he came to Kansas. Albert Yoxall, his son, was born in England, January 1, 1856, married in 1881 to Miss Alice Overholswr, of Lancaster County, Pa. He was engaged as associate cashier of Russell bank three years, and before and after the death of his father he has been engaged as first stated.

BUNKER HILL.

The above caption is the name of a small town on the Kansas Pacific Railway, twelve miles west of the east line of the county. The town was first started in the early part of the summer of 1871, by J. B. Corbett and V. Harbaugh, who, at the head of a colony from Ohio, located there and laid out the town. The first house built on the town site was put up by J. C. Warner, which served him for the double purpose of a store and dwelling, he having commenced business with a general stock of goods as soon as the building was completed, which was in 1871. The town started off well and quite a number of houses were put up during the first year of its existence.

Soon after the town was started, a small building was rented for a school, of which Miss Clara Carrier was the first teacher.

At the special election held on September 9, 1872, for county officers, and to complete the organization of the county, more votes having been cast at Bunker Hill than at Russell, the County Commissioners who had been appointed by the Governor, declared the former to be the county-seat, which it became and remained such until it was changed to Russell by a vote of the people, April 23, 1874. The removal of the county-seat was a hard blow to the town, by which were dashed all its promising future prospects. Retrogression now took the place of progression, and many who had located there owing to the town being the county-seat, left and went to Russell, upon its removal to that point. Since that time the town has made but little advancement.

In 1873 bonds were issued to erect a new schoolhouse, and a very fine stone building, two stories high, and containing three classrooms, was completed that year. In 1878 a very comfortable hotel was built by Andrew Hill, and in 1880, a very fine stone church edifice was erected by the Evangelical English Lutherans.

In 1882, a very substantial and much needed improvement was made by Moore & Sons, in the erection of a good stone flouring-mill at a cost of $18,000. One great disadvantage the town has had to contend against, is the almost utter impossibility to find well-water, that which is used having to be hauled about two miles, the cost being 25 cents a barrel. The place contains, not to exceed 150 inhabitants, but notwithstanding its disadvantages and paucity of population, those engaged in mercantile pursuits transact a good deal of business in the course of the year. The business of the place is confined to three general stores, one drug store, one millinery store, one hardware, one lumber-yard, one harness and shoe shop, two blacksmith shops and two elevators.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

J. M. BRADBURY, dealer in grain, farm implements, and general merchandise. Began the grain trade in 1873, coming to Bunker Hill in February, 1871. He bought the first grain and erected the first elevator in the village in 1878. The elevator is 21x36 feet, 28 feet high with a capacity of 10,000 bushels. He carries a general stock in merchandise of $8,000. He has officiated as Probate Judge and Clerk of the Court, each one term. Born in Ross County, Ohio in 1841. Was raised and educated in his native state. He began business in life as a clerk then photographing, etc. Enlisted in 1861 in Company A, Eighteenth Ohio Volunteer infantry, participated in all battles of his command, discharged on account of heart disease in 1863. He then engaged in photographing two years, married in 1876 to Miss Ella Exline; a native of Ohio, she was raised in Minnesota. He is a member of the Masonic order of Ohio. Mr. Bradbury assisted to organize the town in 1871. Bradbury & Cooper own 800 acres of fine coal land. The coal is of a bituminous quality. The veins of coal are from 16 to 42 inches in thickness. The coal mines are located twelve miles northeast of Wilson in Fairfield and Plymouth townships, in Ellsworth County.

JAMES J. A. T. DIXON & CO., dealers in dry goods groceries, hardware, etc., opened business in February, 1882 and carry a stock of $1,500. Mr. Dixon first came to Bunker Hill October 5, 1873 for his health, and after eighteen months he began agricultural pursuits and became pastor of the Congregational Church, since which time he has followed preaching irregularly. In the fall of 1875 he was elected to represent Russell County in Kansas State Legislature. Re-elected to same position in the fall of 1876. He was appointed to fill vacancy of Probate Judge in 1878, elected to the office the fall following. He has been a member of the County Board for examination of teachers for eight years. Born in Bond County, Ill. in 1828. Raised on a farm. Began studies for college in 1846. Graduated from college at Jacksonville, Ill., in 1852 Studied theology at Lane Seminary, Walnut Hills, Ohio. Was principal of an academy in Livingston County, Ill., eighteen months. He then began preaching the Gospel at Metamora, Ill. Went into service in the spring of 1864 as a private in Company H, One Hundred and Forty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was commissioned Chaplain of his regiment with the rank of Major and served until mustered out, September 1, 1865. He then preached in Northern Illinois until 1871 when he came to Omaha, Neb. and preached two years, thence to Kansas. Began the publication of Bunker Hill Banner in February, 1881 He is a nominee on the Republican ticket to represent Russell County in Kansas Legislature, in the fall 1882. Married in 1854 to Miss Anna L. Holmes of Grant County, Wis. They have two children: Lydia F., now married to Wm. Harbaugh of Russell County, and Ernest H.

IRA S. FLECK, dealer in agricultural implements, and farmer is the son of Gabriel and Rebecca Fleck, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. Ira S. was born in Sinking Valley, Blain Co., Pa., March 24, 1847. While a lad he attended common school, and such advantages as the public schools offered were the only means he ever had of receiving an education. As he became older he would work on the farm in summer and attend school in winter, and this course he pursued until 1866, when his time was divided between farm work and teaching. In March, 1870 he moved to Dixon, Illinois where he continued his business of farming and teaching until the spring of 1873, when he moved to Kansas and located in Russell County, about three miles south of the village of Bunker Hill, where his time was given to farming exclusively. On January 27, 1874 he was married at Dixon, Ill., to Miss Sarah Fleck, a native of Blair County, Pa. One child has been the issue of this marriage: Alice May, born June 8, 1875. Mr. Fleck has held various township offices and in the fall of 1874 was elected Superintendent of Public Instruction of Russell County, which office he held for three successive terms. In the fall of 1880 he was elected to represent Russell County in the General Assembly, and served in the Legislature of 1881. In 1876 Mr. Fleck organized the Republican party of Russell County and put an end to a feud that had long existed in which the only political distinction known was "county-seat" and "anti-county-seat". Mr. Fleck, in addition to looking after the interests of his farm, is also engaged in dealing in agricultural implements, at Bunker Hill.

DANIEL GROSS first came to Abilene, Kan. in 1874 and clerked some time, finally came to Bunker Hill and became a member of the firm of Eyler & Gross, dealers in general merchandise, opening the business July 21, 1879, and carrying a stock of about $12,000, occupying two rooms, 22x40 and 20x50 feet. Mr. Gross was born in York County, Pa in 1857. Was raised and educated in his native county; married in 1879 to Miss Katie Gardner, a native of Ohio.

MOORE & SONS, proprietors of the Golden Rule steam flouring-mills. These mills were erected in 1880, size of which are 32x52 feet and 45 feet high, built of stone, capacity is 100 barrels in twenty-four hours, cost is $22,000. They do an exchange business only in custom work They employ six men besides their own help. Mr. O. S. Moore first came to Bunker Hill in August, 1878. He was born in Brown County, Ohio in 1848; was raised and educated in Rush County, Ind.; family moving there in 1854. Married in 1879 to Miss Carrie S. Edwards, of Bunghamton, N. Y. They have two children: Jessie G. and an infant son not yet named. He is a member of Russell Lodge No. 115, I. O. O. F.

GEO. W. SMYSER of the firm of J J. A. T. Dixon & Co., located on a homestead near Dorrance, in 1871 and farmed three years. He then served as County Treasurer four years, then into general hardware trade at Russell two years, then farmed two years south of the latter village, then went into business at Bunker Hill. Born in York County, Pa., in 1832, where he was raised and educated. Married in 1854 to Mary Hunes of same place. They have three children: Leila J. Emma E. and Martin B. He is a member of the A. O. U. W and I. O. O. F He enlisted in 1864 in Company C, One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. Re-enlisted in 1864 in Company I, Two Hundred and Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. Participated in all the battles of his command. Mustered out in Alexandria, Va. in May, 1865.

ELLIS COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

ELLIS County was named after Lieut. George Ellis, of the Twelfth Kansas Infantry, who was killed April 30, 1864, in a battle at Jenkins' Ferry, Arkansas. Until 1867, the county was embraced in the unorganized territory of the western portion of the State, but the Legislature of that year defined its boundaries and named it as above. The county contains 576,000 acres, or 900 square miles, and is bounded on the north by Rooks County, on the south by Rush, on the east by Russell, and on the west by Trego County.

In formation, the county is exactly square, being thirty miles north and south and the same number east and west. The territory embraced within the county limits is divided into five civil townships, Ellis embracing a strip nine miles wide on the west side of the county, extending from the north to the south line of the county. Saline Township embraces a strip nine miles wide in the northern portion, extending from the east line of the county to the east line of Ellis Township. Big Creek Township is twelve miles wide, joining Ellis Township on the east, and extending from the south line of Saline Township to the south line of the county. Victoria Township joins Big Creek on the east and its formation is very irregular, being only three miles wide on the north, which width it maintains for nine miles, when it widens to five miles, and three miles further south the width is increased to six miles, when three miles still farther south it is again increased to seven miles, which it maintains to the south line of the county. Walker is the remaining and eastern township of the county, whose formation is the same as that of Victoria, with the exception that as the latter widens the former narrows until the southern portion of it is only two miles wide. Ellis is in the fifth tier of counties from the west line of the State.

The surface of the county is of the same character as that of most of Western Kansas, one vast stretch of prairie, almost completely destitute of timber, what little there was originally having almost disappeared, except a small portion on Big Creek, within the limits of the military reservation at Fort Hays. The face of the country, however, is very far from being uniform, some portions, especially the southeastern, being quite level or gently undulating, the central portion, though not bluffy, is very high and uneven while in the western and northern portion, especially in the vicinity of the Saline River, there are considerable bluffs. About ten or twelve per cent of the county may properly be termed bottom-lands, that is, lands that lie in strips of valley along the streams.

The only streams in the county of any importance are the Saline River, which runs from west to east along the northern boundary of the county, the Smoky Hill River, that runs in the same direction close to the southern boundary line, and Big Creek, that enters the county from the west, midway between the northern and southern boundary lines of the county, and flows in a southeasterly direction. The lesser creeks that flow into these streams are rather insignificant, and even the larger streams, as a usual thing, contain but very little water.

At one time the timber-land of the county was estimated at one per cent of the total area, but even this little has been greatly diminished by settlers cutting it down for fuel. The valleys along the creeks average about a mile in width, some being much less than this, and some considerably more. There are a few springs in the county, especially in the northern portion, but almost in all parts of the county good well-water can be had at various depths, ranging from fifteen to forty feet.

The soil of the county is good, being a rich, black loam, varying in depth from two to eight feet. With ordinary rains it is capable of producing almost anything that grows out of the ground. When the seasons are favorable, immense yields of wheat are raised, but the scarcity of rain renders crops very uncertain. Notwithstanding the richness and depth of the soil, Ellis cannot be classed as an agricultural county, its chief adaptation being wool-growing and stock-raising. Cattle and sheep-raising are the most profitable, as they can sustain themselves the year round on the nutritious buffalo-grass which grows all over the county. Swine, and stock that require to be corn-fed in the winter, are not so profitable, as it is only in exceptionally wet seasons that any corn can be raised, and in most seasons the corn required for feeding purposes has to be shipped in from other counties. Owing to the uncertainty of the seasons, farming in the county is not engaged in to any great extent, but with anything like a reasonable rainfall, the soil is very productive.

GENERAL HISTORY.

But little information concerning the early history of the county could be obtained from the records, as they were very imperfectly kept. When the first election was ordered and held in the county, there is nothing in the records to indicate, nor is the appointment by the Governor of the first County Commissioners an authenticated fact of record, although it is pretty well established that the first County Commissioners were J. E. Walker, Dennis Ryan, and William Rose. The first County Clerk was J. W. Connor, and the first Sheriff was Thomas Ganlon, and the first Justice of the Peace in the county was M. E. Joyce, who had been appointed to the office by the Governor early in 1867.

In 1864 or 1865, a military post was established in Ellis County, on Big Creek, about fourteen miles southeast of where Hays City now stands. This post was known as Fort Fletcher, and had quarters for several companies of troops. The post was located on the low-lying land along the margin of the creek, and was utterly destroyed by the flood that occurred in the spring of 1867, by which several colored soldiers lost their lives. Fort Fletcher was then abandoned and immediately thereafter Fort Hays was established on its present site by Gen. Pope. Up to that time the county was without settlement, but the location of Fort Hays, and the near approach of the Kansas Pacific Railway to that point, attracted a good many settlers to that locality, and then followed the founding of Hays City. Some early attempts to cultivate the prairie in the vicinity of Hays City were made, but they proved failures, and nothing further in this line was essayed until the summer of 1871, when Thomas Arrowsmith, J. H. Edwards, and Louis Watson made some attempts at experimental farming adjacent to the town of Ellis, but the success they met with was far from encouraging. Aside from a few wood-claims that had been taken in the county, but very little of the land was taken, and in 1872 ten or twelve homestead and pre-emption claims were all that had been settled upon in the county. In that year a small colony from Ohio located at what is now known as Walker Station in the eastern portion of the county, but the object of the colony seems to have been to found a town rather than become engaged in agricultural pursuits. The town, however, has had a very slow growth, and though it has passed its first decade it does not contain more than half a dozen houses and one store, and is merely a station on the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway.

Following this colony, two others, very limited in number, arrived the following year, one from New York, that settled in and about Ellis, and one from Pennsylvania, that located at Hays City. It was in that same year that George Grant arrived from England and purchased of the Railway Company 50,000 acres of land in the eastern portion of the county, for the purpose of colonizing it with English agriculturists, and stocking it with improved imported sheep and cattle. This was the greatest accession the county had received, and during the next two or three years some two or three hundred Englishmen, many of them with their families, arrived in the county and located on the Grant purchase. Large numbers of fine sheep and cattle were brought from England and the colony started out under very promising auspices. A town was started on the line of railway, a few miles west of Walker, to which was given the name of Victoria, and by which it is still known. A very fine stone depot was built, and a handsome stone church known as St. George's Chapel. The latter was erected by the colonists and by subscriptions collected in England. A very fine elevator was also built and the place gave promise of growing to be quite a town. A store was put up and in a short time the place had about twenty-five houses and one hundred and fifty people. Experience, however, soon taught the colonists that Ellis County was not an agricultural country, and meeting with nothing but failure and disappointment in their efforts at farming, they became discouraged and began to return to England, and now, of all those that came, but very few remain. In 1879, the originator of the scheme, George Grant, died, and his remains are interred in front of St. George's Chapel at Victoria, while the colony he sought to found has about ceased to exist.

In 1875, and the two years following, large numbers of Russians came into the county and located in colonies. There are, in all, about twelve hundred Russians in the county, located in five separate settlements. Two of these colonies are located on the Smoky, close to the south line of the county, one on Big Creek, about a mile south of the military reservation, one just north of the Kansas Pacific Railway, about half a mile from Victoria, and one on Victoria Creek, about five miles farther north. Most of these Russians took claims upon their arrival, which they immediately commenced to improve. They also built villages to which they gave names after some place in their native country. The village to the north is named Schoenchen and contains about 150 people; the one on Big Creek is named Catherine and has about 200 people; the two on the Smoky are named respectively, Munjor and Peifer, the former having a population of about 300, and the latter of about 150. The most important of the Russian villages is that just north of Victoria, which is named Herzog, and which contains a population of about 400. This latter has the appearance of being quite a town, and in building it some attention has been paid to regularity in laying off the streets. Many of the buildings are very comfortable frame houses, but the majority of them are made of sod, and so constructed as to afford the inmates a considerable degree of comfort. The other villages are similarly built, with the exception that regularity in laying off streets has been disregarded.

Herzog is regarded as the capital of this Russia Minor, and there is established the chief patriarch and priests. The place has a very fine stone Catholic Church, which was erected by Sir Walter Maxwell, who took considerable interest in the English Colony under George Grant. The Russians also erected a large stone monastery, 45x120 feet, to which another wing similar in dimensions is now being added. These Russian villages are occupied, chiefly, in the winter season, as the people reside upon their farms during the other seasons of the year, and only retire to the villages when the weather will not permit them to work on their farms.

The early history of Ellis County is confined chiefly to Hays City, as no attempt at settlement of the county was made until several years after its organization. The early settlement of the county was characterized by those incidents which are usually peculiar to frontier life, in which the revolver generally plays such a conspicuous part. The first three Sheriffs of the county met with violent deaths. The manner of Ganlon's death, the first Sheriff of the county, is not authenticated, but that he met his death at the hands of some desperadoes has been so strongly proven as not to admit of a doubt. How Lanahan, the second Sheriff of the county, came by his death will be recorded at length in the history of Hays City. The third Sheriff, Alexander Ramsy, a brave and courageous officer, was killed in attempting to arrest two horse-thieves. In the summer of 1875, Ramsy went in pursuit of two horse-thieves and overtook them at Stockton, in Rooks County. Upon calling upon them to surrender, they drew their revolvers, whereupon Ramsy fired, killing one of them instantly. Almost simultaneously with his shot, the thieves fired, the fire from one of their revolvers taking effect in the abdomen of Ramsy, inflicting a wound from which he died in a few hours. A witness of the affair, on seeing Ramsy wounded, drew his revolver and fired, wounding the other thief in the neck, the ball passing through his jaw. He was then captured, tried at Stockton, and while the jury was out deliberating upon a verdict he escaped.

Many other incidents not quite so tragical in character, but which illustrate frontier life occurred, and the manner in which justice was administered is worthy of mention. M. E. Joyce, as already stated, was the first Justice of the Peace in the county and had his office at Hays City. In the winter of 1867–68, one man who had killed another came in, confessed his crime, and surrendered himself to the Justice mentioned. A day was set for the hearing and the man was allowed to go, upon his promise to appear and answer. The day came and a large crowd was assembled in the office of the Justice when the man who had surrendered himself entered. The case was called and upon the defendant's answering, the Justice asked him if he was "guilty or not guilty." To the surprise of the Justice and everyone else, the man answered "guilty," whereupon the Justice adjusted his spectacles on his nose, looked at the man a moment, and then said, "You are a d——d fool, and I will discharge you for want of evidence."

In another case tried before this same Justice, the party against whom he rendered judgment desired to give notice that he would take an appeal from his decision, when the Justice gave him to understand that no appeal could be taken, as his was the highest court in Kansas.

The first case tried in the District Court in the county was "Ruggles & Ryan vs. Ranahan," and the presiding Judge was Hon. Judge Humphrey. A great deal of interest was manifested in the case by the people, although the matter at issue was only a question of debt. The Judge decided in favor of the defendant, and this so enraged one class of the people that they made preparations to handle the Judge roughly, and to escape being mobbed he was obliged to flee to the fort and seek the protection of the troops.

The first couple married in Ellis County was Peter Tondell and Elizabeth Duncan in 1868, and the first child born in the county was John Bauer, his birth occurring on January 29, 1868.

The first instrument recorded in the county as appears by the books in the office of the Register of Deeds, was a deed from Hiram L. Cowdry to O. B. Taylor, conveying Lot 23, in Block 5, of Hays City, the consideration being $300. The instrument was dated March 3, 1871.

Ellis County is not an agricultural country as has been shown by experience. Thinking it was such, thousands of people have located within its borders from time to time, only to learn, after years of effort, that they had made a mistake, and left it for other fields. Proof of this is found in the falling away of the population within the two years from 1880 to 1882. In the former year, according to the United States Census, the population of the county was 6,179, while according to the census taken by the Township Assessors in 1882, the population was only 4,699. While not an agricultural county, it has its advantages; however, and for stock-raising purposes it is very desirable. Cattle and sheep-raising can be followed both to advantage and profit, as the rich buffalo-grass with which the surface of the county is matted, is amply sufficient to carry them through the winter without feed of any other kind. The almost utter impossibility of raising corn for feeding purposes precludes the raising of hogs for profit, although in seasons when there is a reasonably fair rainfall, which is very seldom, cereals of all kinds can be raised in abundance. Stockmen, however, find it an excellent county for their business, and both cattle and sheep-ranches are becoming more numerous each year. Financially, the county is in very good condition. It has an excellent court house, and its debt is very trifling, and all orders drawn on the County Treasurer are paid to their full face value upon presentation.

SCHOOLS, MANUFACTORIES, ETC.

There were in Ellis County in 1882, according to the annual report furnished by the County Superintendent to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, thirty-nine organized school districts. There were however, only twenty-two school buildings in the county, containing in all twenty-eight rooms, showing that seventeen of the districts had no school buildings. How it is thus, is not shown. That the organized districts should so far exceed the number of school-buildings, may suggest an inquiry which cannot be answered from the records. It may be accounted for by the fact that many of the districts are very sparsely settled, and the few people residing in them, do not feel disposed to be taxed for schoolhouse purposes so long as they can send their children to school in the adjoining district. The school population of the county in 1882, between the ages of five and twenty-one years, was 2,623, divided as to sex into 1,376 males and 1,247 females. Of this number there were enrolled in the public schools 1,061, of which number 532 were males and 529 females, and the average daily attendance was 738. The number of teachers employed was 32, of whom 7 were males and 25 females. The average salary per month paid teachers was, males $44, and females $26. While the difference in the rates paid between the sexes is quite striking, it was not nearly as great as it was in 1881. In the latter year the average saltary per month paid male teachers, was $33.85, while all that females received, was $18.43. Of the thirty-nine organized school districts in the county, but twenty of them sustained public school for three months in the year, while fifteen failed to sustain school even for three months. The average number of mills levied in the county for school purposes in 1882, was 15.50, and the estimated value of all school property was $31,500. In 1882, there were issued school bonds to the amount of $7,285, and the total school bonded indebtedness of the county was $25,800, or $5,700 less than the estimated value.

On August 1, 1881, the commencement of the school year, there was a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer of $2,306.69, and the amount received during the year from district taxes, was $4,724.88, and from State and county funds $1,724.73; from sale of school bonds $7,285, and from all other sources $391.99, making a total of $16,433.29 received for all school purposes. The total amount paid out during the year for all school purposes was $14,332.96, leaving a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on August 1, 1882, of $2,100.33.

The only establishments in the county of a manufacturing character, are flouring-mills, of which there are four, one on the Saline River, about twenty miles nearly due north from Hays City. This was the first mill built in the county, and was erected by Jacob Meiers in 1876. The mill is built of stone, and is run by water-power. It is valued at $15,000.

The next mill built in the county was that of M. Yost, about three fourths of a mile west of Hays City It is a frame constructed mill, and was erected in 1879, at a cost of $30,000. It is operated by steam-power and makes flour by both the grinding process and roller system.

The third mill is that erected at Hays City, by Jacob Meiers, in 1881. It is a substantially constructed stone mill, with four run of stone, and operated by steam-power. This mill is fitted up with the most improved machinery, and was built at a cost of $30,000.

The fourth mill is that erected at Victoria, by Brungardt, and completed in January 1883. It is a small frame-structure, fitted up and furnished in an excellent style, is operated by steam-power, and was put up at a cost of $15,000.

STATISTICS OF PROGRESS.

In regard to population, the growth of the county has been exceedingly slow, and the latest returns show that it is more on the decrease than increase. For the first two or three years after the limits of the county were defined by the Legislature in 1867, the population increased quite rapidly, and in 1870 had reached 1,336. During the five years following it decreased to 940, being 396 less in 1875 than it was in 1870. The greater portion of this falling off took place after the grasshopper raid in 1874. Those who left must have been of the original settlers, as during the five years for which the decrease is reported, the county received several accessions in the shape of colonies. During the three years following 1875, the population had increased again to 2,437. From 1878 to 1880, very large accessions were made to the population, as according to the United States Census for the latter year the population was 6,179, showing a gain of nearly 4,000 in two years. This increase, however, did not continue, as during the two following years quite an exodus from the county took place, by which the county lost in population nearly as much as it had gained during the three years preceding.* The Census of 1882, as furnished by the various Township Assessors, sets the population down at 4,699, showing that the population in 1882 was 1,480 less than it was in 1880.

The material growth of the county, while it does not show any unusual degree of advancement in the aggregate, yet, when compared with the population, is very far from being unfavorable. Whatever progress has been made in the county towards increasing its material wealth, has, virtually, been made since 1875, because what few attempts had been made prior to that time at agricultural farming, had been, chiefly, experimental, except in 1874 when farming was entered upon quite extensively, but the bright promises created by the spring of that year were dashed by the grasshoppers, and hundreds of people left the county. The condition of the county in 1875, will be better understood by the fact that in that year the total area of field crops in the county was only 1,391 acres, of which about one-third was devoted to different kinds of grass. The following year the acreage increased by only 400 acres, but by 1878 it had reached to 10,754. For the next three years the increase in the acreage of field crops averaged over one hundred per cent per annum, as shown by the statistical record of 1882. According to the same record, the number of acres included in farms was 97,823, the assessed value of which was $361,022, which valuation represents about one-third of the real value During the year ending March 31, 1882, there were thirty-eight farm dwellings erected in the county, valued at $6,225. The field crops of 1881 were distributed as follows:—Winter wheat, 16,993 acres; rye, 1,223; spring wheat, 521; corn, 11,138; barley, 60; oats, 836; buckwheat, 14; Irish potatoes, 193; sweet potatoes, 62; sorghum, 1,230; castor beans, 29; flax, 270; tobacco, 45; broom corn, 980; millet and hungarian, 3,734; pearl millet, 169; rice-corn, 1,374; grasses of various kinds, 1,423, making a total of 40,345. Tame grasses were not very extensively cultivated, there having been only 130 tons of tame hay cut, and 5,441 tons of prairie hay. But very little was done at gardening, there having been only $758 worth of garden products marketed during the year. The income from eggs and poultry was much larger, it being $3,258. The cheese product of the county, for the year ending March 31, 1882, was 1,680 pounds, and that of butter was 54,799 pounds.

The increase in the live-stock of the county has not been very rapid, as compared with that of some other counties, but yet a gradual increase has taken place from year to year. The returns for 1882, give the number of horses in the county at 1,467; mules and asses, 194; milch cows, 1,650; other cattle, 5,176; sheep, 13,278, and swine, 1,496. The value of animals slaughtered, or sold for slaughter, was $9 518. The wool clip for the year was 16,747 pounds. Some efforts have been made at horticulture, but they have not met with that success so far as to render fruit raising a source of any income. In 1882 the trees in bearing in the county were:—Apple, 106; pear, 11; peach, 774; plum, 176, and cherry, 146. The number not in bearing was:—Apple, 2,129; pear, 91; peach, 7,469; plum, 717, and cherry, 759. The people who take an interest in the fruit culture and endeavor to make it a success, labor under considerable disadvantages, chief of which is the prevailing dryness of the season. Were it not for the absence of rain, horticulture would be a very profitable industry.

But very little of the county is under fence, the total number of rods of fence being 17,720, divided as follows:—Board-fence, 113 rods; rail, 40; stone, 491; hedge, 4,000, and wire, 13,076; or about sufficient to enclose 196 square miles, or an area equal to nearly one-fifth of the entire county. The agricultural implements in the county in 1882 were valued at $26,761.

Other attempts at material advancement have been made in the cultivation of artificial forestry, but the success that has attended such attempts has been of a rather doubtful and discouraging character. The number of acres in the county in 1882, devoted to artificial forestry, was 694, of which 108 acres were set out to walnut, 2 to maple, 56 to honey locust, 368 to cottonwood, and 160 to other varieties. Some three or four miles east of Hays City, and immediately south of the railroad track, one Martin Allen has a timber claim of eighty acres, on which there is a grove containing about twenty-five acres, the trees of which were set out about six years ago. Some of the trees have attained a height of ten, twelve and fifteen feet, and though the grove looks remarkably well when in foliage, yet a personal examination of it shows a large percentage of the trees to be dead, and parties who have given considerable study to the subject of arboriculture, express grave doubts as to the success of tree growing in the county without some climatic changes take place.

County Officers.—The officers chosen at the last election were as follows:—M. M. Fuller, C. W Miller, M. M. Shores, Commissioners; M. M. Bannister, County Clerk; J. M. Stahley, District Clerk; John Schlyer, Treasurer; Eli Fox, Register of Deeds; B. F. Miller, Probate Judge; Charles Howard, Sheriff; J. C. Leahey, County Attorney; W. L. Fuller, Superintendent of Public Instruction; G. R. Wolfe, Surveyor; T. B. Yates, Coroner.

HAYS CITY.

Hays City is located on Big Creek, and exactly midway between the east and west boundary lines of the county, and five miles south of the geographical center. The records do not show when or by whom the town site was surveyed and platted, but from the best sources of information obtainable, it was in 1867. Near to where Hays City now stands, but south of the creek, a few adventurous individuals had located and had erected a few rudely constructed buildings, with the expectation that the place would grow to be quite a town; and that it might be known abroad, they gave the place the name of Rome.

The establishment of Fort Hays in the early part of 1867, had considerable to do with the location of Hays City. That same year the Kansas Pacific Railway, in its westward course, had reached the eastern boundary line of the county, and, anticipating its early completion as far as Fort Hays, a party from St. Louis, consisting of William E. Webb, W. J. Wells, and one Judge Knight, in the latter part of 1866, proceeded as far westward as Fort Hays, where they selected three sections of land for the purpose of colonization. The land thus selected embraced that on which Hays City now stands. Having selected the lands deemed necessary for their purpose, the party returned East, and in the following June Mr. Webb again visited Fort Hays. During the interval between his first and second visit, several parties had arrived and established themselves at Rome. Mr. Webb then went to work and selected a tract of land for a town site, which he had surveyed and platted, and to which he gave the name of Hays City. People flocked to the new town by the score, and the railway reaching it shortly afterwards, gave quite an impetus to its growth. Houses sprung up as if by magic, and in a short time it had grown to such proportions as to totally eclipse the town south of the creek, and Rome disappeared. Few towns ever spring into notoriety in less time than did Hays City, and the notorious characters that flocked there, gave the place anything but an enviable reputation. Not that Hays City was an exception to other frontier towns that sprung into existence as the railway stretched westward, the only difference being in the numerical superiority of the disreputable characters that, for a time, were a curse to the place.

The town was not a year old when it contained over 1,000 population. Where the growth was so rapid, it could not be permanent, and after events proved that the early settlement of the place was nothing more than temporary. For awhile Hays City remained the western terminus of the railway, and while it was such, it was one of the most stirring, as well as one of the deadliest places in the West. Business, for a time, was exceedingly lively, as it became the outfitting station for all wagon trains following the Smoky Hill route eastward. Business houses, many of which were only of a temporary character, sprung up like mushrooms, and saloons were opened in great number. At the first meeting of the Board of County Commissioners no less than thirty-seven licenses to sell liquor were granted in two days. For a time it seemed as if all the disreputable characters of both sexes on the frontier were centered in Hays City. Saloons and bagnios flourished, and against the characters that attended these resorts the better element of the community was powerless. The completion of the railway to Sheridan in 1868, while it put a temporary check to the business of Hays, had also its compensatory advantages, as it eliminated from the town those desperate and lewd characters who always desire to live on the line between civilization and barbarism, where they can carry on their nefarious practices undeterred by law and unchecked by restraint.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

The early history of Hays City is one of bloodshed, and the class of desperadoes by which the place was infested, placed but very little value on human life. The town was the scene of many an exploit of J. B. Hickok, alias "Wild Bill," from 1867 to 1869. An erroneous statement has found its way into print, and has been published in books whose authoritative character entitles them to credence that "Wild Bill" was, at one time, Sheriff of Ellis County. The records of the county refute such statement. He was a candidate for Sheriff in 1869, but he was defeated for election by one Peter Lanahan. Bill's character for daring and recklessness of life, and his established reputation for expertness in getting the "drop" on a fellow, and sureness of aim made him the dread of others equally bad and reckless of life as himself. Believing that such a man was the best person to protect the law-abiding people against the thugs by which the place was infested, the citizens, and the business men especially, employed him as a special marshal. While thus employed, he killed two soldiers, two citizens, and wounded several others, and the only way he answered admonition or brooked interference was with the revolver. After killing the soldiers to evade the military authorities he left the place and was next heard of at Abilene, where he continued his murderous practices.

"Wild Bill," however, was far from the worst character that found his way to Hays City during its early days. One who was known by the name of "Jim Curry" was one of the most depraved specimens that ever visited the western country. He was the embodiment of everything bad and disreputable, the very quintessence of all wickedness, and a living personification of crime in its worst forms, without a single redeeming quality. No person was safe against his attacks; his murderous weapons were aimed at all alike. It would require pages to recite all his murderous acts, but a few will suffice to show the desperate character of the man during his short stay at Hays City. He killed several colored men, some of whom he threw into a dry well; he killed a man named Brady by cutting his throat, after which he threw him into an empty box car and fastened up the door. Another time he was going up the street, and meeting a quiet, inoffensive youth, named Estes, who was about eighteen years of age, told him to throw up his hands. The youth begged that he would not kill him, but the villain, deaf to all such appeals, placed a revolver to the boy's breast and sent a bullet through his heart, stepped over his dead body and walked away.

This cowardly act aroused the citizens, and they then determined to protect themselves, and to deal out summary and condign punishment upon all offenders against life and property. This action on the part of the people had the effect of driving many of the evil-doers from the place, but notwithstanding this, a great deal had to be accomplished before the better class of the citizens could depend upon the law for protection.

While many of the worst characters had decamped and followed the railway to Sheridan, the majority of the bagnios and saloons, with their inmates, remained, and in these took place many a bloody encounter. In the spring of 1872, a row occurred one evening in front of "Old Man"

Kelly's saloon on North Main Street. At that time Peter Lanahan was Sheriff of the county, and hearing of what was going on went down to quell the disturbance. Pistols were being freely used and upon the Sheriff undertaking to interfere, one Charles Harris, who, at that time, was bar-tender for one Thomas Dunn, commonly known as "Tommy," fired at him, inflicting a mortal wound in the abdomen. Upon the Sheriff being shot and wounded by Harris, one Em. Bowen, the proprietress of a noted bagnio, ran out with two revolvers which she gave to the Sheriff, whereupon he immediately commenced firing, killing Harris instantly. Mortally wounded as he was, the Sheriff, after killing Harris, went into the saloon of "Old Man" Kelly, where the shooting became general. Another Kelly who kept a saloon in another part of the town was a participant in the melee, and when the Sheriff commenced firing in the saloon, this younger Kelly crept under the table, and while there Lanahan reached over and fired four shots at him, but becoming weak and unsteady from the wound he had received himself, his aim was uncertain and Kelly escaped unhurt. Lanahan, becoming exhausted, sank to the floor and was carried into the bagnio of Em. Bowen, where some parties undertook to render him the best assistance they could. While there, the younger Kelly, who had escaped from "Old Man" Kelly's, returned with a rifle, and placing himself in front of the bagnio where Lanahan lay dying, commenced firing into the house, wounding a man named May in the knee. The Sheriff was then carried to the court house where he died the following day.

The history of Hays City for the first few years of its existence is one of lawlessness, bloodshed, and feuds, differing only in degree of recklessness. The only object to be accomplished in reciting these tragical enactments in history, is to show the state of society that existed in the frontier towns of Kansas as civilization moved westward, and also to show how those dangerous and terrorizing elements disappeared before the onward march of law and order. But few places in Kansas have such a blood-stained history as Hays City, and in no place had the better element of society so much to contend against.

Not the least of those transactions which so darken the pages of the history of this city, was that which occurred in 1869. That year the government had more military supplies accumulated at the military post than could be stored in the room provided, and a large quantity were piled alongside the track, which were covered with a tarpaulin. To prevent any of the goods from being stolen, two watchmen were employed to watch them, who relieved each other at midnight. The name of one of the watchmen was John Hays. One night Hays was on duty and about midnight he stepped across the street to Tommy Drumm's saloon to see what time it was, and just as he was about opening the door three colored soldiers came along, one of whom shot Hays dead. These soldiers belonged to the Thirty-eighth Infantry, at that time stationed at Fort Hays, and having come to town that evening, had become slightly intoxicated. While in this condition they undertook to enter a bagnio and were refused admission, whereupon they concluded to raise a row. They next went to a barber's shop, where they commenced to smash things generally, and caused the colored barber to secrete himself for safety. They next resolved to go out and kill the first man they met, and Hays being the first man they saw they unceremoniously shot and killed him. Next morning the barber related to the Sheriff how the three colored soldiers had acted in his shop and what he had heard them say, whereupon the Sheriff, taking the barber with him to identify the soldiers, went over to the fort and reported to the military authorities there what had happened and said that he was there to arrest the three soldiers who had participated in the murder of Hays. The troops were drawn up in line and the three soldiers were identified by the barber and turned over to the custody of the Sheriff, who took them over to Hays City where a supposed preliminary examination was held which was protracted until evening.

The three colored soldiers were then locked up in a cellar to await a further examination the following morning. That same night they were taken from the cellar by a party of men who took them to the trestle-work that crosses a ravine about four hundred yards west of the depot, where ropes were adjusted to their necks, the other end being fastened to the sleepers, after which they were lifted up and dropped down between the ties where they hung until morning, when the ropes were cut by some section-men and their lifeless bodies were allowed to drop to the bottom of the ravine, from which they were taken to the fort by a party of soldiers where they were buried.

About one-fourth of a mile from Hays City there is a patch of ground known as "Boot Hill," and why it was thus named will sufficiently indicate what kind of a place Hays City was during its early days. This particular piece of ground was the burial place for those who died violent deaths, that is, those of the ruffians with which the place was infested who were killed at each other's hands. These parties were buried without ceremony, with their boots on, and from the fact that forty-five of the characters who thus died were thus buried in that particular spot the place received the name of "Boot Hill," and by this name it is still known.

In 1874, an outbreak occurred, consequent upon the murder of John Hays. At that time the fort was garrisoned by the Ninth Regiment of Colored Cavalry, who sought to wreak vengeance upon the citizens for the hanging of the three colored soldiers of the Thirty-eighth Infantry that we have just detailed. One night a party of the Ninth went to town prepared to "clean it out," as they expressed it. The people hearing of this, armed themselves and determined to resist the premeditated "cleaning out" process. The colored cavalry commenced the ball and the fight became general between them and the citizens. The people were victors, and six of the soldiers were killed and thrown into a dry well. From that time on the better class of citizens were in the ascendancy, and while their determined resistance put an end to all future trouble with the soldiers, it also served as a lesson to the few desperate characters that still remained in the town, who, finding that the people were determined that law and order should rule, sought other fields where they could carry on their nefarious practices with greater assurance of impunity.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Hays City was made the first county seat of the county, which position it has occupied since Ellis County was organized, and which position it still retains. Among the first to establish themselves in business in the place were W. A. Rose, Ryan & Carl, Mr. Walker, Mr. Robbins, and Moses & Bloomfield, all of whom started in 1867. The buildings in which they commenced business were all one-story frame buildings. The first hotel in town was built by Joseph Perry, in September, 1867, which was followed by another in October of the same year, erected by a man named Boggs. The first school taught in town was by a man named Reese, who started a private school in 1869, and the following year a public school was opened, the first teacher of which was one Mrs. Jones.

The first substantial improvement made in town was by James O'Brien, on North Main Street, being the stone building now occupied by John Hobbs as a drug store. In 1873 bonds were issued to build a court house, and a very fine stone building was erected, the basement of which is used for a county jail. It is a good, substantial building, the first floor of which is partitioned off into well-finished county offices, the upper floor being used for a court room. That same year $12,000 in bonds were issued for the erection of a school-house, which was built about two blocks west of the court house.

From the time the railway was pushed westward from Hays City to Sheridan, the growth of the former place was rather backward than forward, and a good many business men and others took down their buildings and moved to the latter point.

The Forty-sixth Congress having created a land district in Western Kansas, and designated Hays City as the place where the United States Land Office should be located, it was established there in March, 1875, occupying as an office a frame building on North Fort Street. The following year Henry Krueger erected a very fine two-story stone building on North Fort Street, into which, when completed, the United States Land Office was moved, and was so occupied until the office was moved to Wakeenay, in October, 1879.

The same year in which the land office was built, H. P. Wilson put up a fine two-story stone building on Chestnut Street, which for some time was used for hotel purposes, and known as the Pennsylvania House, and also a one-story building of the same material. In 1877, Henry Krueger erected a large two-story stone building on South Fort Street. It is a double building, the ground floor being fitted up into one large store room, while the upper story is used as a public hall.

Up to 1877 the town was without a church, although there were two or three church societies in the place. In 1877 a Catholic Church was organized by Father Fogarty, of Solomon City, and in that same year a very neat frame chapel was erected, which was the first church edifice in town. The present pastor of the church is Rev. Father Athanase.

On January 13, 1879, the town was visited by a fire which carried away the Gibbs House, which was the hotel built by Joseph Perry in 1867. Besides the hotel, two grocery stores and harness shop were also swept out of existence. Notwithstanding the loss occasioned by this fire, there were better and more substantial improvements made in 1879 than had been made in any year since the town had an existence. Hall & Son erected a beautiful two-story stone building on South Main Street, which they now occupy as a hardware store. A few lots east of Hall & Son's building, H. P. Wilson put up a one-story stone building, in which he opened a bank, and where he still continues to carry on a banking business. This was the first, and is the only bank in town. That same year an elevator of not very large dimensions was put up alongside the railroad track by Simon Motz. While these improvements of a public character were going on, several very handsome residences were being built. J. B. Millner erected a very fine two-story stone residence on North Fort Street. Beach Brothers put up, about the same time, one of the finest and neatest finished stone residences in Western Kansas; and that of A. S. Hall, on Fourth Avenue, while it is frame, is a very elegant dwelling. The town was further improved that year by the erection of the Presbyterian Church, and this was followed in 1880 by a very neat church which the Lutherans erected.

In 1880, also, a goodly-sized elevator was erected by Henry Krueger, and a still larger one in 1881 by Simon Motz. In the latter year an extensive addition was made to the school-house, and Hays City now has one of the finest school buildings in all of Western Kansas.

In December, 1881, Hays City was again visited by a fire, which carried away six buildings on South Fort Street, none of them, however, very extensive, but yet the loss occasioned thereby was considerable, as the entire stock of goods in some of the buildings was completely destroyed. Neither in business houses nor in residences has any improvement been made in Hays City since 1879, but, on the contrary, the place has lost largely in population since that time. At that time the population of the town was estimated at 1,000; whereas, according to the assessor's returns for 1882, the population of Big Creek Township, in which Hays City is located, and which is twelve miles east and west by twenty-one north and south, contained, all told, a population of 969; and while considerable of this falling off took place in the country, a great portion of it occurred in town.

The location of Hays City is quite beautiful, and the military post of Fort Hays adds not a little to its appearance; and being located almost immediately beyond the corporate limits of the town, makes the city appear much larger than it really is. It is a six-company post, but at present the garrison is composed of but three companies—two white and one colored. The barracks, officers' quarters and grounds are handsomely planned, and the towering flag-staff, from which floats daily the Star-spangled Banner, all add to the picturesqueness of the place.

A heavy belt of timber, which extends along the banks of Big Creek the entire length of the land embraced within the military reservation, separates the fort from the city, and adds to the beauty of the location. Hays City is quite a business point and commands a good trade, and most of its business houses are good, substantial buildings, and are well stocked with goods.

The benevolent fraternities are represented by a Masonic and an Odd Fellows' Lodge, the latter instituted in February, 1882, with five charter members. The first officers of the lodge were: B. C. Arnold, N. G.; G. W. Kay, V. G.; W. L. Fuller, R. S.; C. Swallow, Treas.; S. Motz, W., and D. C. Nellis Con. The lodge has now a membership of twenty-three, and the present officers are: W. L. Fuller, N. G.; D. C. Nellis, V. G.; A. K. Shade, R. S.; Cephas Grasse, Treas.; G. B. Snyder, Con.; John Nichols, W.

The business of the place is represented by six general merchandise stores; three hardware stores; three drug stores; three hotels—all very inferior buildings, being small frame structures; one dry goods store; one harness and saddlery shop; one millinery establishment; two book, notions and stationery stores; two jewelry stores; two bakeries and restaurants; two carriage and wagon-shops; two lumber-yards; two newspapers, and one bank. The palmiest days of Hays City were in its early years; and as the country surrounding it has proved, thus far, unremunerative to those who engaged in agricultural pursuits, there is not much on which to base encouragement for the future, although, situated as it is, it will always be a fair trading point.

The Press.—The first attempt to establish a newspaper in Ellis County was made in 1867, by Joseph Clarke & Co., who in that year, at Hays City, established and published a paper named the Railway Advance. It was Republican in politics, and was issued tri-weekly; but its existence was very brief, having expired early the following year.

The Hays City Times was the next to make its appearance, having been established in 1873, by Allen & Jones; but like the one that preceded it, its existence was very short.

In February, 1874, the Hays City Sentinel was established by W. H. Johnson, but in the following August it passed into the possession of Reed & Motz, who remained at the head of the paper until November of the same year, when the paper, office and material passed into the hands of W. P. Montgomery & Son, by whom the paper was published until February, 1882, when the press and office material were taken by F. C. Montgomery to Cheeney, Washington Territory, where he continues to publish a paper. Upon the removal of the office from Hays City, the unfulfilled contracts between the Sentinel and its patrons were completed by the Star, the latter becoming the official organ of the county.

The Star was established at Hays City in March, 1876, by J. H. Downing, who has been and continues to be sole editor and proprietor since the paper was first issued. When the press and material of the Sentinel were taken to Washington Territory in 1882, its subscription list passed to the Star, the latter changing its name to that of the Star-Sentinel. The paper is still owned and edited by Mr. Downing, and is the official paper of the county. It is an eight-column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of between 700 and 800.

German-American Advocate is the name of a paper, the first number of which was issued at Hays City on October 4, 1882. The paper was started and published by the Advocate Publishing Company, with Nathaniel Robbins as editor, but subsequently it passed into the hands of Charles Miller, who is now sole editor and proprietor. The paper is published in both English and German. It is a seven-column folio, independent in politics, and has a circulation of about 450.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

MARTIN ALLEN, farmer, and the present Representative in the State Legislature from Ellis County. He first came to Hays City in 1872, and was one of the first to engage in agriculture, in what is known as the "Plain Region" of Western Kansas. He was also one of the proprietors of the town of Hays City and its additions, and still owns a large number of lots there, and while in the land business, located most of the early settlers of Ellis County on their homesteads and other claims. He was born in Monroe County, Ohio, in 1829; settled at Mendota, Ill., in 1852, and followed farming and horticultural pursuits until coming to Kansas. He was married in 1854 to Miss Elizabeth Augustine, a native of Tuscarawas County, Ohio. They have two children living—Charles T., now clerking in a sutler's store at Fort Hays, and Lizzie, now a school teacher. Mr. Allan has served as Justice of the Peace in both Illinois and Kansas, and was United States Circuit Court Commissioner from August, 1874, to December, 1880, when he resigned on account of representing his county in the Legislature; has been County Surveyor, and is now a member of the State Horticultural Society, and one of its vice-presidents, and chairman of its Standing Committee on Forestry. ELLIS.

The town known by the name of Ellis was laid out by the Kansas Pacific Railway Company in 1873, and was surveyed and platted by Holland Wheeler, a civil engineer in the employ of the company. It is located on the northeast quarter of Section 8, Township 13 south, Range 20 west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. It is situated on the north bank of Big Creek, and just one mile east of the west line of the county.

It is what is usually known as a railroad town, and the fact of it being the terminus of the third division of the Kansas Pacific Railway, it is dependent, chiefly for its support, on the employes of the company. The roundhouse and machine shops of the company being located there, gives employment to a great many men, and aside from the support derived from these sources, the town has very little to rely upon. It is surrounded by a rough, broken country, altogether unsuited for agricultural pursuits, so that its country trade is very limited.

The railway runs through the center of the town from east to west, and that portion north of the track is designated the North side, and the opposite portion the South side. All the business portion of the town is north of the track, and confined chiefly to the street fronting the railway, whilst the greater portion of the residence part is south of the track. The buildings of the railway company are all good, substantial, stone structures, and quite extensive, the roundhouse having stalls for fourteen locomotives. The building erected by the company for a depot is a very fine two-story stone building, and is both a depot and hotel combined. All the business houses are rather inferior buildings, there being only one two-story stone business house in town, that of Kelly & Ormrod. The others are all one-story buildings, some stone and some frame.

The first man to start merchandising in town was Thomas Daily, who erected a one-story double storeroom, one room being devoted to the sale of clothing exclusively, and the other to general merchandising. There are but few business houses in the town, but what there are, is amply sufficient for the trade. The business men of the place are Thomas Daily, Nichols & Bros., Reading & Bowen, G. F. Lee, Kelly & Ormrod, and Eli Sheldon. The majority of the residences of the town are plain, unpretentious, but neat and comfortable looking buildings, and such as would indicate the home of the thrifty, industrious mechanic.

In 1882, a very fine improvement was made to the town in the erection of a very fine two-story stone school building in the southern portion of the town. It is a very neat, well-finished structure, surmounted by a belfry that is quite ornamental in design. Although there have been for some years several church organizations in town, there never has been a church building erected. After the new schoolhouse was completed, however, in 1882, the members of the Congregational Church Society purchased the old frame school building, which they are now converting into a church. There is a Masonic Lodge in town, and one of Odd Fellows has been organized recently.

Like most of the other towns west of Abilene on the Kansas Pacific Railway, Ellis had for a brief period the advantages and disadvantages of the cattle trade. This was during 1877–78, and the history of the place during that time was about similar to that of other places similarly situated. If business was increased by the trade, crime was also increased, and a certain class of characters attracted to Ellis by the cattle trade could be very well dispensed with in any society. So long as Ellis remains a terminus of a division of the railroad, and the company maintains its shops and roundhouse there, it will be a town of some importance, but aside from these it has very little to support it.

Was engaged in photographing in Troy, N. Y., and afterward in grocery business in Syracuse, N. Y. Married in 1860 to Miss Laura A. Hall, a native of Edenville, Herkimer Co., N. Y. They have seven children—Jessie M., Harry W., Beecher, Bradley, Allie, William and Lynn. He is a member of Apollo Lodge, No. 13, Masonic, of Troy, N. Y.

R. S. ORMEROD, firm of Kelley & Omerod, dealers in general merchandise. They opened trade in 1878, and carry a stock of about $5,000. They erected their store building in 1877, at a cost of $1,500; size of main building, 25x45 feet, and built of stone. R. S. Omerod first came to Ellis, Kan., in January, 1873. Being a machinist by trade, he worked in that capacity for the Kansas Pacific Railroad five years, then went into merchandising. Born in England in 1853, he came to America with his parents in 1863, and settled in Peoria, Ill., where they lived until coming to Kansas.

THOMAS DALY, dealer in a general line of merchandise. He keeps all varieties of goods, and carries a stock of $40,000. He opened trade in 1870, and erected his present large store a few years afterward; occupies two rooms, 23x80 feet, built of stone. He came to Ellsworth in 1868, where he engaged in merchandising a short time, and was also in the employ of the United States Government some time. Afterward located in Ellis and began the above trade. He was born in Ireland in 1839, and came to America when a small boy. He enlisted May 25, 1861, in Company E, Fourteenth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, participating in all the battles of his company; was mustered out in June, 1864.

DANIEL GRIEST, land agent for the Union Pacific Railroad; land office located at Ellis, Ellis County. He came to Ellis March 23, 1881, and took charge of the above business. Came to Larned, Pawnee Co., Kan., in January, 1878, where he engaged in the same business as at present for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad two years. He was born in York County, Pa., in 1837, and made that county his home twenty-five years. He lived in Indiana five years and six months, Maryland eleven months, then went back to Pennsylvania, Adams County, and remained ten years, and from there came to Kansas. He first began business in life as a salesman for fruit trees, and followed it for fifteen years. He began to shift for himself at the age of twelve years. He was married in 1861 to Miss Rose D Mendelson, a native of Philadelphia, Pa. They have three sons and three daughters—Emily R., married to Oscar Erway, of Pawnee County; Wilmer M., who now has charge of their dairy ranch in Pawnee County of 240 acres; Mary, Lizzie, John E., Florence T., and Mordecai P. Mr. Griest was a member of Moneellen meeting of Hicksite Friends, Pennsylvania, and Relief Lodge, No. 145, I. O. O. F., of Camden, Ind. His wife is a Homœopathic physician and surgeon, self-taught, and has quite a practice in the place where they live. He followed teaching in the winter until thirty-one years of age. He has now 200,000 acres of land for sale for the Union Pacific Railroad Company; also agent for 10,000 acres in Pulaski County, Ky.

J. E. HUBBARD, superintendent of bridges and building on Smoky Hill Division, Union Pacific Railroad, in Kansas. He has forty men under his supervision, and the pay-rolls show $800 paid out monthly on this division. He came to Kansas in the spring of 1866, and located at Leavenworth, where he worked at the carpenters' trade a year. He then engaged in the same capacity for the United States Government at Fort Riley a year; thence to Fort Harker a year; thence to Fort Dodge, Kan., a year. Then entered the railroad service as a carpenter, and by strict attention to duty secured his present position in 1872. He was married in 1875 to Miss Louisa Palmer, a native of Buffalo, N. Y. They have two daughters—Irene and Stella. Mr. Hubbard is a native of Aurora, Ind., born in 1843. He enlisted in September, 1861, in Company A, Seventh Regiment, Indiana Volunteer Infantry; participated in all the battles of his command, comprising thirty-two engagements. He was mustered out in 1864.

H. W. MORGAN, physician and surgeon, came to Wa Keeney, Kan., in April 1879, where he practiced medicine for two years. He then moved to Ellis on account of its being a central location. He is a physician and surgeon for the Union Pacific Railroad. His private practice extends west from Ellis on the line of the road as far as Wallace (119 miles). His practice for the Union Pacific Railroad Company extends from Wallace on the west to Brookville on the east. He was born in Burlington, Iowa, in 1849. Was educated in New York City, and graduated from the medical department of the University of New York City in 1879. He practiced medicine three years in Dallas County, Iowa, previous to his going to New York City. He was married in September 1877 to Miss Della C. Baldwin, of Grafton, N. H. He is a member of Wa Keeney Lodge No. 148, Masonic.

VICTORIA.

Victoria was the scene of the attempt by George Grant to establish a prosperous colony in the wilderness, elsewhere described. This colony was established in 1873. It brought considerable capital with it, and for a time its success seemed very probable. The first church in the county was built by this colony in 1877. It was intended for Episcopal services, nearly all of the colony holding the faith of the established church of England. The final dissolution of the colony is detailed in the general history of the county.

St. Fidelis Church, of Victoria, Ellis County, Kan., was founded by Rev. Father Anthony Mary, and the erection began November 1, 1881, and will be completed in the fall of 1883. The size of the church building is 50x123 feet; including sacristy, it is 169 feet long. The walls are of cut Magnesia limestone, 30 feet high and 2½ feet thick. The steeple walls are 3 feet thick. Every 12½ feet around the building is a pillow 2x2½ feet. The sanctuary is 24x30 feet. The sacristy is 22x30 feet. The above church is built entirely by Russians. The walls, including steeple tower, will cost $2,417. Total cost of structure will exceed $8,000. There are 152 families who are members of the above church.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

REV. FATHER ANTHONY MARY, a Catholic priest, was born in Westphalia, in the kingdom of Prussia, in 1834. He began his scientific education in the Gymnasium at Muenster, in Westphalia. Afterward he made his philosophical and theological studies at Mainz, in Hessia, and became priest in 1859. Then he worked as priest, especially as missionary, in Westphalia until 1875, when he came to America and located in Cumberland, Md., where he worked as priest in the Saint Peter and Paul's Church. Two years afterward he came to Metamora, Ill., and built there a church, monastery and schoolhouses. In the year 1879 he went to Peoria, Ill., and built there the Church of the Sacred Heart, a monastery and schoolhouse, and worked there for two years as priest. Thence he came to Victoria, Kan., in 1881, where he is building a large church. He has there twenty-three missions under charge, besides his own church at Herzog, Victoria Station. He has built many churches, monasteries and schoolhouses in his life-time. In 1870-71 he was Chaplain in the Franco-Prussian war. He is a member of the Capuchin Order.

TREGO COUNTY.

LOCATION, TOPOGRAPHY, SOIL, ETC.

TREGO County is in the western part of Kansas, and is included in what was once known as the Great American Desert. It is located in the fourth tier of counties from the west line of the State, and in the third tier from the north line, and is about 315 miles west from Kansas City, or the eastern boundary line of the State. The county being thirty miles square, contains 576,000 acres or 900 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Graham County, on the south by Ness, on the east by Ellis, and on the west by Gove County. Its location is about midway between Kansas City and Denver; the second standard parallel, south, forming its northern boundary line, and the third standard parallel its southern line.

The surface of the county, in general, is rolling prairie, but in the northern tier of townships, through which the Saline River runs, it is quite broken and bluffy, and this irregularity in the surface extends about four miles south of the river. Along the Smoky Hill River, in the south center of the county, it is also quite bluffy and broken, a chain of bluffs, known as Cedar Bluffs, extending for a distance of about ten miles along the course of the stream. With these exceptions there is no other portion of the county that may be termed bluffy, although there is a good deal of high prairie land within the limits of the county; but by far the greater portion of the county is undulating prairie.

The principal streams of the county are the Saline River, which runs from west to east, parallel with and almost along the northern boundary line of the county; the Smoky Hill, which runs in the same direction through the county, about six miles north of its southern boundary line, and Big Creek, that runs parallel with and between the Saline and Smoky. The two latter have a number of tributaries, some of which are fed by springs, but the major portion of them are dry the greater part of the year except in wet seasons. The county is, virtually, destitute of timber, the supply being confined to an occasional tree along the Saline and some of its tributaries. Some fifteen years ago some of the creeks, especially those in the northwest portion of the county were reasonably well-timbered, but the most of it was cut down to supply contracts with the government, and what was left soon disappeared upon the arrival of settlers, until now there is scarcely a tree to be found in the county. Excellent well-water can be found in almost any portion of the county at depths ranging from fifteen to forty feet.

The soil of Trego County is of the choicest kind, and no better can be found anywhere. The streams being without valleys, the county has none of that land denominated "bottom land," which constitute the choicest lands of many of the counties farther east. While the land of the county is all "upland," the soil is rich and deep, and, with sufficient moisture, is capable of yielding immense crops, all kinds of cereals growing in great abundance in seasons when there is a fair amount of rainfall. It can not be called an agricultural county, however, and so extremely uncertain are the seasons that but little effort is made at farming. Several years experience by skillful farmers has confirmed a belief that long existed, that Trego County, like the large majority of counties in Western Kansas, is not adapted to anything like a successful following of agricultural pursuits. The value of the county, however, to stock-men, cannot be over-estimated. Even in the driest seasons, there is usually an abundance of water in the creeks and streams for cattle, and when these sources are insufficient, which does not often occur, an ample supply of good well-water can be obtained with little labor. There is very little prairie, or blue-stem grass in the county, but there is an abundance of rich buffalo grass, which is very nutritious, and which neither rain nor drouth can destroy, as cattle eat it as readily when it is dry as when it is green. Stock men do not think of feeding their cattle during the winter, as they find feed enough in the buffalo grass to bring them out in fair condition in the spring. The kinds of stock that are most remunerative, are cattle and sheep, as they require but little of any kind of feed the year round, but that which the soil, in its primitive state, produces. No attention is paid to the raising of hogs for profit, for the reason that hogs require corn, and Trego County is exceedingly unreliable for the successful cultivation of this cereal. When it is said that Trego County is unsurpassed as a stock county, all is said that can be, truthfully, touching its adaptability and natural advantages.

Shallow veins of coal have been reported to exist in Collyer and Ogallah townships, the former embracing the western portion of the county and the latter the eastern. No developments have yet been made, however, by which such reports can be stated as facts. A deposit has been found in Trego County, the like of which has never been developed in any other portion of the country. This is a chalk bed, discovered by George Pinkham on his claim, near Wa Keeney in 1877. These chalk beds are wide in extent and of great depth, and very pure in character. Upon the discovery of this valuable deposit, Mr. Pinkham visited many of the leading cities of the East to ascertain the best methods of manufacturing whiting, and, returning to Trego County, immediately commenced the erection of whiting works, investing $5,000 in buildings and machinery. The whiting works constitute the only manufacturing establishment of any kind in the county, there being not even a flouring-mill beside. Steps are being taken to considerably enlarge the whiting works, and to put in more extensive machinery and a more powerful crushing or grinding mill. Mr. Pinkham is meeting with considerable success in his undertaking, and although the works are yet in their infancy, he manufactured and shipped in 1882, 150,000 pounds of whiting. Considering all the uses chalk can be put to, and the many articles of which, in their manufacture, it forms a constituent and indispensable part, the chalk beds of Trego County may, in time, be a source of great wealth to the shire.

Of good building material the county has an abundance, both in common and magnesian limestone. Nearly the whole of the entire county is sub-soiled with limestone, and in the ravines, and along the bluffs of the streams and creeks it crops out through the surface. It is of various colors, brown, white and yellow, and also differs greatly as to hardness. In some places it is so soft that it can be easily sawed into bricks of any dimension, and is excellent for building purposes, as it hardens by exposure; while in other places it is found to be so hard that the mallet and chisel are necessary to give it shape. This latter quality is used, and is very excellent, for caps and sills. Beds have also been found of a material known as native lime. This material is easily dug with pick and shovel, and makes good mortar for building and plastering without being burned, its adhesive qualities being equal to those of first-class cement. It has been used in the erection of the depot at Wakeeney, also in the large Keeney Block, and, in fact, in almost every stone building in the county.

GENERAL HISTORY.

The person to whom is conceded the credit of being the first settler in Trego County, is B. O. Richards, who located at a place named Coyote, near the present site of Collyer, in the extreme west of the county. At that time Richards was a railway employe and kept a boarding house, but subsequently took a claim and tried farming, but failing at this he went into stock-raising, in which business he is now engaged.

Richards, however, was not the first man in the county to attempt farming, the credit for this belonging to J. R. Snyder, who moved into the county in 1877, and who was the first man in the county to turn over the virgin sod for the purpose of trying to raise a crop. The settlers in the county who had preceded the Chicago Colony in 1877, were J. C. Henry, Harlow Orton, Earl Spaulding, J. K. Snyder, D. O. Adams, George Brown, George McCaslin, George Pinkham and Peleg Richards. When Mr. Warren went to the county in the fall of 1877, for the purpose of establishing a colony and founding a city, there went with him W. S. Harrison, George Barrell, F. O. Ellsworth, Thomas Peck and C. W. F. Street, all of whom located upon claims in different parts of the county. The following year witnessed the rush, and the Government Land Office was besieged by large crowds daily who wished to center claims.

The settlers of 1878 were mostly from in and around Chicago, and among them were P. W. Miller, James Duckworth, James McGuire, J. M. Davis, S. C. Robb, David Fouts, T. A. Shorthill, S. Shorthill, John Lempke, J. F. Allen, George Dobson, George Baker, John Weckler, B. C. Gaisford, C. H. Gibbs, W. C. Olson, W. H. Fuson, W. T. Hunter, Harmon Pence, J. R. Kershaw, B. W. S. Huffaker, and about fifty or seventy-five others, all of whom took claims upon which they located. The rush of people to Trego County in 1878, although wonderfully great, was nothing in comparison with that of 1879. People flocked in by the hundreds, and for a time it seemed that there would not be an acre of land in the county but that would be taken. The records of the Goverment Land Office at Wakeeney, for that year, show that nearly all the available land in the county was either pre-empted or homesteaded. The influx of people was so great that by the middle, of 1879, the population of the county was estimated at 3,500.

The crop of 1879, however, was a total failure, and this experience caused a great many to think that the county was not adapted to agricultural pursuits, and a great many left, but others, believing that the failure of 1879 was only exceptional, remained, determined to test the productive qualities of the county still further. The year 1880, however, proved more disastrous to the crops than the one preceding it, and the faith of many was utterly destroyed. In that year the number of acres sown to wheat was 5,428, and the total product was only 16,284 bushels, being an average of only three bushels to the acre. The average yield of rye was five bushels to the acre. Corn was no better, there being 5,924 acres planted, which yielded only 71,088 bushels, or twelve bushels to the acre. This was very far from affording any encouragement, and people began to leave the county as rapidly as they had come.

The year 1881 was very little better, and the exodus continued and is still going on until now, according to the best information obtainable, there are not more than 1,500 or 1,600 people in the county.

When the county first began to be settled, buffalo, elk and antelope roamed over its plains in countless numbers, and even now (1883) large herds of antelope are found within its borders.

Like most other western counties the people of Trego have had a little Indian experience. In September, 1878, a tribe of Cheyennes moving northward, characterized their movements in usual Indian fashion by killing men, outraging and murdering women and stealing cattle. People from the country flocked into Wa Keeney, and all was excitement and confusion. Arms and munitions were sent out from Topeka, and a company of eighty men was organized, of which John M. Keeney was Captain, W. H. Fuson First Lieutenant, and C. W. Mulford Second Lieutenant. The company was named the Trego County Home Guards, and was ready to defend Wa Keeney against any attack the Indians might make. The Cheyennes, in their northward march, kept to the west of Trego County, crossing the railway track about twenty-five miles west of Wakeeney, at a place named Buffalo Park, in Gove County, in the vicinity of which several persons were murdered, the Indians killing in all fifty-two men, women and children.

One of the pleasant incidents in the history of the county was the grand Fourth of July celebration held at Wakeeney in 1879. The year preceding had been one of excellent crops, the wheat yield being fully thirty bushels to the acre, while corn went as high as seventy-five bushels. People were enthusiastic over the county and filled with hope as to its future, and they could think of no better way of giving vent to their exuberance of spirit than to hold a grand Fourth of July celebration. It was a gorgeous affair, and nothing was left undone to make it a success. A large pavillion was erected on the north side of the depot, the wide platform being utilized as part of the floor. People attended from all quarters, north, south, east, and west, and the number present was estimated at 4,000. Not less than 400 people from Topeka participated in the festivities. The dinner was of the picnic order, and of the best. Ice cream and lemonade were plentifully distributed, and a barrel of ice water, with drinking cups attached, was placed at every street corner. Two brass bands discoursed music, and appropriate speeches were made by some of the best speakers in the State, the orator of the day being His Excellency, Governor St. John. The Fourth of July, 1879, will long be remembered by the old settlers of the county.

After Trego County was organized the Sheriff of the county, J. F. Allen, and also the county authorities, had considerable trouble caused by the failure of the legislature to attach the unorganized territory west of Trego to any organized county for judicial purposes. In what is now Wichita County, a murder was committed by one John Conway. He was arrested by some citizens of the place and handed over to the Sheriff of Trego County. He could not be tried in Trego County, because the murder was committed outside of the judicial district of which Trego formed a part. He could not be tried in Wichita County, because it was unorganized territory and unattached to any organized county. After keeping the prisoner in custody for some time the matter was submitted to the State authorities, when it was decided by the Governor and Attorney-General, that the State Courts had no jurisdiction over offenses committed in unattached, unorganized territory, and in consequence of this decision three murderers and several horse-thieves were permitted to go scot-free, after having been arrested and in custody. The legislature of 1881 remedied this evil by attaching all unorganized territory to counties already organized, and the unorganized counties of Gove, St. John, and Wallace, all lying west of Trego, on the line of the Kansas Pacific Railway, became attached to Trego County for judicial and revenue purposes.

On the 15th of March, 1882, a row occurred at a place known as "Gopher," in Trego County, which ended tragically, and which created a good deal of excitement. The parties engaged were two brothers, named Pitman, a man named Thomas B. Wooton, another named James McCullom, and one named John Evarts. Wooton and McCullom had been in the employ of the railway company, but had been discharged, and were notified to leave the country. It is not altogether clear as to how the row commenced, but certain it is that John Pitman was killed, his brother Thomas badly wounded, and John Evarts wounded in the face. McCullom and Wooton fled, and a reward of $500 was offered by the State for their arrest and conviction. Joseph Lucas, who was then Deputy Sheriff, in the absence of Mr. Allen, the Sheriff, who was off on other duty, went with a warrant and arrested Wm. Wooton, a brother of Thomas Wooton, and also the wife of the latter. After he had taken this party into custody word was sent to the Sheriff of Trego County that Thomas Wooton, one of the murderers, had been arrested and was then in custody at Lakin, in Kearney County, the other, McCullom, having been killed in a fight with the Sheriff of Ford County, by whom Wooton had been arrested.

Mr. Lucas started to Kearney County after Wooton, whom he found to be suffering from quite a severe wound in the shoulder, received in the fight with the Sheriff when McCullom was killed. Mr. Lucas brought Wooton back to Wakeeney, and, waiving an examination, was ordered to be taken to Ellis County jail. The first train East was due at 3:30 in the morning, and that night while Mr. Lucas was sitting in the Union House with his three prisoners, all of whom were hand-cuffed, awaiting the arrival of the train, he happened to fall into a light sleep, and while in that condition he received a blow over the head which knocked him from his chair. Gathering himself up he saw several masked men in the office of the hotel with whom he entered into a general fight. They fought through the office and out on to the porch, keeping it up back through the hall and into the parlor, from which they emerged into the dining room where tables were overturned, dishes broken, and the stove upset, and where Mr. Lucas received a blow on the head which knocked him senseless. While the fight was going on a rope was thrown around Wooton's neck, and he was dragged out and taken to an empty box-car, on which the masked party had arrived from the West. From this point the fate of Wooton is in doubt, some contending that he was lynched, while others say, that while in the box-car, he seized the revolver of one of his captors and immediately commenced firing, killing two of the party and wounding some of the others, after which he jumped from the car, with the rope still around his neck, and made his escape.

In the fall of 1882, word was sent to Sheriff Allen, at Wakeeney, that a party had started northward from Camp Supply, in the Indian Territory, with about twenty stolen horses, and for him to look out for them. Some time after this, one evening just about dark, two men rode into Wakeeney leading twenty-one head of horses, and as soon as Mr. Allen saw them he was satisfied they were the parties he had been on the lookout for, for some time. Not having a warrant he did not arrest them that night, and the following morning, bright and early, they were on their way northward with the horses. Procuring a warrant at the earliest possible moment, the Sheriff hired a livery team and, taking a man with him to drive, started in pursuit.

The thieves having "hobbled" the horses, that is, fastened their forelegs together, their progress was rather slow, and before they had got out of Trego County the Sheriff had overtaken them. While yet a little way from them, the Sheriff, in order to save the team he was driving from being shot, got out, and, taking his Winchester rifle in his hand started after them on foot. When within about fifty yards of them he called to them to "throw up," to which they responded by wheeling around and opening fire upon him from two rifles. He returned the fire and unhorsed one of them, who went by the name of Jones, the first shot killing his horse. Upon Jones being unhorsed he ran and placed himself behind a slight elevation in the ground from which he kept up his fire. A shot from the Sheriff's rifle took effect on Jones' cheek, whereupon he "threw up" and surrendered, but the second thief, who was none other than the notorious Dick Edwards, upon seeing Jones surrender wheeled his horse and galloped off.

The Sheriff fired after as he ran, the bullet taking effect in the neck of the horse that Edwards was riding. While the skirmish was going on the "hobbled" horses had gone on about three-fourths of a mile, and Edwards, seeing that his only chance for escape was to secure another horse, put spurs to his wounded and fast sinking animal, and merely succeeded in reaching the drove when the horse he had ridden dropped dead. It required but a moment to cut the rope by which one of the horses was hobbled, and to change saddles, inasmuch as he had unbuckled the saddle as he rode, and did not take time to buckle it before mounting and riding away. Mr. Allen succeeded in capturing all of the stolen horses, excepting two that were killed, and the one upon which Edwards escaped. He also secured Jones, one of the thieves, who was put in the Ford County jail to await his trial, which was fixed to take place in March, 1883.

The first marriage in the county that appears of record was that of George W. Houseman and Anna M. Gladwell, which occurred September 19, 1879. This couple had been previously married, however, but the ceremony had been performed by a notary public, and as the law does not recognize such marriages as valid, they had to be re-married.

The first child born in the county was born to Fred and Mary Best, September 25, 1874, five years before the county was organized.

Trego County is a beautiful looking county, but until some climatic changes occur by which the soil can retain moisture, it will be next to worthless for agricultural pursuits, but for cattle and sheep-raising its place is in the foremost rank.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND OFFICERS.

The proclamation of the Governor, organizing the County of Trego was issued June 21, 1879, prior to which time it had been attached to Ellis County for judicial and revenue purposes. The following is a copy of the proclamation:—

"PROCLAMATION

Organizing the county of Trego and locating the temporary county-seat.

WHEREAS: A memorial signed by two hundred and fifty house-holders residents of Trego County, Kansas, and legal electors of the State, whose signatures have been duly attested by the affidavits of three householders thereof, showing that said county had 1,500 inhabitants, and praying for the organization of the same; said affidavits setting forth that they had reason to, and did, believe said memorial to be true, and,

WHEREAS: It appears from actual enumeration by census returns duly made and certified according to law, by an officer regularly appointed, commissioned, and qualified, that there are 1,500 bona fide inhabitants in said county of Trego. Now, therefore, know ye:—That I, John P. St. John, Governor of the State of Kansas, by authority of law vested in me, have appointed and commissioned T. W. Miller, H. C. Bryant, and W. H Fuson, County Commissioners, and George Pinkham as County Clerk for said county of Trego and do hereby designate and declare the town of Wakeeney to be the temporary county-seat.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the great seal of the State.

Done at the city of Topeka the twenty-first day of June, 1879.

JOHN P. ST. JOHN,
Governor."

By virtue of this proclamation, a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners was held at the office of Morse & Hays, on June 26, 1879. The board organized by electing T. W. Miller Chairman. At that meeting the county was divided into three townships, namely, Ogallah, embracing all the eastern portion of the county; Collyer, the western portion, and Wakeeney the central. Each of the townships thus created was made a Commissioner District.

The ordering of an election for county and township officers, to be held on the 26th day of July, 1879, completed the business transacted by the board at its first meeting. At the election thus ordered, the first held in the county, the following named persons were elected to the respective offices:—County Commissioners, Enos Glick, D. Barclay and J. C. Brown; County Clerk, George Pinkham; Treasurer, John Weckel; Probate Judge, W. H. Fuson; Register of Deeds, A. H. Deppe; Sheriff, J. F. Allen; Coroner, J. W. Scott; County Attorney, J. C. Phillips; Clerk of District Court, A. B Puler; Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. K Wilson; Surveyor, T. K. Peck; Justices of the Peace, Wakeeney Township, B. C. Rich and C. C. Yetter; Collyer Township, J. L. McGarvey and W. H. Burnham; Ogallah Township, E. L. Drake. For county-seat Wakeeney had fifty-one votes and Ogallah thirteen, and Wakeeney was declared the permanent county-seat.

The first Representative to represent the county in the Legislature was J. F. Keeney, who was elected at the November election in 1880.

The following is a list of the county officials of 1882: J. W. Welsh, C. C. Ridgeway, A. W. Purinton, Commissioners; George Pinkham, County Clerk; A. W. Blair, District Clerk; W. H. Fuson, Probate Judge; George T. Stonex, Treasurer; J. F. Allen, Sheriff; A. M. Allen, Register of Deeds; John Nelson, County Attorney; O. W. Barnes, Superintendent of Public Instruction; C. J. Ferris, Surveyor; Joshua Groft, Coroner.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

The school history of the county will serve as an indicator as to how the county has retrograded in point of population within the past two or three years. In 1881, the school population of the county, between the ages of five and twenty-one years, was 825, being 448 males and 377 females. In 1882, the total was 719, being 402 males and 317 females, showing a decrease in one year of 106. The total number of pupils enrolled in 1881, in the public schools of the county, was 404, and in 1882 the number was 188, being a falling off in enrollment of 216. The average daily attendance at the public schools in 1881, was 274; in 1882 it was 78, the difference between the two years being 196. There are in the county twenty-two organized school districts, and the number of teachers employed during 1882, at different times, was twenty-seven, the male teachers being eight, and the females nineteen. The average salary per month paid to male teachers was $27.37, being less by $3.13 than in 1881. The average salary per month paid to female teachers in 1882, was $28.61, being an increase of $3.61 over the salary paid in 1881. There are only eight school buildings in the county, containing, in all, nine rooms. The number of districts sustaining public schools for three months during the school year ending July 31, 1882, was twenty, and the number of districts failing to sustain a three months' school, was two. The county has no school indebtedness, and the estimated value of school property in the county is $1,800. The number of mills on the dollar levied on the taxable property of the county for school purposes was 11.25. The balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on August 1, 1881, was $159 95; the amount received from district taxes, was $3,978 27; from State apportionment, $470.72, and from all other sources $1,148.59, making a total of $6,057 53. The amount paid for teachers' wages during the year ending July 31, 1882, was $3,045.27; for rents, fuel, repairs, etc., $863.76; for buildings and furniture, $927.27; for all other purposes, $139.79, making a total of $4,976.29, leaving a balance in the hands of the District Treasurer on August 1, 1882, of $1,081.24. The first school taught in the county, was a private school which was opened in 1879 by a man known as Rev. W. S. Woodruff, whose stay in Wakeeney, owing to circumstances rather suspicious, was exceedingly short. The building he erected for a school was a two-story frame, which was afterward purchased by the district and is the one now used for school purposes.

The years 1878-79 witnessed a great influx of people to Trego County. The immense crops of wheat that were raised in some of the western counties in the former year, led many to believe that the aridness of Western Kansas was more imaginary than real, and the beautiful appearance of the surface as it stretched out wide and green, had a tendency to strengthen this belief. Laboring under this impression, hundreds of people seeking homes in the West took claims in Trego County and located there. The starting of the town of Wakeeney in 1878 attracted a great many people there, and the population of few counties in the West increased with greater rapidity than that of Trego County. By 1880, the population of the county was estimated at between 3,000 and 4,000, the town of Wakeeney alone claiming about one-third of the whole. Those who had located in the county expecting to follow farming, soon discovered that they had made a mistake, and for the last two or three years the exodus from the county has been as great as the influx was in 1878-79. Very many who took claims, upon discovering the inadaptability of the soil for farming purposes, did not remain to perfect their title to the lands on which they had located, but emigrated to other and more favorable localities. Many others who have battled since 1878-79 against the disadvantages of climate and failure of crops, are only waiting to perfect their titles to their claims, when they can leave them without any risk of their being "jumped." Others again who came to farm, and who had means, have gone into the stock business and are doing well; but the settlers who came with little means, and whose chief dependence was upon their own labor and that of their teams have been obliged to leave. This falling away in the country population had its effects upon Wakeeney, as without a farming community to support it, the town could not prosper, there being no other industry upon which it could rely, and hence hundreds of people who went to Wakeeney, with the intention of permanently locating there, and who had built houses for themselves, were, obliged by circumstances, to relinquish their homes and seek others elsewhere; and at present the entire population of Trego County is very little more, if any, than was that of Wakeeney four years ago, not exceeding, according to the best information obtainable, more than 1,500.

The growth of the county in material wealth has not been very great, and some of the most valuable improvements in the county are rendered worthless by non-use. The statistics furnished by the township assessors for the year ending March 1, 1882, show that the number of acres included in farms in the county, was 63,180. The number of farm dwellings erected during the year was twenty-one, valued at $4,996, being an average of $237 each, which would indicate that the buildings were of rather inferior order. In 1880, the number of acres sown to winter wheat was 5,406, but in 1881 the acreage was only 1,770, showing a falling off in one year of 3,636 acres. In 1880 the acreage of rye was 128 acres, and in 1881 it was 191, an increase of 63 acres. The number of acres planted to corn in 1880 was 5,924, and in 1881 the number was 3,986, a decrease in one year of 1,938 acres. A corresponding decrease also occurred in all other field crops, the total acreage in 1880 being 16,047, whereas in 1881 it was only 10,287, a decrease of 5,760 acres, which was still further decreased in 1882. The value of garden products marketed in the county in 1881, was $308; and the value of eggs and poultry sold was $1,076. The amount of cheese made in the county during the year was 485 pounds, and of butter the amount was 20,678 pounds. At the commencement of 1882, the live stock in the county was: Horses, 518; mules and asses, 128; milch cows, 869; other cattle, 2,389; sheep, 20,421, and swine 380. These figures show that raising hogs is not considered profitable, and that the attention of stock-men is given to cattle and sheep. The value of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter in 1881 was $3,173; and the amount of wool clipped was 33,945 pounds. There is not a single fruit tree in in the county reported in bearing, and the number not in bearing are: Apple, 2,919; pear, 161; peach, 15,481; plum, 1,012; and cherry, 180. It is a mooted question, negatively answered by some, and affirmatively by others, whether fruit trees or trees of any kind, can be successfully cultivated in the county, which can only be solved conclusively by time. It would seem that the faith of the people in the success of arboriculture is not exceedingly strong, as the number of acres reported in the county, devoted to artificial forestry is only 30, of which 3 are walnut, 13 honey locust, 11 cottonwood, and 3 of other varieties. There is but little fencing in the county, the total being 1,298 rods, divided as follows:—Board fence, 40 rods; stone, 64; hedge, 40; and wire, 1,154. The value of agricultural implements in the county is set down at $8,196.

WAKEENEY.

Wakeeney, the county-seat of Trego County, is located on Section 9, Township 12 south, Range 23 west of the Sixth Principal Meridian. The town was founded by James F. Keeney and Albert E. Warren, of Chicago, who purchased two entire townships of land from the Kansas Pacific Railway Company. The town site was surveyed and platted in March, 1878, by Peck and Ellsworth, and on the 3rd day of April, 1878, the town plat was filed for record.

Prior to the founding of Wakeeney, there was a station on the line of railway, about one mile west of the new town site, named Trego, but when Wakeeney was surveyed and platted, the depot at Trego was moved to Wakeeney. The town derived its name from its founders, the first two letters of Warren's name having been taken for the first syllable of the name of the town—Wa—to which was added the full name of the other founder, Keeney, and by a combination of the two, the word Wakeeney is derived, which is frequently written Wa-Keeney. When Warren and Keeney made their purchase of the tract of land on which Wakeeney is located, in the fall of 1877, there were but very few settlers in the county, not more than a dozen permanent settlers in all. John Henry was found located on a claim about a mile west of Wakeeney, George Pinkham about a mile and a half northwest, Arthur Pratt and family were also located on a claim, the other settlers being Harlow Orton, Earl Spaulding, J. K. Snyder, D. O. Adams, George Brown, George McCaslin and Peleg Richards. These constituted about all the settlers in Trego County, when Warren and Keeney arrived in the fall of 1877. Having selected and purchased the lands they desired, and made arrangements for locating the town, Warren and Keeney returned to Chicago and did not return to Trego County until the following spring.

Before the survey of the town site was completed, people began flocking to Wakeeney by the score, the majority of them going from Chicago. The first house built on the town site was put up by Peck & Ellsworth, late in 1877, and was used as a real estate office. At that time these gentlemen lived in a "dug out" at Trego Station. The first business house in the town was erected by C. P. Keeney at the foot of Franklin Street, and is the two-story frame now occupied as a general merchandising store by Thomas Caddick. About the time that building was erected, Warren & Keeney put up the Commercial House, directly across the street from Caddick's store. This is a frame building, and was the first hotel built in the town. Never did people flock to a place as they did to Wakeeney. Merchants by the score, professional men by the dozen, mechanics and tradesmen by the hundred, and speculators by the horde, all rushed to Wakeeney as though it was a new Eldorado. About one hundred carpenters were kept busy night and day, and yet houses could not go up fast enough to accommodate the people. Buildings would be occupied long before they were finished, and although they sprung up as if by magic, "more houses" was still the cry. The immense crops of that year added to the rush, and during the fall of 1878 and spring of 1879, Wakeeney was literally jammed with people.

In 1879, Warren & Keeney entered into an arrangement with the railway company to build a depot, by which the company was to pay them so much if they finished it in one year, and so much if not finished within a longer period. The railroad company gave Warren & Keeney notes, and they in turn sold the mechanics, that worked on the building, town lots, for the payment of which half their pay was deducted until the lots were paid for. The building is constructed of a kind of chalk limestone, and is the neatest finished depot on the entire line of road. It is 40x80 feet, and is built for beauty as well as usefulness, with wide platforms on either side, and verandas, which are supported by four large columns, the whole surmounted by a beautifully finished and ornamental cupola.

The year 1879 saw no check to the rush of people to Wakeeney, and the place grew with astonishing rapidity. Improvements were made as fast as workmen could make them. The Oakes House was built in that year by D. Barclay. It is a very fine building, 30x100 feet, with a large ell on the north end. It is built of sawed stone and finished in good style, but has been closed up for some time, owing to want of patronage. The Grand Central Hotel was also built in 1879 by B. W. S. Huffaker. It is a two-story building, half stone and half wood, and is still used for hotel purposes. A third hotel built in 1879 was the Union House, put up by W. C. Olson. It is a two-story frame building, of fair dimensions, and is still occupied as a hotel. A fourth one was the Trego House, but this is no longer used as a hotel.

Throughout this year all these hotels were constantly crowded to overflowing, and landlords were put to their wits' end to furnish accommodations for all the guests that arrived. Aside from the hotels built in 1879, many good, substantial improvements were made. Lawrence & Hall put up a very fine two-story stone building, which they still continue to use as a general merchandising store. One Mr. Thorpe erected a very handsome two-story stone building on the east side of Franklin Street. There was no neater building in Western Kansas, and was finished off in very elegant style, having large plate-glass windows in front, and the whole building fitted up, apparently, regardless of expense. The first floor was used as a store by Mr. Thorpe, and the upper floor was fitted up for, and used as, the United States Land Office.

About three o'clock on the morning of February 3, 1880, an alarm of fire was raised, and people rushed from their houses to see the cause thereof. The fire was first discovered issuing from the basement of Thorpe's new building, and might have been readily extinguished before it spread to the building above, but when the bystanders attempted to enter, Thorpe told them there were several kegs of powder in the basement, which caused those who came to help, to give the place a wide berth, and let the fire take its course. No attempt was made to save anything, and the building, with all its contents, including all the books and records in the Government Land Office, with ten other frame buildings, were all totally destroyed. The loss occasioned by the fire was estimated at $40,000, and though everybody, during the progress of the fire was expecting to hear a loud explosion, none occurred, so that the powder, if any there was, must have possessed the extraordinary quality of being non-combustible. The following summer Verbeck & Blair, whose store had been swept away by the fire of February, erected a very fine two-story stone building on the site of the one that had been destroyed, and which they now occupy as a general store. A grand improvement was made to the town that year in the erection of the Opera Block by J. F. Keeney. It is an improvement that would be a credit to any town. The building has an east front of 100 feet, and a south front of 80 feet. It is two stories high, with a basement, the walls of the latter coming up about two feet above the surface of the ground. The walls of the building are constructed of chalk limestone, sawed into blocks of uniform dimension, while the steps, caps and sills are made from hard limestone, all the material having been taken from quarries adjacent to town. The lower story is divided into four storerooms, and the upper story was intended for an Opera Hall and offices.

PRESENT STATUS OF THE TOWN.

The crop failures of the years 1879 and 1880 having convinced people generally that Trego County was altogether unreliable and unsuited for agricultural pursuits, people began to leave about as rapidly as they had come, and the zenith of the glory of Wakeeney was reached. Family after family moved away, and business men packed up their goods and sought more remunerative fields. Mr. Keeney felt the blow, and his handsome block was left uncompleted, and stands unfinished at the present time. One of the store rooms in the building is finished, and is used for the Government Land Office, and some offices are fixed up temporarily and are rented by the county, and used for county offices. No attempt has been made to finish any other part of the building, and while its external appearance is worthy of admiration, inside it plainly tells of the decline of Wakeeney.

Since 1880 the town has been going down, and all that remains of its once flourishing business are four general merchandising stores, and one furniture store to which business is added that of boots and shoes. The town outgrew itself in its infancy, and soon reached that stage which was soon followed by a rapid decline.

There are three church organizations in the town, Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist. There are no regular church buildings in the place, but the Presbyterians purchased in 1879 the old Trego depot, which they converted into a church. The other societies hold service in part of the Keeney Block.

Wakeeney Lodge No. 148, A., F. & A. M., was organized under dispensation June 2, 1881, and was chartered February 15, 1882. It was instituted with twenty charter members, the first officers being B. J. F. Hanna, W. M.; S. J. Osborn, S. W.; F. H. Conger, J. W.; W. B. Kritchfield, Secretary, and W. T. Hunter, Treasurer. The lodge has now a membership of twenty-seven, the present officers being S. J. Osborn, W. M.; F. H. Conger, S. W.; W. H. Fuson, J. W.; A. B. Jones, Secretary, and W. T. Hunter, Treasurer.

The United States Land Office for the district embracing the counties of Ellis, Rush, Trego, Ness, Gove, St. John, Wallace, Scott, Wichita and Greeley, and part of Lane, Rooks, Graham, Sheridan, Thomas and Sherman, is located at Wakeeney, having been removed from Hays City there October 20, 1879.

The business men of Wakeeney are Lawrence & Hall, Baldwin, Morgan & Dann, Verbeck & Blair, and Thomas Caddick, these names representing four general merchandising stores, and Joseph Lucas, who deals in furniture, and boots and shoes. F. Ellsworth is a grain and coal dealer, and this list embraces all the business of Wakeeney.

The Press.—The first newspaper established in Trego County, and the only one now published within its borders, was the Wakeeney World. The paper was first issued March 8, 1879, under the sole editor and proprietorship of W. S. Tilton, by whom the paper still continues to be published. It started as a six column paper, but in August 1879 it was enlarged to seven columns, and was further enlarged to eight columns in October 1881. It is folio in form, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 400.

The Leader was started in September 1879, by H. P. Stultz. It was a six column, folio, and Republican in politics. It only lived a little over a year, having expired in December 1880. The paper was revived in May 1881, by A. J. R. Smith, but only lived a few months, expiring again in August 1881.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

AMOS M. ALLEN, Register of Deeds, and farmer, was the first child born to John C. and Keziah Allen, and was born November 11, 1835, in Tioga, Tioga Co., N. Y. His father was a farmer and the son was raised to the same business. His education was received in the public schools of his native county. He was married January 1, 1862, to Miss Amelia R. Cowden, by whom three children have been born to him:—Mabel, born May 20, 1866; Mertie, born February 19, 1868, and John C., born in April 1876. His father dying in 1872, upon the settlement of his estate, Amos M. Allen moved to Iowa, locating in Anamosa, Jones County, where he became engaged in mercantile pursuits, and subsequently embarked in the wholesale millinery business. Declining health compelled him to retire from business, and he became traveling agent for the Singer Manufacturing Company. In the fall of 1880 he emigrated from Iowa to Kansas, and located upon a homestead claim in Trego County. He served as Trustee of the Township in which he resided, for the year 1882, and in November of that year was elected at the general election, to the office of Register of Deeds of the county, which position he now occupies.

JOHN F. ALLEN, Sheriff and farmer, was the sixth child and second son of James P. and Margaret M. Allen, and was born in the city of Chicago, October 1, 1847. His father was one of the very earliest settlers in Chicago, and was the first man to engage in the lumber business in that city. He attended the public schools of the city for a number of years, after which he entered the Douglas University, which he attended several terms, and there completing whatever educational training he received. Leaving the university, he assisted his father in his business, working at the books in the office, and attending to collections. Subsequently he became engaged in business himself, by starting a saw and planing-mill in the city which proved quite successful, and in 1873 he established a similar mill in Clark County, Wis. In 1875 he disposed of his Chicago mill and moved to Wisconsin, but failing health compelled him to sell out his Wisconsin mill the following year, and in 1877 he returned to Chicago. On his return to the city, he entered the detective service, in which he remained until in the spring of 1878, when the state of his health required a change of climate, and he moved to Kansas, locating near Wakeeney, being among the first settlers in Trego County. In company with Mr. Peck he opened a land office in Wakeeney and became engaged in the real estate business. At the first election held in Trego County, in July, 1879, Mr. Allen was elected Sheriff, which office he has held continually ever since and still continues to hold. On November 9, 1870, John F. Allen and Mrs. Julia R. Boyer were joined in wedlock in the city of Chicago, by which marriage they have had three children—Laura C., born May 4, 1872; Frank Leroy, born February 27, 1874, died March 25, 1874, and Ellen F., born July 29, 1876. Besides being Sheriff, Mr. Allen is also a member of the Rocky Mountain Detective Association, and as such has had many desperate encounters with desperadoes and horse-thieves of the West, several times narrowly escaping with his life. There are few men whose names are better known to, and more feared by, desperadoes and law-breakers of the West than is that of John F. Allen, the Sheriff of Trego County.

WILLIS H. FUSON, Probate Judge and real estate agent. Willis H. was the fourth son born to William S. and Sarah Fuson, his birth occurring on the 14th of February, 1843. His father was a native of Virginia, and his mother of Ohio. When four years old his parents moved to Fulton County, Ill., and settled upon a farm where Willis H. resided until January 29, 1862, upon which day he enlisted in Company E, Fifty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry; was in the engagement at Shiloh, participated in the siege and capture of Corinth, was severely wounded through the right hand and wrist at the battle of Big Hatchie in an engagement with the Rebels under Price and Van Dorn, by reason of which he was discharged for disability on March 3, 1863. His only means of obtaining an education before the war were those afforded by the common schools, but after leaving the service he attended Lombard University at Galesburg, Ill., during 1863 and 1864. Not having sufficient funds to enable him to pay his tuition until his studies were completed, he taught school for several terms to get the necessary means, and re-entering the university, he completed the course, and graduated in 1871. Leaving the university he became the principal of the graded schools at Bath, Ill., where he remained for one year, when he went to Summum and entered upon like duties. In the fall of 1873 he became engaged as principal of the graded school at Yates City, Ill. In 1874 he was married to Miss Annie L. Nelson, a native of Sweden, who is also a graduate of Lombard University. While in charge of the school at Yates City he found time to read law, and at the close of the school engagement he moved to Galesburg, where he completed his law studies, and in September 1876, was admitted to the bar and practiced his profession in Galesburg until the fall of 1878, when he moved with his family to Kansas, locating in Wakeeney, Trego County. Mr. Fuson took an active part in the settlement and development of the county and upon the organization of the county, in June, 1879, he was appointed by the Governor as one of the first County Commissioners. At the first election held in the county, in 1879, he was elected Probate Judge, which office he has held without interruption from that time to the present. By his marriage with Miss Nelson, two children have been born to them, a daughter and a son, the former born at Galesburg, Ill., March 9, 1877, and the latter at Wakeeney, Trego County, Kan., May 18, 1881.

BENJAMIN J. F. HANNA, Register of United States Land Office, was born in Golconda, Pope County, Ill., February 24, 1825. He was the only son of John C. and Lucy G. Hanna. His father was a native of Tennessee, and lived to reach the ripe age of eighty-two years, and died in Leavenworth, Kan., on the 25th day of April, 1874. His mother is still living in Salina, Saline County, Kan., and has attained the age of eighty years. The boyhood days of Captain Hanna were passed in that locality of Illinois, known as Egypt, where ample opportunities were given him for muscular development, while the log schoolhouses of that early day were the only means of acquiring an education within his reach. From 1841 until 1845 his time was devoted to working on the farm in summer, and teaching school in winter, but in the latter year he entered a printing office at Sparta, Ill., where he learned the printing trade. With a thorough knowledge of printing in all its branches, and possessor of a pocketbook containing about $5 in money, he moved to Chester, Randolph County, Ill., where, in 1849, he established a newspaper, known as the Chester Herald, but in the following year his office and material were totally destroyed by fire. He immediately purchased a new press and other office material, and the issuance of the paper was continued without interruption. In 1856 he disposed of his interest in the Herald and what other interest he had in Chester, and moved to Alton, where he took charge of the editorial department of the Alton Courier, which position he occupied until the commencement of the war in 1861, when he severed his connection with the paper, and entered the service of the government. In November, 1862, he was appointed Quartermaster of United States Volunteers, with rank of Captain, by President Lincoln, which appointment the Senate confirmed, and from that time until January, 1866, his post of duty was in the States of Mississippi, Louisiana, Florida, and Alabama. After leaving the service, he removed to Kansas, locating in Salina, Saline County, where he established The Salina Herald, the first number of the paper appearing February 16, 1867. Captain Hanna was appointed Register of the United States Land Office at Hays City, November 10, 1877, and was re-appointed January 24, 1882. In 1849 he connected himself with the I. O. O. F., and has held, at various times, the highest offices in the order, having served as Grand Master and Grand Patriarch, and also two terms as Representative in the Grand Lodge of the United States. He has also passed all the degrees pertaining to American Rite Masonry, and in 1878-79 was R. E. Grand Commander of Knights Templar, of Kansas. At Chester, Ill., on the 3rd day of August, 1849, B. J. F. Hanna was joined in wedlock to Miss Margaret Phillips, a native of Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland. By this marriage they have five children—Edwin P., born at Chester, Ill., December 25, 1850, and married at Salina, Saline County, Kan., to Louisa J. Hines, April 2, 1872, and who is now private secretary to the Secretary of the Interior, at Washington, D. C., which position he has held under Secretaries Schurz, Kirkwood and Teller. Franklin R., born August 15, 1854; died March 28, 1857. Christina A., born at Chester, Ill., July 22, 1857, and married to Wm. H. Dann, at Salina, Kan., December 25, 1876. Benjamin W., born at Alton, Ill., June 12, 1860, and married to Imogen A. Cole, at Washington, D. C., May 30, 1882; is now employed as private secretary to the Secretary of the Navy, which position he has held for two years. Lucie M., born at Chester, Ill., July 22, 1864, and married to B. F. Morgan, at Wakeeney, Trego County, Kan., May 22, 1882.

JOSEPH LUCAS, merchant, was born in Jersey County, Ill., February 6, 1835, and was the third child born to Napoleon B. and Lydia Lucas. His paternal grandfather was twice

Governor of Ohio, and the first Governor of the Territory of Iowa. His father was a farmer, and Joseph remained at home until he was twenty-three years old, attending the public schools until he was well advanced toward his majority, after which all his time was devoted to farm work. In 1858 he started out for himself, going to Madison County, Ill., where he engaged in farming. While thus engaged the war broke out, and he enlisted for three months in Company F, Seventh Illinois Infantry. At the end of his term of service he re-enlisted for three years in Company G, Forty-ninth Illinois Infantry. His three-years' term of service expiring, he again re-enlisted, and served until September, 1865, when he was mustered out with his regiment at Paducah, Ky., after having served four years and six months. He was present at, and took part in, the following engagements: Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Little Rock; was with the force that accompanied Gen. Sherman in his expedition into Alabama; also with Gen. Banks in his Red River expedition. He was engaged in the attack on Fort Darouche, the battles of Pleasant Hill, Tallahatchie, Franklin, Nashville, and several severe skirmishes. Upon his first re-enlistment he was appointed Third Sergeant; February 1, 1865, he was promoted to Orderly Sergeant; April 20, of the same year he was commissiond as Second Lieutenant, and in August, 1865, was appointed acting Adjutant of the regiment, which position he held when mustered out. Leaving the army he returned to Jersey County, Ill., where he resumed farming, and in 1868 moved to Kansas, settling in Jefferson County, locating on a quarter-section of land he purchased of the railroad company. In 1877 he moved to Lawrence, Kan., where he became engaged in the hardware and implement business, in which he remained until April, 1878, when he sold out his business and became traveling agent for the McCormick Reaper Company. In December, 1879, he moved to Wakeeney, Trego County, where he is now engaged in the furniture business, and also that of boots and shoes. In October, 1881, he was appointed Sheriff of Trego County, to fill an unexpired term, and is now holding the position of Under Sheriff. In Jersey County, Ill., June 30, 1864, while at home on a veteran furlough, he was married to Miss Catherine Aulthouse, the issue of this marriage being Georgiana, born July 6, 1866, and died August 10, 1867; Elmer E., born May 19, 1868; William P., the survivor of twins, born February 3, 1870; Mary Alice, born January 3, 1873; Rosa, born February 1, 1876, and died January 26, 1880; Albert M., born August 22, 1877, and Ethel May, born April 18, 1881.

GEORGE PINKHAM, County Clerk, farmer, and proprietor of whiting works, was born in the city of Detroit, Mich., April 3, 1846. While yet a child, his parents moved to Port Huron, where George passed his boyhood days, and grew to that age in life that marks the dividing line between boyhood and manhood. His father, George W. Pinkham, was a merchant, and the time George had to spare from school was given to the assistance of his father in business. His early education was received in the public schools of Port Huron, leaving which he attended the Ypsilanti Seminary for several terms. Leaving the seminary in 1864, he went to Oconto, Wis., where he taught four terms. In December, 1865, he moved to Kansas, and located at Fort Hays, in Ellis County, where he was engaged as clerk in the commissariat department at the fort, and where he remained until the winter of 1866, when he removed to Fort Dodge, where he was similarly employed until the summer of 1867, when he joined a company in the United States service known as Forsyth's Scouts. Was engaged in several severe engagements with the Indians in Kansas, and accompanied Generals Sheridan and Custer in their expedition against the Indians in the Indian Territory in 1868. In the spring of 1869 the company was disbanded, and for the following five years the business he followed was quite diversified, doing whatever he found most convenient for his hands to do. In 1874 he was employed by the Kansas Pacific Railway Company as a painter, and had charge of the painting work on the Smoky Hill division of the road. He remained in the employ of the company until 1877, and while thus employed he discovered a chalk bed in Trego County, and shortly afterwards quit the employ of the company and took a homestead claim and located thereon, the chalk bed being embraced in the land upon which he filed his homestead claim, and which he immediately began to utilize by erecting whiting works, which he is now operating quite successfully. Mr. Pinkham was the first County Clerk of Trego County, having been appointed by the Governor in June, 1879, when the county was first organized, to which office he was afterwards elected at the special election held in July. From January, 1880, until January, 1882, his entire time was devoted to the manufacture of whiting; but having been again elected, in November, 1881, to the office of County Clerk, he entered upon the duties of the office in January, 1882, and is now serving in that capacity. On December, 29, 1877, Mr. Pinkham was married in the city of St. Louis, by Rev. Dr. Betts, to Miss Matilda Upton, a native of New York State. They have three children—Minnie Maud, born September 18, 1879; Charles F., born February 24, 1881, and Bessie May, born May 4, 1882.

GEORGE TIPPLE STONEX, County Treasurer and farmer. The parents of George T. Stonex were William and Elizabeth Stonex, both natives of England. George T. was born in the city of London, Eng., September, 26, 1810. He came with his parents to the United States in March, 1830, and located in Westchester, Chester County, Pa., where they remained until 1833, when they removed to Lancaster County. In the spring of 1835 the family moved to Dearborn County, Ind., where they lived about nineteen years. George T. received his education in the common schools of London and Pennsylvania. In July, 1861, he enlisted in the Thirty-sixth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was elected to the rank of First Lieutenant of Company F in said regiment. He served all through the Missouri and Arkansas campaigns under Generals Siegel and Curtis until after the battle of Pea Ridge, when he went with his regiment to Shiloh. He participated in the siege of Corinth, after the capture of which, on account of his family, he resigned and returned home. Subsequently he was appointed Deputy Provost-Marshal, and was assigned to duty in the secret service of the Government, his field of service being chiefly in Illinois, remaining in this service until finally discharged at the close of the war. Returning to civil life, he engaged in the mercantile business in Mendota, Ill., where he remained for two years, when he sold out and removed to Dwight, where he established himself in the hardware business, where he remained for several years, until failing health compelled him to seek other pursuits, and disposing of his business he engaged in farming. On May 18, 1844, he was married to Miss Kate B. Peterson in Franklin County, Ind., but no issue followed the marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Stonex, however, have had quite a large family of children by adoption, raising three to manhood and womanhood, and four others for a number of years. One of their adopted sons was captured at Cedar Mountain and died in camp. In September, 1878, Mr. Stonex moved from Douglas County, Ill., to Kansas, and located in the eastern part of Trego County, and in November, 1879, was elected Treasurer of the county, and two years afterwards was re-elected to the same office, and is now serving on his second term; and in addition to his other duties and business, he has given much of his time to the service of the church, having been a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church for twenty-two years, and with which he is still connected.

WINFIELD S. TILTON, proprietor of the Wakeeney World, was born of poor but respectable parents in Effingham County, Ill, May 27, 1848. His father, Elijah Tilton, was a physician, born in Ohio in 1822; his mother was a school teacher, who was born in the State of New York. His parents moved to Fayette County, Ill., when he was two years of age. In 1860, his parents moved to Minnesota, where he farmed under his father's direction and went to school. In 1862 his parents moved to Central Iowa. In 1863 he enlisted in Company H, Ninth Iowa Cavalry, and served twenty-seven months, until the mustering out of the regiment. He returned to Des Moines, Iowa, where he attended school in 1866, then taught school awhile. He received a commission as Lieutenant of Company L, Nineteenth Kansas Cavalry, in the fall of 1868, and served with the regiment in the Indian Territory and Western Kansas until its muster out in the following spring. He was married the following December to Miss Annie M. Wilcox, of Miami County, Kan., who died in 1873. They have had two children. In 1871 he worked as a compositor on the La Cygne, Kan., Journal. He then went to Mound City, in the same county, and the same year, and for eighteen months worked as compositor, associate editor and editor on the Border Sentinel. In 1874 he was traveling agent, correspondent and city editor of the Leavenworth Daily Times. The same year he went to Sedalia, Mo.; worked as a compositor, and for a time conducted the Daily Republican. In 1875 he was one of two to start the Stone County Bowlder, at Galena, Mo.; then went to Carroll County, Ark., where he ran the Carroll County Bowlder, at Carrollton. In 1877 was married to Miss Jessie McClure, of Carroll County, Ark., by whom he has three children. In March, 1879, he started the Wakeeney Weekly World, which he has conducted ever since. In 1880 was appointed Paymaster-General of Kansas militia, with the rank of Colonel, by Gov. St. John.

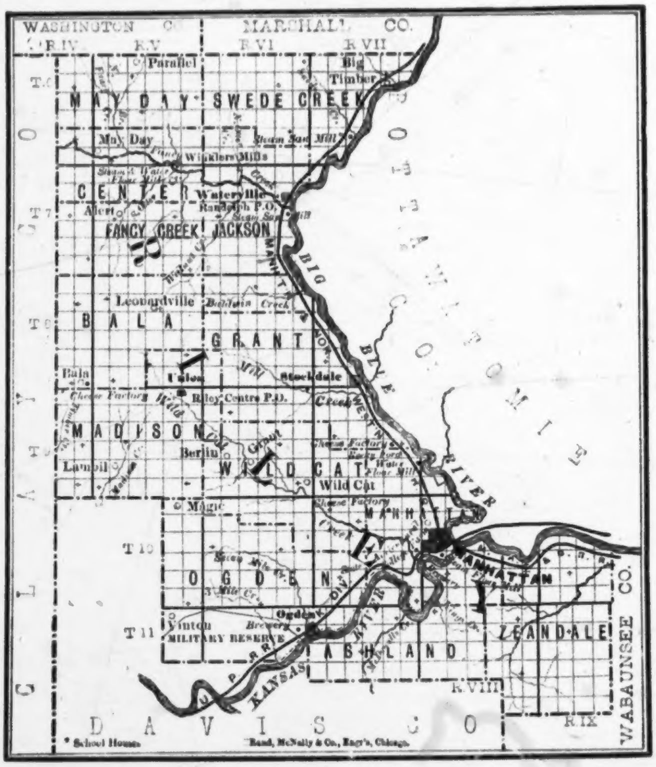
RILEY COUNTY.

LOCATION, AREA AND NAME.

RILEY County was the westernmost county of Kansas, having the Kansas River for its southern boundary, among those organized by the Territorial Legislature of 1855. Its northern boundary was the county of Marshall; its western, the line between Ranges 5 and 6 east; its eastern, Calhoun County, lying east of the line dividing Ranges 10 and 11 east. Between it and the Missouri River, were the counties of Calhoun, Jefferson and Leavenworth. Going northward and westward from Leavenworth, Atchison, Doniphan, Brown, Nemaha, and Marshall were traversed, as the Northern River and Nebraska line counties, making eight counties to the north and east of Riley. What was then Western Kansas is in 1882, Northeastern Kansas, for west of the four then northern tier counties, are now eight organized ones, only one unorganized county — Cheyenne — lying in Northwestern Kansas, on the Nebraska-Colorado line. From 1857 to 1873, changes have been made in the county lines of Riley. That part of it east of the Big Blue River is now the major portion of Pottawatomie County. Its western boundary was extended eight miles west from the line dividing Ranges 5 and 6. From its southwestern portion, Davis County has been enlarged by territory from Riley, and on the south and southeastern portion of Riley has there come additions from the counties of Davis and Wabaunsee. On the north it is bounded by Washington, Marshall, and Pottawatomie; on the east by Pottawatomie and Wabaunsee; on the south by Wabaunsee and Davis; on the west by Davis and Clay. There is no more irregularly shaped county than this in Kansas.



Its present area is about 620 square miles; with the United States Military Reserve taken out it has in round numbers 600 square miles. On its longest continuous line from north to south, it is thirty-four miles. At its widest place it is twenty-six miles across it from east to west; at its narrowest point, it is twelve and one-half miles across it.

In parting with Milford and South Milford Townships, as they were known at different times, Riley County gained strength for Manhattan, and Davis for Junction City as county seats; especially with the addition of other territory to Riley from Davis and Wabaunsee.

Riley County received its name directly from the military post of Fort Riley, and indirectly from General Benjamin Riley, an officer of the United States Army. July 31, 1852, Col. T. T. Fauntleroy, of the First Dragoons, while in Washington, D. C., in a letter to Maj.-Gen. T. S. Jessup, Quartermaster-General of the United States Army, urged the establishment of a military post at or near a point on the Kansas River, where the Republican Fork unites with it. He also recommended the "discontinuance of the Leavenworth, Scott, Atchison, Kearney and Laramie Posts, and the concentration of troops at the post proposed." In the autumn of 1852, Col. Fauntleroy, Maj. E. A. Ogden, and an officer of the Engineer Corps, were appointed a Commission to select a site on the Smoky Hill River for a ten-company cavalry post, and the point chosen was the present site of Fort Riley. May 19, 1853, Captain Lovell, of the Sixth Infantry, formed an encampment and named it "Camp Center, at the mouth of the Pawnee River." July 26, 1853, it took the name of "Fort Riley." The buildings of the post were constructed under the supervision of Maj. Ogden, who died at the fort, of cholera in July, 1855. At the highest eminence of the post a fine monument of native limestone has been erected to his memory.

Fort Riley is about half a mile from the confluence of the Republican and Smoky Hill rivers, about three miles from Junction City. The buildings are of a white, magnesian limestone and are very complete in all their appurtenances. It is now a twelve-company post.

PHYSICAL FEATURES OF THE COUNTY.

Of its nearly 400,000 acres of land, about 20 per cent are bottom-lands, 80 per cent uplands, and 5 per cent forest, according to government survey; 95 per cent prairie. The eastern and southern portions of the county are quite bluffy and furnish some most picturesque scenery; the western and northern are for the most part gently undulating, the rolling prairie being most beautiful in its waving swells and varied slopes. On the small creeks the strips of bottom are quite narrow; the belts of alluvial lands along the Kansas, Big Blue, Fancy, Mill, and Wild Cat, vary from one-half to four miles in width.

The composition of the soil is so varied in its chemical elements that nearly almost everything in the nature of grasses, grains, fruits and vegetables can be produced from it. The dark, easily-worked soil of the bottom-lands is very productive. Its depth, ranging from two to fifteen feet, comparatively makes its fertility inexhaustible. Sand largely predominates over the clayey element, and it very readily admits of drainage, so that it may be said there is next to nothing of stagnation in these bottom-lands of large expanse. The uplands, less sandy than the bottoms, are fully as certain of bountiful crops, except in the occasional periods when burning drouths prevail. The almost total exemption from early and late frosts, of the crops on the high prairie, and the salubrity of the climate, causes the settlement of the uplands with great rapidity as compared with the early days. The bluffs, though presenting something of an appearance of barrenness, are exceedingly valuable for pastoral purposes, supplied, as their sides are so often, with excellent springs of living water; and the contiguous ravines, with their shady nooks, make most excellent ranges for neat cattle and sheep. Good brick-clay is found in the bottom-lands and a beautiful magnesian limestone is distributed over the county, immense quarries being in the vicinity of Manhattan.

A large part of the Kansas River between the Big Blue and the Republican rivers is in Riley County, and on it are some of the garden-lands of the State. During the territorial days of Kansas steamboats came up the river to Manhattan and as far as Junction City; and should the Mississippi, Missouri, and Kansas rivers, under the fostering care of the General Government, receive bountiful appropriations, the bulky products of the soil are likely to be transported in floating barges down these improved navigable streams to the Gulf of Mexico, where they may be readily shipped to the Old World. The Kaw, this noblest of Kansas rivers, is on the north line of Zeandale Township; it runs very irregularly through Manhattan, and forms considerable of the north and the northwestern boundary of Ashland, and the southwestern boundary of Ogden Township.

(a) Not separately returned 1870; in 1875, part to Davis County. (b) In 1878, from part of Milford. (c) In 1872, from part of Jackson. (d) In 1870, from parts of Jackson and Manhattan. (e) In 1870, part to Grant; in 874, parts to Fancy Creek and May Day; in 1879, part to Swede Creek. (f) In 1873, from part of Milford. (g) In 1870, part to Grant. (h) In 1872, from part of Jackson. (i) In 1879, from part of Jackson. (j) In 1871, from part of Wabaunsee County.

The Big Blue, forming the larger portion of the eastern boundary of the county, has fewer sharp bends than the Kaw, into which it flows at the east of Manhattan, and it is so bountifully furnished with water-power as to cause it to be designated the "Merrimac" of Kansas. It is dammed at Rocky Ford, some three miles above Manhattan; the fall is ten feet, and the dam 342 feet in length, is built of heavy oak timbers bolted into the solid rock foundation. The Rocky Ford mill was built here in 1866. It is a four-story stone building, 40x60 feet. Its foundations are laid on the solid rock, and its walls, laid in cement, are four feet thick from the bottom of the river to the second floor. The river can be dammed below at Manhattan and above at Stockdale, Randolph, and Mariadahl. Swede Creek, Jackson, Grant and Manhattan townships are the Riley County townships bordering on the Big Blue. Fancy and Mill creeks, flowing southeast into the Kansas, water the center of the county, and Madison, Timber and Three Mile creeks running west into the Republican, water the western portion; while south of the Kansas, McDowell, Deep and School creeks, traverse the southern part, the two latter in Zeandale Township. The "Zeandale Bottoms" are regarded as the choice bottom-lands of the county. Besides these, there are other small creeks, which, with their branches, give the county a most bountiful water-supply.

There are quite a variety of kinds of timber of which the most abundant are cottonwood, several kinds of oak and elm, black walnut, soft maple, hackberry, hickory, locust, ash, linden, sycamore, mulberry, box elder, and coffee-bean. Of the cultivated groves, soft maple predominates, though black walnut, locust and cottonwood are quite common. Out on the high prairies, the groves of forest-trees, and the cultivated orchards which now bear in copious quantities some of the choicest of apples, pears and peaches, all attest to the assiduous care of the lover of horticulture, and the most excellent climate for various fruits.

EARLY SETTLERS AND SETTLEMENTS.

In the latter part of 1853, a Tennesseean by the name of Samuel D. Dyer, was running a government ferry at Juniata, about one mile below Rocky Ford, on the Big Blue. Soon after, the Government built a bridge at this point, but in 1855 it was swept away by a flood. Mr. Dyer, the first white inhabitant of Riley County, died in February, 1875. His politics were Pro-slavery; he was of good, common sense, excellent judgment, and great kindness of heart. His house has been described as "one story high and two stories long."

Rev. Charles Emerson Blood, a native of Mason, New Hampshire, commenced his labors as a Home Missionary, at Juniata, November, 4, 1854, having with others in his own words, "left their homes in the States not simply to improve their worldly interests, but to fight the battles of freedom and save this beautiful country from the blighting curse of slavery."

Zeandale Township.—Mr. J. H. Pillsbury, who settled in this township in 1855, gave this name to it, which is a combination of the Greek word zea, meaning corn or spelt, and the English word dale, the signification being corn-dale or corn-valley. Its location is the extreme southeastern part of the county. It borders on the Kansas River and is intersected by Deep Creek. Originally a part of Davis County, it was transferred to Wabaunsee, and it became a part of Riley County by an act of the Legislature of 1871, compensating for the loss of the territory in the southwest part of the county, that became a portion of Davis County. In 1854, John M. McCormick, C. P. McDonald, and William Wiley located their claims; Daniel S. Bates, J, M. Burleigh, H. D. Hall, E. R. McCurdy, and John C. Mossman settled in the township in 1855. Abner Allen, Jesse Allen, Robert Earl and G. R. Moses in 1856; D. M. Adams and Harvey Marshall in 1857. A town was laid out, Mr. Adams was appointed Postmaster; the first post-office was kept at the house of J. H. Pillsbury.

A Congregational Church was organized in 1858; a church edifice was begun but never completed, Rev. Harvey Jones, of Wabaunsee, preached here alternate Sundays during 1856. Mrs. M. Pillsbury taught at her home the first private school in 1858. Miss Mattie Keyes, in 1859, taught the first district school in a small building on the farm of Mr. Abner Allen. In 1862 the first schoolhouse was built. It was made of hewn logs, and called the "Conic Section," because of its hexagonal shape. Mrs. E. Van Antwerp taught the first school in the building.

Ernest McCurdy, son of E. R. McCurdy, was the first child born in the township. The birth occurred April 26, 1856.

Rev. Harvey Jones performed the first marriage ceremony, December 11, 1856. The parties united were C. P. McDonald and Mary E. McCurdy.

Clinton H. Pillsbury, infant son of J. H. Pillsbury, died early in 1857, the first death in the township.

The recorder of the weather from Christmas, 1855, to February 11, 1856, gives the average temperature, at eight degrees below zero; the coldest stood 31 degrees below. The snow, February 1, 1856, was three feet deep.

Ashland Township.—This township, originally a part of Davis County, was transferred to Riley by an act of the legislature of 1873. Its area is some thirty square miles. Thomas Reynolds, one of the first County Commissioners and a Probate Judge, made the first settlement early in 1855, on Section 10, Township 11, Range 7. April 22, 1855, a colony made up in Covington, Ky., and Cincinnati, Ohio, arrived, consisting of thirty-five members. It came by steamer from Cincinnati to Kansas City, and from there in emigrant wagons. Among these colonists were many ardent admirers of the great Commoner, Henry Clay, and to honor his memory they gave the name of his late residence to the township and city which they attempted to build. The settlement was made on McDowell Creek. F. G. Adams was President; Rev. N. B. White, Vice President; Henry J. Adams, Treasurer. C. N. Barclay, W. H. Mackay, John E. Ross, C. L. Sanford, William Stone, M. Weightman, and J. S. Williams were among the members. In March, 1857, Ashland became the county-seat of Davis County; and remained so until November, 1860, when it gave way to Junction City. There were several terms of the Territorial District Courts held here, Rush Elmore, Judge. In 1858, a post-office was established; M. D. Fisher, Postmaster. Dr. E. L. Patee was the first County Clerk. He settled in the township in 1856. He was County Treasurer of Riley County in 1864 and 1865.

Miss Marcia Woodward taught the first school. It was in 1857, and the first schoolhouse was erected in 1865. Rev. N. B. White married the first pair, William Stone and Matilda Williams, December 13, 1857. John McDonald, of the Ashland Colony, died on the day after his arrival, April 23, 1855. Clarence Patee, son of Dr. E. L. Patee, was the first child born, March 6, 1857.

In 1860, a Christian Church was organized, but it has ceased to be.

Ogden Township.—This township obtained its name from Maj. Ogden of the United States Army. Thomas Reynolds erected a 10x12 log cabin, without glass for its windows, in June, 1854, on the southwest quarter of Section 6, Township 11, Range 7. It was the first dwelling in the present limits of the county. Here was held an election for the first Territorial Delegate, November 29, 1854. The site is on the knoll a little east of where the iron bridge crosses Seven Mile Creek. Dr Daniel L. Chandler is the owner of the tract at this time, 1882. Dr. Chandler, the Dixon brothers—James, John, Patrick and Thomas—C. M. Dyche, B. B. Edmonds, Robert Mallon, Daniel Mitchell, C. R. Mobley, R. D. Mobley, John M. Morris, Joseph Myers, P. O'Malley, J. U. Parsons, Jacob Theirer, Moses Walker Josephus Warner, M. D. Waters and S. B. White were among the first, settlers. John Dixon died in August, 1855, and a Mr. Allen the same month. In July eight died of cholera at Pawnee.

The first marriages in the township were that of Thomas Dixon and Mary Hoffman, May 1, 1856; C. M. Dyche and Miss B. A. O'Malley in December, 1856. Alla, daughter of C. R. Mobley was the first birth, born in 1856. Robert Wilson, at Pawnee in 1855, opened the first store in the township; a Mr. Johnson, of Kansas City, the first store at Ogden. D. L. Chandler, B. B. Edmonds, J. U. Parsons and Moses Walker brought in the first saw and corn-mill in 1856, and they manufactured considerable meal and lumber. Mrs. E. Myers taught the first school in 1859; James Weston taught the second one. In 1857, religious services were held, and a Congregational Church was organized; Rev. J. U. Parsons preached, and a neat stone edifice was erected in 1859. In 1882, the church is partially supplied by services from Rev. M S. Riddle, the pastor at Milford. The first Roman Catholic Church in the county was organized at Ogden in 1865. The church property is valued at $1,200. Fathers DeMather, Remley, Vanderburg and Cairns have been the pastors.

The Ogden Town Company was chartered by the Legislature of 1857, and the town was at once laid out in blocks and lots. The streets running north and south are named Elk, Walnut, Park and Oak. There are seventeen streets running east and west; Riley, which is the business one, is 110 feet wide; Park is 150 and Water, which runs along the river, is 150 feet.

Ogden has one hotel, the Union Pacific House. West of it was the residence of Daniel Mitchell, one of its earliest and most prominent citizens; east of it was the log residence of Governor Reeder, moved from Pawnee after its extinction. Theodore Weischelbaum, its prominent merchant, came in 1860, and for years did a large freighting business across the plains, and had five stores out at Western forts. He has been an extensive brewer. Thomas Dixon has a large stone warehouse north of the railroad track, and he has heretofore been an extensive shipper. Henry Roberts and George Micholland are merchants; L. Bailey is the blacksmith; A. J. Turner, shoemaker; William Foster, carpenter and wagonmaker; Frederic Rehfield, saddler, and A. Friedenstein, general mechanic. Here is an excellent stone school building; the school is graded. Frank Eastman is auctioneer for the town and country.

Ogden Division, No. 3, Sons of Temperance, commenced February 19, 1877. Its first officers were: William J. Rich, Worthy Patriarch; S. J. Engle, Worthy Assistant; H. Haucke, Recording Secretary; M. White, Assistant Recording Secretary; R. W. Estres, Financial Secretary. Its members exceed fifty.

Ogden, since 1870, has been a city of the second class. Its Mayors have been Frederic Hubert, Theodore Weichselbaum, Frederic Rehfield and C. C. Emerson.

In October, 1857, the United States Land Office was located here, but soon thereafter it went to Junction City.

The Ogden postmaster is George W. Campbell; the one at Vinton, which is near the home of Ex-Senator Harvey, is J. B. Reynolds.

Madison Township.—This township, organized April 5, 1872, took its name from the creek, which was given it in honor of the fourth President of the United States. Its area is fifty-nine square miles. At its longest place from north to south, it is eight miles; from east to west nine miles.

The first claims were near the head of Wild Cat Creek; taken by the Hairs in May, 1855. Jonas Hair located on the southwest quarter of Section 7, Township 9, Range 6; T. R. Hair on the southeast quarter of Section 12, and J. P. Hair on the northwest quarter of Section 7, Township 9, Range 6. In 1856, George Lyall settled on the northwest quarter of Section 12, Township 9, Range 5, on the Upper Wild Cat Creek: John Forman, Bradley E. Hellington, Lorenzo Gates and A. B. Whiting located on Madison Creek; A. D. Reed on Timber Creek. In 1857, James Kester settled on the northwest quarter of Section 11, Township 9 Range 4, on Timber Creek. In 1858, among the new-comers were George Avery, Lewis Parish, Gilbert Steel and D. C. Walbridge.

In 1860, George Avery and H. H. Whiting, in company with some teams from Manhattan, started for Denver with corn. It was the first attempt to find a Western market and it proved to be successful. For years afterwards there was considerable freighting across the plains from this vicinity. In 1861, George Avery brought the first threshing machine into the settlement that was owned west of Manhattan, and in 1882 the power is used by B. E. Fullington on a corn-cracker. Mr. Fullington lives just south of the township, having been legislated into Davis County.

Dr. J. Crans, a distinguished physician and druggist at Riley Centre, dispenses stimulating fluids for medicinal, mechanical and scientific purposes as the prohibitory liquor law provides.

Joseph Roberts keeps the "Central House," which is the half way place between Manhattan and Clay Centre. It was built in 1879, and with it and his feed stable he has five acres of ground in the burg. Ira Wilcox has a livery, feed and sale stable.

The first marriage in the township occurred March 30, 1856. The parties united were James Johnson and Mary A. Hair. In 1857, Thomas was born to E. C. Bartell and wife; Alice, to A. H. Bartell and wife, the first births. The parents settled the same year on Madison Creek.

There is a post-office at Riley Center; C. W. Hessebroeck is postmaster. He located at Riley Center in 1871, opening a store there. The building when first erected was a frame, two stories in height, 24x60 feet. He has made several additions to the original building, and the structure compares favorably with any store in the county in the convenience of its arrangements and stock of goods carried.

Bala Township.—From a town in North Wales this township received its name. As at present constituted its area is forty-two miles.

In the spring of 1862, Mr. A. D. Phelps settled on the fork of Timber Creek, near the present town site of Bala. Twelve miles distant on the north was Rowland Spurrier, his nearest neighbor; nearest on the east, Rev. Aaron Silvers, eight miles distant; on the south, A. B. Whiting and B. E. Fullington.

In 1870, a Welsh colony was organized in the State of New York, under the name of "The Welsh Land and Emigration Society of America." James H. Jenkins, general agent for the colony, bought on time considerable of the Kansas Pacific Railroad lands. In 1870, with Mr. Jenkins came Thomas Daniels, Rowland Daviess, J. Griffin, John E. Hughes, Owen R. Jones, Theodore Morgan, William Randall, Richard W. Roberts, J. P. Thomas, David Watkins, E. C. Williams and others.

The village of Bala is a thriving one. Its avenues running north and south are Park and Powys. Its streets are Kansas, Caroline, Louisa, John, Daviess, Laura, Emma, Broadway and Genesee. Its lanes are Welsh, Ann and Elizabeth. Its post-office was established in 1871, succeeding the Old Timber Creek post-office. Rowland Daviess is postmaster. L. Kilbourne is the postmaster at Alembia in Bala Township. The first marriage in the township was that of Christopher Young and Mary Lock in 1866. George Carrighan was the first child born in the township.

There is a Welsh Calvinist, an English Methodist Episcopal and a Congregational (Welsh and English) Church.

The first cheese factory in the county was erected here in 1876, by James Sharpless, and it is successfully carried on. Mr. Sharpless, Mr. Davis and Mrs. Jenkins have the general stores; J. H. Jenkins, the drug store. The town has a good hotel, harness shop, shoe shop and blacksmith shop.

Leonard, the only station on the Kansas Central Railroad in this county is situated in Bala Township, in Section 19, Township 8, Range 5, was started in October, 1881, and it was named after Leonard T. Smith of Leavenworth, formerly President of the road. Here is a new schoolhouse, and the Methodists are building a parsonage. The town has four general stores, of which the most prominent are those of the Erpelding Brothers and William Sikes. Meetings are held in the fine hall of the store building of Erpelding Brothers. The hotel is the Jones House. H. Wilcox has an excellent livery stable. J. H. Jenkins has a drug store. There is an elevator, a lumber-yard, and a blacksmith shop. The town is twenty-six miles northwest from Manhattan; sixteen from Clay Center; six from Riley Center, and fourteen from Randolph.

The Leonardville Brass Band has six instruments. William Fryhoffer is leader. This was organized in 1878.

Fancy Creek Township.—This township was named from the creek which flows through it. The Randolph family named the creek, and it is said, that whoever has wandered up and down its charming valley, or has enjoyed a look down upon the picturesque panorama spread out at its feet from an adjacent bluff, will exclaim, "A singularly appropriate name."

The township was organized September 8, 1879, and embraced the south one half of what was then May Day Township, containing forty-eight square miles each.

August Winkler came up from St. Louis, Mo., in the spring of 1857, and F. Winkler, C. L. Caley and J. J. Myers were settlers here soon afterwards. August Winkler built the first permanent grist-mill in the county. He has been a very successful miller and farmer, and has the largest flock of sheep in the county.

In 1872, Richard Burk established a general store.

In 1880, a Baptist Church was erected at a cost of $1,500.

Center Township.—This township was organized August 13, 1881, and it embraces what was the south one-third of May Day and the north one-third of Fancy Creek townships, containing thirty-two square miles. May Day and Fancy Creek each contains the same.

May Day Township.—In January, 1872, this township was organized, the territory having been taken from Jackson Township. It embraced a tract 8x12 miles in the northwest part of the county. Its name was suggested by Hon. A. S. Edgerton, who was postmaster of an office established there in 1869, and first called Stanton. This name was objected to, because of there being other offices of that name in the State.

In the year 1857, Frank Droll and Rudolph Niehenke settled in the township. Peter Dick, A. S. Edgerton, O. E. Osborne, George Pickett and Fred Schartz came soon after. In 1871, Solomon Weichselbaum established a store at May Day.

The first marriage was that of A. Brockhart and Sarah Morris in 1862. The first birth that of John H. Schartz, August 1, 1859.

Parallel Post-Office, M. Jerome, postmaster, is on the first standard parallel.

Farmer's Lodge, No. 166, was organized at May Day under a dispensation, January 15, 1876. G. T. Polson was chosen Worshipful Master; J. W. Smith, Senior Warden; Frank Coffle, Junior Warden; H. A. Freeman, Treasurer; Sol Weichselbaum, Secretary. It was organized under a charter October 18, 1876. Its membership is upwards of thirty.

W. W. Jones is the physician at Parallel; H. A. Meier, physician and surgeon at May Day.

Swede Creek Township.—This township is in the northeast part of the county, and its area is about fifty miles. It was organized August 4, 1879. H. H. Rice was its first Trustee. Frederic Toburen was Trustee 1880–82. Its post-office is Big Timber; Maynus Vilander is postmaster. The township receives its name from the creek which flows through it, and the creek was named in honor of Peter Carlson, a Scandinavian, who settled on it in 1857. In 1858, L. Pierson settled just below the mouth of Swede Creek, and N. Christenson, a Dane, settled a little farther down the Big Blue. The same year the Meyer brothers and Frederic Toburen made a settlement in the township, and later Mr. Toburen's parents and his brothers, Herman and Adolph.

In 1877, a German Evangelical Church was erected. The township contains three stone and two frame schoolhouses.

Jackson Township.—The early settlers of this township came from Jackson County, Ind., hence the name. Formerly it embraced all the territory now included in Jackson, May Day, Madison, Bala and a part of Grant townships. Early in 1855, Gardner Randolph and his large, grown-up family of sons, daughters and sons-in-law, near the mouth of Fancy Creek, made the first settlement. They claimed all the land, with the exception of a single tract on Fancy Creek, between Peter Heller's on Section 4, Township 7, Range 6, and the mouth of Baldwin Creek, also a slice east of the Blue called Timber City. Though this family came from Illinois, they avowed their purpose of aiding in making Kansas a slave State.

In November, 1856, Edward Secrest, Solomon Secrest and Henry Shellenbaum, three young men, natives of Switzerland, but recently from Seymour, Jackson Co., Ind., came up the Blue River, and built the first log cabin on the Big Blue, above Fancy Creek. In the early part of 1857 they settled on Fancy Creek, where they were joined by Mr. John Fryhoffer. The father of the Secrest brothers joined his sons in the fall of 1860. William Fryhoffer and Peter Heller came in 1863, and the father of the Fryhoffers in 1864.

Fancy Creek Valley is settled with some of the best farmers in the county, who are largely Swedes and Germans, the large portion of whom were in the territory of Jackson Township. The township, as constituted in 1882, embraces about fifty-five square miles. Its eastern boundary is the Big Blue, the western, the line between Ranges 5 and 6.

In the original bounds of the township the first school was taught by J. M. Byarlay in 1863. The first schoolhouse was built in 1867. The first church was built in 1876, by the German Evangelical Association.

The first regular religious meetings were held at Mr. Randolph's early in 1857, by ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The first marriage was that of Lewis Baldwin and Matilda Randolph in 1856, and the first birth was that of their son in 1857.

Randolph, first called Waterville, was laid out in 1856, by J. K. Whitson; the first inhabitant, G. L. Ruthstreno, established the first store. In 1882, its population is about 300. It has a graded school, with two teachers. The Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church is organized and the Swedish Mission Church has a good building. Its postmaster in 1882, is J. W. Nelson. The first post-office here was at the house of Gardner Randolph, and it was on the weekly mail route between Ogden and Marysville.

The town has a lumber-yard, a millinery establishment, a livery stable, a jewelry establishment, a tin shop, a cabinet shop, a drug store, two harness shops, three blacksmith shops, three hotels, and three physicians. Its attorneys are T. B. Lewis and R. C. Walter. J. F. Beckman & Bro., and A. Wikander carry the largest stock of goods.

In 1881, A. A. Chapman and Milton Foreman, practical carpenters and mill-wrights, got their three-story wood and stone grist-mill in running order. It has three run of stone, and the mill is moved by a turbine wheel of forty horse-power. The mill is situated south of the town, and the water running it is taken from near the bend of Fancy Creek and conveyed through a canal to the bulkhead.

Randolph is a peninsula, North Otter being on the east; Fancy Creek on the south and considerably on the west of it. The original plat of the town contains five blocks. Whitson's Addition has nine, north of the same; Beckman's is a few lots south and west of the original plat. The town contains some eleven acres, and is located on the south part of the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 33, Township 8, Range 7.

Grant Township.—This township was formed from Jackson and Manhattan townships, April 11, 1870, and was named in honor of President

Grant. It contained ninety-two square miles. J. W. Paul was the Township Trustee in 1870, 1874, 1878, 1880, 1882; H. P. Dow in 1871; Charles McGiloray in 1872; James E. Freeman in 1873; Edelbute in 1879.

On Wild Cat Creek the first settlers were S. D. Houston and Henry Eubank, who settled in 1855. The same year Henry Condray, and his sons Mincher, William and John settled near the mouth of Mill Creek, built dwellings, and started a mill and blacksmith shop. In 1856 came Jonas Kress; in 1857 and 1858, Lemuel Knapp, Samuel Kimble, George Slye, John Warner and his sons John and George, Lorenzo Westover, Jesse White and Joshua Williams.

H. C. Kennedy is the postmaster at Grant post-office; J. D. Sweet at Stockdale. The first schoolhouse was built in 1859; first teacher, V. Ruddrick. The first printing was by Newell Trafton; the first church the Methodist Episcopalian.

The first marriage was that of William Frake to Catherine Condray, in 1856. The first births were Newton Frake and George Eubank.

Stockdale is located at the junction of Mill Creek and Big Blue. There was a saw-mill here in the early days, and the ample water-power can be easily utilized. J. D. Sweet has a store and a blacksmith shop.

Wild Cat Township.—This, the newest township in the county, was organized February 15, 1882. It was taken from Grant, and it embraces just about one-half of its original territory. W. W. Taylor is Trustee; H. J. Romig, Treasurer; L. Clapp, Clerk. Its postmaster is J. W. Stephens, at the Wild Cat post-office.

Manhattan Township.—The history of the settlement of this, the most important township of the county, is given with the history of the city of Manhattan.

ELECTION DISTRICTS, ELECTIONS, AND DISTRICT COURTS.

In obedience to a proclamation from Governor Reeder for the election of a Territorial delegate to Congress, November 29, 1854, Election Districts Nos. 9 and 10—Reynolds and Big Blue Crossing—two of the eighteen districts formed by Governor Reeder, participated, and their united vote was 77. The number of voters by census was 99; Free-State votes, 66; Pro-slavery, 11. By the census taken early in 1865, by Martin F. Conway, District No. 9, contained 36 voters; 61 males; 25 females; 14 negroes, 3 slaves. No. 10 contained 63 voters; 97 males; 54 females. No. 9 was then known as Pawnee; Number 10, Big Blue and Rock Creek. March 8, 1855, Governor Reeder issued a proclamation for an election to be held March 30, for the purpose of electing a Territorial Legislature. Election Districts Numbers 9 and 10 gave for Martin F. Conway, Free-State candidate for Councilman, 113 votes; for John Donaldson, Pro-slavery, 53 votes; for Representative, Samuel D. Houston, Free-State, had 120 votes; Russell Garrett, Pro-slavery, 41 votes. Rock Creek was near where Westmoreland is now located, the present county-seat of Pottawatomie. Sixteen Delegates had assembled in March, 1855, at the house of Seth I. Childs, on the west side of the Big Blue, at the crossing at Juniata—St. Mary's, Louisville, Juniata and Fort Riley being represented. Asahel G. Allen was made Chairman, and a Mr. Hascall, Secretary. Mr. Conway was nominated for Councilman; E. M. Thurston, for Representative. Mr. Thurston lived south of the Kaw from where Manhattan now stands. He was then absent, and it was then ordered that should he not return, Mr. Houston should be the Candidate.

Kansas, December 6, 1859, held an election for State Officers, Members of the Legislature, and Judges of the District Court, under the Wyandotte Constitution. Riley County polled 332 votes, and Dr. John W. Robinson, of Manhattan, was elected Secretary of State. In November, 1861, her vote for George A. Crawford, for Governor, was 245; on location of the State Capital, it was 144 for Topeka; 75 for Manhattan; 21 for Ogden; 3 for Ashland. The Supreme Court—Thomas Ewing, Jr., Chief Justice—decided that the term of the State officers then in possession, held till January, 1863.

In 1862—the vote of the county—275. Isaac F. Goodnow, of Manhattan, elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction. In 1863—vote of the county—239. B. E. Fullington, for Representative, had 150 votes. In 1864, Mr. Goodnow was re-elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Lincoln's vote for President was 229; McClellan's 51. In 1865—whole vote polled—295. In 1866, Nehemiah Green, of Riley, was elected Lieutenant-Governor; he had 366 votes out of 392. In 1867—whole vote—673. D. M. Johnson elected Representative; had 246 votes. In 1868, James M. Harvey, of Riley, was elected Governor. He had 588 votes; General Grant, for President, 587. The whole vote was 719. Lieutenant-Governor Green was Governor from November 4, 1868, to January 12, 1869, Governor Crawford having resigned to take command of the Nineteenth Regiment. In 1869—whole vote, 709. Edward Secrest elected Representative; had 372. In 1870—whole vote—843. Governor Harvey re-elected; his vote in the county, 693. In 1871—whole vote, 1,348. On a vote to grant $200,000 in bonds to two railroad companies, there were 494 votes in favor, and 425 against the proposition. In 1872—whole vote, 1,398; President Grant, 1,055. In 1873—whole vote, 1,348; H. P. Dow, successful candidate for Representative, had 777. In 1874—whole vote, 1,239; for Congress, W. A. Phillips had 957; M. J. Parrot, 212; N. Green, 68 votes. In 1875—whole vote, 1,330; R. B. Spilman, for Judge of the District Court, had 1,096. In 1876—whole vote, 1,426; for President, Hayes had 1,133; Tilden, 223; Cooper, 65 votes. In 1877—whole vote, 1,137; William Burgoyne, for County Clerk, had 1,167 votes. In 1878—whole vote, 1,566; for Congress, John A. Anderson, Republican, had 873 votes; E. Gale, National, 416; J. R. McClure, Democrat, 246. In 1879—whole vote, 1,655; F. A. Schermerhorn, for County Clerk, had 1,640. In 1880—whole vote, 2,207. The following is the vote on President, Governor and Congressman;—President—Garfield, Republican, 1,484; Hancock, Democrat, 376; Weaver, National, 347. Governor—St. John, Republican, 1,387; Ross, Democrat, 436; Vrooman, National, 359. Congressman—Anderson, Republican, 1,310; Barnes, Democrat, 277; Davis, National, 604. For the Prohibition Amendment, 1,178; against it, 828. In 1881—whole vote, 1,890; J. M. Myers, successful candidate for Sheriff, had 691 votes.

Ex-Governor Harvey, February 2, 1873, was elected United States Senator by a vote of 76 out of 132, to succeed Alexander Caldwell, who had resigned his seat March 24, 1872, the vacancy having been filled by Robert Crozier, an appointee of Governor Osborn, who had been Chief Justice of the Kansas Supreme Court. Senator Harvey's term expired March 3, 1877. Riley County is also the home of Hon. John A. Anderson, a member of the House of Representatives, for the Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Congresses.

The Republican party of Kansas, organized May 18, 1859, at Osawatomie, placed Charles F. DeVivaldi—the editor and publisher of the Manhattan Express—and William H. Smyth, on the Platform Committee, and S. D. Houston on the Central Territorial Committee. Robert Wilson was one of the Kansas delegates to the National Democratic Convention, at Charleston, South Carolina, April, 1860. Andrew J. Mead, a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, at New York, July, 1868, and was a member of the State Central Committee.

N. A. Adams was a delegate to the National Republican Convention at Chicago, in 1868; was a prominent candidate for Governor in 1876; a member of the State Republican Committee of 1880; Commissioner of Pensions in 1882. Gottlieb Schauble was the Democratic candidate for Auditor of State, in 1868; Theodore Weichselbaum, the candidate for Treasurer, in 1880; D. E. Lautz, for State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in 1882.

On a vote to amend the State Constitution by striking out the word "white" from the qualifications of electors, Riley County gave 74 majority for it on a vote of 628. Allen, Ottawa, and Wabaunsee counties were the only other counties that voted for it.

Riley County, in a vote of 596, gave 160 majority against striking out the word "male," at the same election. Ottawa gave 2 majority for it, the only county in which it carried in the State.

At the first organization of the Judicial Districts in Kansas Territory, Riley County belonged to the Third, and Davis was attached to it for judicial purposes. The court officers at the term of court held at Manhattan, April 4, 1859, were: Rush Elmore, Judge; Scott Newell, Sheriff; J. D. Patterson, Clerk. Henry Hessen was Foreman of the Grand Jury. Benjamin H. Keyser, who had practiced law in the courts of California, and Joshua E. Clardy, now of Wamego, were admitted to the bar.

At the October term, 1859, W. J. Bassett was Sheriff. J. Frank Cooper, who had practiced in the courts of Virginia, and Walter C. Dunton, in the Wisconsin courts, were admitted as attorneys and counselors-at-law.

The April term, 1863, was held at Ashland; Norman Kinney, Sheriff. The military-famed J. E. B. Stewart, was admitted to the bar. Captain Fred Emory, a United States Mail Contractor in 1856, who had a somewhat unsavory history as connected with the killing of William Phillips at Leavenworth, September 1, 1856, was entered on the records as a judgment debtor in the sum of $700.

April 6, 1860, Julius E. Hibbard was appointed Master-Commissioner for the county of Riley.

September 2, 1860, S. McArthur appears as Clerk, though J. D. Patterson is the Deputy. In December, 1860, Judge Elmore's service as Territorial Judge closed.

Riley County was in the Third Judicial District, with Shawnee, Wabaunsee, Pottawatomie, Davis, and Dickinson counties. Jacob Safford, of Shawnee County was Judge, having been elected by receiving 590 votes out of 1,437. Riley County gave him 10; J. R. McClure 140; R. S. Wilson, 177.

C. K. Gilchrist, of Shawnee County, was elected Judge in November, 1864. Riley County gave him half her votes, 132. Jefferson, Jackson, and Saline counties were added to the district. Four new judicial Districts were created by the Legislature of 1867, and James Humphrey, March 4, 1867, was appointed Judge of the Eighth Judicial District, composed of the counties of Riley, Davis, Dickinson, Clay, Cloud, Ottawa and Saline. He was elected Judge, November 5, 1867, receiving 515 out of 519 votes cast in Riley County. The vote of the District, November 8, 1870, was cast unanimously for James H. Austin, of Junction City. Republic, Jewell, Mitchell, Lincoln, Ellsworth, Rice, and McPherson counties voted at this election.

In November, 1871, Judge Canfield was elected for a full term. The additional counties then in the district were Ellis and Wallace. Riley County gave Judge Canfield 308 votes; H. G. Barner, one of her citizens, 1,076 votes.

Clay, Cloud, Republic, Jewell and Mitchell had been formed into the Twelfth Judicial District.

James H. Austin, of Junction City, November 3, 1875, received the unanimous vote of the district. It then comprised the counties of Riley, Davis, Morris, Dickinson and Ottawa. Judge Austin, re-elected November 7, 1879, received 1,618 out of the 1,635 votes cast in Riley County.

The Third Judicial District, as re-cast by the Legislature of 1881, is composed of the counties of Shawnee, Wabaunsee, Pottawatomie and Riley; John T. Morton, of Shawnee, Judge. The terms of court for Riley County commence the fourth Monday of February, the last Monday of August, the second Monday of December.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

The Territorial Legislature, consisting of thirteen Councilmen and twenty-six Representatives,—of which Samuel D. Houston, registered as a farmer, a native of Ohio, thirty-six years of age, was the only Free-State member—convened July 2, 1855, at Pawnee, a little town on the Military Reservation, about two miles east of Fort Riley, which had been started in the autumn of 1854, by Dr. William A. Hammond, Capt. Nathaniel Lyon, Robert Klotz, Robert Wilson and others of Fort Riley, most of them Free-State men. Its growth was rapid, scores of houses were erected, and hundreds of people settled on the town site. The Legislature, July 6, adjourned to meet at the Shawnee Manual Labor School in Johnson County on the 16th, and on the 23rd Representative Houston resigned his seat. John Donaldson, the Councilman who represented Election Districts Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 12,—Pawnee, Big Blue, Marsville, Rock Creek, St. Mary's and Silver Lake—July 6, gave notice that he would introduce a bill to incorporate Pawnee. Governor Reeder vetoed the Act to remove the seat of government from Pawnee and July 21, in a Message to the Legislature, said "it was in session, in contravention with the Act of Congress, where they have no right to sit, and can make no valid legislation". Pawnee, Lecompton, Lawrence, Leavenworth and Kickapoo were the incorporated cities of Kansas in August 1855.

By order of Governor Reeder, a two-story stone building, 33x6 feet, about 30 feet in height, had been erected for the accommodation of the Legislature. The Council occupied the upper part, the House the lower part. October 2, 1882, the walls of the building were standing in good condition, save where a cannon ball had gone through the west end. There had been a door on each side of the building; that on the south, the side near the Kansas River, was six feet wide and seven feet high. There had been no windows in the end of the building, but a good supply in each side. From July 2, 1855, to October 2, 1882, the roof had remained undisturbed, but on that day its demolition on the south side commenced. The roof was shingled with a long shaved oak shingle, the roof boards, rafters and cross timbers were cottonwood. The structure is within twenty-five feet of the Kansas division of the Union Pacific Railroad, on the south side thereof, and in close proximity to the river across which stood Riley City. This, and an unroofed store building built by Robert Wilson, are all that remains of what once promised to be the great metropolis of Kansas. Here Governor Reeder had his two-story log mansion of ten rooms, which was removed to Ogden, four miles east, and stood opposite the primitive court building of Riley County in the autumn of 1855. For the ostensible reason that the city had been built on the Military Reservation, Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of the War Department, ordered the town vacated, and in September 1855 its inhabitants removed, a few to Riley City, several to Ogden, and some returned East; several of them thereby were reduced to inconvenient want. Hon. Robert Klotz, now a member of the Forty-seventh Congress from Pennsylvania, was Pawnee's hotel-keeper and it is a tradition that his stock of fluids was usually more ample than that of his solids. Governor Reeder on his way to the capital city stopped with Mr. Seth J. Childs, whose place was at Juniata, on the west side of the Big Blue at the crossing on the Government roads. In the spring of 1855, Governor Reeder commissioned Mr. Childs as Sheriff of the region of country extending north to what is Marshall County, east to the Pottawatomie Reservation, south to Council Grove, west to the Rocky Mountains, as Kansas Territory then extended there. But the Legislature of 1855, on the 25th of August, elected John T. Price Sheriff of Riley County; Clay Thomson, Probate Judge; Thomas Reynolds and William Cuddy, County Commissioners. The county as organized took all the territory between Marshall County and the Kansas River.

At Ogden, Monday, September 17, 1855, the court convened, consisting of Messrs. Thomson and Reynolds. On the 18th, they made choice of Claiborne R. Mobley for Commissioner—Mr. Cuddy having never qualified—and John S. Reynolds was chosen Clerk of the Court.

The First Records.—The journal in which the proceedings of the court were recorded, considering its character, has been very well preserved. Standing first on the record is the oath of office taken before Judge Thomson, September 5, 1855, by Commissioner Reynolds, who swears to support the Constitution of the United States, and "An Act entitled, an Act to organize the Territory of Nebraska and Kansas, and the provisions of the laws of the United States commonly known as the Fugitive Slave Act," and to be faithful and impartial as County Commissioner. This done, the official bonds of the Sheriff and the Clerk were each fixed at $1,000; the Treasurer's, Coroner's and Constable's at $500 each. Governor Shannon, October 15, 1855, commissioned C. R. Mobley as County Commissioner, Samuel Dean as County Treasurer, F. C. Sonnomaker as Coroner, and A. A. Garrett and L. B. Perry as Justices of the Peace, and this is made a matter of record. The first financial transaction recorded is as follows: "Ordered, that the account of R. D. Mobley, amounting to thirty-four dollars, for sevices rendered the county, be allowed, and issue a warrant therefor."

LOCATION OF COUNTY SEAT AND COUNTY BUILDINGS.

February 18, 1856, the Commissioners made the following order: "That until the court house be erected in the county-seat of Riley County, the courts of said county are to be held in the town of Ogden, and we will rent a house belonging to C. R. and R. D. Mobley at a stated sum per month." This building stood on the south side of Riley Street, in Block 19, the cellar over which it stood being visible in 1882, the walls of which remain, and west of which stands a large cottonwood that will mark its site. The house was a small, cheap wooden one, illy contrasting with the Reeder mansion across the street

Some business for the county seems to have been transacted at the hamlet of Riley City, a place south of the Kansas River, not far from Fort Riley, for in the following journal entry for March 25, 1857, stands recorded: "The County Commissioners went to Riley City this day and brought from there the secretary, table, seals and what records they could find, and deposited them in the Clerk's Office."

The Probate Court had been held in a log-house at Ogden, owned by Lemuel Knapp. It was fourteen feet square and nearly minus windows. But June 1, 1857, an agreement was made with J. U. Parsons to lease his most easterly house, on Riley Street, for the purpose of holding Probate and County Courts, at $12 per month, payable every three months.

Preparatory to a vote on the permanent establishment of the county-seat, four Election Precincts were established September 21, 1857, viz:—Randolph, Manhattan, Ogden and Montague. At the election on October 5, the vote for Ogden was, Randolph, 9; Manhattan, 8; Ogden, 158; Montague, 23; total, 193. For Manhattan, Randolph, 11; Manhattan, 127; Ogden, 3; Montague, 21; total, 162. Majority for Ogden, 31. A belief that fraud had been practiced at Ogden, existed so strongly in the minds of the citizens of Manhattan, that they delegated John Pipher and W. M. Snow to go to Lecompton and obtain some remedy at the hands of the Territorial Governor, but he refused to do anything in the matter. Then the examination of the tally-sheet was the next thing attempted, but the officers in charge of it refused to have it examined. But Esquire Pipher summoned Lemuel Knapp before him at his court in Manhattan, to give testimony concerning the names of minors and soldiers at Fort Riley on the list, and through him mainly it was established that there had been over fifty illegal votes cast, which established Manhattan as the shire town for Riley County.

Daniel Mitchell, who had been County Clerk for nine months, a most efficient officer, resigned his office, December 12, 1857, and was succeeded by Dr. J. W. Robisson, of Manhattan. December 10, Judge Westover ordered that the books, papers, stationery, furniture and all chattels belonging to the county, be delivered into the hands of the Sheriff, subject to the order of the Probate Court. On the 11th, the Sheriff made the following return:—

"The within has been duly served. Did not get the books on account of the Clerk being under bonds not to give them up. He came to see the Judge.

D. A. BUTTERFIELD,
Sheriff of Riley County."

Dr. Amory Hunting, one of the County Commissioners, on December 14, deposed and said that on December 12, he as one of the Commissioners received the resignation of Daniel Mitchell, Clerk of Riley County, and recovered from him sundry books and papers, and things belonging to the county. Six or more men assaulted him and Judge Westover, and they thereby embezzled the said county property. The Sheriff having a search-warrant for said property, made this return:—

"The within has been duly served by bringing county-seals, desk, table, three blank books, two small blank books and inkstand. Papers and documents on file not found.

D. A. BUTTERFIELD,
December 14, 1857. Sheriff of Riley County."

The following preamble and order was adopted, December 21, 1857, at the first Commissioners' Court meeting held at Manhattan: "WHEREAS the Commissioners in and for the County of Riley, in the Territory of Kansas, have neglected and refused to cause to be erected or otherwise procure suitable court house for the holding of the courts in and for the said county, THEREFORE be it ordered that the Probate Court be holden in the Hoar Building, in the city of Manhattan, during the remainder of the December term of said court, and until other suitable rooms can be erected or otherwise be procured for the holding of said court and for the office of the Clerk of said court."

June 1, 1858, the following journal entry was made:—"Ordered that the Clerk be authorized to purchase of West, James & Strouse, of Kansas City, Mo., the building and lot in the First Ward of the city of Manhattan, known as the Scammon Building, for county purposes, provided a good and sufficient title can be obtained, at an amount not to exceed $600, payable in county bonds in twelve months, with or without interest, as said Clerk may elect." August 16, 1858, the Clerk was authorized to issue specifications and call for proposals for building a county jail of stone, 14x20 feet, with walls eight feet in height, and to rent of Robert Wilson four rooms in the east end of the Barnes' Building on Poyntz Avenue for the use of the county officers, at a rent not to exceed $60 per annum. November 8, 1858, Andrew J. Mead received $45 for four and one-half months' rent of a stone building for District Court purposes. The Scammon Building was destroyed by fire, August 21, 1859. The Barnes' Building in 1882 stood at the foot of the north side of Poyntz Avenue, by the railroad track, was occupied as a dwelling, and the lettering on it, "Cheap Cash Store, Groceries, Rope, etc.," indicated the purposes for which it had been used, and it remains as an "ancient land mark" of Riley County.

The following was an order of May 31, 1859: "That a county jail be erected immediately, 18x24 feet, of stone, and that the Chairman and Clerk be appointed a committee to receive proposals for building the same on the court house lots, provided the same can be done for county bonds, payable in six months, bearing ten per cent interest." July 5, 1860, in noticing some complaints emanating from sundry tax-payers, the County Board declared: "That the purchase of the court house and lot, and the building of the jail, are legal and legitimate transactions; that the laws of the Territory make it obligatory upon the county to pay its court expenses in criminal cases as well as in others; therefore we recommend the tax-payers of the county, as law-abiding citizens to bear the burdens for the present year." January 12, 1861, it was ordered: "That the Chairman of the Board and the County Clerk be a committee to sell the wood building standing near the jail, provided the same can be sold for not less than $300; if it cannot be sold, to receive proposals for repairing said building in a suitable manner for county offices." July 2, 1861, the "Old Court House" was sold to Lewis Kurtz for $300.

April 9, 1862, the following order was passed: "Ordered that the building now occupied for county offices be vacated on or previous to the first day of May next, and that the Chairman and County Clerk be authorized to lease from J. E. Hibbard for the use of the county the stone building now occupied by him, on Poyntz Avenue, for one year, at a rent not exceeding $75 per annum." November 10, 1865, on a vote to loan $15,000, for the purpose of erecting county buildings, the vote was 150 for the loan, and 140 against the loan. Douglas County boarded Riley County prisoners in 1866 and 1867, and received about $750 therefor.

At an election held April 20, 1867, on Jail Bonds, the vote was 262 for, and 46 against. Jacob Winnie had the contract for building the jail for $10,441.33. The jail was located near the southeast corner of the Public Square, 40 feet from the east side and 50 feet from the south side of the Square. The area of the Square is about three acres. The building is 40x50 feet. It contains eight cells, which are detached from the outer walls with hall extending around the cells. The cells are 6x7 feet, and seven and one-half feet high. The jail-yard in the rear is 20x23 feet. The County Board voted bonds to the amount of $8,000 for these cells and appurtenances, and they were sold to George W. Higinbotham & Co. for sixty-seven cents on the dollar. In front of the cells is an open hall, on each side of which are two good sized rooms, which are occupied by the Sheriff as the home of his family. In the upper story are two jury rooms, one on each side of the hallway. The hall enters a fair sized court room, furnished in a manner not at all extravagant.

At the southeast corner of Third Street and Poyntz Avenue, the County Clerk and County Treasurer occupy a commodious room, rented for $2 0 per year. Lower down on the same side of the avenue, the County Attorney's office is that of Spilman & Brown, rented for $60 per year. In the block east, the County Superintendent has an office at the same rent. The Register of Deeds and Judge of Probate occupy a frame building belonging to the county, on lot 197, Poyntz Avenue, and the Clerk of the District Court has an office in a brick building on lot 198, Poyntz Avenue, for which the county pays a rent of $60 per year. The Coroner has his physician's office nearly opposite. The offices are supplied with necessary safes. The county jail is one of the best in the State.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS.

In the names of the municipal townships and election precincts, with shifting boundaries, there has been many and frequent changes. Ogden, Manhattan, Dyer and Pierce were the names given to the townships of the county, April 2, 1856. Dyer lay between the Big Blue and Calhoun County, and Marshall County and the Kansas River, becoming afterwards the most of what became Pottawatomie County. Rock Creek Township was formed from it May 18, 1856 Pierce, Manhattan and Ogden were wholly in what is now Riley County. Deep Creek, McDowell's Creek and Douglas townships were in territory, belonging now to Davis County. Reynold's Township was formed out of the territory between the Smoky Hill and Republican rivers, September 16, 1858. Dixon Township embraced territory north of it.

January 17, 1859, the municipalities were designated Ogden, Manhattan City, Blue Mont, Kent, Indiana, Randolph, Madison and Kansas Falls. March 21, 1859, they were known as Manhattan, Madison, Ogden and Junction City. Clay County, then unorganized, had a voting place established at the house of Isaiah Scott, near Mount Pleasant, Dickinson County, unorganized November 14, 1859, had a voting place established at the house of John Erwin. November 17, 1859, the townships were Jackson, Junction, Manhattan and Ogden. April 14, 1868, Milford was formed from Jackson, and a little later South Milford was created, the latter territory being, in 1873, a part of Davis County. Milford Township, as such, is now Madison and Bala townships. Manhattan is a city of the second class; Ogden one of the third class. The other villages are not distinct from their municipal townships. Commencing with Manhattan Township, as the political center, adjoining it on the southeast is Zeandale, westward of Zeandale is Ashland, west and northwest of Ashland is Ogden. Jogging out six miles westward on the north line of Ogden, and northward of it, is Madison; north of Madison is Bala; Fancy Creek is north of Bala; Center north of Fancy Creek; May Day north of Center, terminating on the county line of Washington. Swede Creek is in the northeast part of the county; east of it is the Big Blue, separating it from Pottawatomie County. Jackson lies south of Swede Creek; Grant south of Jackson; Wild Cat south of Grant, being northwest of Manhattan Township.

County Commissioner Districts.—The first district embraces the townships of Manhattan and Zeandale. There are three voting places in the city—First, Second and Third Wards; a precinct in the township north, and one south of the Kansas River. The population in 1875 was 2,508; in 1880, 3,635. The second district embraces Ashland, Ogden, Madison, Bala, Fancy Creek, Center and May Day. The population in 1855 was 2,713; in 1880, 3,957. The third district comprises Swede Creek, Jackson, Grant and Wild Cat. The population in 1875 was 1,844; in 1880, 2,838. In 1875 the population of the county was 7,06 ; in 1880, 10,430.

School Districts.—There are sixty-five districts in the county; one joint district, with Pottawatomie, one with Marshall, one with Washington, and six with Davis.

DELEGATES TO CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTIONS.

Riley County has been first and foremost in the various political movements of the Territory and State of Kansas. Below is given a brief note of her delegates, councilmen, senators and representatives.

Dr. Amory Hunting and Robert Klotz were elected from Riley County, October 9, 1855, as delegates to the Topeka Convention, which assembled October 23, 1855. Dr. Hunting, the oldest member of the body, sixty-one years of age, was Republican in his politics, a native of Massachusetts, but came from Rhode Island to Kansas.

Mr. Klotz was a merchant, thirty-five years of age, a Democrat, a native of Pennsylvania, and a member of the Forty-seventh Congress from that State.

Martin F. Conway was elected from the St. Mary's and Silver Lake precincts, at that time a part of Riley County.

Pawnee polled forty-five votes for the Topeka Constitution, December 15, 1855; St. Mary's, fourteen votes.

Lecompton Convention.—June 15, 1857, Riley and Pottawatomie counties elected C. R. Mobley, J. S. Randolph, P. Z. Taylor and Robert Wilson, delegates to the Lecompton Convention which met September 7, 1857. Under this constitution, N. Berry was elected a Representative, and Dr. Hunting a Senator from the district of which Riley formed a part.

Leavenworth Convention.—Riley County, March 9, 1858, elected J. T. Goodnow, Freeman N. Blake and George W. Higinbotham, delegates to the Leavenworth Convention, which convened April 30, 1858. At a Free State Convention held to elect officers under this constitution, Dr. John W. Robinson, of Riley, was nominated for Commissioner of School Land.

Lecompton Constitution—English Bill.—The vote of Riley County, August 2, 1858, on this constitution as submitted by the bill drafted by Congressman English, of Indiana, was: Proposition rejected, 258; proposition accepted, 22.

Wyandotte Convention.—March 28, 1859, Riley County gave 119 votes in favor of a constitutional convention; against it, 54.

In June, 1859, S. D. Houston was elected as delegate from Riley County. October 4, 1859, the county gave 296 votes for the constitution, 198 against it.

TERRITORIAL COUNCILMEN AND REPRESENTATIVES.

John Donaldson represented the Council District, of which Riley was a part. In 1855, Samuel D. Houston was a member of the House. In 1856, Russell Garrett was elected to the House. In 1857, Abraham Barry and Charles Jenkins were elected from Riley and Pottawatomie counties; Benjamin Harding and Andrew J. Mead, councilmen from the district comprising the counties of Doniphan, Brown, Nemaha, Marshall, Riley and Pottawatomie. In 1858, Abraham Barry and Thomas R. Points were elected Representatives from Riley and Pottawatomie counties. In 1859, J. B. Woodward was elected Councilman from the counties of Riley, Clay, Davis, Dickinson, Wabaunsee and Morris. Daniel L. Chandler was elected Representative from Riley and Clay counties. In 1860, Walter C. Dunton was elected Representative from Riley and Clay counties, the last Representative from Riley County, while Kansas was a Territory.

State Senators.—Riley and Pottawatomie counties were represented in the State Senate of 1861 by Samuel D. Houston; in 1862, by M. L. Essick. Mr. Houston had been appointed Receiver of the Land Office at Junction City.

Riley, Marshall and Washington counties constituted the Seventh Senatorial District, 1863-1866. Thomas H. Baker, of Marshall, was the Senator in 1863 and 1864; E. C. Manning, of Marshall, in 1865 and 1866.

These counties, with Republic and Cloud, remained the Seventh District, 1867-1872. James M. Harvey, of Riley, was the Senator in 1867 and 1868; A. A. Cornahan, of Cloud, in 1869 and 1870; Phillip Rockefeller, of Washington, in 1871 and 1872.

Under the legislative apportionment of 1871, Riley, Davis and Dickinson constituted the Twenty-seventh Senatorial District. Under the apportionment of 1876, the Thirtieth District. V. P. Wilson, of Dickinson, was the Senator in 1873 and 1874; Harlow P. Dow in 1875, 1876 and 1877. The biennial sessions of the Legislature commenced with 1877, and Mr. Dow having become connected with the Internal Revenue Department, resigned his place in the Senate and T. C. Henry, of Dickinson, was Senator in 1879. In 1881, F. H. Burris, of Dickinson, was the Senator. He resigned in consequence of removing from the State, and in November, 1882, was chosen to fill the unexpired term.

By the apportionment of 1881, Riley, Davis and Wabaunsee constituted the Nineteenth Senatorial District; the first election of a Senator therefrom will be in 1884.

Members of the House of Representatives.—Riley and Pottawatomie counties were represented in the State Legislature of 1861, by Frederic N. Blake, Ambrose W. Mussey, Thomas Pierce and William H. Smythe.

Riley County was the Seventy-second Representative District, 1863-1871; the Twelfth, 1872-1876. From 1877-81, the county had two Representative Districts, Nos. 76 and 77. Under the apportionment of 1881, the county had one district, which is numbered 58.

1863, District No. 72, Bradley E. Fullington; 1864, District No. 72, Bradley E. Fullington; 1865, District No. 72, James M. Harvey; 1866, District No. 72, James M. Harvey; 1867, District No. 72, Henry Booth; 1868, District No. 72, D. M. Johnson; 1869, District No. 72, Edward Secrest; 1870, District No. 72, Edward Secrest; 1871, District No. 72, John M. Morris; 1872, District No. 12, John H. Pinkerton; 1873, District No. 12, W. J. Hunter; 1874, District No. 12, Harlon P. Dow; 1875, District No. 12, George Pickett; 1876, District No. 12, Charles F. Little; 1877, District No. 76, T. St. John; 1877, District No. 77, A. S. Edgerton; 1879, District No. 76, R. B. Spilman; 1879, District No. 77, J. J. Myers; 1881, District No. 76, George S. Green; 1881, District No. 77, Nehemiah Green; 1883.

SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

Settled with the kind of people that Riley County was, it would have been expected that they would have taken a great interest in the common school, and in academic and collegiate course of instruction. This they have done and their present and prospective privileges attest their zeal and devotion to these things. With seventy-five school districts, ten of which are joint ones with the surrounding counties, and with seventy school houses, the children of school age have good facilities for an education, as the superintendence of them has been good. The report of the County Superintendent of Public Instruction for 1882, shows 3,887 persons of school age; number of enrolled pupils, 2,641; average daily attendance, 1,525; number of teachers required, 87 males, and 58 females. The average pay of male teachers is $34.70 per month; of females, $29.19. During the year male teachers have taught 213 months; females, 812. The average number of weeks of instruction for a district is 25. There have been four private schools, taught by females; one by a male teacher. The average levy of district school tax is 11.3 mills for the year 1882. The bonds voted for schoolhouse purposes in 1882 are $12,200. Bonded indebtedness of the district is $18,700.

Manhattan has a corps of ten teachers; Prof. D. E. Loutz, principal. The main public school building is a little to the north of Poyntz Avenue, quite centrally located. It is 73x96 feet, two stories high above the basement. It has four large rooms upon each floor, spacious halls, and neat cloak rooms. It is a nice stone structure, and cost about $15,000. The block upon which it stands is exceedingly well supplied with shade trees, that were set out years ago, and it has ample and neat play grounds. To the southwest of this near the outskirts of the city is a nice new stone structure two stories high, built in 1882, to supplement the needs of the increasing population, which now reaches 2,500.

Randolph, which has a population of about 500, employs two teachers in its graded school. Ogden has a population of about 400; Leonard, a thrifty growing town, the station in this county on the Kansas Central Railway, has about 400; Riley Centre about 300; Bala, about 250. All these places have excellent schools. The schoolhouses in the rural districts, in many instances are not adequate to the needs of the people, and another year, there will be an increased number of new houses.

The first record in the Commissioners' journal, relating to taxes, reads as follows:

Received of the Clerk of the tribunal transacting county business of the county of tRiley, Kansas Territory, the tax-book of said county, upon which I am to collect $248.91 in erritorial tax; $185.98 county tax, and $93 as Assessor's fees. All the above amounts I promise to pay over or return the book as the law directs. This August 5, 1856.

STEPHEN B. WILLIAMS,
Sheriff of Riley County.

The amount of territorial sent to the Auditor of public accounts for the Territory of Kansas. August 5, 1856.

JOHN S. REYNOLD, Clerk,
By L. B. PERRY, Deputy.

July 5, 1860, the County Commissioners in a manifesto say:

The county was organized in 1855 and no tax was levied until 1858, and the small amount of property subject to taxation on the valuation of 1859, was only $103,000.

The published expenditures for the county in 1860, was $1,392.13; 1861, $2,175.57; for 1864, $3,434.76; for 1865, $4,462.24; for 1866, $3,403.37; for 1867, $6,931.05; for 1868, $10,040.50. The levy for county taxes for 1870, was 7.5 mills on the dollar, so as to raise $10,600. In 1871, it was 9 mills; the amount to be raised was $11,640. In 1872, it was 10 mills, three of which was to meet the interest coupons on the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway bonds. In 1873 and 1874 it was 13 mills, six of which was to pay interest on the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway bonds. In 1875, the levy was 15 mills, seven of which was for the payment of interest coupons on the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway bonds. In 1876 the levy was 13.5 mills; five and one-half was for the bonds of the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway. In 1877 there was a levy of 12.5 mills, six of which was for the railway bonds. In 1878 there was a levy of 7 mills. There was no levy to meet the bonded indebtedness arising out of the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway, a petition having been signed by 1,155 residents that none be made. In 1879-1882, 6 mills was the county levy.

The aggregated judgments against Riley County, consequent upon the refusal of her Commissioners to levy taxes to meet the accrued and accruing interest on the Manhattan & Northwestern Railway bonds is $30,558.09. The assessed valuation of the county for 1882 is as follows: Real estate, $1,109,407; city property, $335,166; personal property, $540,158; railroads, $248,081; total, $2,217,757.

There are four railroad lines, which may be mentioned in connection with the assessment in the following manner: A few miles of the Manhattan & Blue Valley Railroad is assessed at $12,500; the Manhattan & Burlingame, 9.2 miles, $40,043; the Kansas division of the Union Pacific, 14.16 miles, $123,252; the Kansas Central, 18.11 miles, $67,236.29.

This county has been singularly free from crimes and its court calenders are comparatively exempt from cases of persons charged with capital crime. The latest case was the trial of Charles W. Bates, charged with the murder of P. W. Peak in the Christian Church at Manhattan on the evening of February 3, 1879. At the first trial the verdict of the jury was manslaughter in the first degree, but at the second trial in December, 1879, the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty." This killing had a connection with the procurement of evidence furnished against persons in the liquor traffic, Mr. Bates playing the role of a detective in the matter. The good morals and high civilization of this county stand unsurpassed anywhere.

MANHATTAN.

Manhattan Township embraces about 40 square miles. On this territory is the beautiful city of Manhattan, around which blessings gather in the greatest profusion. No such limited area in Kansas, has more of the combined works of nature and art to commend it than the township of Manhattan. Watered by the Big Blue and Kansas rivers, and Wild Cat Creek, in their circuitous courses: its bottomlands are very extensive. South of the Kansas, Mount Prospect rises almost to a perpendicular height of more than 200 feet above the river, and from this sightly eminence may be viewed scenes that are perfectly enchanting. To the east and southeast lies the unrivaled Kaw Valley, dotted with improved fields, beautiful and commodious stone farm dwellings, expansive barns and extensive orchards, the scene so enrapturing as to suggest "Pisgah's heights," with its surrounding fertile, meandering vales. Blue Mont, to the north of the city of Manhattan, is less precipitous than Mount Prospect but nearly as high; it stands a perpetual sentinel over the Big Blue, whose clear and limpid waters lave its base. Here, at the confluence of these two majestic streams is a grandeur in the outlook, and this trysting point where comes the rustling of the autumnal leaves, the melody of the feathered songsters in their harmoniously tuneful notes, and the rippling, gurgling voices of many waters tells one of the great "Father of Waters" to the east, of the everlasting Rocky Mountains of the west, which the long railway trains of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific, as they move to Denver on the west, to Kansas City on the east, unite. This township takes the lead in short horn herds. The Agricultural College, Charles E. Allen, Bill & Burnham, William P. Higinbotham, A. W. Rollins, and others, have this choice breed of cattle, and most of them breed pure-blooded Berkshire and Poland China swine. Gen. J. S. Casement is breeding fine horses.

Col. George S. Park, of Parkville, Missouri, in the autumn of 1854, located a town site on the Kansas River, at the southwest part of the present site of Manhattan, and called it Poleska. Seth I. Childs built thereon the first house.

Later in the same season, Samuel D. Houston, of Illinois, Judge Sanders W. Johnson, of Ohio, Judge J. M. Russell, of Iowa, E. M. Thurston, of Maine, and Dr. A. H. Wilcox, of Rhode Island, met at the mouth of the Big Blue and located a town site, calling it Canton.

March 24, 1855, Isaac T. Goodnow, Luke P. Lincoln, C. H. Lovejoy, C. N. Wilson, Joseph Wintersaid and N. R. Wright, a Committee of a New England Company, which left Boston on the 6th of March, reached this place and at once decided to consolidate the two town companies with their own, and make one good town of them. The improvements then consisted of a log cabin, built by Colonel Park for a blacksmith shop, and a dug-out at the foot of Blue Mont. March 26, Mr. Goodnow pitched his tent upon the claim of Park and protected it with sod walls. Fifteen of the New England Company, March 30, 1855, voted at Juniata for S. D. Houston, for Representative to the First Territorial Legislature. There were no Missouri voters sent out here to out-vote the Free-State settlers, hence Mr. Houston was the only Free-State member.

April 4, 1855, a consolidation of all these town interests was effected. Twenty-four persons were present, who organized as the Boston Association and named the town Boston. Several rough claim-houses were erected, and they were placed upon the most important quarter-sections of the town site, consisting of some two sections and selections were made of men to hold them from claim-jumpers. William E. Goodnow used one of these houses as a store; it stood where William Smith now resides, and was the first store in Manhattan.

The names of the members of the Boston Town Association were George S. Park, S. D. Houston, S. W. Johnson, J. M. Russell, E. M. Thurston, and H. A. Wilcox, members of the old organization, and Charles Barnes, Stephen Barnes, C. W. Beebe, Cyrus Bishop, C. E. Blood, G. H. Brown, A. Browning, S. I. Childs, Martin F. Conway, Joseph Denison, John Flagg, Isaac T. Goodnow, William E. Goodnow, John Hoar, Amory Hunting, C. H. Lovejoy, Luke P. Lincoln, J. H. McClure, H. B. Neeley, E. C. Persons, T. J. Roosa, Freeman Shattock, Frank B. Smith, Newell Trafton, B. Welden, T. C. Wells, S. Whitehorn and C. N. Wilson.

April 27, 1855, a colony left Cincinnati, Ohio, on the steamboat Hartford, bound for Central Kansas, via the Ohio, Mississippi, Missouri, and Kansas rivers. The name of Manhattan had been fixed upon as the prospective town, as it was thought there would be room for a town that might bear some comparison to New York. At St. Louis the company numbered about eighty. Deeming the steamer an abolition boat, the authorities at St. Louis delayed her some days. A pilot was hired at the extravagant price of $750, and the voyage for Kansas City was begun. Cholera broke out on the steamer and the death of several members of the colony ensued. Arriving at Kansas City there was a tarry of a week because of low water on the Kansas, and when at Lecompton the steamer got aground, another heavy rain so raised the river that there was no further delay until the steamer passed the mouth of the Big Blue, about half a mile, where it grounded and was obliged to land its passengers and freight. This was June 1, 1855. The company numbered seventy-five persons. They brought with them ten houses all ready to put up. John Pipher, Andrew J. Mead and H. Palmer hired a wagon and drove to what is now Junction City, and there laid out the town of Manhattan. During their absence John W. Pipher had an interview with the Boston Association, which resulted in the Association voting to give half the town site to the Cincinnati Company if they would locate upon it and help build up the town. The offer was accepted and Boston became Manhattan, now the "Beautiful City" of Kansas.

One of the Cincinnati buildings that was shipped on the Hartford now stands at the north foot of Poyntz Avenue, near the railroad track, and with its nine rooms is occupied by several colored families. Another one was a store at the corner of First Street and Poyntz Avenue, and in 1882 it stood in the rear of the livery stable of A. L. Houghton. The first stone building in the town was erected by William E. Goodnow, in the northern part, southwest of the Gove place. David A. Butterfield, of Utica, New York, the Overland Stage Route man from Atchison to Pike's Peak, erected the second one.

The wife of Rev. C. E. Blood taught the first school in 1855. The first schoolhouse was erected in 1858, at a cost of $2,500.

The first church was the Methodist Episcopal, built of stone, in 1858, at a cost of $4,800. Isaac T. Goodnow raised $4,000 of it in the East, mostly from town-lot sales. The remaining $800 was raised here in 1857.

Irvine Lovejoy, son of Rev. C. F. Lovejoy, was the first birth. He was born in 1855, is a graduate at Baker University, and a theological student at Boston. The first death was that of G. W. Barnes, son of Charles Barnes, a very promising young man. Rev. Joseph Denison performed the first marriage ceremony, which was in January, 1856. Thomas Platt and Sally E. Pipher were the parties united. John Pipher was the first postmaster, appointed in 1856.

Incorporation.—The city was incorporated May 14, 1857, and the first election held May 30. The Election Judges were John Pipher, William M. Snow and Andrew J. Mead. Mr. Mead was the first Mayor; A. Scammon, President of the Board of Councilmen: W. M. Snow, Clerk; James F. Gardner, Marshal. In 1870 its population was 1,173: in 1880, it was 2,104. Governor St. John, June 26, 1880, issued a proclamation declaring it to be a city of the second class. Its Mayors have been Andrew J. Mead, E. M. Thurston, S. G. Hoyt, C. F. DeVivaldi, James Humphrey, Welcome Wells, M. J. Gove, Henry Laffer, G. W. Higinbotham, Amasa Huntress, E. C. Manning, N. A. Adams, R. B. Spilman, G. W. Wisner, J. K. Perry, S. A. Sawyer, William Dent, R. Allingham, Jr., John Pipher, and W. M. Beverly.

J. E. Hibbard, James Humphrey, R. B. Spilman, William McKay, George S. Green, T. L. Magruder, Samuel Kimble and W. A. Scott have been the City Attorneys. H. W. Stackpole is Police Judge, and J. R. Young, City Clerk.

CHURCHES.

The following table shows the status of the ten churches of the city:

Denominations.	Value.	Seating Room.	Members.
Methodist Episcopal	$15,000	500	300
Presbyterian	12,000	600	125
Protestant Episcopal	6,000	400	60
Congregational	5,500	450	160
Roman Catholic	3,000	250	40
Church of the Disciples	2,500	250	100
Baptist	2,000	200	80
Colored Methodist Episcopal	800	175	35
African Methodist Episcopal	700	150	25
Colored Baptist	500	125	40

Congregational.—This church was the second organized, of this order, between the Missouri River and Rocky Mountains. The first services were held in a tent, April 22, 1855. The desk was a trunk on its end, the seats were trunks, beds and boxes. The log cabin succeeded the tent. The "Hartford" steamer brought materials for a frame building. January 6, 1856, in the log house of Dr. Amory Hunting, the church was formally organized; Rev. Harvey Jones, of Wabaunsee, was moderator, and Asaph Browning, from Fitchburg, Massachusetts, clerk. Here was the independence of the local church, liberty of conscience, antagonism to American chattel slavery, and abstinence from intoxicating drinks most fully affirmed. A donation of forty town lots, and contributions from people in the East, gave the church a good start. The names of Stephen A. Douglas, Abraham Lincoln and Owen Lovejoy appear as donors, written with their own hands. The building, when nearly finished, was unroofed by a tornado, May 15, 1859, but it was built and dedicated July 24, 1859. Rev. Charles E. Blood, was the first pastor. He was succeeded on May 28, 1862, by Rev. Roswell D. Parker, a graduate of Michigan University, 1854, and of Andover Theological Seminary, 1857, accepted a call from the church, October, 1867. He closed his labors in 1880, as the pastor of the church, and was succeeded by Rev. A. H. Votaw. Rev. Mr. Parker still labors as a preacher, but his time is given considerably to the Telephone, a valuable State paper of the denomination.

Methodist Episcopal.—This organization was commenced on the steamer "Hartford," when on the Ohio River, en route for central Kansas, April 30, 1854, by John Pipher. Its membership was twenty-three. On the journey a few were received on probation, and religious services were held nearly every night. The history of this church is coeval with Manhattan. Rev. C. H. Lovejoy, Rev. Isaac T. Goodenow and Rev. Joseph Denison, were the pastors, prior to 1856. Since then, the pastors have been N. Trafton, Joseph Denison, J. Paulson, J. F. W. Auld, F. H. Mudge, R L. Harford, B. C. Dennis, N. Green, R. P. Duval, G S. Dearborn, J. M. Sullivan, S. W. Lloyd, R. Wake, E. Gill, J. A. Motter and William Friend. A church building was erected in 1857, a parsonage in 1864. The old boat bell of the "Hartford" was used in the church. The present church edifice was dedicated October 17, 1880. It is one of the most beautiful in the State. The annual conference was held here in 1875, Bishop Merrill presiding.

Presbyterian.—A movement was set on foot here to organize a Presbyterian Church in 1866. Rev. Alexander Sterrett, of Evansville, Ind., began to preach in the autumn, and for the first four months services were held Sunday afternoons in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Soon after, morning services were held in Gove's Hall. Prayer meetings and sociables were held from house to house, and, on July 28, 1867, the church was organized. R. J. Harper was ruling elder. The other members were C. F. Harper, E. S. Baird, Deborah Baird, C. P. Blatchly, Mary A. Crane, Caroline Higinbotham, Pauline Hunter, G. W. King, John Mails, Martha Mails, J. Mails, R. B. Spilman, Anna M. Sterrett, John Stingley, Mary A. Stingley. The church has had the following pastors:—Rev. Alexander Sterrett, three years; Rev. Dr. Anderson, six months; Rev. J. H. Reid, five years; Rev. William Campbell, the present pastor, began his labors in 1876.

Protestant Episcopal (St. Paul's).—Rev. Charles M. Calloway conducted the first services for this organization, in July, 1857. The parish was organized in May, 1858, and Rev. N. O. Preston was chosen rector. Bishop Kemper made the first Episcopal visitation in 1859, and during the same year the church building was begun; it was completed in 1867, and consecrated May 13, 1870. Rector Preston suddenly died February, 14, 1866; Vestryman, M. J. Gove, was killed by a railway accident, March 1, 1873, and Senior Warden, Ambrose Todd, died December 4, 1880, after twenty-two years of official relations. He was the first in that office; Edward Newell as Junior Warden; A. J. Mead, E. M. Thurston, Scott Newell and William M. Snow as Vestryman. The rectors have been Rev. N. O. Preston, Rev. James H. Lee, Rev. Daniel W. Cox, Rev. James P. Fugett. Organization in 1882: Rector, R. E. G. Huntington, D. D.; Senior Warden, George F. Brown; Junior Warden, Charles F. Keables; Vestrymen, George W. Higinbotham, Charles F. Keables, William Dalton, William M. Snow, John C Russell, Lieutenant A. Todd; Clerk, Charles F. Keables; Treasurer, Lieutenant A. Todd.

Baptist.—This church organized August 14, 1858; was incorporated November 13, 1880. Its members were Rev. M. L. Wisner and wife, who had letters from a church in Wisconsin, Dr. George Ferguson and wife from Michigan, James H. Young and wife from Kansas City, Mo., E Colburne and Jane A. Williston from Massachusetts, and W. S. Hurlburt from Vermont. The first preaching services were held Sunday morning in the stone schoolhouse. Later they worshipped in the Congregational Church, but a cyclone taking off the roof, they returned to the school building, and still later in the old City Hall. Their present church building was commenced in 1882, but not completed until 1886. Its pastors have been Rev. M. L. Wisner, Rev. M. J. Kermott, Rev. J. M. Lackey, Rev. Elbredge Gale, Rev. Isaac Sawyer, Rev. I. S. Woods, Rev. S. Pillsbury, Rev. J. G. Mayer, who commenced his pastorate in December, 1878.

Church of the Disciples.—This church organized at an early day, was re-organized in 1872, and a church building was erected in 1873. Its regular pastors have been Rev. A. J. White, Rev. A. D. Goodwin, Rev. Henry Coyswell, Rev. A. B. Campbell.

Roman Catholic.—This church purchased the building formerly used by the Methodists, in the summer of 1880. Rev. Father McCune has been the pastor since its organization.

The Second Methodist Episcopal (Colored).—This church was organized as a Mission in 1866, and during the year a church building was erected. Rev. James S. Griffing was its pastor. He became insane, and died in 1881. Rev. Mr. Wilson is the pastor. His labors commenced in March, 1882.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion (Colored).—This church was organized in October, 1879, and a church building was erected in 1880. Rev. Oscar Hoskins was the first pastor. Rev. Mathew Jones commenced his labors October 13, 1881.

Colored Baptist.—This organization, now consisting of forty members, was organized in March, 1880. Its Sunday School numbers seventy-five; superintendent, Lewis Call. The pastor is Rev. Abraham Cooper. The church edifice, a frame 22x30 feet, was built in 1883. This is known as the Second Baptist.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

La Fayette Lodge, No. 16, A., F. & A. M.—A dispensation was granted this lodge, October 18, 1859. Major Beebe was Master; A. A. Garrett, Senior Warden; D. A. Butterfield, Junior Warden. The early movers in the work here were Major Beebe, D. A. Butterfield, A. A. Garrett, S. G. Hoyt, Samuel Long, J. W. Robinson and Major Scammon. The first lodge meetings were held in a building, owned by Robert Wilson, of Fort Riley; it was situated on the bank of the Big Blue; it has since been moved, and is now used as a grocery store by C. MISCELLANEOUS ORGANIZATIONS.

The number of societies, temperance, literary, musical, agricultural and social are very considerable, as might be expected from as earnest, active, intelligent and progressive a people as are found within the limits of Riley County.

Temperance.—The Western Star Division, No 1, S. of T. was organized in 1868; the Young People's Temperance Alliance, in 1877; Prohibition Phalanx No 9, and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, each in 1880; Manhattan Temple, No. 18, A. O. U. T., in 1881; D. E. Lautz is Templar; Charles Marvin, Recorder of the last named lodge. The colored people have a lodge of Good Templars.

Kaw Valley District Medical Society.—This organization was effected June 17, 1880. The district is composed of Riley, Pottawatomie, Wabaunsee, Davis and Clay counties. It embraces graduates of medical colleges, and its object is to increase and diffuse the usefulness of the science and art of medicine and surgery, and to harmonize the intercourse of the medical profession within the district. The officers chosen were: H. P. Woodward of Wamego, President; C. F. Little of Manhattan, Vice-President; J. W. Thayer of Ogden, Secretary; J. Greene of Alma, Treasurer. Its membership in 1882 was thirty-five. L. J. Lyman of Manhattan is President; Dr. Beach of Junction City, Vice-President; J. W. Thayer, Secretary and Treasurer.

Riley County Bible Society.—Depository at A. J. Whitford's store, Manhattan.

Young Men's Christian Association.—Reading room open every evening, Sundays excepted. Dr. S. D. Rose, President; A. F. Blair, Vice-President; Charles D. Marvin, Secretary; E. M. Fairchild, Treasurer.

Blue Mont Farmers' Club.—This organization near Manhattan was effected January 31, 1872. Its officers were Frederick E. Miller, President; O. W. Bill, Vice-President; C. W. Kimball, Recording Secetary; Washington Marlatt, Corresponding Secretary; G. C. Campbell, Treasurer. Its objects were: First, to cultivate more intimate social relation among the farmers, and more especially among the members of the club. Second, to discuss topics relating to practical agriculture in all its branches and diversified interests. Third, to form a nucleus of an organization, with a view to a concert of action with the farmers throughout the county and State for the advancement and protection of their special interests. This has become a corporate body under the law of Kansas. At its meetings there have been essays and discussions covering almost the entire round of practical agriculture in Kansas.

The Blue and Kansas Valley Agricultural Society was organized in 1869, and it holds a fair each year. The fair grounds embrace a forty-acre park in the western part of the city, and but a little distance removed from the Agricultural College farm. Riley County can show in horses, neat cattle, sheep, swine, fowls, in vegetables, grains, and fruits, as choice a selection as anywhere exist. In 1881, it was "The Blue Ribbon County," receiving in September, 1880, a premium of $1,000, from the Western National Fair Association at the Bismarck fair ground for the county in Kansas, making the fullest and best general display of its products at its fair, eight counties entering the list of competitors: Apples of 100 varieties; pears, 20; grapes, 12; peaches, 9; Irish potatoes 16; squashes, 11; beets, 8; peppers, 6; turnips and sweet potatoes, each 5: pumpkins, 4; tomatoes, 3; wheat, 26; corn, 12; oats, 6; rye, 3; native woods, 33; specimens of stuffed birds, 88; of animals, 17; fine specimens of Riley County magnesia limestone. There were 60 choice hogs, 33 head of cattle, 17 horses, 40 coops of poultry. All these and immensely more of various specimens were on exhibition.

Farmers' Convention Granges.—March 26, 1873, a State convention of farmers was held at Topeka. Riley County's delegates were O. W. Bill, W. Fisher, Washington Marlatt and Edward Secrest. The animating spirit of the convention is expressed in the following:

"Resolved, That organization is the great want of the producing classes, at the present time, and we recommend every farmer in the State to become a member of some farmers' club, grange of the patrons of husbandry, or other local or State organization."

J. A. Cramer, General Deputy of the State Grange, organized granges in the county, and farmers' clubs were formed in every portion of this and Pottawatomie counties. The granges were known by the names of Stockdale, Blue Mont, Bala, Zeandale, Wild Cat, May Day, Parallel, Peach Grove, Ogden, Manhattan, Deep Creek, Ashland, Fancy Creek, Prairie Rose, Madison, McDowell, Rocky Ford and Fairview.

George T. Polson was Master of Riley County Patrons of Husbandry in 1873, and its Trustees were: N. B. White, of Blue Mont Grange; Solomon Secrest, Fancy Creek; C. S. Caley, May Day; A. Sweet, Stockdale; J. H. Pinkerton, Zeandale.

Co-operative Store.—The Blue and Kansas Valley Merchants' Exchange was organized in 1873, at Manhattan, on the Rockdale (England) system. J. A. Limbocker, President; J. S. Randolph, Vice-President; Frederick E. Miller, Secretary; Seth I. Shields, Treasurer. September 16, 1882, the corner-stone was laid for the new two-story grange building of magnesia limestone, which stands as a thing of use and beauty on the south side of Poyntz Avenue, at the southwest corner of Fourth. O. W. Bill, Past Worthy Master, of Riley County Pomona Grange, introduced Prof. E. Gale, as the orator, and W. F. Allen, P.W. M. of the Manhattan Grange No. 748, P. of H., prepared the box for the corner-stone and deposited therein the following contents:

"Copy of Nationalist, Independent, Republic, Industrialist, Telephone, Age of Progress, American Grange Bulletin, Proceedings of National Grange, Digest and Ritual of Grange Proceedings of State Grange 1876, other documents relating to insurance, etc., of Grange, bill-heads for Store, blank checks, envelopes, shipping tags, etc., address of Prof. E. Gale, poem of Mrs. Kate R. Hill, and a history of the Manhattan Grange and how the building was erected."

The poem closed as follows:

> O'er these gifts, nor poor, nor few—
> Oh, ye angels, sweet and true,
> Bend a little from the throne,
> As we lay this corner-stone;
> And cross the mystic border,
> Send a good word "for the order;"
> Till adown the earthward track,
> Echoes float sublimely back,
> And the world to which ye're strangers,
> Seems a little heaven of—"Grangers."

Domestic Science Club.—This organization is well attended and the following is a sample of the subjects discussed: "Domestic Science," Mrs. Higinbotham; "Art," Mrs. Hill; "Natural Science," Mrs. Ward; "Literature," Mrs. Adams; "Education," Mrs. French; "Gold Dust from a Book," Mrs. Griffin; "General Intelligence," Mrs. Green.

Knights of Labor.—Blue Valley Assembly, No. 1,999, was organized June 17, 1882. The number of its members, October 16, 1882 was about seventy. George B. Hines is Worthy Master; L. C. Stone, Financial Secretary; J. M. Limbocker, Recording Secretary.

Riley County Horticultural Society.—This organization was effected in January, 1874. J. W. Blain was chosen president; E. Gale, secretary. It is one of the very best locality organizations, and its many meetings have largely stimulated fruit-growers in the county to raise the choicest varieties of many kinds of fruit. Premiums at State fairs have yearly been awarded the horticulturists of the county, and at St. Louis, in 1882, several premiums came to men engaged in husbanding in Riley County.

Knights and Ladies of Honor.—Arcadia Lodge, No. 413, was organized by Deputy Supreme Protector H. S. Roberts, March 23, 1881, with forty-three charter members. Its officers were as follows: Protector, W. C. Johnston; Vice-Protector, Mrs. C. F. Briggs; Secretary, William Dalton; Financial Secretary, O. C. Barner; Treasurer, O. Huntress; Guide, Mrs. W. H. Stewart; Chaplain, J. J. Davis; Guardian, Mrs. John Drew; Sentinel, B. F. Short; Past Protector, C. F. Briggs; Medical Examiner, Dr. H. S. Roberts; Trustees, J. F. Ellicott, Robert Allingham, Jr., Solomon Whitney. Its officers in 1882 were: Protector, C. F. Briggs; Secretary, O. C. Barner. Financial Secretary, D. G. Lautz.

The Kansas and Blue Valley Poultry and Pet Stock Association.—This joint-stock association was organized in 1879. It gives exhibitions annually.

The Manhattan Cornet Band.—This was organized in 1880.

The Choral Union.—Organized in 1868, it has given many public concerts, and it has developed a great deal of fine musical talent.

The Manhattan Institute.—This literary society, an organization of the territorial period, has had most benificent uses. Its assets are a bank deposit, $400; a town lot, $500; a library of 500 volumes, $300. It has the Annals of Congress in neat volumes from 1789 to 1824. R. B. Spilman is President, George C. Wilder, Secretary, and John W. Webb, Treasurer.

THE PRESS AND OTHER BUSINESS INTERESTS.

Newspapers are a prominent feature of the history of the city and county, and they have been from the early time well encouraged and supported.

The Western Kansas Express.—The first number of this paper was printed at Wyandotte in May, 1859. The press and appurtenances of the office came by steamer on the Kansas River soon after. It was the first Kansas newspaper published west of Topeka. Mr. Charles F. De Vivaldi, an Italian Republican refugee, was the editor and proprietor. In 1860 the paper was called the Manhattan Express. President Lincoln, in 1861, appointed Mr. De Vivaldi Consul to Santos in Brazil. Mr. James Humphrey, now a leading attorney in Junction City, became editor in 1861, and in 1863 Mr. J. H. Pillsbury purchased the paper and called it the Manhattan Independent.

The Kansas Radical.—This paper was started in July, 1866, by Hon. E. C. Manning.

The Manhattan Standard.—Mr. L. R. Elliott, in July, 1868, purchased the Independent of Mr. Pillsbury; on September 18 he purchased the Radical of Manning, consolidating them, September 19, into the Standard.

The Nationalist.—Mr. Albert Griffin, in December, 1870, bought the paper of Mr. Elliott, and changed it to the Nationalist, which, in 1882, is an eight-page, seven-column paper, having a large circulation, and being able and valuable as to local news and its bearing on many subjects that interest the general public. It has been all the while Republican.

Real Estate Papers.—The Manhattan Homestead was started in March, 1869, and the Land Register in January, 1870. Both cease to exist. Mr. Elliott is a leading real estate man in Manhattan. Mr. Manning was one of the pioneers of Cowley County, founding the Winfield Courier. Mr. Pillsbury died as the postmaster of Manhattan, and his daughter, Annie M. Pillsbury, is postmistress at this time—1882.

The Beacon.—Messrs. A. D. and A. G. Goodwin began the publication of the paper in 1872. Mr. L. V. Taft afterwards became its editor, and in 1874 its existence terminated. It was Liberal Republican in politics.

The Manhattan Enterprise.—The first number of this paper was published May 8, 1876, by C. M. Patee and A. L. Runyan, Mr. Runyan being editor. In January, 1877, Mr. Patee went out of the office, and June 23, 1882, he sold the paper to Mr. George A. Atwood, formerly a newspaper man at Ellsworth, Lawrence and Leavenworth, who changed it into the Republic. It is neatly and ably conducted; in politics, Republican. In October, 1882, Mr. Runyan became connected with the Times, at Clay Center.

The Industrialist.—In April, 1875, this paper, devoted to the interests of the State Agricultural College, was started. It is published by the students in the printing department of the college; edited by the faculty, E. M. Shelton being its managing editor. It is a neat four-page, four-column paper.

The Telephone.—In June, 1880, Rev. R. D. Parker established this paper as a monthly, "devoted to the interests of church and home." Mr. Parker makes this an organ especially of the Congregationalists.

The Independent.—This is a neat eight-column quarto, published by Messrs A. Southwick & Co. It is devoted to the principles of the National Greenback Labor party. It was started at Riley Center in January, 1879, as the News. In September it was changed to the Independent, and in November, 1881, it was removed to Manhattan. In 1882 it became the official paper of Riley County.

The city of Manhattan is located on an almost level plain, something more than one square mile. Poyntz Avenue, 100 feet in width, is the business part of the place. Juliaette Avenue, south of which on East Poyntz Avenue stands the Court House Square, and north of which stands the Schoolhouse Square, is also 100 feet in width. There are five other streets 100 feet wide; the others are sixty feet in width. The lots are 50x150 feet; the blocks 315x400 feet, with a fifteen-foot alley running east and west through their center. Scattered over the town are modest cottages and palatial residences, tasty church edifices, store buildings of large and small proportions, banks, hotels, mills and elevators, while in the suburbs are many most beautiful and desirable homes. Battery Park, east of the town, by the river, is mostly unimproved. Forest Park, of forty acres, in the western part of the town, is used as the fair grounds of the Blue and Kansas Valley Agricultural Society

Railroad Depot.—Manhattan has as yet but one passenger depot. There are two railroad and two wagon-road bridges, one of each across the rivers at the city. The township has a bonded bridge indebtedness of $57,500; of aid to the Agricultural College of $2,500. Its funded previous indebtedness amounted to $55,000.

E. B. Purcell Elevator Improvement, Loan and Trust Company.—This company, incorporated under the laws of Kansas, has for its officers: E. B. Purcell, President; John B. Anderson, Treasurer; James T. Ritchie, Secretary. The elevator is one of the largest in the State, and combines all the late improvements. It has an invention for elevating and cribbing ear corn by machinery. The capacity of the elevator is 25,000 bushels; the corn cribs hold about 15,000 bushels. The corn-sheller can shell 600 bushels of corn per hour.

The Flouring-Mill.—This structure, unexcelled in Kansas, stands near the railway depot. It is 32x46 feet, four stories high, with basement. Its engine-house is built of stone, 32x40 feet; one story is above ground. Its engine is a genuine "Corliss," from Providence, R. I., 120 horse-power. The office is a two-story frame structure, 24x24 feet; the second story is used for storing sacks and light supplies for the mill and elevator. This company has an elevator and store at St. George, in Pottawatomie County, seven miles east of Manhattan. The elevator is the same as the one at Manhattan. They have branch stores at Wabaunsee, Fairfield and Alma, in the County of Wabaunsee, and they do business of this kind at Ames, Cloud County, on the Central Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railway. The places in Wabaunsee County are on the Manhattan, Alma & Burlingame Railroad.

The Blue Valley Bank.—This is the oldest banking-house in Central Kansas. Its correspondents are among the leading monetary houses in this country. George A. Higinbotham, the son of the banker, William P., is the competent and efficient cashier.

The Blue Valley Mills, the new Grange store building, the Purcell establishment and the Adams House, are the leading central attractive points of business on and about Poyntz Avenue.

The Kansas State Agricultural College.—In 1857 the Blue Mont College Association was chartered to build a college at or near Manhattan, under the management of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The prominent men in the movement were: Rev. Joseph Denison, afterward the president of the college; Isaac T. Goodnow, for four years State Superintendent of Public Instruction; and Washington Marlatt, now a scientific farmer located on College Hill. The college trustees received a large number of Manhattan town lots as a donation to aid the enterprise; and Messrs. Denison and Goodnow, from these returns, and by personal solicitations here and in the Eastern States, secured a considerable amount in personal donations, with which fund a farm was obtained, and a three-story building erected in 1859 on a commanding hill a mile west of the buildings now used by its successor, the Kansas State Agricultural College.

Consequent upon the failure of continued bountiful contributions to the trustees to further the movement, and with a consciousness that denominational institutions of that class in other portions of Kansas needed a specially fostering care, with the disturbed state of affairs throughout the State, the trustees were pleased to offer, in fee simple, this property to the Legislature of 1863, of the State of Kansas, if, by so doing, it could be converted into a State institution, in accordance with an act entitled, "An Act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and mechanical arts," which gave Kansas 90,000 acres of land for the endorsement, support and perpetual maintenance of not less than one college for agriculture and mechanical purposes.

The Legislature adopted the following joint resolution, which was approved February 3, 1863:—"Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Kansas, That the provisions of the act of Congress entitled 'An act donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts,' approved July 2, 1862, are hereby accepted by the State of Kansas; and the State hereby agrees and obligates itself to comply with all the provisions of said act." The offer of the trustees of Blue Mont College to grant in "fee simple" the premises to the State, was accepted February 16, 1863, and thus Manhattan became the seat of the college. The grant was really 82,315.53 acres of land, because a portion of the selected lands was within railroad limits, and the college could not obtain a prior claim to nearly 8,000 acres. There have been sold 69,878.39 acres of these lands, from which there has been realized some $395,000. There remained unsold in 1882, some 12,000 acres, appraised at about $140,000, lying in Riley, Marshall, Washington and Dickinson counties.

Its Re-organization.—The college in 1873 was placed upon a thoroughly industrial basis, practical agriculture and related sciences having a prominence; and in 1875 a change was made from the Blue Mont location to the buildings upon the farm of 171 acres, one mile nearer the city of Manhattan. The value of the buildings erected by the State reaches $75,000. The college under the care of its founders and donators, had a classic ideal that does not now obtain. The course was laid out for four years, with the usual preparatory. The first published catalogue gave ninety-four students in the preparatory department, and fourteen in the collegiate. Of these seventy-four were from Riley County. Up to 1873, but fifteen students had graduated; some of the reasons being the newness of Kansas, the western location of the school, inadequate means, the fact that industrial education was something of an experiment, and the conductors were classical scholars rather than practical scientists, Little was done for agriculture and the mechanic arts aside from the occasional lectures. The faculty at first consisted of Rev. Joseph Denison, A. M., president, and professor of ancient languages and mental and moral science; J. G. Schnebly, A. M., professor of natural history and lecturer on agricultural chemistry; Rev. N. O. Preston, A. M., professor of mathematics and English literature; J. Evarts Platt, principal of the preparatory department; Miss Belle Haines, assistant teacher in the preparatory department, and Mrs. Eliza C. Beckwith, teacher of instrumental music. Prof. B. F. Mudge was elected to the chair of natural science in 1865. He made a good collection of geological specimens and donated them to the college. In 1866, the United States War Department detailed Brevet-General J. W. Davidson to teach military tactics at the institution, and he was ordered back again in 1868. A veterinary department was organized and put under the management of H. J. Detmers in 1872, but it was discontinued in 1874 for want of patronage. An act of the Legislature, approved March 6, 1873, reconstructed the governments of the several State institutions, and Governor Osborn appointed a new Board. President Denison soon after resigned and Rev. John A. Anderson, of Junction City, became president. A change occurred in the policy of the institution. Agriculture and the mechanic arts took the place of the department of literature. Prof. J. S. Whitman became professor of botany and entomology; Prof. W. R. Kedzie, professor of chemistry and physics, and Prof. M. L. Ward, professor of mathematics. Educational labor became a factor in the new curriculum; a printing office, a telegraph office and a sewing department, and workshops in wood and iron, were fully equipped and provided with instructors. The Industrialist, a weekly paper, edited by the faculty and printed by the printing department, was started April 24, 1875. At this time the course was reduced to four years. In 1876, the laboratory and horticultural buildings were erected; in 1877, the barn; in 1878, the north wing of the main building; in 1882, the south wing. President Anderson was elected in 1878 to Congress from the First District of Kansas, and Prof. Ward, as acting president, discharged the duties of the office until December 1, 1879, when Prof. George T. Fairchild, of the Michigan Agricultural College of Lansing, entered upon his duties as president. The faculty in 1882 is as follows: George T. Fairchild, A. M., president, professor of logic and political economy; Milan L. Ward, A. M., professor of mathematics and English, librarian; Edward M. Shelton, M. S., professor of practical agriculture, superintendent of farm; George H. Failyer, M. S., professor of chemistry and physics; Edwin A. Popenoe, A. M., professor of botany and zoology, superintendent of orchards and gardens; Jeremiah E. Platt, A. M., professor of elementary English and mathematics; Albert Todd, A. M., Lieutenant First United States Artillery, professor of military science and tactics; W. H. Cowles, A. B., instructor in English and history; John D. Walters, instructor in industrial drawing; M. A. Reeve, acting superintendent of the workshops; George F. Thompson, acting superintendent of printing; Ira D. Graham, superintendent of telegraphy, secretary; Mrs. Nellie S. Kedzie, B. S., teacher of household economy and hygiene, superintendent of sewing; William L. Hofer, teacher of instrumental music; Wirt S. Myers, B. S., foreman of farm; Aaron Winder, foreman of gardens; student assistants—Julius T. Willard, chemistry; Mark A. Reeve, carpentry; John Linder, blacksmithing. The following is the Board of Regents for 1882:—Hon. Stephen M. Wood, of Elmdale, Chase County, president of the Board; Hon. A. J. Hoisington, of Great Bend, Barton County, vice-president; Hon. D C. McKay, of Ames, Cloud County, treasurer; Hon. A. L. Redden, of El Dorado, Butler County, attorney; Hon Jno. Elliot, of Manhattan, Riley County; Hon. V. V. Adamson, of Holton, Jackson County; President Geo. T. Fairchild (ex officio), secretary; L. R. Elliott, land agent; M. L. Ward, loan commissioner, Manhattan, Riley County.

Fourteen States, and fifty-four counties of Kansas are represented at the college in 1882. The average age of the students is 19.35 years. The following is a classification of the students for the year ending June 1882:

Classes:—	Males.	Females.	Total.
Special course	3	2	5
First year	168	59	227
Second year	34	16	50
Third year	12	7	19
Fourth year	7	4	11
	224	88	312

Expenses and Earnings.—The tuition is free; and no general fee is charged for incidental or contingent expenses. Payments are required in advance in a few special departments. In analytical chemistry, $3 a term is charged for the chemicals and apparatus used in laboratory practice; in telegraphy, $3 a term for office expenses; in instrumental music, $5 to $14 a term, according to the number of lessons. Labor performed outside of required hours of labor, is paid for at rates from eight to ten cents an hour. The work of the shops and offices is turned to account as far as practicable for the benefit of the students, and the increasing extent of the grounds and sample gardens brings more labor. A few students are able to earn their way through college, who are allowed to work in the shops somewhat for their own profit, in the manufacture of articles for sale or use. Ordinary expenditures, aside from clothing and traveling expenses, range from $60 to $150 a year.

Terms of Admission.—The college year begins with the fall term, about the middle of September, and lasts fourteen weeks; the winter term of twelve weeks, early in January; the spring term of eleven weeks early in April. Applicants for admission at the beginning of the year, must be at least fourteen years of age, and able to pass a satisfactory examination in reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic to percentage, geography, and elements of English grammar. Those applying later must show sufficient advancement to enter the classes already in progress. Applicants of mature age, who, for lack of advantages, are unable to pass the full examination, may be received upon special conditions

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN A. ALLEN, merchant, was born in Roxbury (now Boston Highlands), Mass., June 11, 1842. In 1854 his parents removed to Kansas, stopping for a time in Riley County, but soon after settling in Pottawatomie. He enlisted in August, 1863, in Company G of the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry (afterwards Cavalry), and served three years, having been discharged June 13, 1865. After the war he farmed until 1872, when he entered the service of the Kansas Pacific Railroad, at Manhattan station, where he remained two years. He then became an organizer for the Sons of Temperance, and for a year, 1876-77, was engaged in lecturing, organizing in that time over thirty divisions. In 1878 was appointed manager of the Grange Co-operative Store, and has conducted the business with ability and fidelity since. In 1882 he was a delegate to the Republican State Convention, and helped to nominate the great temperance apostle, J. P. St. John, for Governor of the State. Is a member of the Masonic order. Was married January 13, 1879, at Kansas City, Mo., to Miss Belle P. Perry, of Manhattan.

JOHN A. ANDERSON, M. C., was born in Washington County, Pa., June 26, 1834. He was educated at Oxford, Ohio, Miami University, graduated in the class of 1853. His grandfather was a noted Presbyterian clergyman, as was also his father. The profession seemed a heritage in the family to be handed down from father to son, and young John became the third of his line to embrace the sacred calling. His first pastorate was in California, to which State he removed in 1862, locating at Stockton. A few months later he entered the Army as a chaplain in the Third California Infantry, and served in that capacity about one year. At the end of this period a wider field of usefulness was presented to him by the Sanitary Commission, which he accepted. His first duty was that of relief agent of the twelfth Army Corps. He was next transferred to the New York central office, and while there it was a portion of his duties to write up for the newspaper the great fairs held in the interest of the Commission in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and other large cities. When Grant began his march through the wilderness, Mr. Anderson was made superintendent of transportation. He had under his command half a dozen steamers. He was required to have the supplies as convenient to the wounded as possible, and the movement of the steamers up one river and down another, and along the dangerous coast, through torpedoes and amid ambuscades, necessitated a daring and skill equal to that of any other possible duty. Upon the completion of this campaign he edited for a time a paper in Philadelphia, called the Sanitary Commission Bulletin. At the close of the war he was transferred to the Historical Bureau of the Commission at Washington. He remained there a twelve-month, collecting data and writing a portion of the Commission's history. In 1866, at the close of his labors with the Sanitary Commission, he was appointed statistician of the Citizens' Association of Pennsylvania. This was an organization for the purpose of relieving the suffering resulting from pauperism, vagrancy, and crime in large cities. He served two years, visiting jails, penitentiaries, alms-houses, asylums, publishing the results of his observations, and contributing to the scientific world, valuable information and some important conclusions on the great social questions involved. Early in 1868, Mr. Anderson removed to Kansas, where, in 1873, he was made President of the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan. When Mr. Anderson's name was first proposed in this connection, he declined on the ground of want of experience as an educator. After long and careful consideration of the whole subject, he accepted, and instead of following in the old grooves with the customary results, he inaugurated a "new departure," that bids fair to exert a lasting influence on educational affairs. This position he retained until his election to Congress at the close of the next decade. Here his career as a politician begins, but it is fitting, before going further, that his methods as a preacher should receive some attention. It may be assumed that his sermons were scholarly rather than intense; in other words, they affected the mind more than the heart, but all agree that they were able productions. His manners were rather unclerical, in that he disregarded many conventionalities erroneously supposed to hedge about a clerical life. For this reason there were some who misunderstood him. But those who know him well are aware that his heart is full of the real vital spirit of Christianity—the love of God and man. As it took much persuasion to induce Mr. Anderson to temporarily leave the ministry for the college, it required even more to induce him to allow his name to be used as a candidate for Congress, but his friends are satisfied that he is even better fitted to succeed in his present sphere than in the one he has heretofore adorned. His first canvass was made at a trying period in the history of the party. Resumption had been ordered, but it was not an accomplished fact, and his predecessor was one of the leaders of the Greenback Republicans. He, however, visited and spoke in every organized county in his district, the largest and most populous in the United States, and received the largest majority then ever given in the district. Great efforts were made by the corruptionists of the district to prevent his re-nomination, but when the convention met he received the votes of all but two counties. He again canvassed his district even more thoroughly than before, and was re-elected by the largest majority ever received by a Republican candidate for Congress. In debate he is aggressive rather than conservative, is a fluent and ready talker, and always fortifies himself well with facts before rising to speak on any subject. In the present House he stands third on the Agricultural Committee, and second on the Committee on Post-offices and Post Roads. During the long discussion which grew out of the apportionment of the House for the next decade, Mr. Anderson's amendment fixing the number at 325 was adopted, it being considered the fairest and most practicable of any suggested. As a member of the Postal Committee. Mr. Anderson labored zealously for the passage of a bill reducing the rate of postage from three to two cents. His argument was that there is no occasion for the Post-office Department to be self-sustaining; that the greatest good of the greatest number should be the distinguishing characteristics of all governments, and that at the present rate of income the national debt would be entirely liquidated in twenty years more. In this it will be seen that his sympathies are with the masses—with the poor rather than the rich—especially in such unjust legislation as the extension of bank charters and the little revenue bill During the present session, Mr. Anderson has urged the passage of a bill to compel the Kansas Pacific Railway to pay to the Government the cost of location, survey, and patents on lands received as subsidy, and to pay taxes on the same to the State of Kansas. Under the present law this great monopoly has been given land to the extent of millions of acres from the public domain, and yet the State derives no revenue from these lands in the way of taxes until the company shall have sold them to private individuals. In the debate on the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill, the passage of which has been the subject of great speculation during the past fortnight, Mr. Anderson advocated liberal appropriations for the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, while strenuously opposing extravagant expenditures for streams that are not national in character. In short, John Anderson is a useful man in whatever capacity he may serve, whether it be in the ministry, in the halls of Congress, as a public educator, or in the walks of private life.

J. H. BARNES, farmer, P. O. Manhattan, was born in Billerica, Mass., April 3, 1840, and was educated in the Lawrence High School. In 1854 he came to Riley County, Kan., and engaged in farming. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry. The regiment was afterward mounted, and Mr. Barnes was made saddler of the regiment with the rank of Sergeant. Was discharged by reason of the expiration of his term of service in August, 1865, and again began operation of his farm. In 1877 he went into the mercantile business, as agent of the Manhattan Grange, and carried on their store for two years. He then became manager of Gen J. S Casement's magnificent stock farm of over 3,000 acres, 633 acres being in the Blue Valley, and still manages the general's great interests. The farm is run as a dairy stock farm, supplying the local markets and shipping supplies to Denver. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. Was married in Manhattan, Kan., April 28, 1867, to Miss Mary L. Hubbard, of Caton, N. Y.

WILLIAM H. BOWER was born in New York City, October 13, 1829. When a child, his parents moved onto a farm in Chatham, N. J., where he was educated in the academy of that place. At about the age of seventeen he went to learn the cabinet-making business, and served an apprenticeship of four years. He then went West to South Bend, Ind., and Southern Michigan, and worked a year. In 1850-51 he traveled through Illinois, and returned to his old home, where he remained until July, 1854, when he traveled West, through Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, looking upon the site of Leavenworth, then covered with a forest just beginning to be cleared away for the future city. Returning to Illinois, he worked for a time at Jerseyville, but the next spring, 1855, he again traveled through Southern Illinois, and finally located at Springfield, where he lived until February, 1858, when he came to Riley County to stay. He settled at Manhattan, and worked as a contractor and builder until the war, when he enlisted as a private, in April, 1861, in Company B of the Second Kansas Volunteer Infantry. He served six months, when the regiment was mustered out by reason of the expiration of term of service. He was in the regiment sent against the Indians in July, 1864, and in the militia of the Price raid, in October of that year. In November, 1861, he was elected Clerk of the District Court, and re-elected in 1863, serving four years in that office, meanwhile acting as Deputy County Clerk and Register of Deeds. He has been City Marshal and Collector of Taxes, and is now a member of the City Council, which office he has before filled. In 1875 he opened his present business, undertaker, in the city of Manhattan. He belongs to the Odd Fellows. He was married September 24, 1862, to Miss Hannah H. Hornby, of Manhattan. They have one child—Mary C., born September 19, 1863.

H. F. CHRISTY, attorney, was born July 30, 1842, in Butler County, Pa., and on April 21, 1861, enlisted at West Sunbury, Pa., in the Dixon Guards, which afterwards became Company C of the Eleventh Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves. The regiment was first sent to Camp Wright, near Pittsburg, where it remained until after the first battle of Bull Run, when it was ordered to Washington, where it arrived July 19, 1861, and was immediately placed on garrison duty at Tennallytown until October, when the whole division of Pennsylvania Reserves crossed the chain bridge into Virginia, and took up winter quarters on the Leesburg Pike. At Gaines' Mills, June 27, 1862, the Eleventh Regiment held a part of the original line of battle while the army was being transferred to the south side of the Chickahominy. Just at dusk of that disastrous day, being entirely cut off from the rest of the army, almost the entire regiment was captured. Mr. Christy was one of those who were sent to Castle Thunder, where he remained several weeks, being sent thence to Belle Isle, remaining there until exchanged (about August 4) with 3,000 others. He reached Aiken's Landing on the James River, the point of exchange, after a march of more than twenty miles, without shoes or stockings, having only a blouse and pants, even shirt and cap having been appropriated by his captors. Rejoining his regiment in time for the Fredericksburg fiasco under Burnside, he was again captured by Stonewall Jackson's men, and confined in Libby Prison for six weeks when he was paroled, and reaching Annapolis, was placed on detached service until discharged June 13, 1864. After leaving the army, he engaged in the oil business at Oil City, Pa., for some time, when he removed to Ohio and engaged with the Graffton Iron Company at Leetonia, Ohio. Mr. Christy's first visit to Kansas was in 1870, but in 1871 he returned to Ohio, and again engaged in the coal and iron business, becoming treasurer of the Leetonia Iron and Coal Company, at Leetonia. On the failure of this corporation, he turned his attention to the law, and was admitted to the bar in 1874 at Canfield, Mahoning County, Ohio. He at once began practice at Leetonia, Columbiana County, continuing there until 1879, when he returned to Kansas, locating at Manhattan, and is now in charge of the insurance department of Hon. E. B. Purcell. Mr. Christy is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was the first Commander of Lew Gove Post, No. 100, G. A. R. He is a member of the Kansas bar, and though a staunch Republican, does not take an active or prominent part in politics.

HARLAN P. DOW, real estate, loan and insurance agent, and Deputy United States Collector of Internal Revenue, was born in Otsego County, N. Y., February 20, 1840. He was educated at Hartwick Seminary, in his native county. At the age of seventeen, his parents, Daniel and Sarah Dow, moved to Page County, Iowa, where he attended Amity College, but did not graduate. He taught school until the war began, when he entered the army and enlisted August 18, 1861, in Company E, Kimball's Regiment in Missouri service. On the organization of the regiment, he was made Second Lieutenant. The regiment was discharged at the expiration of his term of enlistment—six months—and Mr. Dow re-entered the service as a private in Company C of the Fourth Missouri Cavalry (M. S. M.), and again after six months' service, was commissioned Second Lieutenant; served three years and was discharged by reason of expiration of term of service. In April, 1865, he was commissioned by Gov. Fletcher, of Missouri, as Captain of a company of State troops, engaged in guarding railroads and bridges until August, 1865, when his military career was finally concluded, his company being mustered out. After the war he returned to Iowa and engaged in farming. In May, 1869, he removed to Kansas, settling on a farm, near the center of Riley County. In 1873 he was elected a member of the Kansas House of Representatives, and in 1874 to the Senate, and in 1876 he was re-elected to a term of four years, but resigned in 1878. On being appointed Deputy United States Collector for the Third Revenue Division of the district of Kansas, he soon after his appointment removed to Manhattan, where he now resides. He belongs to the I O. O. F , G. A. R., and United Order Ancient Templars, of which he is Supreme Vice-Templar. He was married July 25, 1860, at College Springs, Page County, Iowa, to Miss Nannie M. Brown. They have four children - George H, born August 9, 1861; Minnie Weber, born December 3, 1866; Albert H., born August 11, 1868; Helen Pearl, born October 14, 1871.

GEORGE T. FAIRCHILD, A. M., president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, was born in Brownhelm, Lorain County, Ohio, October 6, 1838. His father was a farmer and a teacher. There were four sons and four daughters, of whom President Fairchild was the youngest. Two of his brothers are also college presidents. The next older, James H. Fairchild, was for years the presiding officer at Oberlin; E. H. Fairchild at Berea, Ky. He was educated at Oberlin College, graduating in the class of 1862; studied theology in the same institution, graduating in 1865. In the same year he was elected instructor in the Michigan Agricultural College, and the next year was made professor of English Literature, which chair he ably filled until 1879, when he was called by the Board of Regents to the presidency of the Kansas Agricultural College. This position was unsolicited, the first intimation he had of the honor being the notice by telegraph of his appointment. In addition to his official duties, he fills the chair of Logic and Political Economy. He was ordained to the ministry in the Congregational Church in 1870, but owing to his professional duties, has not regularly entered the work. He was married November 24, 1863, on the fiftieth anniversary of his parents' marriage, the golden wedding, at the old homestead of his parents, to Miss Charlotte Halstead, a classmate in college. They have five children, all living.

GEORGE H. FAILYER, M. S., professor of chemistry and physics in the Kansas State Agricultural College, was born in Mahaska County, Iowa, December 14, 1849. He was educated in the college with which he is now connected, graduating at the head of his class in 1877. In 1878 he was appointed to his present professorship, and has been in charge since. Under his management the equipment of the chemical department of the college has been greatly enlarged and its efficiency increased. He is one of the foremost men of the State in his department of learning, and is popular with the faculty and students.

ISAAC T. GOODNOW was born in Whitingham, Windham Co., Vt., January 17, 1814. At the age of fourteen, he lost his father and by farm and factory labor supported himself and aided his mother and sisters. He was a merchant's clerk in Marlboro, Vt., and Colerain, Mass., several years. Spent several winters in school and his leisure hours in reading and study. In 1833 he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1834, after some preliminary study, he walked fifty miles to Wilbraham Academy, Mass., and entered that popular institution. With this he was connected till 1848, first as pupil then as teacher in the primary and English department; and in the last ten years as professor in the natural sciences, having previously also taught with success in Oxford, Maine, Chicapee and West Springfield, Mass. He was now called to the same professorship in Providence Seminary, East Greenwich, R. I., where he remained till 1855, establishing a reputation as a successful teacher, skillful experimenter, and attractive lecturer, and a faithful but kind disciplinarian. Not confining himself to his special department, he as a matter of choice, for self improvement, instructed classes in Greek, rhetoric, mental and moral science, mathematics, etc., pursuing at the same time a course of untiring self-culture. In twenty years the pupils in his own classes numbered some 6,000. In 1845, he received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from the Wesleyan University, Middleton, Conn. In 1838 he was married to Miss Ellen D. Denison, of Colerain, Mass., daughter of Major David Denison, and sister of Rev. Joseph Denison, D. D. In the winter of 1854-5, with his brother-in-law, Rev. J. Denison, he entered with all his energies into the Kansas struggle; wrote the first appeal in Zion's Herald of Boston to the Anti-slavery men of New England, taking the ground that upon the prairies of Kansas was to be fought the great battle between slavery and freedom; that as went Kansas, so would the nation go; that the crusaders of freedom must rush to this battle field to the rescue. In March, 1855, he went in advance of a colony and selected the present site of Manhattan for their location, which was held in spite of a border ruffian raid; and the votes of his company, March 30, 1855, essentially aided in the election of S. D. Houston and Martin F. Conway, the only Free-State members of the first Territorial Legislature of Kansas. He was a member of the first celebrated Laurence Free-State Convention August 14-15, 1855, and in March, 1858, of the Leavenworth Constitutional Convention. It was a favorite object with him and Rev. J. Denison and W. Marlatt to establish a great central college. They secured a site of 160 acres and the "Blue Mont Central College Association" was chartered, in 1858, and in 1860 a building capable of accommodating 250 students was completed, and a library and apparatus secured, all costing some $20,000, mainly the result of three years' untiring effort on the part of Prof. Goodnow among his Eastern friends. While the building was in an unfinished state, in the winter of 1859-60, the first school was successfully commenced by Rev. W. Marlatt as principal and upon his resignation Mr. Goodnow was elected president in 1861, and the institution continued to flourish. In March, 1861, he was the agent at Manhattan to secure the location of the State University, which failed by the veto of Gov. Robinson. November 5, 1861, he was elected Representative to the Second Kansas Legislature. In 1869 he was appointed land commissioner of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, still holding his position as college agent till 1873, and as commissioner till 1876, having sold one and one-half million dollars' worth of land. In 1877 he returned to his rural home, beautifully located upon high ground between the old and new college buildings, and overlooking the city of Manhattan, two miles away. There he finds full employment in laboring upon his little farm, and in the enjoyment of a fine library and the numerous friends that his pursuits and public business have secured him. He is well supplied with the newspapers and periodicals of the day and consequently thoroughly posted upon all passing events. He takes special interest in benevolent enterprises of the day, devoting one-tenth of all incomes to charitable purposes, having systematically practiced this for the last forty-four years. November 4, 1862, he was elected State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and was an active participant in the contest that located the State Agricultural College at Manhattan in 1863, with its endowment of 90,000 acres of choice land. This was accomplished by the donation of Blue Mont College building, etc., to the State. As Superintendent he traveled the first year in his own conveyance 4,000 miles, lecturing in twenty-nine counties, visiting schools of every grade, consulting school officers, acquainting the people with their school system and stirring them up to immediate action. In 1864 he was re-elected by a heavy majority. The statistics of the several years of his school administration, amid war, raids, and invasions, show a record of improvement such as no other State under similar circumstances ever effected. In 1867 he was appointed agent for the sale of land belonging to the Agricultural College, and in three years sold enough to create an endowment fund yielding $18,000 a year, devoted expressly to the payment of the professors. The Anti-slavery and temperance causes with him have been specialties from the first. He was among the 7,000 who voted for James G. Birney, the first Liberty party candidate for President in the great Harrison campaign of 1840; and his voting ever since has been in accord with these great principles. In short he has still a lively interest in the mental, moral and physical improvement of the human race.

PROF. IRA D. GRAHAM, superintendent of telegraphy in the Kansas Agricultural College, was born in Benton County, Iowa, August 29, 1855. Educated at Abingdon College, Abingdon, Ill., leaving the institution, on account of business, but a few days before graduating. He immediately entered the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company and remained three years. He then taught in the public schools of Illinois two years; and in 1878, came to Kansas and taught a year at Elmdale, Chase County. In 1879 he was appointed to his present position, and has been in the chair since. He is secretary of the Faculty, and bookkeeper to the Board of Regents. He is now devoting his leisure to the study of natural history, to which department he expects to devote his future life work. Is a correspondent of eminent scientists in Switzerland, Germany and London. He has made collections in geology, entomology and zoology, and is a practical taxidermist. He was married at Manhattan, June 12, 1882, to Miss Mary McConnell of Topeka.

ROBERT J. HARPER, Clerk of the District Court of Riley County, was born in Ross County, Ohio, October 25, 1823. The Judge was raised a farmer's boy, obtained a fair education and spent several years in teaching in the public schools of Ohio. In 1847 he removed to Des Moines County, Iowa, where he taught school for two years and after entered into commercial pursuits. In February, 1859, he came to Kansas and in May of the same year settled at Manhattan. The same fall he was elected to the office of County Clerk and Register of Deeds for Riley County, which offices he filled for two years. August 25, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company G, of the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and on the organization of the regiment he was appointed Regimental Quartermaster Sergeant September 23, 1862. He was commissioned First Lieutenant and Regimental Commissary of Subsistence. He was on detached service during a large part of his term of service as Post Quartermaster at Independence, Mo., and as Commissary of Subsistence on the staffs of Generals McKean, Sikes and Blunt. He was finally discharged from service August 19, 1865, and returned to his home in Manhattan. In 1867 he was elected to the offices of Probate Judge and Clerk of the District Court. He has held the latter office continuously until the present time, and was Judge of Probate Court until January, 1879. He has been a member of the City Council several terms and is now Treasurer of the city government. He is a member of the G. A. R. He was married July 21, 1862, at Woodburn, Ill , to Miss Catharine F. Pierce. They have no children by birth, but have two adopted daughters, Josie and Nellie Maud, who grace their elegant home in the city.

GEORGE W. HARROP, druggist, was born at Pittsburg, Pa., August 17, 1848. When a child, his parents moved to Gallipolis, Ohio, where he lived until the age of twenty years. He was brought up to the business of pharmacy. In 1869, he moved to Leavenworth, Kan., and clerked in Brown's drug store until 1871, when he and a brother began business for themselves in the same line, in South Leavenworth. In September 1875, he moved to Manhattan and bought a drug store on Poyntz Avenue. He has a fine store and business, and is popular and prosperous. He is a member of the City Council, and belongs to the I. O. O. F. and K. of P. He was married November 21, 1872, at Leavenworth, to Miss Fannie Brown. They have one child—George Bertrand, born August 7, 1873.

WILLIAM C. JOHNSTON, druggist, was born in Moscow, Clermont Co., Ohio September 22, 1844. Attended the common schools until September 14, 1862, when he enlisted in the First Ohio Volunteer Independent Battery, served in the Army of the Potomac, Eighth Army Corps, and was discharged July 1, 1865. Returned to Ohio and entered the Mount Hygiene College at Clermontville, Ohio, where he was a student for a year. In December 1866, he came to Kansas, settling in Manhattan, and engaged as a clerk in a drug store. In 1868, he opened business in the same line on his own account, on the south side of Poyntz Avenue, where he has a very fine store and a fine trade. He is a member of the K. of P., K. of H. and K. & L. of H., having been the first presiding officer of each of these orders in the Manhattan lodges. He was married January 2, 1872, at Manhattan, to Miss Myra J. Dimmock. They have one child—Nellie.

J. W. KING, merchant, is a native of Indiana, and came to Kansas with his parents in 1857, locating upon a farm in Pottawatomie County, where he remained until 1867, when they removed to Riley County. Mr. King was engaged for upwards of nine years in "running" a horse-power (and subsequently steam) threshing machine, but in 1879 he went into the furniture business in Manhattan, although he still continues to have his men engaged upon the "thresher" during the season. He is the owner of several dwelling-houses in town and has lately fitted up a commodious hall above his store (which is a two-story stone building), suitable for society meetings, etc. His town property is valued at $4,000 to $5,000. Mr. King is essentially a self-made and self-educated man, and affords another example of what can be accomplished by perseverance and industry. He is a P. W. P. of the Western Star Division, Sons of Temperance, and has done much to sustain and strengthen it.

CHARLES F. LITTLE, M. D. was born in Milford, Hillsboro Co., N. H., January 27, 1836. At the age of three years, his parents removed to Kewanee, Henry Co., Ill., where he was educated in the high schools of that place. He studied medicine with Dr. T. D. Fitch, and entered Rush Medical College, from whence he graduated in the class of 1863. He was commissioned as First Assistant Surgeon of the Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, February 16, 1863, and served with the Regiment until their term of service expired in July 1864, when he began practice in Princeton, Ill. In July 1866, he came to Manhattan, Kan., and has been in continuous practice here since. In 1875, he was elected a member of the Kansas House of Representatives, serving with ability and fidelity to the trust. He was a member of the Committee on Railroads and also of the Committee on Legislature Appointment. He is a member of the firm of T. E. Williams & Co., druggists. He is a member of the Masonic order and the G. A. R. He was married February 22, 1866, at Princeton, Ill., to Miss Charlotte Swift. They have four children—Elsie Ada, born June 22, 1867; Nellie P., December 15, 1869; Jennie Belle, October 8, 1871, and Frederick Swift, June 25, 1873.

SAMUEL LONG, merchant, was born in Carroll County, Ohio, November 16, 1833. In 1855, he removed to Minnesota, and after two years came to Kansas, settling in Manhattan in that year. He enlisted in September 1861 in Company G of the Eleventh Kansas Volunteer Infantry, which was afterward changed to Cavalry. He served three years and was discharged at the close of the war, having in 1864 been promoted to the office of Second Lieutenant. He was elected Sheriff of Riley County in 1859, re-elected in 1861, and was serving his second term, when he entered the army, abandoning the emoluments of the office for the service of his country. After the war he became a farmer, but after four years of farm life he again moved to town and began business as a merchant, which he still pursues, carrying at the present time a fine stock, exclusively of boots and shoes. In 1880, he was elected County Commissioner for a short term of one year and declined a re-election the following year. He has been for years a member of the City Council. He is a Mason in good standing. He was married in Manhattan, February 3, 1861, to Miss C. J. Huntress. They have three children—Mary, born July 17, 1862; Albina, born April 9, 1867, and Susie, born October 12, 1875.

GEORGE S. MORGAN was born in 1858 in Fredericksburg, Va., and in 1862 he accompanied his parents to Washington, D. C. He received his education in the common schools and subsequently learned the trade of barber. He remained in the capital until June 14, 1881, when he removed to Kansas, locating in this city, where he shortly afterward opened a first class tonsorial establishment, on Poyntz Avenue, which he still continues. October 10, 1879, Mr. Morgan married Miss Hermine Strong, of Farmville, Va. He is a charter member and secretary of the Corinthian Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and takes a lively interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of his adopted State.

JOSEPH M. MYERS, Sheriff of Riley County, was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, December 17, 1843. When he was a year old, his parents moved to Hancock County, Ill., where they lived until 1859. In 1858, his father had located a homestead in Riley County, and returning to Illinois for his family, sickened and died. The family, however, followed his intentions and settled on the homestead chosen, where the widowed mother still resides. Enlisted August 11, 1862, in Company A, Ninth Kansas, as a private, and served until the close of the war, in the Army of the Frontier. After the war he returned to the farm, where he continued until 1881, when he was elected Sheriff of the county, which office he now fills with ability. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and G. A. R. He was married in January 1868, at Paola, to Miss Belle White. They have five children—Mattie, born May 1, 1869; Josephine, born October 10, 1871; Phoebe, born November 9, 1877; Dollie, born December 13, 1879, and Louis, born December 17, 1881.

E. L. PATEE, M. D., was born in Oxford, Delaware County, Ohio, February 23, 1822. He was educated at the Ohio Wesleyan University, graduating in the scientific course in 1849. Was a student one year at the Eclectic Medical College, Cincinnati, and for two years at Starling Medical College, Columbus, Ohio, graduating therefrom in the class of 1852. Afterwards he took a one term course at a Homœopathic Medical College in Cleveland. He began the practice of his profession at Portland, Meigs County, Ohio, in the fall of 1853, where he continued until January, 1854, when he settled and practiced a year, and took a post graduate course at Miami Medical College. In the fall of 1855 he came to Kansas, taking a homestead at Ashland, in Riley County, and the following year moved his family to the State where he had determined to make his home. He came with the Cincinnati Colony, but left the boat at Kansas City, purchased a team, and came the remainder of the way overland. April 14, 1861, he entered the Second Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and was commissioned First Assistant Surgeon. Was mustered into the United States service, June 20, 1861. After the battle of Wilson's Creek and the death of Gen. Lyon, the troops with which he served retreated to Rolla. Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Blair ordered him to remove the sick and wounded to St. Louis. His train arrived at night with the suffering men, covered with dust and overpowered with heat. Working all night, he succeeded in dressing the wounds and caring for all his men. Gen. Fremont visited the hospital early in the day, and detecting the marvelous energy and power of the man, ordered him not to return to the front, but placed him in charge of the hospital—New House of Refuge. In July, at his personal request, he was again ordered to the front. Gen. Blunt gave him detached service until September, and then ordered him to report at his headquarters at Fort Scott. He was promoted to be Surgeon, rank of Major, September 19, 1862, and was Medical Director of Blunt's army, until July, 1863, when he was detailed upon the staff of Gov. Kearney, ranking as Colonel. In this capacity he helped organize the Fifth and Fourteenth Kansas regiments. He served until the close of the war, and then returned to his practice at Manhattan, where he has been in continuous practice since, and ranks as one of the best surgeons in Kansas. He is purely eclectic in his practice, counseling all schools of practice. He has held several important civil offices. In 1867 he was appointed Clerk of the District Court for Davis County, then attached to Riley for judicial purposes, which position he held by appointment and election for four years. In 1864 he was elected Treasurer of Riley County, and re-elected in 1866, holding the office four years. He has also been Coroner of the county several terms. He is a member of the Masonic order, and of the I. O. O. F., G. A. R., and K. of L. He was married September 22, 1852, in Morgan County, Ohio, to Miss Cynthia A. Dye. They have three children—Alice (Mrs. Dickens), Clarence and Henry, all grown up and away from the parental homestead.

JOHN PIPHER, farmer, P. O. Manhattan, is one of the first settlers of the place, and has been active in every improvement of the city. He was born in Chester County, Pa., August 28, 1811. At the age of twenty-one years he went to Harrisburg, Pa., and learned the trade of tobacconist. Here he worked three years and then went to New Lisbon, Ohio, where he lived seven years, and finally to Cincinnati, where he spent eleven years, where we find him in the spring of 1855, preparing to emigrate to the then young territory of Kansas. A company of seven persons, of which Mr. Pipher was one, purchased a steamboat, the "Hartford," and started with a colony of Cincinnatians, intending to locate at or near the mouth of the Republican River and near Fort Riley. Leaving Cincinnati in the latter part of April, the steamer made St. Louis in four days. Here a delay of several days took place in trying to secure a pilot, the Missouri River pilot refusing to navigate an abolition boat. Finally leaving St. Louis, they made Kansas City in nine days. The Kaw River being low, the boat was unable to proceed at once, and Mr. Pipher, with two others of the colony and a surveyor, purchased a team, and traveled overland to a point where Junction City now stands, and began surveying the contemplated town which they had determined before leaving Cincinnati to name Manhattan. Finally the boat was started up the Kaw, and after a long and tedious passage, reached the mouth of the Blue River. Here they landed in response to an invitation of a colony from Boston, which they found occupying the land, and after consulting with them, Mr. Pipher and his associates at Fort Riley were sent for and a consolidation of the two colonies finally effected, the Boston Company taking the lands north of Poyntz Avenue, the Cincinnati colony south of that street, amounting in all to over 1,400 acres. The Boston Company, by their very liberal management, had thus secured a powerful ally, avoided a formidable rival, secured building material, the "Hartford" having on board ten frame houses complete, and more than all, the use of the steamboat designed to run regularly between the new settlement and the Eastern markets. But the boat was destined to never again leave the Kansas River. On her return trip the river had become so low that she was laid up at St. Mary's Mission to await the flood from the autumn rains. While lying against the bank of the river, a prairie fire, probably set by two Indians, that the mate had driven from the boat for begging tobacco, swept over the country, leaped on board, and before aught could be done to arrest the flames, the "Hartford" was a smouldering ruin. The boat had cost the company $7,000; was insured for $3,500, and this, together with $200 derived from the sale of boilers, was all the company realized from their investment. The bell, with which the pilot was wont to control her movements, was afterward recovered, and is still doing good service in the tower of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Manhattan. The Cincinnati Company having by the terms of settlement been allowed the honor of naming the future city. After the settlement had been effected, Mr. Pipher became a leader in every enterprise, looking to the future development of the place. For a year he was engaged entirely as a resident agent of the Cincinnati Company, being the only one of the capitalists that had a permanent residence here. Although afterward, one of the company, A. J. Mead, lived here for several years. At the end of the first year Mr. Pipher began business as a merchant, which he continued for some dozen years or more. In 1855, on the organization of the town, he was appointed Justice of the Peace by Gov. Reeder, and by appointment and re-election held the office for five years. He was also elected Mayor in the year of the settlement, and Colonel of a regiment designed to protect the State from the inroads of the border ruffians of Missouri. Mr. Pipher was appointed postmaster, the first for Manhattan, in 1855, and held the office for several years. In 1860 he was elected Probate Judge of Riley County, and continued to be re-elected until 1868, when he declined a re-election. The judge is a man foremost in every good work. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than fifty-eight years, and an officer thereof for more than half a century. He organized the first Methodist Episcopal Society of Manhattan while on board the steamer "Hartford," before they had left the Ohio River. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F. since he was twenty years of age, having by dispensation of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania been admitted to a membership before his majority, and for the last twelve years he has been Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Kansas; has also been Deputy Grand Master. He has belonged to all temperance organizations, and is still an active temperance worker. He has frequently been Police Judge of the city, and in 1878 was elected Mayor for his last term, although the people are liable to honor him in the same way at any election. The judge has been twice married, living with his first wife for twenty years, and with the present Mrs. Pipher for a period of upward of thirty years in all, in double harness. His two surviving children—John W. and Mrs. George T. Brown, are married and living in Manhattan, and the judge is hale and hearty, and surrounded by grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He is passing his last years peacefully and in comfort, loved and respected by the whole community of his beloved Manhattan.

JEFFERSON ROBINSON, M. D., was born in Bath, Steuben County, N. Y., May 4, 1835. When he was five years old his parents moved to Chicago. At the age of fourteen years he went to Rome, Wis., and worked at the wood turner's trade until his majority was passed. Entered Rush Medical College, and abandoned the college to enter the army, September 6, 1861, in Company I, Fifty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, as a private. He was promoted to Second Lieutenant, Fifty-fourth United States Colored Infantry, March 2, 1865, and was discharged from service in August, 1866. He returned to Chicago and re-entered Rush Medical College, from whence he graduated in the class of 1867. March 9 of the same year he came to Kansas and settled at Manhattan, where he has been practicing since. He is also the proprietor of a very fine drug store in the city, located on Poyntz Avenue. He has been a member of the City Council, belongs to the Masonic order, and has attained to the Royal Arch degree. He was married in February, 1867, at Milwaukee, Wis., to Miss Mary E. Burnell, who has borne him three children—Charles Nash, born February 19, 1869; Stanley R., born February 28, 1874, and Elsie M., born November 20, 1879.

E. M. SHELTON, professor of agriculture, in the Kansas Agricultural College, and editor of the Industrialist, was born in England, August 7, 1846. At the age of eight years his parents emigrated with him to America, settling in Western New York. In 1860 they moved to Shiawassee County, Mich. Mr. Shelton was educated in the Michigan Agricultural College, graduating in the class of 1871. Immediately after graduation, he was employed by the Japanese Government to make a collection of pure blood horses, cattle, sheep and swine, amounting to five car loads, which, together with agricultural implements, etc., he accompanied to that empire, and for a year was the superintendent of an experimental farm near Tokio. At the end of the year, having lost his health in the unfavorable climate, he returned to Colorado and settled at Greeley, and became a farmer, remaining there one year. In 1874 he was elected to his professorship, and has been in charge of the State farm ever since. In 1879 he was elected to the same chair in the Michigan Agricultural College, but remained in the Kansas Institution. He has been editor of the college paper since 1878. Was married December 24, 1874, to Miss Elizabeth E. Sessions, of Ionia, Mich. They have two children—Frank, born in 1877, and Mary, born in 1879.

ALBERT TODD, A. M., First Lieutenant, First Artillery, United States Army, and professor of military science in the Kansas Agricultural College, was born in Rhode Island, October 21, 1854. In 1866 his parents removed to Kansas, settling in Riley County. At an early age he entered the Kansas Agricultural College, graduating with the class of 1872. The following year Hon. William A. Philips, Member of Congress of the First Kansas District, appointed him to a Cadetship at the Military Academy, whence he graduated in due course, in the class of 1877, standing number five in a class of seventy-six. He was immediately after his graduation appointed Second Lieutenant in the First Artillery, and was stationed at Fort Adams, Rhode Island, and was afterward transferred to the school of artillery and practice at Fortress Monroe, Va. In July, 1881, he was detailed by Secretary Lincoln as instructor of military science in the Kansas Agricultural College. He was promoted to First Lieutenant, First Artillery, in April, 1882, and is now in his second years' work in the college.

H. A. YOUNG & CO., dealers in lumber and all kinds of building material, Manhattan, Kan.

THOMAS E. WILLIAMS, druggist, was born in Kenton County, Ky., December 11, 1851. In 1855, his parents removed to Ashland Township, then Davis, but now a part of Riley County, where they still reside. Entered the Kansas Agricultural College where he was a student for two years. Returning to his farm, he remained until 1879, when he went into business with Robinson & Little as clerk, and continued with them and their successor, Dr. Robinson, until August, 1882, when he formed a partnership with Dr. Little, under the firm name of T. E. Williams & Co., and opened present business on his own account. They have a splendid store, and a fine trade. He was married, May 6, 1872, to Miss Octavia Westbrook, of Riley County. The have one child—Ada Florence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN F. BECKMAN, merchant, was born in Hanover, Germany, December 9, 1846. In 1863, he and his brother, C. W. Beckman, came to America, locating at Leavenworth, Kan. After passing a few years in a clerkship at Leavenworth, he engaged in the mercantile business on his own account, at Randolph, Kan., October 1, 1870. By close attention to business his trade rapidly increased, until, in 1879, he erected a spacious and commodious business house for his use. January 1, 1882, he took into partnership with himself, C. W. Beckman, under the firm name of John F. Beckman & Brother, and their business now ranks third in Riley County. He is a genial and cultured gentleman; a careful business man, and a good citizen. He belongs to the Masonic order, being a member of Farmers Lodge, No. 166, Randolph, Manhattan Chapter and Topeka Commandery. He was married, April 19, 1872, to Miss Anna Louisa Grall, of Randolph, and has apparently settled down into a permanent resident of this place.

J. CRANS, M. D., Riley Center, was born in Orange County, N. Y., August 6, 1842. He was educated at Middletown Academy. Prepared to enter college, but the war coming on, he abandoned the halls of education for the field. He enlisted in September, 1862, in Company B of the One Hundred and Ninth New York Volunteer Infantry. After serving three months as a private, he was promoted to Hospital Steward United States Army. Served three years and resigned at Mobile, Ala., in the spring of 1865. He commenced the study of medicine when but fifteen years of age, attended one course of lectures at Georgetown, D. C., and continued it after leaving the army, in Chicago, Ill., where he resided five years attending lectures. He then came to Riley Center in 1870. Finding that there was but little sickness in this healthy and thinly settled country, he commenced raising stock, which business he has been engaged in extensively up to the present time. In 1878 Riley Center had begun to boom, and being much in need of a drug store, the doctor built his present cosy little building, and filled it with a choice line of pure drugs and medicines. During the winter of 1879-80, he attended another course of lectures at Keokuk, Iowa, where he graduated with high honors, and returned to Riley Center, where he has established a large practice, and is recognized by the medical fraternity of Kansas as one of the most promising young doctors in the State. He belongs to the Masonic order, having attained to thirty-two degrees. Is a member of the Chicago Consistory. He was married at Chicago, Ill., May 6, 1868, to Miss Edith C. Landall. They have two children—Eulila, born July 1, 1871, and Daisy, born February 28, 1881.

CYRUS FOLTZ, County Commissioner of Riley County, P. O. Manhattan, was born in Franklin County, Pa., January 18, 1833. In 1855 moved to Fulton County, Ill., engaged in the trade until the spring of 1857, when he moved to Shawnee County, Kan., where he resided until the fall of 1864, when he moved back to Abingdon, Knox County, Ill., engaged in trade as druggist and grocer. In the spring of 1867 he returned to Kansas, settling in Riley County on a farm in Zeandale Township, then a part of Wabaunsee County, where he still resides. During the Rebellion he was in the employ of the Quartermaster's Department of the army for one year. He is a member of the Knights of Honor. He was married July 4, 1860, at Auburn, Kan., to Miss Helen M. Thomas, who bore him five children. Mrs. Foltz died in March, 1866, and he again, August 23, 1877, entered the marriage state, allying himself with Miss Mattie E. Whitney, of Riley County. They have one child—Mildred, born March 14, 1883.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM GORDON, farmer, P. O Bala, was born in Ireland, February 6, 1833. He came to America in 1847, joining his parents who had preceded him in Philadelphia. They lived in Montgomery County, Pa., in 1851, at Philadelphia. He enlisted in the United States Army, and was assigned to Company I of the First Dragoons. He served in New Mexico until the expiration of his term of enlistment, being discharged from Fort Thornton. He returned to Weston, Mo., and was soon afterwards employed in the Quartermaster's Department of the Army of Fort Leavenworth. He was sent to Fort Riley, where he continued in Government employ from July, 1856, to August, 1858. He then settled on a farm in Township 9, Range 4, being in Riley County, where he lived until the spring of 1860. He spent the summer of that year in Colorado, returning in the fall. In December, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company F of the Sixth Kansas Cavalry Regiment. After a month's service he was commissioned Second Lieutenant of the Company, was promoted to First Lieutenant in July, 1862, and to Captain soon after; he served two years, and was forced to resign on account of disability from wounds and disease. He returned to Riley County and settled on a farm in Township 9, Range 5, where he is still living, engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is well-fixed and raises cattle, horses and swine. He was Township Trustee in 1866. He is a member of the Masonic order and the Grand Army of the Republic. He was married April 6, 1861, in Riley County, to Miss Jane Thompson. They have five children—Ellen May, John Ross, Katie Belle, William Robey, and Rutherford B. Hayes. The Captain and his excellent wife have reared two orphan children of a soldier, whose parents died during the war. They have just past their majority, and have been kindly cared for and are good children.

J. H. JENKINS, druggist, Bala, was born in Wales, November 6, 1840. He was educated at New Kingswood College, Bath, England. After graduating, he was engaged in the service of various banking-houses of Wales and England as accountant and teller. In 1869 he resigned his position as receiving teller in the Provincial Bank of England and came to America, settling at Utica, N. Y., where he was employed for a year as accountant in the wholesale drug trade by Comstock Bros. In 1870 he came to Kansas, living six months in Osage County, and settling in the fall of that year in Bala, Riley County, he established a drug store, and in the spring of 1882 opened another at Leonard. Both of these stores he still owns, and does a thriving trade in both. Is also engaged in real estate and loan business. He was married April 9, 1879, to Miss Elizabeth H. Jenkins, of Riley County. They have one child—Isaac John, born October 1, 1882. Has probably the most extensive notary public practice in the county.

R. H. MOODY, P. O. Vinton, was born in North Carolina, May 10, 1828. Began to preach at the age of twenty-one. Preached eight years in Caldwell County, N. C. Was educated at Furman University, in Greenville, S. C. Taught school in the academy at Waynesville, N. C., six years, and preached on Sunday till the war commenced; then returned to his farm in North Carolina, where he continued to preach during the war. Went and preached some time in Livingston County, Mo Returned home and preached till 1877; then removed to Kansas and engaged in farming and preaching. Preached some months in Carroll County, Mo. Was married in Caldwell County, N. C., to Miss B B. Chambers, a native of Illinois. They never had but sixteen children—John (deceased), Mary E., Nancy F., Jane E., Cynthia E., William E., Robert H., Thomas L. (deceased) Marcus D., James N., Caleb J., Rachel B. (deceased), Joseph C., Sarah L., Josephine C., Horace A. Nine of the family are members of the Baptist Church. William, James and Caleb are now at William Jewell College, Mo.

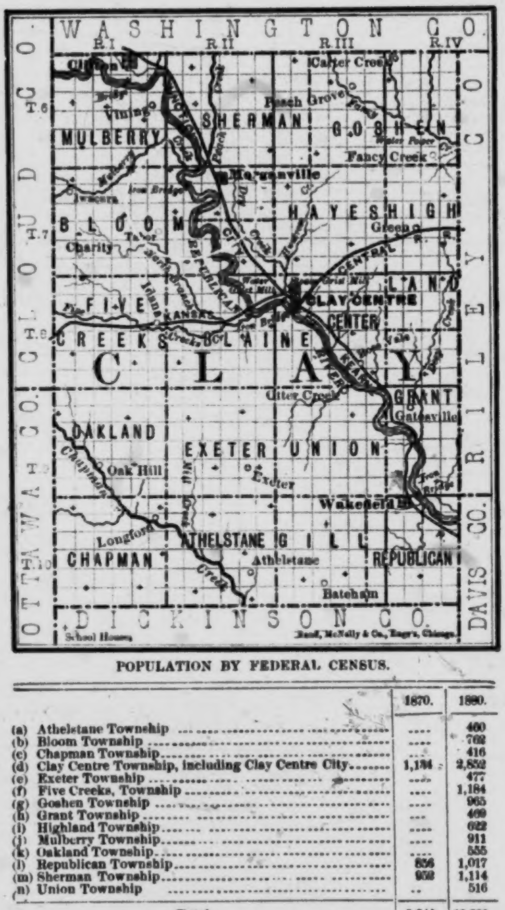
SOLOMON SECREST, farmer and merchant, Randolph, was born in Canton Zurich, Switzerland, December 30, 1834. In 1846 his parents removed to Jackson County, Ind., where he lived until September, 1856, when he moved to Kansas, settling on a claim a few miles up Fancy Creek, where he still resides. Mr. Secrest is owner of one of the best farms in Kansas. In 1864 he built a large stone dwelling-house, the first one built on the creek, hauling the lumber, shingles, etc., from the Missouri River. In 1864 he served in the Kansas State Militia in a campaign against the Indians of Western Kansas. From 1869 to 1878 he was one of the Justices of the Peace for Jackson Township. In 1879 he opened a general store in Randolph, where he is ably assisted by his son, John. Mr. Secrest still makes farming and stock-raising his chief business. In March, 1861, he was married to Miss Melvina Dealy, of Marshall County. They have six children living—Cara, John, Edwin, William, Emma and Viola. Mr. Secrest is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the neat little church adjoining his farm was built largely by his aid and influence. In politics he is a Republican, sharing in the struggle then existing to make Kansas a Free-State, and he now has the satisfaction of seeing the young commonwealth grow both thrifty and populous.

WILLIAM H. SIKES, merchant, Leonardville, was born in Du Page County, Ill., August 1, 1858. His father was a minister of the Congregational Church, and consequently often moved from place to place. The youth of Mr. Sikes was spent in Michigan until 1870, when his parents removed to Kansas. He was educated at the Kansas Agricultural College, graduating in the class of 1879. After graduation, he taught in the public schools of Wamego one year, and then, in partnership with Mr. Landon, opened a store of general merchandise at the town of Garrison. In 1881 Mr. Sikes bought the interest of his partner, and soon after removed the stock to the new town of Leonard, Riley County, where we still find him in business. He resigned the postmastership at Garrison on removing to Leonard. He is also, in addition to his other business, engaged in the live-stock trade, buying, shipping and selling in the Eastern market. He does a good business, and is a rising man.

CLAY COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

CLAY County is situated in the second tier of counties south of the State of Nebraska, about one hundred miles west of the Missouri River, and lies on the east side of the sixth principal meridian. It is bounded on the north by Washington, on the east by Riley and Davis counties, on the south by Dickinson, and on the west by Ottawa and Cloud counties, between which extends the sixth principal meridian. It lies wholly within the valley of the Republican River, which enters at the northwest corner, and flows southeast through the center of the county, one-half of which consists of first and second bottom lands. It is, therefore, destined to be one of the richest agricultural counties in the State.



The valley land, which is about sixty per cent. of the county, is exceedingly rich. The soil a rich, black loam and bottom deposit is from four to ten feet in depth. The drainage of most of this land is good, the soil being porous, with a gradual slope towards the river whose bed is sufficiently deep to prevent extensive overflows. The soil is not so well adapted to the growth of wheat as that of the Smoky Hill and Solomon valleys, but produces a good quality with a fair yield, but is admirably adapted to all other grains. The hills skirting the valley are generally low and rounded, in a few places broken. The upland prairie is beautifully undulating, and only in a few places too broken, to be easily tilled. The soil of the uplands is not so fertile as that of the valley, principally because it is not so deep, averaging a depth of perhaps two and a half feet. Yet it is rich, exceedingly friable, well adapted to general farming, and excellent for grazing; producing the native grasses in great abundance.

The county is well watered, every part having streams of running water. The central portion, from the northwest to the southeast corner is watered by the devious windings of the great Republican River, a difficult and treacherous stream to dam, but furnishing, when properly dammed, immense water power throughout the year. The river is broad and shallow, but there are but few places where it can be forded, on account of the quicksand bottom, which is constantly shifting and changing the water channel. Tributary to the Republican, from the north, are Peach, Huntress, Deep and Mall creeks, and from the west Five Creeks Creek, the last being the largest. The northeast corner of the county is watered by Fancy Creek, and the southwest part by Chapman, the largest creek in the county and a tributary of the Smoky Hill River.

The principal building material, besides an excellent quality of brick clay, is limestone, which abounds in vast quantities, and in all qualities, in every part of the county.

EARLY HISTORY.

In April, 1856, Moses, William and Jerome Younkens and John P. King, settled near the mouth of Timber Creek. They were the first white men to permanently locate within the present limits of Clay County, and it is pleasing to add that all except Moses have continued to make this locality their home. Shortly after them came J. B. Quimby and William E Payne, and took up claims on the west side of the river, south of Wakefield. Lorenzo Gates and John Gill settled near Deep Creek in the fall of 1857. At the same time William Mall took the claim where his brother Jacob now lives, but remained only two years, returning to the East. In 1857 Peter Dobbins took a claim at the mouth of Pete's Creek, which event gave a name to the creek that before had only a "local habitation." He soon went to Texas, but returning found that he had forfeited his right, and that the claim was in possession of William Silvers, who still occupies the farm. During the two succeeding years a large number of settlers came into this neighborhood.

The drouth of 1860 quite completely stopped emigration until after the war, when after five or six bountiful harvests the settlers came in plentifully, and the county commenced a new era of progress, which with the exception of 1875 has been rapid and substantial.

Most of the settlers after the war were soldiers who came to take advantage of their soldier's claims.

As stated, the first settlers of Clay were Moses, William and Jeremiah Younkens and John P. King, who came together from Pennsylvania, and settled in the county in April, 1856. Mrs. Moses Younkens was the first white woman and Mrs. J. B. Quimby the next.

The first marriage occurred the 18th of December, 1859, and the contracting parties were Lorenzo Gates, the first Postmaster on Mall Creek, and Miss Lucinda Gill. Mrs. Gates still lives on the old place. George H. Purington and Miss Helen A. M. Morse were married May 6, 1860. In the winter of 1868–9, John Cain and Miss Alice Arnold were married by J. B. McLaughlin, Justice of the Peace, who stood on the opposite bank of the Republican from the contracting parties.

The first birth was that of Edward L., son of Moses and Mrs. Younkens, occurring December 2, 1858. Joseph Simpson was born January 5, 1859.

September 21, 1860, John A., son of A. Van Nosten died, being the first death among the settlers. It is stated that one or two of the Government Surveyors died while at work in the county. A Mr. Simons settled, in 1861, on the claim afterwards taken by Orville Huntress. Several of his family, consisting of seven persons besides himself, died, and he returned East.

The first schoolhouse was built of logs in 1864. It was on Government land, and when nearly completed, Samuel Allen went to Junction City and filed on the land. A log cabin was then bought of F. Kuhnle, in which Mrs. Lack taught the first school in 1865. The first sermon was preached in the county was delivered in 1863, by Rev. R. P. West of the Methodist denomination. The Baptists were the first to organize. Dr. J. W. Shepperd came in 1862, and was the first physician in the county.

The first mail route on the east side of the river was established in 1862, between Manhattan and Clifton; on the west side in 1868, between Junction City and Concordia, Cloud County. The first daily mails were established when the first railroad passed through the county—1873.

The first paper in the county was the Clay County Independent, whose first issue bears the date of August 20, 1871, E. P. Huston and David Downer were the editors.

In 1861, Orville Huntress brought a stock of goods and opened the first store. He also opened about the same time the first hotel where the military road crosses Huntress Creek. H. N. Dawson, in 1865, started the first saw-mill in the county. It was on Timber Creek, and run with horse power.

In 1865, Dexter Brothers started the first steam saw and flouring mill, and in 1876, on the 4th of July, started the first water wheel. Jim Gilbert opened, at Wakefield, in 1859, the first blacksmith-shop.

October 26, 1869, the first term of the District Court was opened at Clay Centre, with James Humphrey as Judge; Philip Rothman as Sheriff, and Orville Huntress as Clerk. The first civil case was that of Joseph N. Hagaman vs. Clay County Commissioners. The case was dismissed. The first criminal case was the indictment of William Harman for the murder of Joseph N. Hagaman. It was continued from time to time and never came to trial. It was generally believed that the deed was committed in self-defense.

The last Indian scare occurred in 1869. The last buffalo in the county was killed by Aaron Dexter in the spring of 1865. Ten years before, this was the favorite pasture country of the buffalo.

WAR HISTORY AND INDIAN TROUBLES.

Though an unorganized county, and with but few inhabitants, none of whom could have been compelled to enter the service, Clay County has a war history of which she is justly proud. At the commencement of the war there were only forty-three voters in the county, and forty-seven men enlisted in the Union army, a large number of whom returned to their new State after the war was over. In 1860, there were eleven families in the Quimby neighborhood, but in 1863, J. B. Quimby and Ed. Kerby were the only men there, and John Butler, Lorenzo Gates and Jacob Mall were the only men on Mall Creek.

The first settlers found the county in possession of the Kaw Indians, who were comparatively peaceful and harmless people. The Indians never committed depredations as in Ottawa, Cloud, Republic and Jewell counties, but the settlers were a number of times so scared by reports from those counties that they fled, still farther from danger.

The war between the Pawnee and Delaware tribes, in the Smoky Hill valley, in 1857, scared the settlers, who fled to Riley County, but returned as soon as assured the war would not extend into their territory.

In August, 1864, the great Indian raid on the Little Blue, in Nebraska, which was one of the most thoroughly planned, skillfully executed and disastrous raids in the history of the western States, frightened the settlers of Ottawa, Cloud and Clay counties from their homes. Two hundred persons collected at Mr. Huntress' cabin, near the present site of Clay Center, and remained in camp for a month. Many returned to their claims, but some sought new homes, removed from such disturbances. The raid was confined to the Little Blue or old California trail, from Gage County, Neb., to Denver, Col. The militia was called out and sent toward Fort Harker, but found no Indians. Went to White Rock with same result. The valley of the White Rock suffered more by Indian incursions than any portion of northern Kansas; it being their favorite hunting ground.

In 1868, the settlers again collected at Clay Center, owing to Indian depredations in Cloud, Republic and Jewell counties. The militia was again called out, the Indians captured and returned to their reservation. W. H. Fletcher, the County Clerk, was away with the militia, and Mrs. Huntress fearing that they might be suddenly driven away, placed the county records in a valise and hid it in a hollow tree. The records were most thoroughly soaked by a thunder storm the first night. John W. Haynes was the only citizen of Clay County killed by the Indians, and he was not killed in the county. With five others, he was hunting in Jewell, Mitchell and Cloud counties, when the party was attacked by savages. They retreated, fighting their way toward the settlements, but were all killed on Little Cheyenne, in Cloud County, May 20, 1866. An extended account of their fruitless struggle for life can be found in Cloud County history.

In 1869-70-71, large numbers of English colonists settled in the southern part of the county, and by their intelligence and industry have done much to beautify that portion of the county and have established for themselves permanent and prosperous homes in a free country.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND OFFICIAL ROSTER.

The Legislature, in 1860, laid out Clay County and named it in honor of Kentucky's illustrious statesman, Henry Clay. It was at first attached to Riley County for judicial purposes, and afterwards to Davis County. In 1866 there was some dissatisfaction felt in regard to the tax imposed by the latter county and a meeting was held at Clay Centre July 28, 1866, to consider the question of organizing the county. Orville Huntress was chairman and George D. Seabury clerk of the meeting. It was decided to take steps towards organization, and Lorenzo Gates, William Silvers, J. G. Haynes and Joseph P. Ryan were appointed a committee on petition and affidavit to Governor Crawford. The Governor signed the papers the 10th of August, appointed Lorenzo Gates, William Silvers and J. P. Ryan County Commissioners, George D. Seabury County Clerk, and designated Clay Centre as the county-seat. At the first election, November 6, 1866, the county seat was permanently located at Clay Centre. Republic City, an imaginary town, two miles west of Clay Centre, was an aspirant for the honor. When attached to other counties there were two offices, that of Justice and Constable, filled by resident citizens. The Justices from 1863 to 1866, were D. H. Myers, J. W. Shepperd, D. H. Myers and Orville Huntress. Constables: A. Van Nosten, Philip Rothman, each serving two terms.

The following is the official roster of the county:

State Representatives.—Lorenzo Gates, 1867; M. H. Ristine, 1868-9; L. Gates, 1870; J. B. McLaughlin, 1871; C. M. Kellog, 1872; S. L. Stratton, 1873; S. D. Beegle, 1874-5; C. M. Kellog, 1876; W. H. Fretcher, 1877; George Taylor, 1879-82. W. W. Walton of Clay Centre, was Clerk of the House for last two terms.

The court house and jail are inferior buildings. The former is rented, and the latter is the original court house, built of stone by Dexter brothers, in 1868. In the center of Clay Centre is the Court House Square, beautifully ornamented with shade trees. When the county becomes able, it is the design to erect one of the finest court houses in Northern Kansas. The county farm is well supplied with farm buildings and good dwellings.

SCHOOLS AND RAILROADS.

From the first the people of Clay have manifested a deep and active interest in education. This has enabled the county to become in so short a time one of the foremost, for its age, in the ranks of school privileges. The first schoolhouse was built in 1864 and Mrs. Lack taught the first school with about fifteen pupils. There are now eighty-four schoolhouses and 145 teachers are required to teach the schools. The first district was organized in 1865. There are now ninety-five districts, or one to every 140 inhabitants. The first schoolhouse cost about $50; the last, that of Clay Centre, cost $25,000. From a school population of about 25 when the first school was taught it has increased in sixteen years to about 5,000. The increase in school property in the same time from $50 to nearly $90,000, shows more conclusively than any other comparison, the prevailing interest in the cause of education.

The school system of the county is a good one, and the schools generally are in a flourishing condition. The standard of qualification of teachers is gradually advancing and is now quite equal to that of counties in the older States. Township and county normals and institutes are held at intervals during the year. The progress here in education has been remarkable and if the active interest in the cause is maintained, Clay County will ere long become a model not only for the West but for the East.

Until 1862, Manhattan and Junction City were the nearest post-offices. During this year the first mail route in Clay County was established. This route was from Manhattan to Clifton, passing along the river valleys, with the offices in the county. The first was on Mall Creek, and the first postmaster was Lorenzo Gates; the second at Clay Centre, with Orville Huntress as postmaster; and the third office at Clifton, was kept by James Fox. The first trip on this route was made by James E. Parkerson on the 1st day of July, 1862. It was at first a weekly mail (and often weakly in amount of matter) but was afterwards a tri-weekly. Junction City later became the southern terminus of the route.

The Junction City & Fort Kearney Railroad reached Clay Centre the 12th of March, 1873, which was its northern terminus until 1878, when it was extended to Clifton, where it connected with the Central Branch of the Union Pacific. These roads are now under the same management. This road has been the principal agent in developing so rapidly the interior of Clay County and making Clay Centre one of the best business points west of Topeka. The road commences at Junction City and runs parallel with the Republican River to Clifton, wholly within the valley.

The Kansas Central, a narrow gauge railroad, running west from Leavenworth, has reached a point twenty miles west of Clay Centre.

There are four ferries across the Republican: Rock Ford, Air Line Ferry, Morgantown and Wakefield, and four excellent bridges: Clifton, Morganville, Clay Centre and Wakefield.

CLAY CENTRE.

Clay Centre, one of the most attractive towns in northern central Kansas, is situated as its name implies at about the center of Clay County, on the east bank of the Republican River. It has a charming location, occupying the second bottom of the valley, and extending into the elevated prairie land to the northeast. From any part of the city a picturesque view can be had, but from the elevated portion, in the vicinity of the public school building the view is more extensive, becoming beautiful and even imposing. The broad valley extending far to the southeast and to the northwest, with its low, rounded, bordering hills, with others beautifully rolling rising behind them, and the serpentine course of the broad river, traced by its trimming of forest trees and the silver sheen appearing here and there, produce a charming picture. The city itself is attractive. Its citizens have been awake to their interests, comforts and aesthetic wants. They early commenced the planting of trees, which are now both useful and ornamental. The great majority of Western towns have sadly neglected this. The residence portion of the town is remarkable for the neatness of its dwellings, and the air of comfort and convenience that surrounds them. The cottages and elegant residences have that genial air of home about them which reminds one of much older towns. The business portion of the place is rapidly improving, the small frame building of the village giving place to the large, substantial stone or brick block of the city. This indicates the general prosperity of her business men, which has earned for Clay Centre the name of being one of the best and most promising commercial points in the great Republican valley.

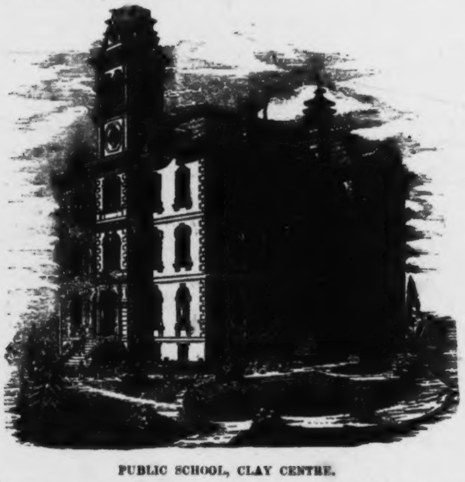
The first settlement on the town site was made by the Dexter brothers, John and Alonzo F., in May, 1862, and the second by Orville Huntress. The town was laid out by the Clay Centre Town Company, which consisted principally of the Dexter family. John and Alonzo F. Dexter, who are considered the fathers of the town, secured A. C. Pierce, of Junction City, to survey the new town. R. Franken made a second survey and plat of the town, which was filed in the Recorder's office, and has remained unchanged—the official map of Clay Centre.

In June, 1862, Dexter brothers obtained the services of two men from Fancy Creek and erected two log houses. This was done that they might hold their claims on the town site. John returned to Illinois, and his brother, A. F., to California. The latter did not come back until August, 1864. John returned to Clay Centre in the spring of 1863. In 1864, he bought a house on Pete's Creek, and removed to a location just south of the Dispatch livery stable. But the second house on the town site was erected by William S. Hutchinson. About the middle of August, 1864, two hundred settlers from Clay and the counties west collected around Mr. Huntress' cabin, owing to the great Indian raid on the Little Blue and Platte rivers, in Nebraska. They remained here in camp for over a month.

In 1862, the post-office was established at Mr. Huntress' cabin, where it remained until 1869, when it was removed to the town site, and Charles Huntress appointed postmaster.



PUBLIC SCHOOL, CLAY CENTRE.

The town grew very slowly at first, scarcely averaging one house a year, until 1866, when it became the county-seat. Its growth was very slow from this time until 1870. In 1873, when the Junction City & Fort Kearney Railroad reached Clay Centre, it seemed to take a new start, a revival of business commenced which has not since abated, but steadily increased. Its population has increased, since then, from about 200 to 3,400. The arrival of the Kansas Central in 1880 added but little to its growth.

The first birth on the town site was Allie, daughter of Aaron Dexter. This interesting event occurred the 13th of May, 1865. It was during this year that the first schoolhouse was built.

Clay Centre was incorporated, as a city of the third class, the 11th of June, 1875, at which time the inhabitants numbered 350. The first election took place June 26, and the first council meeting was held July 1, 1875.

In April, 1880, the population having reached 2,250, a petition was presented to the Governor, for a change in the city government, and in July Gov. J. P. St. John issued a proclamation declaring Clay Centre a city of the second class.

The first council was composed of W. L. Johnson, G. Kuhule, M. R. Mudge, A. F. Dexter and J. S. Bowen. Present council: C. E Gifford, S. S. McIntire, P. P. Kehoe, I. A. Flood, O. F. Lutt and W. S. Beatty.

Mayors.—1875–6, A. Wilson; 1877, M. H. Ristine, resigned, and was succeeded by J. H. Pinkerton, who served until 1880; 1881, C. R. Barnes; 1882, C. R. Barnes.

Clerks.—1875–6, E. P. Huston; 1877, C. C. Coleman; 1878–9–80, Newton Allen; 1881. B. F. Flenniken; 1882, H. E. Lacey.

Police Judges.– 1875–6–7, J. W. Miller; 1877–8–9, William P. Ensey; 1880–1–2, J. W. Miller.

Treasurers.—1875–6, M. R. Mudge; 1877, J. Higinbotham, Sr., resigned, and J. W. Miller appointed; 1878, J. W. Miller; 1879–80–1–2, George Wigg.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The first schoolhouse in Clay Centre was built in 1865 and the first school was taught that year by Mrs. Lack. The building cost about $50, and there were about fifteen pupils at the first school. The number of pupils has increased quite as rapidly as the population, until there are now about 700 in the city. A new building, the finest in Central Kansas, has just been completed, at a cost of $35,000, equal to 500 similar to the first. This building, situated on the most elevated block in the town, is built of brick with stone trimmings and has an attractive and commanding appearance. The schools are graded and are noted for the thoroughness of work undertaken and the excellent discipline maintained.

There are six organized religious denominations in Clay Centre—White and colored Methodist Episcopal, white and colored Baptist, Presbyterian and Catholic. All have church buildings except the colored, which, however, are now making preparations to build. The churches are all in a flourishing condition. The Methodist congregation is becoming too large for their church and they are preparing to build a $10,000 edifice. The organization of the churches may be found in the county history. The religious elements have been as assiduous in their worship and labor to bring the erring into a better life as the people in general have been in building up the public schools.

The Baptists were the first to effect an organization in Clay County. This took place at Mr. Huntress' cabin, some time before the Union Church at Clifton. The Clay Centre Baptist Church was organized with twelve members in August, 1868. The church has been very prosperous The membership is large and the society owns a neat and commodious building, dedicated in 1874.

The Clay Centre Methodist Episcopal Circuit was established in 1865, under the supervision of Rev. W. Marlatt, of Manhattan The Methodist Episcopal Church of Clay Center was organized in 1866. It has become the strongest church in the county. Its members are preparing to erect a $10,000 house of worship.

The Clay Centre Presbyterian Church was organized at the schoolhouse the 1st of April, 1871, by Rev. J. D. Perring. Their church building, which was nearly completed, was damaged by the cyclone of July 2, 1872.

The Swedenborg Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized by Rev. O. Chiben, September 4, 1871. Rev. Chiben was the first pastor. Its membership includes over forty heads of families. A church was built in 1876.

The Clay Centre Catholic Church was established under the direction of Father Pichler in April 1877. There are forty families in the parish.

The Second Methodist Episcopal Church of Clay Centre, colored, was organized in April 1882, with twelve members. The pastor is Rev. Robert Rector.

The Second Baptist Church of Clay Centre, colored, was organized in the winter of 1881–82, with seventeen members. Rev. Rogers is pastor.

The Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons, which is the oldest organization, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias are the hand-maids of civilization, carrying wherever civilization leads their fraternizing influence of incalculable value. As the Christian carries his religion, so the traveler and pioneer carries the harmonizing principles and influence of his order in his wanderings and to his distant frontier home. Here the pioneers early plant the seeds of their order which grow and spread to the good and advancement of the new country.

The Dispatch Band.—Was organized July, 1880, and named after the leading newspaper of the city. In September of that year it succeeded in winning the second prize at the Bismark fair, where competition was open to all bands of the State. The same season at Waterville, Marshall County, they won the first money over some of the best bands in Northern Kansas, and steady practice and the acquisition of several new members enabled them to take away first honors in the Knights of Pythias contest held at Leavenworth in May, 1882, the noted Beloit Knights' Band being there and competing. At the Kansas Band Union meeting held during the session of the Kansas State Fair, at Topeka, it was universally acknowledged to be one of the leading bands in the State. Among its honorary members can be numbered Miss Emma Abbott, who is one of its most enthusiastic admirers and supporters. Sixteen active members besides a great many who could be styled "severely passive" compose the organization. Its officers since the first election have been John Johnston, president, and H. G. Higinbotham, secretary and treasurer. To George Hapgood, leader and conductor, is much of its present excellence due.

THE PRESS AND OTHER BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The Dispatch.—It was first published as the Clay County Independent, the first issue of which appeared August 20, 1871, with E. P. Huston and David Downer as editors and proprietors. The press was bought of the Junction City Union and brought to Clay Centre by Philip Rothman and M. H. Ristine. Mr. Huston soon withdrew and the paper was published by a joint-stock company, with Mr. Downer as head, until January 11, 1873, when the office and paper were sold under foreclosure of mortgage. J. W. Miller bought it and changed the name to The Dispatch, the first number of which appeared March 12, 1873. In April, O. M, Pugh became editor, and on the 1st of June assumed all responsibilities. In December, 1873, his brother became partner. In 1875 the paper was sold to J. B. Besack, who in turn sold it to J. P. Campbell in October 1876, who added a power-press to the office. It passed into the hands of Wirt W. Walton & Co. January 8, 1880, and is now the property of Walton & Valentine, Mr. Valentine having purchased a half interest in January, 1881. It was the successful competitor for honors at the State Fair in 1881. It has always been Republican in politics, except under the management of O. M. Pugh, when it was Independent.

The Times.—This paper was first printed at Clifton as the Localist, by F Cunningham. The first issue bears the date of April 17, 1878. It was removed to Clay Centre in January, 1879, and the name changed to Clay County Times. September 23, 1881, Miller, Linsley & Co. purchased the paper and changed the name to The Times, and its politics from Independent to Republican. In March, 1882, the firm name was changed to Miller & Co. J. W. Miller is the editor and is making the Times an excellent paper. It is printed on a Prouty power-press.

The Democrat.—This paper was started by O. M. Pugh the 30th of May, 1879. Its politics was indicated by its name. It has since suspended.

Republican Valley Banner.—A monthly real estate journal, issued by Ruthruff & Pinkerton, was established in March, 1878.

The Little Hatchet—A monthly and semi-occasional publication, edited by J. W. Miller, was established September 28, 1878. It is a humorous sheet and radically Republican.

There are a number of very fair hotels in Clay Centre, but the only one requiring special mention is the Dispatch, owned by Walton & Valentine, editors and proprietors of The Dispatch, and managed by H. G. Allen. It is a large, three story brick building, with stone basement, situated on the northeast corner of Court House Square. It is one of the largest and most convenient hotels in northern Kansas, with forty large, neatly furnished rooms, and is quite popular under the present management. The building and furniture cost $30,000; the hotel being opened in February, 1882.

Clay Centre has three reliable banking houses. The Republican Valley bank, of Meyers & Campbell, incorporated June 1, 1882. It has $30,000 paid up capital, and an authorized capital of $50,000. The Farmers and Merchants Bank was incorporated in January, 1876, and has a subscribed capital of $50,000. H H. Taylor, president; John N. Moss, cashier. The Clay County Bank, the first institution of the kind in the county, was established by John Higinbotham. It occupies a fine building, valued, with its furniture, at $6,000.

In 1866, the Dexter Brothers erected a steam saw and grist-mill. For six or seven years they supplied all this region with lumber. In 1873 they turned their energies toward the creation of a water-power, and the establishment, principally, of a flour-mill. The power, which is valuable, has been created at an expenditure of $60,000, the first wheel being started July 4, 1876. The dam across the Republican is over a mile above town, the water being turned into the deep, narrow channel of Huntress Creek, across which is another dam. At different times, portions of the river dam have been carried away, and the whole structure has sunk thirty feet in the sand. This has necessitated large expenditures of money. Until December, 1881, the mill was operated by Dexter Brothers, but it then passed, with the power, into the hands of A. F. Dexter. The property is valued at $10,000, the mills having four run of burrs, and a capacity of 200 bushel of flour and 1,000 of corn per day.

The two steam-mills are the Quaker City, owned and operated by C. R. Barnes, and built about seven years ago, four run of stone; and the Kansas Pacific elevater and mill, four run of stone, erected by O. F. Lutt, in the summer of 1882, and now operated by him.

Clay Centre has made a rapid, but a permanent growth. It is surrounded by a rich country; has an abundance of water-power, and has a class of intelligent and energetic citizens. These advantages will certainly make of Clay Centre a large and flourishing city.

J. W. MILLER, Justice of the Peace, was born in New London, Conn., May 16, 1831. His parents were William and Eliza Miller. Mr. Miller, Senior, was a ship builder, and J. W. was brought up to the same business, showing a genius for the business early in life. At the age of seventeen, he built a miniature schooner, about eight feet long and two feet beam, with fourteen inches depth of hold, making her complete in spars, rigging, sails, anchors, etc. He named her after a wealthy ship-owner and friend, Thomas Fitch, who presented her with a full set of colors. At the age of nineteen, Mr. Miller took charge of his father's works, and made the drafts and models for all the vessels built by him. About this time he was married to Miss Almira Josephine Burrows, of Groton, New London Co., Conn. In 1861 he became superintendent of the works of Mr. Williams at Hunters Point, Long Island. While there he engaged to go to China to build some river steamers for parties in the celestial empire, Messrs. Thomas Hunt & Co. Sailed in the ship N. B. Palmer, and arrived at Hong Kong in February, 1862. He built one steamer at Wampoa, and then, under a new contract, went to Shanghai and there built three river steamers. The climate proving deleterious to his constitution, his health failing, he returned to America, arriving in New York June 6, 1864. Returning to Groton, Conn., he went into the business of building on his own account and built several very fast vessels, among them the yacht Calypso, 120 tons burthen, and the schooner Thomas Fitch, 140 tons. Then in partnership with Col. Morgan and Capt. Baker he built marine railway, which proved an unsuccessful venture. Mr. Miller then resolved on going to Kansas, and in pursuance thereof he arrived in Clay Centre March 29, 1870. In the same year, jointly with N. H. Starr, they built a shop of cottonwood lumber, Mr. Miller occupying one half as a wagon shop. Since his arrival in Clay County he has been actively engaged in business, a part of his business life appearing in the history of the Times, newspaper, is omitted here. In 1871 he was appointed Justice of the Peace, and elected the same year for the full term. He has been re-elected every second year since, and is now in office. In the same year, 1871, he was appointed postmaster at Clay Centre, which position he held until May 4, 1878, when he resigned the same. Was also City Treasurer. On the organization of the city, he was elected Police Judge, and continuously re-elected term after term until 1883, when he declined a further service in that office. He owns much valuable city property, is in easy circumstances, and is a generous public-spirited man. He is a member of the Masonic order, K. of P., K. of H., and I. O. O. F., having attained to all the encampment degrees in the last named order, and to the thirty-second degree in Masonry. Since he sold the Times, he publishes occasionally the Little Hatchet, a newspaper of the politico-humorous character. CLIFTON.

This town, a portion of which is in Washington County, was laid out by a company from Manhattan and St. George in 1859. Its name is that of the surveyor who platted the town. The company built a log hut when they abandoned their design of building a city at this point. All that is left of their labor is the name, which was perpetuated by the post-office kept by J. P. Fox. The present town site was laid out as East Clifton, in 1870, by Rufus Berry. It is a pleasantly situated town, occupying the high ground north of the big bend in the Republican, where it turns south in Clay County. It is on the Central Branch railroad and the Junction City and Fort Kearney road. The former road reached Clifton, December 15, 1877; and the latter on June 13, 1878. These roads have been the means of trebling the size of the town in four years. The first store was opened in 1870, by Wm. Funnel. It is now a town of about 500 population.

West Clifton was laid out in the fall of 1877, by Amanda and Winslow Haynes and Olive Cooper. Building commenced the following spring. The two places are only about half a mile apart, and will eventually become one city. As usual, the ubiquitous circuit preacher was the first to arrive in the sparsely settled country, coming as soon as there were two or three to gather in some rude hut, or in "God's first temple," the grove, to listen to his ministrations. In the fall of 1863, the Rev. R. P. West, of Republic County, of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, commenced holding religious services from Chester's to Younken's. Mr. West early immigrated to the frontier of Kansas, and commenced his labor of love. He was somewhat eccentric, but wherever known, was respected and loved for his benevolent and Christian disposition, and his desire to do good, and relieve suffering in body or mind. His was an animated and cheerful nature, always ready to enjoy a laugh, and equally as ready to shed a tear of sympathy. He generally enlivened his discourses with some amusing anecdote, which according to his experience was the best means of preparing the minds of his hearers to entertain the truths of the religion he was trying to promulgate. In 1864, he organized a Union Church at Clifton, where all religious creeds were united. This church has since become the Methodist Episcopal Church of Clifton. Clifton, Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in January, 1878, by Rev. J. H. Colt. In the same year the society built a $400 parsonage, and completed a $2,000 church edifice. An extended notice of Clifton will be found in the history of Washington County.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

JOHN W. CHADWICK, attorney-at-law, was born in Greenup County, Ky., August 8, 1854. He was educated at Holbrooks Normal School, Lebanon, Ohio. Studied law in his native county, and was admitted at the September term of the Circuit Court for Greenup County, in 1877. In May, 1878, he came to Kansas, locating in Clifton, Clay County, where he has since practiced his profession. He is a member of the Masonic order, and of the A. O. U. W. He was married at Clifton, Kan., February 24, 1881, to Miss Sara C. Graham. They have one child—John W. Jr., born December 19, 1881.

MORGANVILLE.

Morganville, formerly known as Morgan City, situated on the Junction City & Fort Kearney Railroad and the Republican River, eight miles northwest of Clay Centre, was laid out in 1870, by Ebenezer Morgan. W. R. Mudge opened the first store in 1871.

The Morganville Baptist Church was organized by Rev. George Balcam in 1872.

The Morganville Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1872. It has a good building and an active membership.

REPUBLICAN CITY.

Republican City, now the ruins of a fond ambition, was laid out in 1867, by Stickney and Streeter. Milton Clark started the first store. It was Clay Centre's rival for the county-seat. It was in the exact center of the county from which Clay Centre is two miles removed. It, therefore, was more entitled to the honor, but the location was not so favorable it was claimed, at any rate, it failed to receive a requisite number of votes, and the fond hopes of its founders failed to "materialize."

The Republican City Reformed Presbyterian Church was organized July 20, 1871, with twenty-five members, which have increased to seventy.

COUNTY CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The Hebron Church of Reformed Presbyterians was organized November 9, 1871, by Revs. J. S. T. Milligan and S. M. Stevenson.

The Hebron United Presbyterian Church, October 31, 1874, by Rev. B. F. Baldrige. Hebron has been changed to Chapmanville. A church building was erected in 1880.

Fancy Creek Baptist Church was organized by Rev. H. S. Cloud, March 12, 1873. Dedicated a neat church the 11th of May, 1880.

The Uniondale Church organized as a Union Church, May 6, 1873, with six members. April 14, 1877, re-organized as a Free-Will Baptist Church, and, July 2, 1877, adopted articles of faith of the Regular Baptist Church, to which forty-three members subscribed. In May, 1877, they dedicated a substantial and commodious church edifice.

The Mulberry Creek German Presbyterian Church was organized at the schoolhouse in District No. 40, July 14, 1875, by Revs. Hays and F. Schmidt, the latter becoming the first pastor.

The Swede Methodist Episcopal Church, of Township 7, Range 3, Section 6, was organized in the winter of 1871–2, by Rev. M. Stevenson. Built parsonage in 1877, and a commodious church in 1880.

New Salem Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in January, 1875.

Republic City Lodge, No. 24, I. O. G. T.; organized March 28, 1873. First officers: J. W. Reeder, W. C. T.; Lillie Perkins, W. V. T.; William Avery, W. S.; Byron Gallup, W. F. S.; Alice Hasty, W. T.; I Tompkins.

Mount Pleasant Lodge, No. 127, I. O. G. T.; organized February 14, 1876, at Mall schoolhouse. Officers: P. T. Loofbourrow, W. C. T.; Mary Jones, W. V. T.; Martin Jones, P. W. C. T.; John Gentry, W. S.; Dorothy Gentry, W. A. S.; P. T. Loofbourrow, W. F. S.

Exeter Lodge, No. 245, I. O. G. T.; organized in March, 1880. The following were the first officers: Thadius Knox, W. C. T.; Mrs. S. M. Tompkins, W. V. T.; Miss Nora S. Tubbs, W. S.; Eugene Tompkins, W. F. S.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JOHN H. MERTEN, farmer, P. O. Morganville, was born in Quincy, Ill., October 5, 1857. He was educated in a normal school in Galena, Ill., graduating with the class of 1878. The same year he went to Delaware County, Iowa, and taught one year. In April, 1879, he came to Kansas, bought a farm of 240 acres, and since has taught during the winters, and superintended his farm in summer. He has a splendid farm and is an excellent farmer. He was married October 24, 1880, in Greene County, Mo., to Miss Hattie Klipsch. They have one child—John Herman, born June 4, 1882.

WILLIAM SILVER, farmer and grain merchant, was born in Greene County, Ohio, March 14, 1832. When he was three years of age his parents moved to Allen County, Ind., where he spent his boyhood at work on a farm. At the age of nineteen he began the trade of a blacksmith at Three Rivers, Mich. He worked five years at his trade, and in the spring of 1857, came to Kansas; worked during the summer at his trade in Manhattan in Riley County, coming to Clay County in March, 1858. In April of the same year he pre-empted a quarter section of land in Section 32, Township 6, Range 2 east. He continued on his claim until August, 1862, when he enlisted in Company G of the Eleventh Kansas Cavalry. He served two years and eight months, taking part in the battles of the regiment. After his term of service expired, he returned to his farm. At the organization of the county, he was appointed one of the commissioners, and was twice elected to the office, serving over four years. He was the first postmaster at Wyoming Valley. Afterwards the name was changed to Lima, and then to Morganville. He continued to reside on his farm until November, 1879, when he moved to the town, and has since resided in Morganville. He still has a good farm of 400 acres, but is now engaged in the grain and live-stock trade. He was married April 18, 1863, in Riley County, Kan., to Miss Lucinda C. Edelblute. They have four children—Mary Ellen, Frederick C., Lonsdale Valle and Edna.

WAKEFIELD.

Wakefield was laid out August 26, 1869, by the Kansas Land and Emigration Company, composed of Richard Wake, in honor of whom the place was named, J. Wormald, A. Maitland, Col. Loomis, C. Wake, R. H. Drew and J. D. Bennett. The first house was built by J. S. Dodson. A. Maitland was the first postmaster, and B. Budden opened the first store. The town has a good situation on the banks of the Republican, about fifteen miles southeast of Clay Centre. The Junction City & Fort Kearney Railroad passes through the town and has greatly increased the growth and business of the town since its completion in 1873.

The Wakefield Methodist Episcopal Church was organized May 8, 1870, by Rev. Richard Wake, in honor of whom the town was afterwards named. The church has a commodious church building, dedicated January 18, 1880, and is in a flourishing condition.

The only Congregational Church in the county was organized as a Union Church in the winter of 1868–9, at Madura schoolhouse, just below Wakefield, by Rev. William Todd.

St. John's Episcopal Church, three miles west of Wakefield, held its first vestry meeting at Dr. Hewitt's, October 14, 1872. A stone church was built in 1873, and blown down in 1874. The present church and parsonage were erected in 1875–6.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

SAMUEL E. RICHARDS, merchant, was born in Shropshire, England, April 14, 1851. He came to America in 1870, and settled in Clay County, working as a farm hand for five years, then clerked four years. In 1879 he began in business for himself at Wakefield He carries a large stock of general merchandise, and is doing a good business and is a rising man. He now carries an average stock of $5,000; but when he first saw Wakefield he had $1 in cash. Pluck and industry has won for him, however, an honorable place among the merchants of Clay County.

INDUSTRY.

In the fall of 1879, A. L. Beard, an Eastern speculator laid out the town of Industry. It is situated in Athelstone Township, in the extreme southern portion of the county, sixteen miles from the railroad. Industry contains a few business houses and a small hotel, but from its position it can never attain to the dignity of more than a brisk trading hamlet.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—MISCELLANEOUS.

REV. H. R. HARDER, farmer, P. O. Clay Centre, Goshen Township, was born in Wayne County, N. Y., November 7, 1847. In 1857 his parents removed to Livingston County, Ill., where he lived until January 4, 1864, when he enlisted in Company A of the Third Illinois Volunteer Cavalry. The regiment served in Texas until May, 1865, when it was sent against the Indians in Dakota. After being mustered out in the fall of 1865, he returned to Illinois, and soon after entered Union Christian College at Meron, Sullivan County, Ind. Here he was a student for three years, and while in the institution he was, on June 21, 1868, married to Miss Mattie Dougherty, a fellow student, whose parents resided in the city. In the spring of 1870 he came to Kansas, settling at Columbus, Cherokee County, where he engaged in farming, and also was proprietor of a hotel. Here he lived three years, and then removed to Decatur County, Iowa. He engaged in business as a building contractor, which he followed for five years, in connection with farming. In 1878 he sold out and again came to Kansas, settling in Goshen Township, Clay County, where he has a fine farm, and also carries on his work as a builder and contractor. In 1876 he entered the ministry of the Re-organized Church of Jesus Christ of the Later Day Saints. He has preached extensively in the States of Iowa, Missouri and Kansas, and is now pastor of a church in Goshen Township. In 1882 he was elected a Justice of the Peace for Goshen Township, and is now in office. He is the father of five children—Hiram, born June 7, 1869; Herbert, born December 12, 1871; David, born September 19, 1875; Mary E., born October 6, 1878; Asa A., born April 6, 1881.

W. V. HENSTED, farmer, P. O. Clay Centre, was born in Genesee County, N. Y., December 19, 1840. At the age of three years, his parents removed to Oakland County, Mich., where he was raised on a farm. He enlisted September 21, 1861, in Company I, of the Third Michigan Cavalry, and served in the Army of the Mississippi, taking part in the battles of Iuka, Corinth, Holly Springs, and many other engagements. He re-enlisted as a veteran soldier, and served until December 14, 1864, when he was discharged to accept promotion, having been recommended by the Casey Board for an office in the United States Colored troops. He was wounded July 18, 1864, in an affair near Clarendon, on the White River, Ark., receiving a gunshot wound in the right arm which greatly disabled him, and from which he still suffers. He was commissioned by President Lincoln Captain of Company B, of the Twenty-ninth United States Colored Infantry. He was in the Army of the Potomac, and then transferred with his command to the Army of the James—a part of the Twenty-fifth Corps. It is a matter of history that the colored corps first entered Richmond. After the war he returned to Michigan and engaged in farming. In October, 1869, he came to Kansas, settling in Clay County, Bloom Township, on a farm, where he still resides, engaged in farming. He has served as a Justice of the Peace and Township Trustee. He is a member of the G. A. R. March 18, 1866, in Genesee County, Mich., he was married to Miss Mary R. Campbell. They have five children—Lyman J., Mary A., Harriet E., Margaret and Albert.

DR. H. B. JONES, druggist, Industry, was born in Witney, Oxfordshire, England, June 21, 1836, and is a graduate of Christ Church College, Oxford, after which he studied medicine and walked the London Hospitals; from thence he came to America in 1870, stopping in Junction City one year. In 1871 he moved to Wakefield, Kan., living there for some time. From there he moved to Victoria, Ellis County, thence to Clay County, and in 1876 settled in Industry, where he is engaged in the drug trade.

NOYES J. LAMB., farmer, P. O. Clay Centre, Hayes Township, was born in New London, Conn., May 10, 1836. He was an operative in the cotton and woolen mills of his father until September 10, 1862, when he enlisted in the Sixteenth Connecticut Infantry. He was wounded at the siege of Port Hudson. He was mustered out of service August 17, 1863, by reason of the expiration of his term of service. After his discharge he returned to Connecticut, and was employed in the factories until he came to Kansas in 1869, settling on a farm on Section 21, Township 7, Range 3, Clay County, where he has lived since, engaged in farming and stock-raising. He is a member of the G. A. R. and I. O. G. T. He was married at Ledyard, Conn., September 8, 1857, to Miss Martha E. Main. They have had three children—Charles W., Martha A (now Mrs. Ernest Bowers), and Otis Mrs. Lamb died January 16, 1875, and he again married, in Clay County, Kan., September 2, 1875, to Miss Mary E. They have had thirteen children, all of whom are still living—John, Ann L., Mary E., William, Samuel, Caroline Helena, Selina E., Thomas, Jessie H., Richard, Frances J., Herbert and Benjamin. The five last named live with their parents.

A. W. WOLCOTT, farmer, P. O. Fancy Creek, Goshen Township, was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, July 20, 1838. He was raised a farmer. In 1860 he went to Iowa, and lived in Harrison County. July 8, 1861, he enlisted in Company B, of the Fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. He took part with his regiment in the battles of Pea Ridge, Vicksburg, and several other hard-fought battles, serving three years. He returned to Ohio after being mustered out of the service, and was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company C, of the One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged at the close of the war. After the war he lived in Harrison County until 1866, when he came to Kansas, settling in Goshen Township, Clay County. Here he still lives, engaged in farming. Has a fine farm, and is well pleased with the country. In 1881 he was elected a Justice of the Peace for Goshen Township, and is still in office. He was married March 6, 1869, in Crawford County, Pa., to Miss Eliza M. Usher. They have two children—Hallie M. and Angie.

*ANDERSON COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

ANDERSON County is situated in the second tier of counties west from Missouri, fifty miles south from the Kansas River, and seventy miles north from the Indian Territory. It is in extent twenty-four miles square, and is bounded on the north by Franklin County, on the east by Linn, on the south by Allen, and on the west by Coffey.

The county is well watered by numerous streams. North Pottawatomie Creek enters the county from the west and flows east and northeast, crossing the northern boundary about on Range line 21. Its principal southern tributaries are Thomas and Cedar creeks. On the north are Kenoma, Iantha and Sac creeks.

The South Pottawatomie Creek rises in the central part of the county, and flows northeast, entering the North Pottawatomie at Greeley. Of the other streams, Sugar Creek with its branches, in the eastern part of the county, flows northeast. Little Osage River with its numerous tributaries, in the southeast, flows southeast through Bourbon County. Deer and Indian creeks flow south into Allen County. Some of these streams abound with fine fish.

Of bottom land there is 10 per cent, of upland, 90 per cent. The average width of the bottoms is about two miles. The general surface of the country is a gently rolling prairie, though this is in many places diversified by steep hills and bluffs, which add to the picturesque appearance of the scenery. The soil is very rich, and well adapted to growing the cereals, flax, hemp, tobacco, castor beans, broom corn and vegetables.

According to the Government survey, about 6 per cent of the county is forest, but this has been largely increased, as the timber which generally borders the streams from year to year, grows further out on the prairie. Besides this, large groves of trees have been planted on the farms. The principal varieties of trees are: Black walnut, burr oak, red oak, hickory, elm, hackberry, sycamore, hard and soft maple, basswood, cottonwood, cherry, locust and mulberry.

Coal is supposed to underlie all the area of the county. In the southeastern and in the northwestern parts, good coal, free from sulphur, has been found in shallow veins, at a depth of from two to four feet. This coal is used only for local domestic purposes. Prospecting is now going on at Garnett.

Good building stone is abundant, of the best quality of lime and sandstone, and is obtained very easily, in layers, varying from eight to twenty-eight inches in thickness, and smooth on the surface of the stratum. There is some shale, an excellent fire-proof stone used for building furnaces for steam engines. A good quality of whetstone is plentiful. A mass of fire clay about seven inches thick, is found between the layers of mountain limestone, which contains considerable quantities of sulphuret of iron. Pottery clay is found in the western part of the county. Mineral paint has been discovered, but is of poor quality, containing too much iron.

EARLY HISTORY.

Previous to the settlement of the county by white men, it was occupied by the Pottawatomie Indians, who were removed from Indiana to their Kansas Reserve in 1837, by the United States Government. This principal village was just across the northern boundary of what is now Anderson County, at the place known as Dutch Henry's crossing, on the Pottawatomie. That stream derives its name from the above named tribe of Indians, and was so called about the time of their arrival.

Soon after they located, they extended their settlement south and west along the various streams. In 1838 they made some improvements on the present town site of Greeley, building bark shanties, planting peach trees, and cultivating small tracts of land. This was the first settlement of any kind in what is now Anderson County.

In 1847–48, the Indians were removed from the county. They had a number of Baptist and Methodist missionaries among them.

The first white settlement in the county was commenced early in May, 1854, on the present town site of Greeley, by Valentine Gerth and Francis Myer. They came from Missouri, were young men without families, and as soon as they arrived, they planted a crop of corn on an old Indian field, and raised a good crop the first year. A few days after the location of the two young men, Henry Harmon, with his family, located just north of where Greeley now is. Next came Oliver P. Rand, who settled in Sutton Valley. During the summer and fall they were joined by a few more settlers, among whom were Henderson Rice, J. S. Waitman, W. D. West, Thomas Totton, Anderson Cassel, and Dr. Rufus Gilpatrick.

In the winter of 1854–55 a number of Germans from St. Louis located south of Greeley, and made some improvements, but in the spring of 1855, they left the Territory never to return, and their claims were soon taken by other new settlers.

When Gov. Reeder, on November 8, 1854, appointed the first election, the territory, now Anderson County, was made a part of the Fifth District, and the election was ordered held at the house of Henry Sherman, near what is known as Dutch Henry's crossing, on the Pottawatomie, just across the line in Franklin County. At the election, November 29, Henderson Rice, J. S. Waitman, W. D. West and Thomas Totton voted from Anderson County.

When the first census was taken in January, 1855, the names returned from Anderson County were: Francis Myer, Valentine Gerth and John C. Clark.

At an election for members of the First Territorial Legislature, A. M. Coffey, David Lykins, Allen Wilkerson and H. W. Younger were elected. There were about fifty legal voters in the precinct, though but few of them went to the polls. The Missourians came over, however, and cast 109 Pro-slavery votes. Those voting from Anderson County were: A. Cassel, V. Gerth and Henry Harmon. The election was held at the same place as before.

At the election of a delegate to Congress, in October, 1855, George Wilson was the only person voting from Anderson County. Samuel Mack was one of the judges, but refused to vote, regarding the election, as conducted, only a farce.

Owing to the outrages committed upon Free-State settlers, a military company was organized in the fall of 1855, and was made up of Franklin and Anderson County men. It was called the Pottawatomie Rifle Company. John Brown, Jr., was elected Captain. Among the men from Anderson County were: Jacob Benjamin, James Townsley, Allen Jaqua, Frank Ayres, D. G. Watt, Samuel Mack, August Bondi, H. H. Williams, W. Ayres, M. Kilbourne and Dr. Rufus Gilpatrick. This was one of the John Brown Companies that made itself feared by the border ruffians.

Noted Settlers of 1855 and 1856, etc.—Among the prominent settlers of 1855 were: Darius Frankenberger, M. M. Minkler, C. E. Dewey, H. H. Williams, E. Reynolds, James Sutton, Benjamin Davis, J. H. Wolken, J. H. Rockers, H. M. Rumley, Samuel Mack, John McDaniel, Zach Schutte, Charles Backer, James Townsley, C. H. Price, Jesse Sutton and Henderson Rice.

At the election of delegates to the Topeka Constitutional Convention, forty-nine votes were polled at Pottawatomie precinct, by Free-State voters. At the election for its adoption or rejection, fourteen persons from Anderson County voted.

*In 1876 a county historical committee, consisting of sixteen members, was formed, and Hon. W. A. Johnson appointed to write a history of the county. It is a creditable work and was published the next year by Kauffman & Iler. A great part of this history is, re-written and revised from its pages, by permission from Mr. Johnson.

At the election of State officers under the Topeka Constitution, on January 15, 1856, eighteen persons from Anderson County voted at Pottawatomie precinct. Among others voting there were: John Brown, Jr., Fred Brown and Owen Brown, sons, and Henry Thompson, son-in-law of Old John Brown. The poll book and tally-list of this election are signed by Frederick Brown, S. B. Moore and William Partridge, as judges; and H. H. Williams and Ephraim Reynolds, as clerks.

Among the prominent settlers of 1856 were: W. C. McDow, A. Simons, Samuel Anderson, Jacob Benjamin, August Bondi, James Y. Campbell, John S. Robinson, Solomon Kauffman, C. W. Peckham, William G. Hill, R. D. Chase, Samuel McDaniel, G. W. Yandall, William Tull, A. G. West, C. G. Ellis, R. Porter, John Kirkland, William Dennis, J. F. Wadsworth, H. Cavender, Frederick Tochterman and W. G. Nichols.

First Fourth of July Celebration.—Though suffering so many privations and dangers during the summer of 1856, the settlers concluded to celebrate the Nation's Birthday, and therefore assembled, for the purpose, at the cabin of W. L. Frankenberger, about two miles east of Garnett. Though the attendance was small, it numbered most of the Free-State settlers of the county, and a more enthusiastic celebration was never held. C. E. Dewey read the Declaration of Independence; H. H. Williams, Capt. Samuel Anderson and J. Y. Campbell delivered orations, and the ladies sang patriotic songs. This was the first Fourth of July Celebration in the county.

BORDER TROUBLES.

During the summer and fall of 1856, the county was overrun by bands of lawless Pro-slavery men from Missouri and other Southern States. The Free-State men were robbed of their property, their cabins burned, and they were often ordered to leave the Territory at once, or suffer death.

Of the officers of the county, George Wilson, the Probate Judge and Chairman of the Board of Commissioners, Francis Myer and John S. Waitman, the other members, had been chosen to these offices on account of their loyalty to the slave power. When the difficulties culminated in 1856, they all took an active and leading part in behalf of the border ruffians, who were committing outrages on the Free-State settlers.

The Free-State men did not submit tamely to the wrongs, but fought manfully for the defence of their principles, their families, and their homes. Late in the spring, Francis Myer, John S. Waitman, David McCammon and George Wilson, having been concerned in several of the Pro-slavery atrocities, fled from the country, fearing retaliatory measures by the Free-State men. Wilson returned again the next year, but the two Commissioners and Sheriff never again appeared in the county.

About the same time Wilkinson, Sherman and the three Doyles were killed on Pottawatomie Creek, just across the line in Franklin County. They had been committing outrages on Free-State men in the vicinity, and the latter being refused protection by the United States troops, felt that they had to resort to lynch law to protect themselves. After this there was a great deal of trouble all along Pottawatomie Creek, and the Free-State people were in great danger. About twenty of the Anderson County men were members of the John Brown Company.

Soon after the Pottawatomie tragedy, the Government ordered a company of United States soldiers to the neighborhood. They camped for several weeks at a spring a short distance northeast of Greeley. They were also stationed just across the Franklin County line for some time. The company was commanded by Capt. De Sancer, a hot headed Pro-slavery man, and had been recruited in South Carolina. The Captain made frequent efforts to capture leading Free-State men, especially James Townsley. Whenever he was to make his night raids on the citizens, they always learned of the intended attack from one or two of the soldiers, who were really in sympathy with the Free-State cause. Therefore not a single arrest was made while the company remained in the neighborhood. De Sancer afterward figured in the first Rebel attacks on Forts Moultrie and Sumter.

In the spring of 1856, a company of Maj. Buford's Georgians camped in the timber on the Franklin County line, and remained some time, stealing all the cattle and horses they could find belonging to the Free-State men, and committing other depredations. One morning Wilber D. West was riding along the road near Greeley, when he met a Georgian, who drew a pistol and commanded him to dismount. He did so and the Georgian took the horse, and proceeded a little further, when he met Hardy Warren and I. P. Sutton with a two-horse team and wagon. The latter was then a mere boy, but is now a member of the State Legislature from the county. The Georgian said: "Are you a Free-State man?" Warren answered: "I am a Free-State man." The Georgian then rode a short distance to consult with John S. Waitman, when he again followed the wagon, demanding that it and the horses should be given to him. Warren refused, but the ruffian being reinforced, he was compelled to submit. One of the horses being useless to him he let Sutton go with it, but kept the rest of the property and detained Warren as a prisoner for some time.

When Warren was taken by the ruffians to their camp, Capt. Wood then in command of a company of soldiers stationed near, was present, and Warren appealed to him for protection, but he simply laughed and walked quietly away. Thus it will be seen that the settlers had a hard time with both the robbers and soldiers to contend with. Troops were kept in the neighborhood all summer, and saw such outrages committed daily without any attempt to interfere.

In order to protect themselves against the invasions of the border ruffians, who were committing so many atrocities, the Free-State men, in the summer of 1856, met at the house of W. L. Frankenberger, on the South Pottawatomie, and organized a military company called the Pottawatomie Guards, and elected Samuel Anderson Captain. The drill grounds were at the farm of Frankenberger, and the company numbered about thirty men, including all the able-bodied Free-State men living south of Greeley. The company participated in many of the expeditions of 1856–7, and did valuable service in protecting the settlers against the depredations of raiding parties from the Slave States. During the summer and fall of 1856, the invasions from Missouri were so frequent that it was unsafe for the settlers to remain at home over night with their families. For several months the families of the settlers would collect at night at Frankenberger's claim on the Pottawatomie, the women and children shelter themselves in the cabin, while the men kept guard outside. Such was the state of the country all summer, that the men would work on their claims, during the day with arms within their reach, and at night stand guard, or march to the defense of some neighboring settlement.

In the month of August, 1856, the struggle between the contending parties was rapidly approaching a crisis. It was plain that the Pro-slavery party was fast gaining the advantage. Blockhouses were erected and fortified, and well supplied with provisions. On the other hand it was a serious question among the Free-State men how their wants should be supplied. Everything had to come from Kansas City, by way of Westport, and the roads were guarded by the ruffians. At last, pressed by want, the Free-State men, in council assembled, resolved to appropriate to their own use enough of the Pro-slavery men's cattle, to furnish them with food. There were many large herds ranging on the prairie, and it was not long before their owners advocated the opening of the roads, that provisions could be brought in to the settlers.

When the town of Osawatomie was defended by John Brown from an attack by Missourians, the Anderson County men, commanded by Dr. Rufus Gilpatrick, assisted in the defense.

The most discouraging period for the Free-State men was when Governor Woodson issued a proclamation, declaring the territory in a state of insurrection and rebellion, and calling out the militia. Several left the county for this reason. The southern division of the Pro-slavery militia was commanded by Gen. Coffey. About this time a force of about 200 Missourians camped on Middle Creek, at Battle Mound. Here they waited for reinforcements, preparatory to a general movement against the Free-State settlements along the Pottawatomie, and many were the outrages committed in the corners of the counties of Anderson, Linn, Miami and Franklin.

On August 27th, the ruffians took George Partridge from his bed, when sick, and carried him away a prisoner. The same day they burned the house of Kilbourne and Cochran, near Greeley. Dr. Rufus Gilpatrick was visiting a patient on Middle Creek, and discovering the Pro-slavery camp, at once gave warning to his neighbors. Capt. Stewart, of Lawrence, with his company, Capt. Samuel Anderson, with the Pottawatomie Guards, and Capt. Cline started to make an attack upon the enemy. They were accompanied by Capt. John Brown until near the camp, when he learned that a party of ruffians were moving up the Pottawatomie, near Greeley. He, therefore, started in pursuit of the marauders.

The attack on the camp of the enemy was made on the morning of August 28, 1856. The Missourians were preparing breakfast and did not discover the Free-State men until they were close upon them. A sudden dash was made and the enemy fled in confusion, some leaving their horses. Most of them did not stop until they got to Missouri where they reported that they had been attacked by 10,000 jayhawkers, armed with Sharps' rifles and many cannon. The attacking party numbered about 100 men. John Brown joined the main force just after the capture of the camp. A large quantity of commissaries and other property was captured, but destroyed for want of transportation. George Partridge was rescued. Two Pro-slavery men were wounded, one mortally. Fifteen prisoners were taken, and kept over night, when they were admonished by John Brown as to their fate if caught again, and released.

The raiding party that started for Greeley robbed Zack Schutte, and started to hang Dr. Gilpatrick, but before reaching his place they heard of the capture of the camp, and hastily fled for Missouri.

EARLY LAND TROUBLES.

The survey of public lands began in the fall of 1855, and closed in the spring of 1856, and was under supervision of John Calhoun, the Surveyor-General.

Among the first settlers of the county came a class who had kept in advance of civilization, and made their living in speculating in claims on Government lands. These men selected the finest timber and valley lands along the streams, and after having formed an actual settlement, they would select many other valuable tracts, drive stakes, and put up some fictitious names, as owners of the land. When a man desirous to settle would come to look for lands, he would generally be told by these speculators, that these tracts marked by stakes had been selected by claimants, but that they could be bought of some man in the neighborhood who was an agent for the claimant. The stranger naturally supposing that the land had been honestly selected, would in most instances buy the claim rather than go farther West. The prices generally ranged all the way from one hundred to two thousand dollars. The settlers would many times after the purchase of these claims, erect cabins, and go East after their families, and on their return would find some one else occupying the cabin, the claim having been sold twice by the rascally speculator. These claims caused much trouble in the United States Land Office, and many quarrels and contests among the different claimants of the land, each of whom had bought it in good faith. Whenever the claims were contested, the costs became so great, that whichever party got the land, had to borrow money to pay for it, paying an enormous rate of interest, and was obliged to give a mortgage on the land as security, which generally resulted in the money-lender getting the land.

So serious had the troubles between the settlers become, that in November, 1858, a Free-State Squatters' Court was organized in the counties of Linn, Anderson and Bourbon, for the trial of land claims, and the settlement of difficulties arising therefrom. In order to secure more ready obedience to its mandates, the Judge of this court was called "Old Brown," though Capt. John Brown was not in the territory at that time. Dr. Rufus Gilpatrick was elected Judge of this court. As no Bible could be found in the neighborhood, witnesses were sworn on Dr. Gunn's "Family Physician." The action and degrees of the court were generally satisfactory to the settlers. Major Abbott and Rev. Stewart (the fighting preacher) went about with the court to enforce its orders.

First Mail Routes.—On January 11, 1858, a mail route was established from Leavenworth to Humboldt, via Hyatt, in Anderson County. The route was staked out in March, and service commenced on April 24. There was also a road from Carlyle, and another from Fairview to Hyatt. Zack Squires was the first carrier and expressman. The mail was first weekly, but was soon changed to tri-weekly. In the spring of 1859 the route was changed to extend through Garnett.

Early County Roads.—In November, 1858, the County Board of Supervisors received petitions for the opening of five Territorial roads. W. F. M. Arny[*] was the projector of these and all centered in the town of Hyatt, and are so shown by the old maps of the territory, with none at Garnett or Shannon.

First Tax Levy.—On September 25, 1858, the first tax levy for county purposes was made. It was six mills on the dollar, according to the tax rolls of 1858, for county purposes; two and one-half mills for schools; one and one-half mills for roads. The total value of taxable property of the county by townships was as follows: Monroe, $69,568.50; Walker, $36,888; Reeder, $26,355; Jackson, $24,737, and Washington, $20,610. Total, $178,158.50. There had been assessments before, but this is the first one recorded.

ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTY.

The Territorial Legislature of 1855 defined the boundaries of the county as they still exist, and named it in honor of Joseph C. Anderson, speaker pro tem of the House, and member from the Fort Scott District, though a resident of Lexington, Mo. Provisions were also made for the organization of the county and the election of officers. George Wilson was appointed Probate Judge. He took the oath of office and was commissioned by acting Governor Woodson, on September 1, 1855. He then went to the house of Francis Myer, near where Greeley now is, and which he had designated as the temporary county-seat, arriving there September 15. He had notified William R. True and John C. Clark, who had been appointed Commissioners, and A. V. Cummings, who had been appointed Sheriff, to meet him there on that day and proceed to organize the county. Those gentlemen refused to do so, though Wilson made several attempts to have them qualify. On October 30 he made a personal appeal to Gov. Shannon for assistance, whereupon Francis Myer and F. P. Brown were appointed County Commissioners, and Henderson Rice, Sheriff. Myer qualified on January 2, 1856, but the others refused to do so.

On January 7, 1856, Wilson and Myer met at the house of the latter and formed themselves into a Probate and Commissioners' Court. Therefore the organization of the county dates from that time.

On January 12, 1856, the second session of the Probate and Commissioners' Court was held at Myer's house. Wilson as Judge, and Myer as Commissioner, were the only officers. A petition was presented, asking the appointment of David McCammon as Sheriff. This was done, and on January 18 McCammon qualified for the office.

On January 18, the next session of the Probate and Commissioners' Court was held at the same place. J. S. Waitman was appointed Commissioner, and qualified and entered upon the duties of his office the same day. This made a full Board, with George Wilson as President. On the same day C. H. Price was appointed County Treasurer, and entered upon the duties of his office at once. He was also appointed Justice of the Peace for the county, and qualified on the 15th of the following March. He was the first to fill either of these offices for the county.

On February 4, the next Commissioners' meeting was held at the house of Sheriff McCammon. Thomas Totton was appointed Clerk for the County Board.

On March 9, at another meeting, a petition from Richard Golding and others, for the location of a road from Henry Sherman's, in Franklin County, to Cofachique, the county-seat of Allen, passing through the county-seat of Anderson, was considered, and David McCammon, James Townsley and Samuel Mack were appointed Commissioners to open the road, which was to be seventy feet wide. This was the first road located in the county.

The first legal notice was issued February 11, by George Wilson, Probate Judge, to Zack Schutte, commanding him to desist from trespass on school lands, Section 30, Township 19, Range 20. The notice was served the same day by the Sheriff. Another notice was served on John Waitman for the same cause.

On February 18, 1856, a petition was presented to the Commissioners, signed by A. McConnell and fifteen others, requesting a permanent location of the county-seat. After consideration, David McCammon, James Townsley and Thomas Totton were appointed to locate the county-seat of Anderson County, with positive instructions that it should be located within three miles of the geographical center of the county.

On February 28, the committee reported the selection of the east half of Section 31, Township 20, Range 20 east. On March 1, the report was accepted, and the county-seat declared located at the above named place, which was named Shannon. All the county business was afterward transacted there until April 5, 1859.

March 1, 1856, the Commissioners allowed the first accounts against the county as follow: Francis Myer, $18; John Waitman, $15; George Wilson, $102.95; D. McCammon, $18. This was for services as Commissioners and Sheriff of the county up to February 18, 1856. On February 29, Thomas Totton was commissioned County Clerk by the Governor. On March 6, William Rogers was appointed Justice of the Peace, and John Rogers, Constable. On April 19, Anderson Cassel was commissioned Coroner by the Governor.

The first term of the District Court was held at the house of F. Myer, on the southeast quarter of Section 19, Township 19, Range 21 east. Court convened on the fourth Monday in April, 1856, with Sterling G. Cato, one of the United States District Judges on the bench. The Judge brought his clerk and prosecuting attorney with him. Court was in session an entire week, and devoted to securing indictments, but no arrests were made. The first grand jury was composed of C. E. Dewey, J. S. Waitman, H. Britten, J. Vanderman, C. H. Price, P. Tyler, William Rogers, J. Griffith, D. Frankenberger, I. B. Tenbrook, S. Mack and A. Wilkerson. Waitman was foreman.

First County Organization under State Law.—The first county officers under the State government after Kansas was admitted, in 1861, were: William Spriggs, State Senator; S. J. Crawford and W. F. M. Arny, Representatives; A. Simons, County and District Clerk; Matthew Porter, Richard Robinson and T. G. Headley, Commissioners; J. Y. Campbell, Probate Judge; Henderson Cavender, Treasurer; C. J. Farley, Register of Deeds; G. A. Cook, Sheriff; B. F. Ridgeway, Surveyor; Rufus Gilpatrick, Superintendent of Schools; and B. P. Brown, Assessor.

EARLY COUNTY ELECTIONS, ETC.

From May, 1856, to January, 1857, no county business of any importance was transacted, on account of the warfare constantly going on between the Pro-slavery and Free-State parties.

In May, 1857, Thomas Hill was commissioned Sheriff of Anderson County, by the Governor, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of McCammon. Hill was a resident of Franklin County.

On May 25, 1857, John McDaniel and Darius Frankenberger were appointed County Commissioners, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Waitman and Meyer from the county. Samuel Anderson was appointed Justice of the Peace.

The election of delegates to the Lecompton Constitution was held June 15, 1857. James Y. Campbell and one other were chosen, each receiving thirty-two votes. This was the first election held in the county.

On July 20, 1857, the Commissioners established three election precincts and appointed an election board for each. Alanson Simons was appointed County Clerk, and Samuel Anderson Probate Judge.

On September 10, 1857, a Free-State convention was held at the Sac and Fox Agency, to nominate candidates to the Free-State Legislature, from the nineteen disfranchised counties, of which Anderson was one. Samuel J. Stewart, Christopher Columbia and John Curtis were nominated, and were elected the following October.

On September 21 a voting precinct was established at Hyatt, and another at Cresco.

On October 7, 1857, the County Commissioners divided the county into municipal townships, which were named Walker, Monroe, Jackson, Reeder, Harrison, Washington, Geary, Madison, Clay and Franklin. The four last named were never organized, and afterward became parts of other townships.

On November 16, M. T. Williams was appointed County Clerk, and on the 25th of the same month B. F. Ridgeway was appointed County Surveyor.

On August 15, 1857, a mass meeting of the citizens of the county was held in the timber near the residence of A. Simons. William Puett was Chairman, and J. G. Reese, Secretary. Speeches were made, and a committee of nine were appointed to select candidates for the county offices, and representatives to the Territorial Legislature. W. F. M. Arny with his friends then withdrew, as they opposed doing anything that would recognize the "bogus laws." Arny and his friends held a meeting just across the ravine, and after deliberating decided that they would take no part in an election under the old law. Of this meeting Isaac Hall was Chairman.

On September 15 a Free-State convention was held at Hyatt, for the nomination of county officers. Isaac Hall was President. A full county ticket was nominated.

The first election of county officers took place on October 5, 1857. Returns were only given from four precincts, Cresco, Adington, Hyatt and Shannon. The result of this election gave a large majority for the nominees of the Free-State convention, but when the vote was canvassed, which was not until November 26, George Wilson, who was still Probate Judge, ordered all the returns except those from Shannon to be thrown out. This gave the election to the nominees of the Simons Grove convention, over which Puett had presided. Wilson then wrote a letter giving an explanation of his rejection of the precincts of Hyatt, Adington, Cresco and Greeley. He stated that in Greeley (or Blunt) precinct the returns were not properly signed by the judges and clerks of election; that in Hyatt and Adington precincts every kind of fraud was practiced; and that in Robinson precinct he believed many illegal votes had been cast. He stated that he sustained the vote of Shannon precinct as it was the only legal one in the county, and that the division of the others had not been properly authenticated until two days after the election, the Board of Commissioners having laid them off without sending any returns to the Secretary of State.

[*] W. F. M. Arny was a member of the Legislature from Anderson County in 1861; made a good reputation for ability; was appointed Indian Agent in New Mexico in the summer of 1861, and removed from Anderson County. He was afterward appointed Secretary of the above named Territory, and was its acting Governor for many years, during the absence of the incumbent of that office.

The decision of Wilson gave the election to Samuel Anderson as Probate Judge; G. A. Cook, Sheriff; A. Simons, Clerk; Isaac Hiner, Treasurer; Darius Frankenberger and John McDaniel, Commissioners, and B. F. Ridgeway, Surveyor. Acting Governor Stanton issued commissions to all the above, on November 28, 1857, and all qualified, except that Frankenberger, Simons and Cook refused to take the oath to support the "fugitive slave law," which part was omitted when they were sworn.

The Territorial Legislature of 1857 provided for a Recorder in each land district. Anderson County was in the Pawnee or Lecompton district. Geo. A. Reynolds was appointed to the office. Most of the instruments affecting real estate in the county were recorded at Lecompton for about three years after. The records were afterward moved to Lawrence, and destroyed by the rebel Quantrell when he made his raid on that town in 1863. The titles of many tracts of Anderson County land were recorded there, and this has necessarily caused trouble to procure a clear title.

On November 30, 1857, the County Commissioners entered into a contract with Dr. Preston Bowen to build a court house and jail at Shannon, and an appropriation of $1,000 was made.

The above act, as well as the action of the Probate Court in the canvass of the returns of the October election, aroused the indignation of the people, and the commissioners ordered an election that they might give expression to their sentiments.

This election was held on January 26, 1858, and the returns, canvassed on the 29th, showed a large majority for the resignation of the county officers and against the erection of public buildings. Therefore the two Commissioners elected in October, the Probate Judge, Sheriff and Clerk at once tendered their resignation, to take effect the third Monday of the next March.

On March 9, W. F. M. Arny, William Spriggs and W. L. Webster were elected delegates to the Leavenworth constitutional convention.

On February 12, 1858, the Legislature passed a law changing the Board of County Commissioners to a Board of Supervisors, consisting of the Chairman of each Township Board. The election was held on the fourth Monday in March, and resulted in the choice of James Y. Campbell for Probate Judge; G. A. Cook, Sheriff; M. Puett, Register of Deeds; B. F. Ridgeway, Surveyor; Jno. B. Still, County Attorney; and B. L. Adington, Clerk.

The first Board of Supervisors, and elected on the above date, were James E. White, Rezin Porter, Jno. McDaniel, A. McArthur, and Solomon Kauffman. Their first meeting was on June 2, and the first named was elected Chairman.

On June 14, 1858, the Supervisors entered into a contract with Dr. Preston Bowen to build a jail and court house, at his own expense, to be completed within one year. Shannon, the county-seat, was owned exclusively by Dr. Bowen. The jail was completed and work commenced on the court house when, in the spring of 1859, the county-seat was located at Garnett, by an Act of the Legislature, upon which work was stopped on the buildings at Shannon. The county at one time used the jail, but it was afterward taken back by Bowen.

On August 2 an election was held on the adoption or rejection of the Lecompton constitution, and the result in Anderson County was 306 for and 4 against.

On October 4, 1858, L. D. Bailey, T. R. Roberts and William Spriggs were elected to the Territorial Legislature, from the nineteen disfranchised counties.

The first meeting of the County Supervisors was held at Garnett, on April 5, 1859.

At an election in March, 1859, on the proposition for a State Constitutional convention, there were in Anderson County, out of one hundred and eighty-five votes, only seven against it.

An election was held on the first Tuesday in June, for a delegate to the convention from Anderson County, to frame a State Constitution. Dr. James G. Blunt and W. F. M. Arny were candidates. The former was elected, and in the convention at Wyandotte, which assembled in July, distinguished himself for ability.

EARLY TOWN SITES.

In the early history of the county a number of town sites were laid out, but which, with two exceptions, failed to become places of either permanence or importance.

Kansas City was the name of the first town site in the county. Its location was on Iantha Creek, on the west half of Section 27, and the east half of Section 28, Township 19, Range 18 east. It was selected by Dr. G. W. Cooper, who came from Louisville, Kentucky, to found a town somewhere in the Territory. He arrived at Kansas City, Missouri, May 1, 1856, and getting a letter—a sort of passport—from Gen. McClain, as a safeguard among the Pro-slavery men, he started on an exploring trip, and in the latter part of the same month he selected and laid out the above named town site, on Iantha Creek. The name of the town was soon changed to Iantha. It was afterward pre-empted by John Murphy, John L. Clemens, Stephen B. Shotwell and Alex. Cassday. The first named built a cabin and made some improvements, but the remainder was pre-empted by one cabin, which was moved from one claim to another. This is all there ever was of the town.

Garnett and Greeley.—These towns were both surveyed in 1856, and have since become places of importance, their full history being given in the following pages.

Hyatt.—A colony for the purpose of settling in Anderson County was formed in Lawrence by Thaddeus Hyatt and W. F. M. Arny, in December, 1856. The colony numbered about eighty men, who had just been discharged from a Territorial militia company. On December 18 they selected the north half of the southeast quarter, and the northeast quarter of Section 10, Township 21, Range 19 east. There were then but three families in the western part of the county. Claims were selected by the colonists on Cedar and South Pottawatomie creeks. They lived in tents all winter, after which they moved to their claims. While in camp they prepared timbers and built a hotel, store and blacksmith shop on the town site of Hyatt.

The Town Company was formed in February, 1857, with W. F. M. Arny, President, and C. J. Farley, Secretary. A plat of the town site was filed in the district land office at Lecompton, and in the office of the Probate Judge of the county. It was the project of its founders to make this town the county-seat. In the spring of 1857 a saw-mill was built, and the next fall a grist-mill was attached. During the summer a store was opened by B. F. Allen. In June a post-office was established, with W. F. M. Arny, postmaster. In 1858 a school was established with Miss Josephine Ramsey, teacher. During the summer of 1857 there was much sickness and many deaths. The town soon began to go down, and in 1859 many of its citizens went to Pike's Peak, and the county-seat being permanently located at Garnett, the town was soon after abandoned. Nothing now remains of what was once the principal town of the county.

Mineral Point.—Though not a town site this place was the center of a settlement which had been formed in 1855 and 1856. The first Fourth of July celebration for the western part of the county was held here in 1857, and the place given the above name on account of a mound supposed to contain minerals. A military company was formed the same day, and had thirty-one members. J. Aliff was Captain; L. L. Hayden, First Lieutenant; and J. H. Hadley, Second Lieutenant. Mineral Point has always been the center of a prosperous settlement, and it is still a post-office.

Cresco.—On May 16, 1857, the Cresco Town Company was formed with John S. Robinson, President; William C. Howard, Treasurer, and Solomon Kauffman, Secretary. The company was incorporated by an act of the Legislature, February 11, 1858. The town site included the southwest quarter of Section 21, and the northwest quarter of Section 28, Township 20, Range 18 east. A plat of the town site was filed in the district land office. Several buildings were erected during the summer. A blacksmith shop was opened by William C. Howard, and a wagon shop by Jas. C. Kelso. A post-office was established, and W. C. Howard appointed postmaster. This was the third post-office in the county. There being no regular mail route to Cresco, the office was supplied by private conveyance from Hyatt. This town was also a voting place. Late in 1857 the Town Company erected a steam saw-mill on a branch of the Pottawatomie. In 1859 most of the citizens went to Pike's Peak, and soon the town was abandoned. The voting place was removed to Central City, where it still remains.

Central City.—This town site was situated on the Pottawatomie River, on Section 35, Township 20, Range 18 east. The location was made in 1857. In June of that year, Stephen Marsh, Mrs. Hoskins, C. C. Hoskins, Simpson Lake and others, settled in the neighborhood. The next winter John B. Lambdin & Sons put up a saw mill near the town site. The first store was opened in the summer of 1858, by W. S. Eastwood, and H. N. F. Reed. The same year Stephen Marsh and his son Oliver erected a large two-story frame building, and established a store, with a large stock of everything needed in a country trade. For several years this was the best store in the county. Though it never became a town, Central City has always been the center of a prosperous settlement, and still has a store, post-office, blacksmith shop, and a few other buildings.

Pottawatomie, or Mount Gilead.—Soon after the town of Greeley was laid out, a rival town was surveyed on the opposite side of the Pottawatomie River. About September 1, 1857, a Town Company was organized, and was composed of Rufus Gilpatrick, James G. Blunt, Henry Nugent, Willis Ayres, J. F. Wadsworth, and others. On September 11, Rufus Gilpatrick, as President of the Pottawatomie Town Company, presented a plat of a town of that name to John Shannon, a notary public, which was certified to. The name of the town was afterward changed to Mount Gilead. A saw-mill was built, and soon nearly all that existed of Greeley, including the post-office, was moved to the new town, which grew quite rapidly for some time, but there being difficulty in procuring water the site was afterward abandoned, and is now a portion of the farm of Rufus G. Blunt, and all that now remains of Mount Gilead is one old building now used as a granary.

Shannon.—The county-seat was in 1856, located on Section 31, Township 20, Range 20. The place was named in honor of Governor Wilson Shannon. In 1857, the town was surveyed by Dr. Preston Bowen, with public parks, and with expectation of its remaining the county-seat. For the next two years some improvements were made, and county buildings commenced; but in 1859, the county-seat was removed to Garnett, and the Shannon town site was soon abandoned. It is now a part of Dr. Bowen's farm.

Canton.—In 1857, a town was located and surveyed on Section 23, Township 20, Range 20. It was laid out by B. Tyler, as a rival to Garnett. For about two years it was occupied and some improvements made, but when Garnett secured the county-seat, Canton was soon abandoned.

Mandovi.—This was a town site laid out in 1858, by Dr. G. W. Cooper. It joined the Garnett site on the south, and though no town improvements were ever made, a fine lithographed map was made, and circulated in the East, in consequence of which many lots were sold.

Elba.—On January 23, 1858, a Town Company was organized, and composed of Harvey Springer, B. F. Ridgeway, A. G. Poteet, and Wm. Springer. This company surveyed and platted a town on the west half of Section 8, Township 21, Range 21 east, which they called Elba. The site was abandoned before any buildings were erected.

Elizabethtown.—In 1859, this town was located, surveyed, and platted on Section 15, Township 23, Range 19. The town was founded by Joseph Price, Thos. J. Day, and James A. Dorsey, who formed the Town Company. A store was soon opened by W. Stubblefield & Co. The post-office was established in 1859. Though it never became a village, Elizabethtown is surrounded by a thrifty class of people, and is still a post-office.

FLOODS, DROUGHT, GRASSHOPPERS, ETC.

The year 1859 was a prosperous one. There was a heavy immigration to the county, much greater than before, the population numbering about three thousand. During the spring there were heavy rains, so that travel was, at times, almost stopped. On June 1st, the rainfall had been so great that the Pottawatomie overflowed its banks, and the settlers along the valley were compelled to remove to the hills for safety. In some places the overflow was so sudden that the settlers had to climb to the roofs of their cabins, and remain until the waters subsided. After this extremely wet spring, the dry season commenced.

Drought of 1860.—About the last of July, 1859, the rainy season closed, and was followed by a dry fall. During the winter there was but little rain or snow. The spring of 1860 was dry, and then came the long, dry and hot summer, with no rain until October. In July, hot, dry winds blew from the southwest, and so scorching were they, that all vegetation was dried to a crisp. The earth became so dry that it cracked open, leaving crevices many rods in length, and so large that the feet of horses and cattle would go down for several inches. By the first of June, the crops then being all destroyed, a panic seized the people, and more than half the population of the county left the Territory, the most of them never to return. Nearly all who had enough left to get away did so.

In 1860, the census was taken by L. A. Jones, and showed a population of 466 families, with an aggregate population of 2,398. He reported great suffering on account of the drought, and that one family with ten children, subsisted for two weeks on wild plums and the milk from one cow, with nothing else to eat. This was only one of the hundreds of cases where the families of the settlers suffered from want of food. During all the next winter there was great suffering from hunger and cold, but the poor settlers who remained bore all with patience, and made preparations to plant another crop in the spring.

Grasshoppers.—The first visitation of the grasshoppers in the county, was in the fall of 1854. They deposited their eggs, and the next spring hatched out in immense numbers. In July, 1855, they came down in the northeastern part of the county, stayed two or three days, and destroyed all the growing crops.

In September, 1860, the grasshoppers came again, but as the drought had destroyed all the crops, no damage was done, but the next spring they hatched out in great numbers, and the damage done by them was considerable. They left the county about the middle of June.

Again on September 10, 1866, the pests visited the county, and it was not long till all vegetation, that was yet green, was destroyed. They also deposited their eggs by countless millions, but the winter was wet and cold, alternately freezing and thawing, which damaged the eggs so much that but few of them hatched out the next spring. After doing a little damage, the young grasshoppers left the country about the middle of June.

The last great raid of the grasshoppers was in 1874. On August 22, they began to descend in perfect clouds. That year many of the crops matured early, therefore fully half a crop of corn and other late crops were saved, while it was after the small grain crop had been harvested. The crops were cut short, the price of provisions was high and work was scarce. Though there was perhaps no actual suffering, times were hard, and a great many privations were endured by the poorer classes who had lost a portion of their crops.

The grasshoppers had deposited their eggs, which in the spring began to hatch in great numbers. It was not long until about two-thirds of the cultivated lands of the county were covered with the young pests, and almost everything was destroyed in the fields they visited. In some places they piled up in drifts of several inches in thickness, where they remained for some time. By the 10th of June they began to leave, and by the 16th nearly all were gone, and by re-planting, good crops were raised that year.

WAR RECORD.

As soon as the news of the firing on Fort Sumter and the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion reached the settlers of Anderson County, all were greatly excited. The early political struggles and drought of 1860 had reduced the population, and those who remained were very poor. For the settlers to enter the army was to leave their families in distressing circumstances. But when the call for volunteers came they responded nobly. An entire company volunteered in one day, and three days after was on the march to the front. Anderson County was represented in almost every regiment of the Kansas troops, about three-fourths of the able-bodied men entering the Union army. In 1861 the population of the county was but little more than one thousand; but during the war, four hundred and twenty volunteers entered the service to aid in putting down the Rebellion. Of this number fifty-six died or were killed in battle.

Many of the soldiers' families were in the spring of 1861 reduced almost to a state of pauperism, but nobly did the brave and patriotic wives give up their husbands to the service of the country. In their absence the women planted and cultivated the fields, raised and harvested their crops, and struggled in all ways to support themselves and children till the return of their brave husbands after four years' hard service on the field of battle. How brave and noble were all of these sacrificing women; but how much more so were those of their number whose husbands returned helpless cripples; and especially those who still toiled on, patiently, for the support of themselves and their fatherless children, with hearts nearly breaking from grief for their loved protectors who rested in unmarked graves on the bloody battle fields of the South.

A number of the officers of Kansas troops from Anderson County distinguished themselves for meritorious service.

James G. Blunt, Lieutenant Colonel, Third Regiment Kansas Volunteers, was soon promoted to Brigadier-General, and afterwards to Major-General.

In Company E, (three months' service) Second Kansas Infantry, Samuel J. Crawford was Captain; John G. Lindsay First Lieutenant; Samuel K. Cross Second Lieutenant; Henry Nugent, Ensign; John Johnson, Orderly Sergeant; David Wright, R. H. P. Snodgrass, Zack Norris, and Hugh Quinn, Sergeants; James F. Walker, James L. Kercheval, James L. Wilson, Corporals.

Of Company A, Second Kansas Cavalry, (three years' service) Samuel J. Crawford was the first Captain, but was promoted to Colonel; John Johnson, the next Captain, was afterwards promoted to Major. Samuel K. Cross was First Lieutenant. Hugh Quinn, a Sergeant was afterward promoted to the rank of Captain in the Second Arkansas Cavalry.

Of Company K, Fifth Kansas Cavalry, Jeremiah C. Johnson was First Lieutenant, and Alexander Rush, Second Lieutenant.

Of Company G, Seventh Kansas Cavalry, D. W. Houston was First Lieutenant; was soon promoted to Captain and afterward to Lieutenant-Colonel. Zack Norris was first Lieutenant.

Of the Eighth Kansas Infantry, John Buterbaugh was Assistant Surgeon.

Of the Ninth Kansas Cavalry, Charles T. Cooper was Regimental Commissary. Of Company C, Benjamin F. Ayres was promoted to First Lieutenant. Of Company H, H. N. F. Reed was Second Lieutenant, and afterward Captain. David Hester was Orderly Sergeant and afterward First Lieutenant of Company C.

Of Company C, Tenth Kansas Infantry, Charles Brown, Sergeant, was promoted to First Lieutenant, and John E. Blunt, First Lieutenant afterward.

Of Company F, Eleventh Kansas, J. G. Rosse and John G. Lindsay, Captains; George W. Simons, First Lieutenant; Marvin H. Payne, Second Lieutenant.

Of the Twelfth Kansas Infantry, Thomas Lindsay was Assistant Surgeon. Of Company G, Alexander McArthur was First Lieutenant.

Of the Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry, Company M, W. A. Johnson was Captain.

Of Company H, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, H. W. Stubblefield was Captain

Of the Second Kansas Colored Regiment, G. W. Walgamott was Surgeon, J. R. Montgomery, Adjutant; George W. Sands, Captain, Company E.

Of the Eleventh United States Colored Regiment, E. P. Gilpatrick and Alanson Simons, First Lieutenants.

STATISTICS OF PROGRESS, ETC.

Until 1859, the great year of immigration, the progress of the county was comparatively slow. In 1860, on account of the drouth, hundreds left the country. Then the war broke out and during its continuance, the county improved slowly. But commencing in 1865, immigration and improvement went steadily on until the building of the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Galveston Railroad in 1870. The progress of the county was then very rapid until the grasshopper raid in 1874, after which there was a dull season for a few years, when immigration again began, and has since continued. The county is now enjoying greater prosperity than ever before in its history.

In 1860, the population was 2,398; in 1870, 5,220; in 1875, 5,809; in 1878, 6,000; in 1880, 9,032. The population of the county by townships for the year 1882, is as follows:

Reeder	1,495
Putman	901
Jackson	929
Monroe	864
Walker	852
Washington	504
Lincoln	649
Welda	519
Rich	1,329
Ozark	979
Indian Creek	568
Garnett City	1,509
Greeley City	950
Total	15,560

Besides the two railroads now extending across the county, bonds have been voted to the Kansas & Nebraska Central Railroad Company and that road will doubtless soon be built across the county from the northwest to Garnett, thence south to Iola.

Following is a crop report of Anderson County for the year 1882. Of winter wheat there were 3,835 acres yielding 80,365 bushels; spring wheat, 45 acres producing 450 bushels; corn, 48,585, yielding 2,037,210 bushels; rye, 136 acres, 2,312 bushels; oats, 7,181 acres, 267,340 bushels; barley, 42 acres, 1,176 bushels; potatoes, 571 acres, 45,680 bushels; sweet potatoes, 11 acres, 825 bushels; sorghum, 349 acres, 31,410 gallons; castor beans, 99 acres, 990 bushels; flax, 2,918 acres, 35,016 bushels; broom corn, 115 acres, 57,500 pounds; millet and hungarian, 6,790 acres, 20,370 tons; timothy and clover hay, 703 acres, 1,406 tons; prairie hay, 36,597 acres, 54,896 tons. The number of pounds of wool produced was 36,322; of cheese, 3,690; of butter, 275,670. The total value of all horticultural and garden products, of poultry, eggs, and milk sold was fully $30,000. The number of horses and mules in the county is 5,825; cattle, 21,886; sheep, 9,089; swine, 18,104. All kinds of live-stock are in good condition. The herd law is not in operation. There are but few farmers engaged in sheep raising, but those that are, find it profitable. The raising of swine is very successful. The favorite breeds are Berkshire and Poland-Chinas.

Education.—The education of the young was one of the very first things looked to by the early settlers of the county. As soon as means of sustenance had been provided, the next thing was to employ a teacher and establish a school. As soon as possible, school districts were formed and schoolhouses built. The first Superintendent of Schools for the county was John R. Slentz, who was appointed about the close of the year 1858, by Acting Governor Hugh S. Walsh. Several school districts had already been formed ready for organization, which they at once proceeded to do under the authority of the Superintendent. By the end of the first year school districts had been formed and schools established in all the settled parts of the county. The first school district in the county was near Scipio, in Putnam Township, in December, 1858. The School Board was A. Garrett, James Farrah, and M. Puett. This district erected the first schoolhouse in the county. As soon as a neighborhood was settled, a school district was organized, a house built and a good school established. The facilities for education have increased as the settlement and improvement of the country has advanced. There are now in the county seventy-six school districts, each having a good schoolhouse. Those in the towns and villages are described in the proper place. Those of the rural districts are substantial frame or stone buildings. The grounds of a great number of the districts are surrounded by good fences, and planted to shade trees. In the schools of the county eighty-five teachers are employed and the salary paid averages $35.65 per month for males, and $26.48 for females. The normal institutes held each year are well attended. During the last school year 118 teachers' certificates have been issued. The average length of the school terms is thirty weeks. There are in the county 3,908 children of school age, of which number 3,140 are enrolled as pupils. The schools of the county are all prosperous, and the educational advantages may be said to be of a superior order.

Mount Carmel College.—This is a college founded by the Roman Catholic Church and situated near the railroad station of Scipio, some six miles north of Garnett. In 1857 there was a large settlement of Catholics in this part of the county. In 1860 the Saint Boniface Church was erected by them, this being the first church-building in the county. In 1871 the college was established, and since that time a good school has been maintained.

Public Buildings.—The county owns a Square in the city of Garnett, but only the jail is on that property. It is a stone building two stories high and is both a jail and jailer's residence. It was erected in 1864, at a cost of $3,000. The court house is located on Oak Street, west of the Public Square, and is a two-story brick and stone building, constructed on the plan of a business house. It was erected in 1869, and the county offices and records have been kept there since the spring of 1869.

County Officers.—Since its organization the county has generally had good and faithful officers. It is now in a sound financial condition, with able and efficient officers. Their names will be found in the biographical sketches.

Anderson County Fair Association.—This society was organized on November 13, 1878, as a joint stock company, and incorporated with a paid up capital of $5,000. The charter members were Thomas Gowdy, J. E. White, John Moler, W. W. Kirkpatrick, J. S. Kirkpatrick and H. C. Reppert. The first Board of Directors was as follows: J. Q. Bowdell, J. M. Jones, Jno. Moler, G. W. Flint, R. T. Stokes, J. E. White, A. E. Rogers, C. S. Elder, R. H. Cunningham, W. A. Johnson, D. D. Judy, J. S. Kirkpatrick, and M. E. Osborn. The association owns thirty acres of land, one mile southwest of Garnett, which has been improved, and on which are erected permanent buildings for the fair exhibits. The first fair held in the county was in 1869. The present officers are: A. C. Messenger, President; P. P. Elder, Vice-President; J. N. Caldwell, Secretary; O. W. Wyatt, Treasurer. Board of Directors: D. D. Judy, Robert Mundell, A. C. Messenger, J. W. Lewellin, B. S. Denthott, John Moler, jr., William Shields, P. P. Elder, A. T. Cook, O. W. Wyatt, J. N. Caldwell and S. H. Davis.

Fish Culture.—Many of the streams of the county abound with a supply of good fish. Besides this, in several localities attempts are being made to raise fish in artificial ponds. All of these ponds have been lately stocked, and it is yet too early for marketable fish to be produced: but it now looks as if this would prove a profitable industry. The largest of these ponds is on the land of E. S. Hunt, which adjoins the Garnett town site on the south. The pond covers sixteen and one-half acres, is fed by springs and is twenty-two feet in depth. In the spring of 1881, Mr. Hunt planted 25,000 salmon trout, and the following October fifty carp. These are apparently thriving, and when the waters are still, thousands of them can be seen in the shallow places. In July, 1882, fish were caught that weighed three-fourths of a pound each. Around this pond a park of eighty acres is being prepared.

Railroads.—The Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad extends through the county from north to south. It was built in 1870, and then called the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Southwestern Railroad. The stations are Scipio, Garnett, Welda and Colony. The Arizona division of the Missouri Pacific Railroad extends through the county from east to west. It was constructed in 1879. The stations are Greeley, Garnett, Mont Ida and Westphalia.

Post-offices.—The post-offices in the county are Garnett, Greeley, Colony, Welda, Mont Ida, Westphalia, Haskell, Sugar Valley, Scipio, Central City, Mineral Point, Rich, Ozark, Lone Elm, Elizabethtown and Como. Only the first named six of the above named places are villages, the others being merely country post-offices.

GARNETT.

Garnett is the county seat and metropolis of Anderson County. Its location is a particularly pleasant and desirable one, on the gently sloping prairie, but a few miles from the geographical center of the county. Located as it is at the junction of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas and the Arizona Division of the Missouri Pacific Railroads, each of which has a passenger and freight depot, shipping advantages are afforded, which make this one of the most prosperous towns of Southeastern Kansas.

The population of the city of Garnett is about 1,600, but just outside of the corporation, and laid off in town lots occupied by residences, are additions on both the north and west, which swell the number of inhabitants properly belonging to the city, to fully 2,000. The citizens are of an exceptionally moral and enterprising class, are thrifty and public-spirited.

The most of the business houses are located around or near the Public Square. A great many of them are large and costly structures of brick and stone, while most of the others are substantial and well-planned frame buildings. The public buildings are a credit to the town, being large, and imposing in appearance. The residences are generally neat, comfortable and attractive, while the lots are ornamented by shade trees. Almost all branches of business are carried on, and with a trade from a radius of fifteen miles or more, the business interests are enjoying great prosperity.

The history of Garnett begins with the summer of 1856, when the town site was selected by Dr. George W. Cooper, who had a few months before selected a town site on Iantha Creek. At Wyandotte he met George A. Dunn, who had just returned from Anderson County, the most of the territory of which had been surveyed by him as United States Surveyor. After agreeing upon a plan, Cooper and Dunn started for the Pottawatomie River, intending to lay out a town, and then to secure the location of the county-seat. Going to the geographical center of the county, they failed to find a desirable location. Dunn then suggested that they should go to Section 30, Township 20, Range 20 east, where there was a fine spring of water. They followed down the Pottawatomie to the residence of Samuel McDaniel, where they remained for a few days, and surveyed a town site on the above-named section. They then returned to Wyandotte, and soon after Cooper returned to Louisville, Kentucky, where he organized a Town Company consisting of W. A. Garnett, President; R. B. Hall, Vice-President; G. W. Cooper, George A. Dunn and Theodore Harris. The last named was Secretary. The town was named Garnett in honor of the President of the company, who was a wealthy business man of Louisville. Arrangements were at once made for sending a colony from Kentucky, and the machinery was purchased for a saw and grist-mill, but the colony was unable to leave that year.

In March, 1857, Dr. Cooper again visited the town site, and in May had it again surveyed, staked out and platted. He also had a double log cabin built at a point where Fourth Street now crosses the railroad track. During the summer Dr. Preston Bowen moved from Shannon and opened a store in this log house, it being the first business house in Garnett.

Dr. Cooper returned to Louisville as soon as he had surveyed the town, and had lithographed maps of it made, which he used for advertising purposes. He then set to work to organize a colony. The Town Company elected new officers, as follows: R. B. Hall, President; George A. Dunn, Vice-President; and Theodore Harris, Secretary.

Before the arrival of the Louisville colony, several other settlers located in Garnett and in the vicinity. Among them were Capt. John G. Lindsay, who built the first dwelling on the town site, William Smith, Dr. Thomas Lindsay and Thomas Owen.

About July 25, Cooper and Hall arrived with a portion of the Louisville colony. On August 1, 1857, Robert B. Hall, as President, George A. Dunn, G. W. Cooper and Theodore Harris, as associates, filed a plat of the town of Garnett in the office of the Probate Judge, with a petition setting forth the fact that the town site had been regularly surveyed and platted about May 10, 1857. The site covered the south half of Section 30, Township 20, Range 20 east. About the same time, another store was built.

On September 8, George Wilson, the Probate Judge, pre-empted the town site, to be held in trust for its occupants.

On August 7, 1857, William C. Hall, Isaac N. Locke and Joseph Barclay presented a petition and a plat of the north half of Section 30, Township 20, Range 20, under the name of the town of Troy. On September 8 George Wilson, the Probate Judge, pre-empted the above described land as a town site, to be held in trust for its occupants.

The Louisville colony brought the machinery for a new saw and flouring-mill, and at once began building dwellings and the mill. The colony was composed of Charles Hidden and family, F. G. Bruns and family, W. C. and R. B. Hall, Theodore Harris, G. W. Cooper and family, Mrs. Adaline Duren and family, John Lambdin and family, and M. T. Williams and family. Of these, only F. G. Bruns and wife, and Dr. G. W. Cooper and Mary L. Cooper still remain in the county.

In December, 1857, the town companies of Garnett and Troy were united under the name of the Town Company of Garnett. During the year quite a number of buildings, including the mill, were erected.

During the years 1858 and 1859, there were many improvements made, and many settlers located in Garnett.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first frame house was built in Garnett in the fall of 1857, by F. G. Bruns. It is the one where he now resides.

The first birth took place on the 13th day of March, 1858, and was that of two children to Mrs. F. G. Bruns. They were named Charles Garnett and Mary. A town lot was deeded to the boy, who is now a young man and still resides with his parents. Mary died when but nine weeks old. This was the first death in Garnett.

In 1858, the old Garnett Town Company built a schoolhouse on the northwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Oak Street, and, on the formation of the school district, donated to it the building. This was the second school district formed in the county. The schoolhouse was the first public building in Garnett, and for several years was used for all public meetings, courts, etc. In 1862, it was sold to H. Cavender for $300, and a two-story frame schoolhouse was built on the corner of Third Avenue and Cedar Street, at a cost of $3,500. In 1872, the present large brick schoolhouse was erected.

When Garnett was first founded, no mail route extended through it. The nearest post-office was nearly two miles distant, at Cedar Bluff, and Samuel Anderson was postmaster. In 1859, the mail route was changed from the west side of Cedar Creek, via Garnett, and in the spring of that year the post-office of Garnett was established, and Dr. Thomas Lindsay appointed postmaster. The first mail was received in May, and consisted of about twenty-five letters and fifty papers.

In April, 1859, the county-seat was removed to Garnett, and the records removed from Shannon.

On February 9, 1859, the Territorial Legislature passed an act to incorporate the Town Company, with R. B. Hall, T. Harris, J. Y. Campbell, James Locke, D. W. Houston and W. C. Hall as incorporators. This company met on April 9, elected R. B. Hall, President, and T. Harris, Secretary, and issued certificates of stock to the members.

In the fall of 1859, the Commissioner of the General Land Office made an order canceling the entry of the towns of Garnett and Troy, for the reason that there was a law of Congress preventing the entry of an entire section of government land for town purposes. This left the occupants of the two town sites on Government land, to which they had no legal claim. Therefore Dr. John B. Chapman pre-empted the south half of the old Garnett site, and W. A. Johnson settled and pre-empted the north half of the old Troy town site.

On April 4, 1860, the settlers on the north half of the old Garnett site, and on the south half of the Troy site, formed themselves into a Town Company under the name of the Town Company of Garnett, with a capital stock of $8,000, divided into two hundred shares of $40 each. This was for the purpose of securing a title to the lots occupied. On April 9, a certificate of corporation was drawn up, and was acknowledged before Charles Hidden, a Justice of the Peace. The town incorporators were: D. W. Houston, B. D. Benedict, J. G. Smith, C. P. Alvey, G. W. Iler, W. A. Johnson, M. J. Alkire and B. F. Ridgeway. The certificate was duly filed in the office of the Secretary of the Territory, on May 14, 1860. The company then opened books for a subscription of stock. The two hundred shares were soon taken by fifty-seven stockholders. The directors and officers elected were: D. W. Houston, President; B. D. Benedict, Vice-President; J. G. Smith, Secretary; and C. P. Alvey, Treasurer.

The company then surveyed and laid off the town site into streets, alleys, blocks and lots. A plat was made, duly signed and acknowledged by the President, and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of the county. The company then applied to J. Y. Campbell, then Probate Judge of the county, requesting him to pre-empt the town site for the use and benefit of its occupants. This Judge Campbell refused to do, as he was the agent of the old Louisville Town Company. The company then petitioned him to grant an order declaring them a municipal corporation, and though the petition was signed by more than two-thirds of the legal voters of the town, the Judge refused to issue the order.

The citizens then held a mass meeting and appointed G. A. Cook, B. F. Ridgeway and A. Simmons a committee to confer with the Judge, but still he refused. The meeting then appointed a committee of fifteen to consult with him, but the result was the same. The citizens then applied to the Territorial Legislature of 1861, for a charter of incorporation of the town of Garnett. The bill passed the House, but when it came before the Council it was defeated.

To the citizens of Garnett, matters began to assume a serious aspect. About five hundred people resided on the town site, to which they had no legal title, and which it was impossible to secure without the action of the Probate Judge. In September, 1861, the citizens appointed A. W. Johnson and D. W. Houston to investigate the matter and see what could be done, legally, to secure to the occupants of the town site their homes. They found on consulting the county records, that Judge Campbell who had been elected to his office for a term of two years, under the Wyandotte constitution, had not qualified according to the law, in some respects. They then procured certificates and affidavits of that fact and presented the matter to Gov. Robinson, with a petition for the appointment of Charles Hidden as Probate Judge. After a thorough examination of the case, the Governor complied with the request of the petitioners.

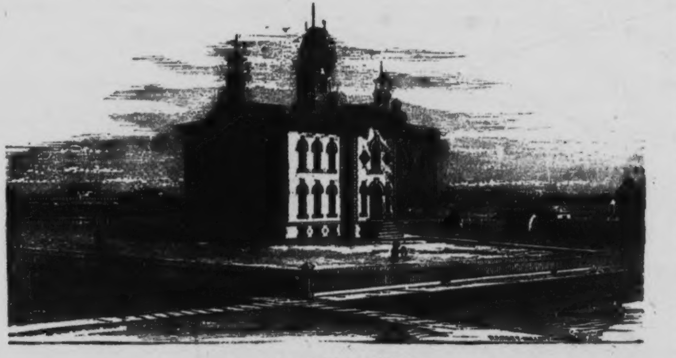
The Governor's commission to Charles Hidden appointing him Probate Judge, arrived late in the evening, but he qualified for the office that night, and the next morning called on Campbell, and demanded the books and papers belonging to the office, but he refused to give them up. Application was then made to District Judge S. O. Thacher, for an order to compel him to do so. The parties were summoned to appear before Judge Thacher at Lawrence, and he, after a full hearing, granted the order, addressed it to G. A, Cook, Sheriff of Anderson County, and directed him to seize all the effects of the Probate Judge's office and deliver them to Charles Hidden. Campbell then appealed to Thomas Ewing, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Sheriff Cook proceeded to execute the order, but found nothing but the seal of the court and an empty desk. Though forbidden by Campbell, the Sheriff took possession of these and delivered them to Hidden.

On October 7, 1861, Charles Hidden, Probate Judge of Anderson County, declared the town of Garnett, a municipal corporation, under the law of February, 1859, and at the same time appointed G. W. Iler, G. A. Cook, William McLaughlin, B. F. Ridgeway and Thomas Lindsay, Trustees. On the 17th of the same month, G. W. Iler as Chairman of the Board of Trustees, pre-empted the town site in trust for the use and benefit of its occupants.

At the January term of the Supreme Court, 1862, the appeal of Judge Campbell was argued, and after considering the case two weeks, Chief Justice Ewing affirmed the decision of Judge Thacher. This settled the title of the town site.

During the years of the controversy over the town site, the growth of Garnett was very slow, as new comers were afraid to invest in town property. After that until the close of the war but little improvement was made, as nearly every able-bodied man residing in the town was either in the army or was enlisted in the State militia. Besides this, from the same cause, immigration to the county was slow during those years. After the close of the war the county began to be settled quite rapidly, and the town improved slowly until the building of the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Galveston Railroad (now the K. C., L. & S. K. R. R.) in the spring of 1870, it being completed to Garnett on March 1. The town then began to grow very rapidly. This improvement was kept up until the financial crash of 1873, and the grasshopper devastation the next year. For two or three years, times were very dull, when the town again began to increase in population and in the number of business houses. In 1878, there were upward of 1,100 inhabitants. In 1879 the Arizona Division of the Missouri Pacific Railroad was built, since which time the city of Garnett has continued to grow steadily until the present date. Of late years the business houses and residences built have generally been of a substantial character, many of them being constructed from brick and stone.



PUBLIC SCHOOL, GARNETT.

The Big Fire.—On the night of March 23, 1881, at about eleven o'clock, an alarm of fire was given. There were among the business houses on the south side of the public square a number of frame buildings, built closely together, and it was in one of these that the fire started. So rapidly did the flames spread, that within fifty-five minutes from the time the alarm was sounded, eleven buildings were destroyed. They were all in the business center of the city, and some of them contained large stocks of goods. But little was saved, and altogether, many thousand dollars worth of property was destroyed. This fire was a hard blow on the losers, but resulted in giving the town a better class of buildings, as the entire street was soon built up with large and substantial structures of brick and stone. This is now the finest and most magnificent part of the city.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

Garnett was incorporated as a town on October 7, 1861. The first Board of Trustees were: G. W. Iler, Thomas Lindsay, B. F. Ridgeway, G. A. Cook and William McLauglin. G. W. Iler was chosen Chairman, and G. W. Arrell, Clerk.

On February 26, 1870, the citizens voted to change the form of government to that of a city of the third class, and on the fourth day of the succeeding April an election was held. L. K. Kirk was elected Mayor, and Joseph Coe, E. S. Hunt, C. P. Alvey, C. T. Chapin and John Cox, Councilmen. J. Q. Hutchinson was the first City Clerk. The present city officers are as follows: J. D. Woodworth, Mayor; Samuel Crum, J. G. Hiatt, H. K. Winans, Wesley Huff, and H. K. Herbert, Councilmen; George T. Hutchinson, City Treasurer; J. S. Whitford, City Attorney; George M. Everline, Police Judge and City Clerk.

Fire Department.—The city has an efficient fire company, composed of forty members. Harry Cox is Chief; J. Shaw and J. R. Whitney, Assistants. It was organized February 1, 1877. The department has one engine, a hose-cart and hook-and-ladder fixtures.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, AND SOCIETIES.

As soon as the settlement of the town commenced schools were established, since which time the educational interests of Garnett have developed as the town has increased in population and wealth. The present schoolhouse is a large two-story structure of red brick, with white cut-stone trimmings. On the inside it is finely finished with black walnut and oak. The ceilings are high, and the ventilation and heating apparatus good. The first floor contains four rooms, and on the upper floor are three. Eight teachers are employed, and the school is ably conducted, under the charge of H. M. Upp. The number of pupils is 398. The schoolhouse was built in 1872, at a cost of $28,000, and has a good basement story. It is located on the corner of Third Avenue and Pine Street.

Ever since the settlement of the town, all religious institutions have been liberally supported. There are now several church organizations, all in a prosperous condition.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.—Early in the history of Garnett this church organized a society. In 1870 a large church was built, and in 1881 it was remodeled and an addition made to it on the south side, making it one of the most convenient church buildings in the city. The church property is valued at $5,000. The church has a very large membership. Rev. F. M. Sisson is the pastor. The Sabbath-school is well attended.

The United Presbyterian Church.—This is one of the oldest organized religious societies in Garnett. The first church was erected in 1860. This is also one of the largest organizations of the denomination in the State. For a time the society supported a college here, but it was finally abandoned. Regular services are held in one of the finest churches in the county. Rev. C. H. Strong, the pastor, has had charge of the society for a number of years. The new church was built in 1881, at a cost of $4,000.

The First Presbyterian Church.—This society was organized in 1868, and in 1870 a neat and substantial church edifice was erected. The society has quite a large membership, and is in charge of Rev. William Coleman. The Sabbath-school is well attended, and N. J. Paxton is superintendent.

The Christian Church.—This society has a small membership. The church building is a neat little structure, and was erected in 1872. Prayer meeting is held every Wednesday evening, and Sabbath-school and Bible-class every Sabbath; regular services twice each month, by Rev. Henry Martan, pastor.

The First Baptist Church.—This church was organized in 1860, and has a good membership. Their house of worship is a neat and comfortable structure, built in 1881, at a cost of $3,000. Services are held regularly. Elder E. H. Stewart is pastor, and John Neville, superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

The Roman Catholic Church.—This church has held regular services for a number of years, and has quite a large membership. The church was built in 1871, and is a neat stone structure. Services are held twice each month by Rev. Father Albert Heiman, of Mount Carmel College.

The Universalist Church.—This society has quite a large membership, and services were held regularly until the death of the pastor, Rev. W. P. Shockey, a few months since. The society is now without a pastor.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church—Quinn Chapel.—This church society has a small membership. The church is a small stone building, and was erected in 1874. Services are held regularly by Rev. Daniel Oaks. The superintendent of the Sabbath-school is Mr. Whitford.

The Second Baptist Church (African).—Services are held in this church every two weeks. The membership is small, and the church is a small building. Elder John Brown is pastor, and Sadie Irvin, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Delphian Lodge, No. 44, A., F. & A. M.—This lodge was instituted in 1864, under a dispensation from the State Grand Lodge to W. C. McDow, J. T. Lanter, C. T. Chapin, M. A. Page, J. W. Stewart, I. E. Hallowell, E. W. Robertson, and Benjamin Lewellin. The first Officers were: W. C. McDow, W. M.; M. A. Page, S. W.; E. W. Robertson, J. W. Winans, C. C.; Chas. McCrum, V. C.; J. L. Kirchival, P.; James Wagstaff, K. of R. & S.; H. M. Ellis, M. of E.; W. A. Post, M. of F.; W. H. Cox, M at A.

THE PRESS AND OTHER BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The Garnett Plaindealer.—This was the first newspaper published in the county, and was established in January, 1865, by I. E. Olney, who continued its publication until his death in the fall of 1866, after which it was conducted by his widow, Mrs. Olney, until the spring of 1870, being edited the most of that period, at different times, by William Duncan, George W. Cooper and Adrian Reynolds. In 1870, the office was purchased by Leslie J. Perry, who sold the old material, and put in a new office throughout. The next year the office was sold to John S. Wilson, who published the paper for about two years, when it was purchased by W. R. Spooner, who added new material, enlarged the paper, and edited it in an able manner until September, 1874, when it was sold to Kauffman & Iler. S. H. Dodge then became editor. In 1877, Solomon Kauffman purchased the entire office and assumed the editorial management. In 1880, the firm name became Kauffman & Brooke, the junior member of the firm being now the editor. The Plaindealer is a large and well edited newspaper, printed on a Campbell power-press. Since 1880 it has been Republican in politics. It has a large circulation.

The Garnett Courant.—This was the second newspaper published in the county, and was established in October, 1868, by W. H. Johnson, but after a few weeks it was discontinued.

The Garnett Weekly Journal.—This is the official paper of Anderson County. It was established January 3, 1878, by Dr. Geo. W. Cooper, who has since continued to edit it in a very able manner. It has a large circulation, and in politics it is said to be independent, though for the last few years it has advocated the principles of the Greenback party.

In 1870, John R. Foster & Co. established a bank which continued in business until 1872, when the Anderson County Savings Bank was incorporated with a capital of $50,000. The first Board of Directors were: W. H. Conover, E. I. Meeker, Thomas W. Foster, Wm. Spriggs, Isaac Knouff, John R. Foster, A. Bergen, J. P. Crane and W. F. Smith. W. H. Conover was elected President; and John R. Foster, Cashier. These positions they still occupy. J. T. Walker was the first Vice-President, but he was succeeded by R. H. Moore. The present Board of Directors are: W. H. Conover, M. A. Crouse, R. H. Moore, A. J. Seber, L. K. Kirk, John R. Foster and J. D. Woodward. The above named are all residents of the county. The bank does a general banking and collection business, and enjoys a large patronage.

The first manufacturing industry was a saw and grist-mill, brought in by the Louisville colony in 1857. This was kept in operation for several years changing owners several times. There have at different times been other mills operated on the Garnett town site.

The Garnett Mills.—This is a large steam flouring and grist-mill which has been in operation for several years, and is located about on the site of the Louisville colony mill. It is the largest mill in the county, manufactures an excellent quality of flour, and is owned and operated by Charles McCrum.

The Elevator Mills.—In 1876, a large grain elevator was built by Kirkpatrick & Harbison. In 1878, a saw-mill was attached. In 1881 the flour-mill was added. It is run by steam, and has a capacity for sawing 2,000 feet of lumber, and forty barrels of flour per day. Kirkpatrick & Witherspoon are the proprietors.

Washing Machine Factory.—W. H. Stein, proprietor and inventor of Stein's Washer, has a small factory where quite a number of machines are made each year.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

R. S. AYRES, Agent, K. C. L., & S. K. R. R. Co., was born in Owen County, Ky., December 2, 1844, and when quite young, emigrated with his parents to Macon County, Ill., where he was reared on a farm. He came to Kansas, January 2, 1869. Was for about three years employed as assistant freight agent at Paola, for the K. C., Ft. S., & G. R. R. Co. His next permanent location was at Iola, Allen County, where he was employed as station agent for the K. C., L., & S. K. R. R. Co., which position he occupied until September 1, 1882, when he was transferred to Garnett. Mr. Ayres has had considerable experience in his present capacity and is popular with the traveling public.

FRANK G. BARBER, merchant, was born in Cedarville, Green Co., Ohio, in 1841, and was reared on a farm. He enlisted in June, 1861, in Company D, Twelfth Ohio Infantry. He was severely wounded at the battles of Skerry Creek and Cloyd Mountain, and at the latter was taken prisoner and confined in Rebel hospitals for about six months. Mr. Barber served four years in the war and was discharged on account of wounds. After the war he followed mercantile pursuits at Cedarville. He came to Garnett, March 26, 1869, and at once engaged in merchandise business in company with his brother, A. G. Barber. Three years later he purchased his brother's interest and has since conducted the business alone. The firm began with a stock of about $2,500, and a $14,000 stock is now carried to supply the demands of the business. He was elected County Commissioner in 1879, and resigned eighteen months later.

J. H. BEATTY, was born in Bellefontaine, Logan Co., Ohio, September, 6, 1845. At the age of fourteen years he was employed as a clerk in the dry goods house of Beatty & Hinkle. He continued to sell goods until 1862. He enlisted in 1862, in Company I, Ninety-sixth Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Served about one year. Re-enlisted February, 1864, joining the same company and regiment, and was discharged February, 1866, serving altogether about three years. He came to Kansas in 1869, engaged in different branches of business, traveling as special agent for the Continental Life Insurance Company; also managed the State for the Covenant Mutual Life Insurance Company of St. Louis. Removing from Lawrence to Williamsburg, Franklin, Co., Kan., he established the first paper in that town. Disposing of his printing office, he started the Great Central Land Office at that place; after conducting this successfully, he disposed of the business to Hewitt Craik, removing to Garnett, he established the Kansas Land and Investment Company of which he is superintendent. $40,000 worth of Anderson County Land changed hands through this agency the first five months of business. One of the principal features of this agency is investing money for non-residents. Money loaned on Kansas farm property, taxes paid, etc., etc., etc. Have about 100,000 of choice land in Kansas, ranging in prices from $3 to $10 per acre. Improved farms from $8 to $30 per acre.

JACOB BLUM, meat market, dealer in live stock, hides, etc., was born in Logan, Hocking Co., Ohio., December 17, 1842. There he learned the trade of tanner, and for two years carried on a tannery, and was also employed for a time in butcher business. He came to Kansas in the spring of 1869, located at Garnett, and established himself in present business. He has the oldest meat market in the place; has a large trade, and does a considerable business in jobbing meats, etc., to the trade. He is also a partner in the grocery business of Scott & Co., at this place. Mr. Blum owns two large stone buildings, his own business building which is brick, and a fine residence, to which is attached four acres, largely in fruit trees.

DR. D. T. BROWN, was born at Sparta, Ill., in 1837. He studied medicine at Michigan University, Ann Arbor, graduating in class of 1857 and 1858. In June, 1861, he enlisted in Company I, Twenty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served two years; he was then appointed Hospital Steward, serving in that capacity until the close of the war. The Doctor then attended the college of physicians and surgeons at Keokuk, Iowa, graduating June, 1865, afterwards practiced in Randolph County, Ill. In 1868, he changed his location to Cass County, Wis., and in 1869, removed to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he continued to practice his profession until November, 1880, when he came to Garnett. The Doctor is building up quite an extensive practice in the city and surrounding country. He is a member of the Iowa State Medical Society, and also the Union Medical Society of that State.

F. G. BRUNS, farmer, P. O. Garnett, was born in Germany, June 11, 1829. There he learned the trade of cabinet-maker, and followed that occupation for a livelihood. In 1854, he emigrated to Louisville, Ky., where he worked at his trade. He came to Garnett, August 10, 1857, and was for a time engaged in building a flour and grist-mill. In November, 1858, he engaged in the furniture business. In 1865, he admitted to a partnership, O. F. Fabricius. They built up a large and extensive trade. In 1878, Mr. Fabricius sold out his interest, and Mr. Bruns conducted the business until February, 1880, when he disposed of it. He has 355 acres of land in Anderson County. Of this he cultivates eighty-five acres, and raises considerable live-stock. He also has a nice orchard. Mr. Bruns was for four years a member of the City Council of Garnett. He was married in Germany, in 1858, to Dorette Kollmann. They have a family of seven children—Charles G., the first child born in Garnett; Amelia, Sophia, August, Lewis, Frank, and Mary. Mr. Bruns is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., and K. of P.

WM. H. CONOVER, president of the Anderson County Savings Bank, was born in Cass County, Ill., February 14, 1832, and reared on a farm, and for some years conducted a farm of 660 acres on his own account. He came to Kansas in March, 1870, and located in Garnett. Mr. Conover is one of the largest raisers and shippers of live-stock in Anderson County. He owns a stock-farm of 1,100 acres in this county—besides other lands. He still owns his farm in Illinois, and is interested in a rancho of 15,000 acres in Clay County, Tex., where he has, with others, about 6,000 head of cattle. Mr. Conover was one of the organizers of the Anderson County Savings Bank in 1870, and has been elected president of the same at each annual election.

J. M. CRAIG, dealer in drugs, etc., was born at Bloomington, Ind., in 1845, and reared on a farm, following agricultural pursuits there until May, 1872, when he came to Garnett, and engaged in the drug business, in company with J. A. Gailey. He sold out his interest a year later, and embarked in the same business alone, carrying it on since. He has a nice store and fixtures. Has a good trade and carries a stock of $2,000 to $2,500. Mr. Craig was elected Probate Judge of Anderson County, in the fall of 1874, and re-elected in 1876, serving in all four years. He was Deputy Treasurer of the county for a time, and on February 1, 1882, was appointed Treasurer to fill a vacancy, which position he held until November 15th following.

DR. GEO. W. COOPER, editor and proprietor of the Journal, was born in Westmoreland County, Pa., December 16, 1828. His father was Maj. Samuel Cooper, a lawyer by profession, but a Major in the regular army during the war of 1812. His mother was the daughter of Dr. Joseph Weigley, a graduate of the University of Leipsic, Germany. At the suggestion of his mother, Geo. W. was at an early age made an apprentice in the printing office of the Pittsburgh Sun. At the age of fourteen years, he was a local reporter on that paper, and at the age of eighteen years, he was local editor. Soon afterwards he began the study of medicine with his brother James, at York, Pa. He finished his course of study, graduated and received his diploma from the Cincinnati Eclectic Institute. He was married November 14th, 1849, to Mary Latshaw, of Johnstown, Pa. In 1850 he removed to Alliance, Ohio, where he engaged in the practice of medicine. After two years he returned to Pittsburgh, but in a short time removed to Paris, Ill., where, in partnership with Wm. D. Latshaw, he began the publication of the Wabash Valley Republican, which was continued until the fall of 1854, when the office was burned. The next year he went to Louisville, Ky.; and founded the Daily Mercury, which he published until the Know-Nothing riot of 1856. He then removed to Anderson County, Kan., founded the town of Garnett, and laid out other town sites. Since 1856, he has been one of the leading public men of the county. He was surgeon of the Tenth Kansas Militia. He was also United States Examining Surgeon for pension during Johnson's administration, and a part of Grant's. He is a prominent Odd Fellow, having first joined Paris Lodge, No 96, in the year 1852.

M. A. CROUSE, retired merchant, was born in Circleville, Pickaway Co., Ohio, November 15, 1844. He was for some time employed as a collection clerk in the First National Bank at that place, and during the war was employed in the United States Quartermaster's Department at Chattanooga, Tenn., for ten months, after which he returned to Circleville, where he kept books for an extensive wholesale grocery house. In February, 1870, he came to Garnett and engaged in the general merchandise business, in company with George E. Wittich. They built up a large and extensive trade throughout the neighboring country, and in August, 1882, sold out to Pollard & Pierce. Mr. Crouse is largely engaged in real estate speculations in Kansas City and is a stock owner in the Clay County Cattle Company, Texas, which concern has 15,000 acres of land and about 6,000 head of cattle.

R. A. DAVIS, of R. A. Davis & Co., druggists, is a native of Belmont County, Ohio, and came to Anderson County, Kan., in 1869. He assisted his father on the farm and also taught school for several terms. In October, 1875, he came to Garnett and was employed as a clerk in the drug business. In 1876 he purchased an interest in his employer's business, and in June, 1878, the firm changed to R. A. Davis & Co., R. A. Miles being his partner. Mr. Davis has had quite an extensive experience in this business and is a practical druggist. The firm do an extensive business, and carry a stock of about $4,000 to supply the demands of their trade.

GEORGE M. EVERLINE, insurance, claim and collection agent, was born in Bavaria in 1831, and emigrated in 1838 with his parents to Pickaway County, Ohio, where he was reared on a farm. In 1854 he moved to Macon County, Ill., where he farmed, and in 1857 he engaged in the general merchandise business at Oakley in that county, and was also postmaster and railroad agent at that place until he ceased and came to Kansas in May, 1864. In June he enlisted at Paola in Company H, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and was mustered out in September 1865, after which he was employed in the mercantile business at Ottawa for three months, and taught school for a time in Franklin County. In the spring of 1866 he came to Garnett, clerking for five months. In the fall he was elected Clerk of the District Court, served four years, and was re-elected in the fall of 1870. He established his present business in the fall of 1867, and is now the oldest insurance agent in this city. He represents about twenty-two leading home and foreign companies. Mr. Everline has held the office of Police Judge for the past eight years, has been Justice of the Peace since 1878, and in 1876 held the office of Deputy Register of Deeds for a year.

JOHN R. FOSTER, cashier of the Anderson County Savings Bank, was born in Tennessee in 1841 and reared in Webster County, Mo., where his parents removed when he was quite young. He pursued for some years the business of stock-raising. When war was declared, the Southern States were in arms, demanding the recognition of a Southern Confederacy, and the nation's life was in peril, he took sides with the loyal citizens of Missouri, who so earnestly supported the National Administration. He enlisted in the Union Army in 1861, was commissioned Captain of Company F, Eighth Missouri State Militia Cavalry (Col. J. W. McClurg's regiment). Was wounded at the battle of Lone Jack, Mo., August 16, 1862, where forty-one men of his company were killed and wounded. This was almost a hand-to-hand fight, probably one of the hardest-fought battles in Western Missouri. Was with General Schofield's campaign in Arkansas in the fall of 1862. Was Provost-Marshal at Marshfield, Mo., in 1863. Was with General Pleasanton's campaign through the States of Missouri and Kansas after the rebel General Price in October 1864. Was in seven hotly contested engagements during this campaign and had his mare shot from under him while fighting Joe Shelby's rebel Brigade at the crossing of the Marrow south of Jefferson City, Mo. He was in General John B. Sanborn's Brigade, which received a handsome mention by General Pleasanton in General Order No. 6, for brave and gallant fighting displayed in the many engagements during the campaign. This is a part of the Captain's history of which he feels justly proud, the more so from having come from a slave State, reared and educated amid the Southern element, and having at that time considerable interest in slaves as property; however, his loyalty to the Government outweighed all pecuniary interests. After being honorably mustered out of the service in May, 1865, he engaged in business pursuits at Lebanon, Mo. In 1867 he removed to Pleasant Hill, Mo., where he was employed in the banking house of Leonard Dunbaugh & Co., first as bookkeeper and then as teller. He came to Garnett in the spring of 1870 and established the banking firm of John R. Foster & Co., which in the summer of 1872 was incorporated into the Anderson County Savings Bank, with a capital of $50,000, and he has since been cashier of the same. This bank is one of the solid institutions of the county and is backed by the leading men in Garnett and the surrounding country, as will be seen by the history of the bank elsewhere. Mr. Foster has, since 1873, resided on his farm near the city of Garnett. He has 960 acres of land and is an extensive raiser and dealer in cattle, hogs and mules.

THOMAS W. FOSTER, County Clerk, was born in Webster County, Mo., in 1849 and was reared on a farm, after which he followed mercantile pursuits at Lebanon and Pleasant Hill, and was for two years employed as bookkeeper at St. Louis, Mo. He came to Kansas May 5, 1870, and located at Garnett, where in March of said year he established in company with his brother the banking firm of John R. Foster & Co. Two years later this business was changed to the Anderson County Savings Bank, and he was assistant cashier of the same until 1876, when he sold his interest in the bank and moved onto his farm near the city and embarked in the live-stock business. He was appointed Deputy Treasurer of Anderson County in 1876, filling that position for three years. He was elected Clerk of the county in November, 1879, and was re-elected in November, 1881. He has also served as a member of the City Council for four years.

H. W. FRENCH, general merchant, was born in Circleville, Pickaway County, Ohio. He was for a short time employed as a clerk in mercantile pursuits at Columbus, Ohio. He enlisted December 15, 1864, in Company H, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Ohio Infantry, and served three months. He went to Davenport, Iowa; was employed as a clerk and in the spring of 1870 came to Garnett. For three years he followed mercantile pursuits as a clerk and in 1873 established his present business. He began in a small way, but has now a large and lucrative trade, carrying a well assorted stock to supply the demands of his business.

HON. CHARLES A. GREGG, brick and stone mason by trade, was born in New York City, March 15, 1828. At or near the age of ten years his parents removed to Lake County, Ind., where he was raised on a farm. About 1850 he removed to La Porte, where he learned the trade of bricklayer and followed it as an occupation. In March, 1857, he came to Anderson County, Kan., took up and pre-empted 160 acres of land, but on account of illness in the family returned east to Kansas City, where he was employed at his trade for three years. In 1860 he moved to Paola, Kan., and engaged in the mercantile business, but owing to the severe drouth of that year his business dwindled down in a few months till it did not pay, so he sold out and quit. In the fall of 1860 he was appointed Deputy Treasurer of the county under W. J. McCown and was engaged in Treasurer's office between two and three months until the Treasurer died, when his deputyship ended, and J. H. Pratt succeeded to the office. In 1861 he was appointed, by the County Board of Commissioners, Assessor of Miami County to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of the Assessor-elect, and filled the office to the apparent satisfaction of his fellow-citizens. During the years 1862 and 1863 he worked at his trade some, and also assessed several of the townships as Deputy Assessor a portion of the time, also being employed as enrolling officer to enroll names preparatory to raising a draft (which however it did not become necessary as enlistments were sufficient). On March 24, 1864, he enlisted in the service of his country, and he with his comrades to the number of about 100 formed Company I, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry. Soon after the company was formed he was chosen First Sergeant of the company, and with the exception of a few days, (when the boys becoming a little dissatisfied, clamored for a change, which when made, was not satisfactory,) he was re-instated and held the position until he was mustered out, which occurrence took place November 28, 1865. In March, 1866, he returned to Anderson County and was engaged in farming until 1869, during which time in 1868 he was nominated on the Republican ticket and was elected to the Legislature without any opposition, which position he tried to fill—as as has ever been his desire when trust has been reposed in him—honestly, faithfully and without dissimulation. In the fall of 1869 he moved to Garnett, since which time, he has been engaged part of the time, in the bricklaying business, and part of the time in mercantile pursuits.

C. F. HENSON & BROTHER, lumber and building materials. This business was established in 1873 by J. D. Woodworth. In 1876 Mr. Woodworth purchased a hardware stock, and March 11, 1878, C. F. Henson was admitted as a partner, the business being conducted under the style of J. D. Woodworth & Co. In January, 1881, the style changed to Woodworth & Henson. In April, 1882, Mr. Woodworth sold out his interest to the above firm. They have an extensive trade, carrying in the yard all kinds of lumber, building materials, etc. The stock in that business amounts to about $12,000. Their store is also well supplied with all kinds of hardware, etc., and the demands of their trade in this business compelled them to carry a fine stock of about $5,000. They do quite a business in the manufacture of tinware. C. F. Henson, the senior member of the firm, came to Garnett in 1870 and was for a time engaged in contracting and building. J. F. Henson, his partner came here in 1871 and followed the same business for several years. Was also for a time employed as a clerk in store of Woodworth & Henson. The brothers are natives of Clinton County, Ohio, are both practical business men, and do a heavy business in their line.

J. G. HIATT, of Hiatt & Lanter, merchants, was born in Wayne County, Ind., March 24, 1838, and was raised on a farm. In 1852 he moved to Madison County, Iowa, where he followed agricultural pursuits. In July, 1858, he came to Anderson County; resided with his father, Nathan Hiatt, and assisted on the farm. Two years later he purchased land four miles from Garnett and began to farm on his own account. In the fall of 1861 he enlisted in Company A, Second Kansas Cavalry, and was mustered out in April, 1865, after which he followed agricultural pursuits up to February, 1871, when he engaged in the grocery business in Garnett. This he disposed of eighteen months later, and for six months was engaged in the livery business, afterward employed as a salesman in the general merchandise business. On January 1, 1879 he engaged in this business in company with C. W. Durstine. The latter died, and his interest was sold to J. T. Lanter in February, 1882. The firm carry a nice stock of general merchandise with some $8,000, and do an extensive trade. Mr. Hiatt was married in Greeley, Kansas, in 1860, to Mary E. Pattie. They have seven children.

EDWARD S. HUNT, the oldest real estate man in Anderson County, his office being established in 1867. Was born of Quaker parentage in South Charleston, Clark County, Ohio, in 1832. Was educated for a civil engineer. Was married in 1855 to Delphina Coffin of Wayne County, Ind. Removed from Ohio to Indiana in the fall of 1863 and engaged in pork-packing and dry goods. Removed to Kansas in November, 1867, and engaged in the real estate business at Garnett. Was appointed right of way commissioner on the L. L. & G. R. R., in 1870 and has since been in the real estate department of that road. He was elected County Treasurer in 1872 and re-elected in 1874, serving two terms. Received the appointment of local land agent from the M. K. & T. R. R. Company in 1876, which he still holds. He is a member of Delphian Lodge No. 44, A., F. & A. M., Zion Chapter No. 24, Garnett, Kan., and Tancred Commandery No. 11, Ottawa, Kan. He is now engaged in real estate and fish culture.

GEORGE W. ILER, real estate and loan agent, was born in Fredericks County, Md., February 28, 1830, and reared on a farm. At the age of nineteen years he removed to Indianapolis, Ind., and there learned the trade of house and sign painter and followed it as an occupation. He came to Leavenworth, Kan., May 14, 1857, and carried on a painting and wall paper establishment at Leavenworth until February, 1859. He went to Neosho County and with others located Osage City, which he afterward abandoned. In the latter part of March, 1859, he came to Anderson County and located at Garnett and formed a partnership with J. G. Smith and carried on a general merchandise business until the fall of 1861, when he sold out and went East for a time on account of his wife's ill health. During the war he served in the Tenth Kansas State Militia and was Captain of Company B, of that regiment from 1863 until after the Price raid. During this period his main business was dealing in live-stock. In 1866 he again engaged in general merchandise business, continuing until some time in 1869. Was then for some four years engaged in agricultural pursuits, general trading, etc. In 1873 he became associated with S. Kaufman in real estate business. In August, 1874, they purchased the Plain Dealer, and when the firm dissolved in 1878, Mr. Iler took the real estate business, which he has since continued. He is land agent for the M. K. & T. R. R. Company. He was Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Garnett at the time it was pre-empted in 1862, and held that office for several years. Was elected County Commissioner in 1879 and served two years, and has served many times in the City Council of Garnett. Mr. Iler is District Deputy Grand Master of the I. O. O. F., and has filled that position almost continuously since 1866.

HON W. A. JOHNSON, attorney, is of Scottish parentage, and was born in Gillford County, N. C., January 19, 1830. Colonel Daniel Johnson, his father, removed to Vernon, Ind., in 1832. He intended to give his son, the subject of this sketch, a good classical education, and for this purpose sent him for a while to the Vernon Academy and then to the College at Hanover. But his death in 1846 put a period to his calculations and the collegiate education of his son; for, being the eldest, he was obliged to assume the cares and responsibilities of the farm. In 1852 he began the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1855. He then came westward to find a location, but did not bring his family until 1858, at which time he settled in Garnett and began the practice of law. In the fall of 1859 he was elected County Attorney of Anderson County, but the war coming on in 1861 brought him before the public in another manner, for he was one of the first who responded to the call for soldiers. He began as one of General Lane's staff officers and was connected with the army in different capacities until 1863, when he was made Captain of Company M, Fifteenth Kansas Cavalry and served until mustered out in October, 1865. He returned to Garnett, and on the day of his arrival was elected County Attorney, which office he however declined. He was elected to the State Senate from the Seventeenth District in 1872. When the choice of a President was agitating the people, he canvassed the State. He was elected Presidential Elector, and cast a vote for R. B. Hayes. In 1876 he was appointed by a committee of the citizens of Anderson County to write a history of the county. He labored zealously at the work of historian, and completed the most perfect history that has been written of any county in Kansas. He was appointed early in 1879 assistant attorney in this State of the St. L., K. & A. R. R. Company, and when this road was purchased by the M. P. R. R. Company in November of that year, they confirmed the appointment and he is now assistant attorney for that line in this State.

SOLOMON KAUFFMAN, postmaster, was born in Mifflin County, Pa., January 6, 1832. In 1845 his parents emigrated to Champaign County, Ohio, where he was reared on a farm. At the age of eighteen he learned the trade of carpenter and in 1853 moved to McLain County, Ill., where he worked at his trade a year, then to Iowa City, and in Marshall County, Iowa, for about two years. In May, 1856, he came to Anderson County, Kan., pre-empted 160 acres in Reeder Township, which he improved, and purchased other lands adjoining until he owned 345 acres. He was elected to the office of County Judge in 1857, but refused to qualify under the "bogus laws" then in force. In 1858 he served as a member of the County Board of Supervisors. He took an active part with the Free-State men of Kansas in the troubles of 1856. In December of that year he was instrumental in bringing to the county a colony of eighty-six men who had been in the Free-State army and they established the town of Hiatt. On August 6, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, Third Kansas Infantry. This regiment was afterward consolidated into the Tenth Kansas and he was placed in Company C, of that regiment. On the 11th of September, 1862, he was promoted to First Lieutenant of Company L, Third Indiana Regiment and on May 28, 1863, to Captain and placed in charge of a battery attached to the Indian Brigade. He was mustered out May 31, 1865, and returned to his farm. On the 29th day of August he was joined in wedlock with Miss Melissa J. Patton, who still continues to share the joys and hardships of life with him. In 1868 he was elected to the office of Clerk of the District Court and moved to Garnett. He served as Clerk one term. He was elected Clerk of the District Court in November of that year and served one term. In 1870 he embarked in the real estate business and three years later associated with him in that business George W. Iler. In 1874 they purchased the Plain Dealer and continued to conduct both businesses until February, 1878, when they dissolved and Mr. Kauffman took the paper and published it alone until he admitted his present partner, H. M. Brook, in 1881. On June 14, 1878, Mr. Kauffman was appointed postmaster at Garnett, which position he still occupies.

HON. LESTER K. KIRK, attorney, was born in Mahoning County, Ohio, December 6, 1841, removing with his parents to Mercer County, Pa., when quite young where he was reared on a farm. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Pennsylvania Infantry. Was promoted to Second Lieutenant March 18, 1863, to First Lieutenant February 25, 1864, and to Captain on June the 1st following. While participating in the attack on Petersburg in June, 1864, he received a severe wound in the left shoulder, and on account of this was discharged in the following October. He then studied law at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, with Ambler Bros., and was admitted to the bar in 1865. Mr. Kirk came to Anderson County, Kan., in the Spring of 1866, located near Garnett, and for a few months was engaged in sheep raising. He then moved into Garnett and has since been engaged in the practice of law. He was elected first Mayor of Garnett in 1870, a member of the State Legislature in 1876, and in 1879 he was elected for a term of four years to the State Senate from the Seventeenth District.

He came to Kansas in 1867 and located in Monroe Township, Anderson County, where he followed agricultural pursuits for some years. In 1876 he built, in company with A. Harbison, an elevator at Garnett, with capacity of 7,000 bushels. In 1878 they added a saw-mill, and in the fall of 1881 built a flour-mill adjoining. In the fall of 1881, Mr. Kirkpatrick moved into Garnett. He has been in partnership with J. O. Witherspoon since July, 1882.

JOHN T. LANTER, of Hiatt & Lanter, merchants, was born February 10, 1835, in Wayne County, Indiana, and reared on a farm. At the age of seventeen he went to Arkansas, where he remained about five years. In the spring of 1857 he moved to Kansas and located near Greeley, Anderson County. He at once identified himself with the Free State party, and was sent as a delegate from Anderson County, in 1858, to the Osawatomie Convention, which organized the Republican party in Kansas, and from that time to the present he has been a firm supporter in that party. In May, 1858, he was elected to the Territorial Legislature on the Free-State ticket under the Leavenworth Constitution. In the same year he was a delegate to the Ottumwa Convention, in which nineteen counties that had been disfranchised by the bogus Legislature were represented. He was the author of the Resolution adopted by that Convention which brought the grievances of southern Kansas to the notice of the public. In the spring of 1860 he was elected County Assessor, and the following winter was Engrossing Clerk of the last Territorial Legislature. In 1864 he was appointed United States Assistant Assessor and held that position until the office was abolished. In 1863 he was commissioned Assistant Provost-Marshal with the rank of Lieutenant, and assigned to duty on the border. He remained there about eighteen months. In 1872 he was elected to the State Legislature, where he was active and instrumental in defeating Pomeroy for the United States Senate. In 1873 he was appointed one of the trustees for the State Insane Asylum. He was elected Mayor of the city of Garnett in 1874, and served one term. In 1876 he was appointed one of the State Board of Charities. In 1872 he organized the Citizens' Bank at Garnett, elected President, which position he filled for some years. Since 1878 he has been largely interested in lead mines at Galena, Kansas, and in February, 1882, he became associated with J. G. Hiatt in mercantile business. Previous to organizing the Citizens' Bank, Mr. Lanter followed agricultural pursuits.

He came to Anderson County, March 18, 1871, and located in Rich Township, where he farmed and taught school. He has a fine farm of eighty acres and is an extensive raiser of live-stock. He was elected to his present office in November, 1878, re-elected in 1880 and again in 1882.

JOHN H. SOLLENBERGER, County Surveyor, was born in Starke County, Ohio, in 1836, and reared on a farm. He was for some years employed in the rudiments of surveying and attended the Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., taking a special course, after which he followed his profession in Starke County until October 1878, when he came to Garnett. He at once established himself in his profession at this place. In the fall of 1880 he was appointed City Engineer, and is the present incumbent of that office. He was elected Surveyor of Anderson County in the fall of 1881.

W. H. STEIN, carpenter and builder, was born in Lehigh County, Pa., in October 1838, and reared on a farm in Pickaway County, Ohio. In 1866 he began work as a carpenter and in 1868 he emigrated to Garnett, Kan., where he has since conducted business as a carpenter and builder. In March 1882 he built a shop which has machinery run by steam-power for wood-turning, scroll-sawing, rip-sawing, planing, etc. He also manufactures a washmachine, which he patented April 16, 1878. Mr. Stein has a residence property of twenty-two acres east of Garnett which he has improved and set out in all kinds of fruit-trees, grapevines, berries, etc., making his place one of the best producing fruit-farms in this locality.

R. T. STOKES, undertaker and dealer in furniture, carpets, etc., was born in Putnam County, Ind., in 1840, and eight years later his parents emigrated to McDonough County, Ill., where he was reared on a farm. In August 1861 he enlisted in Company B, Tenth Missouri Infantry. One year later he was promoted to the Quartermaster's Department, and in October 1863 he was made Quartermaster of his regiment, serving in that capacity until September 1864. In August 1865 he came to Kansas and was employed as a clerk in the United States Commissary Department at Leavenworth. In the following spring he went to St. Louis, Mo., where he was employed as a traveling salesman. Returning to Kansas in March 1869, he located at Garnett. He established an implement business and carried it on for twelve years. In 1879 he purchased an interest in the Garnett Mills. In October 1880 he bought out his partners, conducting the mills alone until October 1881, when he sold out and went to Kansas City, where he was employed as a traveling salesman. Returning to Garnett in 1882, he embarked in his present business. He has the leading trade in this line in Garnett, to supply the demands of which he carries a large stock of goods.

HON. ISCO P. SUTTON was born in Osage County, Mo., in 1844. In June 1855 his father, James Sutton, emigrated to Anderson County, Kan., and located in Walker Township. The subject of this sketch assisted him in farming. On March 19, 1865, he enlisted in Company L, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, and served eighteen months, after which he gave his attention to farming in Sutton Valley, Anderson County, where he still owns a farm of 165 acres. In January 1878 he removed his place of residence to Garnett, and in February 1881 became associated with Geo. L. Putnam in livery business, and is still a partner in this concern. He was elected Sheriff of Anderson County in 1877, and re-elected in 1879. In the fall of 1882 he was elected Representative on the Greenback ticket from Anderson County.

WILLIAM WAGSTAFF, merchant, was born in Guernsey County, Ohio, May 22, 1834. He learned the trade of harness-maker at Uhrichsville and followed that occupation for several years. At the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion he enlisted in Company I, Eightieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was elected Second Lieutenant. On April 24, 1863, he was promoted First Lieutenant and made Captain of Company F in February 1863, serving until mustered out February 15, 1865. Returning to Uhrichsville, he carried on a grocery business for several years. In 1871 he came to Kansas, resided one summer in Bourbon County and came to Anderson County in 1872. He located in Rich Township and carried on a farm of eighty acres for two years; then in the same capacity in Jackson Township. He located in Garnett in August 1876 and established his present business with a stock of $800. He has built up a nice trade and now carries a thoroughly assorted stock of clothing, hats and caps, boots and shoes, etc., worth $5,000 or more.

M. L. WHITE, dealer in groceries and queensware, was born in Stark County, Ill., November 27, 1846, and came to Anderson County, Kan., with his father, James E. White, in May 1857. He assisted him on the farm in Walker Township until 1867, when he came to Garnett. For four years he was employed as a clerk in the mercantile business, after which he engaged in this business in the firm of Meeker & White. This firm dissolved in 1874, and Mr. White embarked in the grain business, buying and shipping. This he ceased in September 1876, and once more embarked in groceries, queensware, etc. He started with a stock of about $600. His trade has increased and he now carries a fine stock of about $3,500. He is well known throughout the county and is popular.

DR. JAMES H. WHITFORD was born at Circleville, Pickaway Co., Ohio, in April 1822, and for some years assisted his father in wool-carding mills. After reaching the age of manhood he was for a time engaged in contracting for and in the construction of public works through Ohio and Virginia. In 1852 he went to California, where for two years he followed gold-mining. In 1856 he began the study of medicine, attended Starling Medical College, Ohio, and graduated in the class of 1858. He then practiced his profession at Royalton, Ohio, for three years. In August 1861 he was appointed Assistant Surgeon to the Thirty-sixth Ohio Infantry, and was commissioned Surgeon in March 1862, which position he filled until July 29, 1865. After the battle of Antietam he acted as Brigade Surgeon. After the battle of Chickamauga he acted as Medical Director of the Fourth Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, and was for some months Medical Director of the Wheeling district. After the war he practiced at Circleville. The Doctor came to Garnett in May 1867, and has since followed the practice of his profession in this locality.

JOHN STUART WHITFORD, County Attorney, was born at Circleville, Ohio, December 20, 1852, and came with his father, Dr. J. H. Whitford, to Anderson County, in May, 1867. He attended school at Garnett for a year, and assisted his father on his farm in Jackson Township, where he resided up to 1875. During the school terms of 1874-75, and 1876, he taught district school. In 1874, he began the study of law with Judge A. Bergen. In 1876 he went to the State University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and graduated in the class of 1878. He was admitted to the bar at Garnett in September, 1878, and was associated in the practice of law with A. Bergen until the judge removed to Topeka, in October, 1882. Mr. Whitford was elected County Attorney of Anderson County in the fall of 1880.

J. R. WHITNEY, dealer in drugs, wall-paper, etc., was born in Essex County, N. Y., in 1847. He was educated there and at the Middlebury Academy, Vermont. He came to Kansas in April, 1868, located in Lawrence, and was employed in the drug store of B. W. Woodward. In 1870 he came to Garnett, and worked in the branch store of Mr. Woodward at this place for some time. He was then in the employ of W. R. Judson, dealer in drugs, for about three years. In 1875, he embarked in the drug business on his own account. He had very little means—about $50—but has by energy and close application to business, accumulated quite a little property, and built an extensive trade. He owns his brick store, dwelling-house, and has some $4,000 in stock and fixtures. He has been Clerk of Monroe Township, which includes the city of Garnett, for the past four years, and is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F.

GEORGE E. WITTICH, retired merchant, was born in Circleville, Pickaway Co., Ohio, where he followed mercantile business as a clerk. In the spring of 1870, he came to Garnett, and at once established a grocery business in company with M. A Crouse, under the style of Crouse & Wittich, in the same year, Isaac Knouff was taken in and the firm name changed to Knouff, Wittich & Co., which was dissolved in the spring of 1871, at which time George E. Wittich bought Henry Moler's stock of general merchandise, taking in M. A. Crouse, under style of Wittich & Crouse. This firm built up a large and lucrative business which they disposed of in August, 1882, to Pollard & Peirce. Mr. Wittich has considerable real estate in Kansas City, and gives the greater portion of his time to the management of the same in connection with his mining interests in Colorado, where he is interested in several different mines. He is also a stockholder in the Clay County Cattle Company, Texas, which concern has 15,000 acres of land, and over 6,000 head of cattle. He served one term in the City Council.

J. D. WOODWORTH, retired merchant, was born in Greene County, N. Y., September 13, 1835, and reared in Chautauqua County. In 1856, he emigrated to Hancock, Ill. For three years he was employed as a clerk in mercantile business, then he engaged in the dry goods business, which he continued to conduct until he sold out and came to Garnett, in September, 1873. He brought a portion of his stock with him, and was for several months engaged in the disposal of the same. In 1874, he embarked in the lumber business. In the fall of 1876 he purchased a hardware stock, and conducted both businesses alone, up to the spring of 1878, when he admitted to a partnership, C. F. Henson. In August, 1882, he sold out his interest in both businesses, and to some extent is now engaged in dealing in real estate. He was appointed a County Commissioner in 1876, and elected in 1877. He was elected Mayor of Garnett in the spring of 1881, and re-elected in 1882. Mr. Woodworth is one of the leading, enterprising citizens of Garnett.

JOHN C. WOOSTER, fruit grower, Section 30, P. O. Garnett, was born in New Haven County, Conn., in 1804, and nineteen years later removed to Wood County, Ohio. He engaged in agricultural pursuits, accumulated a section of land and cultivated 400 acres of it, besides growing large quantities of fruit. In 1850 he sold his farm and moved to Bowling Green, the county-seat, where for five years he conducted a hotel, afterward followed agricultural pursuits. In the fall of 1862, he was elected Treasurer of the county and served two years. He then returned to New Haven County, Conn., and purchased 900 acres of land, and again followed farming. Mr. Wooster came to Anderson County, Kan., in November, 1873, and engaged in the manufacture of cheese, at Garnett, but only continued that enterprise for a few months. In March, 1874, he purchased his present property, consisting of about seven acres, near the city of Garnett. This he has improved and set out in fruit trees, etc. He has 400 trees of various kinds of fruit, one acre in grapevines, and large quantities of all kinds of berries.

JOSEPH H. WRIGHT, grocer, was born in Warren County, Mo., October 20, 1839, and educated in St. Louis. In 1849, his parents moved to Osage County, Mo., where he was reared on a farm. He came to Anderson County, Kan., in the spring of 1860, and farmed in Monroe Township, until 1878. In February of that year he came to Garnett, and established his present business. He carries a nice stock of about $800. During the Rebellion Mr. Wright served in Company B, Tenth Kansas Militia.

GREELEY.

Greeley is one of the oldest towns in Anderson County, and is situated in Walker Township, in the northeastern part of the county, and on Section 30, Township 19, Range 21 east. The location is a pleasant and favorable one, on the east bank of the Pottawatomie River.

The population of the town is about 400. Almost all branches of business are represented, and with a trade extending far out into a country well settled by a thrifty class of farmers and stock-raisers, the business interests receive a liberal support.

The railroad communications are by the Arizona division of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Since its building in the fall of 1879, the shipping interests of Greeley have developed very rapidly, it now being the best point between Paola and Garnett.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first settlement where Greeley now is, was in May 1854, when two young men, Valentine Gerth and Francis Myer, came with an ox-team and a few horses and cattle, and pitched their tent on the present town site. It was then an Indian field and had just been left by the Indians. After planting and raising the crop, they during the following October built a log cabin on the bank of the river near where the bridge now is. For the next two years the principal settlements of the county were made in the same neighborhood.

The town site of Greeley was selected in the spring of 1856, but was not surveyed and laid out until April 7, 1857. On November 21, 1857, Jacob Benjamin, August Bondi, and Fred. Weimer, associates of the Greeley

Town Company, filed their plat of the town and petition in the office of the Probate Judge, and on the fourteenth day of the following October it was pre-empted by George Wilson, the Probate Judge, for the benefit of the occupants of the town site.

In the spring of 1857 several building were erected and business was lively. The houses were generally built of logs, until a saw-mill could be erected, and timbers sawed. The first store was opened in the spring, by B. F. Smith. A post-office was established about the same time, but as the town was named in honor of Horace Greeley, to whom the Administration was not friendly, the office was named Walker, after Governor R. J. Walker, for whom the township was named the same year. Jacob Benjamin was appointed postmaster. A mail-route was established from Ossawatomie to Neosho City, via Walker and Hyatt. In the spring of 1858 the Greeley Town Company built a saw and grist-mill, which was operated for several years afterward.

The town of Mount Gilead having started up, the post-office was removed to that place in 1858, and soon almost all there was of Greeley was moved over to the new town. For some years Mount Gilead took the lead, but it finally died out, having many disadvantages to contend with, and the post-office was moved back to Greeley, since which time that has been the only village in the township, though for many years its population was less than one hundred.

The first marriage in the vicinity was in 1856, and was that of Oliver P. Rand and Patsy Sutton. This was the first marriage in the county.

The first school taught in the neighborhood was by T. Wadsworth, in a cabin on the claim of M. E. Mitchell. This was the first school in the county and was taught for a term of three months, beginning in November 1856. There were twelve pupils in attendance, some coming from a distance of five miles from the schoolhouse. The salary paid the teacher was $30 per month, with free board among the pupils. The next fall and winter a four months' term was taught in the same cabin by Allen Jaqua, with an average attendance of twenty pupils.

Until after the close of the War of the Rebellion in 1865, Greeley was but a very small village, with a store, post-office, blacksmith-shop, and a few other buildings. About the above date some improvement began and continued slowly until 1874, when it again came to a stand-still, owing to a failure of crops, incident to the grasshopper raid. After one or two dull years the village again began to improve, though not very fast until the railroad was built in 1879. At that time it was a prosperous country town and has ever since improved steadily, until it is now one of the most thriving towns in the county, and is a shipping point of considerable importance.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Greeley was incorporated as a city of the third class, and the first election held July 5, 1881. The officers elected at that time were: Clark Decker, Mayor; D. W. Smith, Police Judge; J. E. Calvert, J. K. Gardner, A. D. McFadden, A. Kincaid, and A. J. Frank, Councilmen. In April, 1882, the first regular election was held and resulted as follows: Clark Decker, Mayor; A. B. Benson, Police Judge; S. F. Stowe, Clerk; Chris. Bouck, Marshal; T. Z. Stevenson, Treasurer; A. Kincaid, W. Frank, J. E. Calvert, T. Z. Stevenson, and W. G. Roth, Councilmen.

As soon as the country was settled schools were established by the enterprising and intelligent settlers. This was one of the first school districts formed and has always had a good school. The present house is rather small, but it is expected a new one will soon be built. The school has now two departments. The teachers are A. D. McFadden and Belle Judy.

The only newspaper published in the town is The Greeley News, which was established June 9, 1881, by Major Samuel E. Rankin. In October, 1881, Rev. S. W. Gilkey became editor and proprietor. In April, 1882, J. H. Gilkey became a partner, and it is now published under the firm name of S. W. & J. H. Gilkey. It is a weekly newspaper, independent in politics, and in size an eight column folio.

The United Brethren in Christ.—As early as the year 1859, W. H. McClure, B. D. Edwards, Henry Hamler, and others began making arrangements for the building of a house of worship for the above named denomination. In 1860, the building of this church was commenced. It was soon enclosed but was not finished for several years. This was the second church edifice in the county. A Union Sabbath-school was organized at the church in the spring of 1860, with W. H. McClure, superintendent, and with about thirty attendants. In 1874, it became a United Brethren school, with L. Champe superintendent. The church society has always been in a prosperous condition. The present membership is thirty-five. Rev. William Strope is pastor.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.—A society was organized by this denomination, soon after the settlement of the country, and services held at the homes of the different members of the congregation. In the spring of 1857, a Methodist Sabbath school was organized by W. C. McDow, at his claim near Greeley. This was the first Sabbath-school in the county, and was well attended. In the summer another Sabbath school was organized in Sutton Valley with R. Robinson superintendent. The church society now has about seventy members, and Rev. N. P. Teddrick is pastor. Arrangements are now being made to erect a house of worship.

The United Presbyterian Church.—This church society was organized March 25, 1880, with twenty-one members. The Trustees then were: R. H. Calvert, T. L. Calvert, Jas. W. Lyon, G G. McFadden, and W. C. Calvert, Sr. The church was built in the summer of 1880, at a cost of $1,300. The society is in a prosperous condition. The pastor Rev. S. W. Gilkey, assumed charge in July, 1881, and became settled pastor in July, 1882.

The Catholic Church.—Church services are held here by the Roman Catholics, but they have no place of worship.

Greeley Lodge, A. F. & A. M.—This lodge was instituted under dispensation, on March 27, 1882. The officers were J. D. Wait, W. M.; Clark Decker, S. W.; L. U. Harrison, J. W.; J. M. DeBall, Sec.; Jesse N. Sutton, Treas.; Henry Boucher, S. D.; S. F. Stowe, J. D.; T. Z. Stevenson, T.; Samuel Rankin, T. The other members were: John Weaver, J. F. King, J. G. Reese, J. Griffith, and J. A. Poyer. The lodge now numbers sixteen members, and starts out with good prospects.

Knights of Pythias, Greeley Lodge, No. 55.—This lodge was instituted September 4, 1882. The first officers were: Robert Sutherland, P. C.; A. B. Benson, C. C; John Weaver, V. C.; John Villhard, M. of F.; R. G. Blunt, M. of E; George Holley, K. of R. & S.; E. R. Stevenson, M. at A.; J. H. Asher, I. G.; and W. E. Carpenter, O. G. The other members were: V. M. Benson, J. S. Goodrich, John Glaze, M. Stanley, James Sutton, G. Sutton, S. Latham, C. Bouck, Thomas Cattle and Arthur McCoy.

United Order Ancient Templars, Greeley Temple, No. 2.—This temple was instituted in June, 1880, with twenty-one members. Following are the names of the officers: U. S. Hickman, P. T.; J. H. Asher, T.; Jennie McFadden, V. T.; Mrs. E. Benson, L.; H. Walker, Rec.; John Ranzenberger, F., John Watt, Treas.; D. McFadden, Mar.; Ella McFadden, I. G.;, Robert Wood, O. G. The present membership is about the same as on its organization. Though not increasing in numbers, it is in a prosperous condition.

In the spring of 1858, a saw and grist-mill was built by the Greeley Town Company, which after being operated several years was abandoned. In 1867, another mill was built by Robinson & McLaughlin, which for several years did a good business. The present Greeley Mills are located in the western part of the town, and are owned and operated by Clark Decker. The mill was commenced in 1874, by Chris. Bouck, who, lacking means to complete it, in the fall of 1875, associated with himself J. K. Gardner and John Weaver of Albany, N. Y., and the building was soon completed. After being operated until 1877, by the above firm, it was purchased by the present proprietor, Clark Decker. The mill is built of stone, and is valued at $13,000. It contains four run of burrs, and is operated by an engine of forty horse-power. Its average grinding capacity is twenty barrels of flour, and 10,000 pounds of meal and feed per day.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

CAMMERBEKE & BOUDEWYNS, manufacturers of brick. This business was established early in the spring of 1882 by the above firm. They manufactured about 200,000 brick in the season of 1882, besides a considerable quantity of drain tile. Their business is the only one of this nature in the county and gives employment to about ten men. Peter Cammerbeke of this firm was born in Anderson County, Kan., December 1, 1857, and was reared on a farm. He was for three years in the mercantile business at Greeley. He has had a practical experience in the manufacture of brick of about three years. His partner, Albert Boudewyns, is a native of Holland. He came to America when he was thirteen years old and learned his trade in St. Louis. He came to Kansas about two years ago and has had a practical experience in this business of about twenty-five years.

CLARK DECKER, proprietor of the Greeley Flouring Mills, was born in Crawford County, Ohio, in 1835, and moved to Delaware County, Ohio, with his parents in 1848, where for some years he followed agricultural pursuits, and also carried on a saw-mill for eleven years. While residing there he held the office of Justice of the Peace for three years. In August, 1864, he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio Infantry and served eleven months. Mr. Decker came to Kansas in 1876 and located in Anderson County and has since been interested in agricultural pursuits. He has 366 acres of land and raises considerable live-stock. In the spring of 1876 he bought a saw-mill which he conducted for about five years. In December, 1877, he purchased the Greeley Mills and has added large improvements. They are now valued at $13,000, and he has a large and extensive trade. The mills have a capacity of forty barrels per day, besides which 10,0 0 pounds of feed, meal, etc., are ground out each day. Mr. Decker also deals extensively in all kinds of grain. He was elected Justice of the Peace in 1876 and still retains the office. Elected Mayor of Greeley in 1881, and re-elected in 1882.

HARRISON & KINCAID, dealers in lumber and general merchandise. L. U. Harrison, the senior member of the firm, was born in Jones County, N. C., and when young moved with his parents to Muscatine County, Iowa, where he followed mercantile pursuits with his father and also farmed to some extent. He came to Kansas in October, 1869, located in Linn County, and followed agricultural pursuits and also raised considerable live-stock. He had a farm of some 300 acres and still owns a farm there of 168 acres. He came to Greeley in March, 1880, and engaged in the lumber business. In January, 1880, he became associated with A. Kincaid, and in January, 1881, they purchased the merchandise business of Peter Cammerbeke, his stock being estimated at $3,400. The firm have a large trade in both businesses. In lumber, they carry a stock of $6,000; and in general merchandise, $8,000 to $10,000, and are the leading business house in Greeley. The junior member of the firm, A. Kincaid, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, and was reared in Mahoning County. When twenty years old he went to Illinois and remained one year. He came to Kansas in 1858 and located in Linn County, where he pre-empted 160 acres and followed agricultural pursuits. He went to Colorado in 1860 and engaged in mining. Returned to Kansas in 1864. During the war he enlisted and served 100 days in the Seventeenth Kansas Infantry. At the close of the war he farmed for seven years, then went into business at Mound City, Linn Co., Kan., and came to Greeley in March, 1880, at which time he purchased a hardware stock and carried on that line of business for some months, and in January, 1881, became associated with his present partner. This firm is extending its business rapidly. In November, 1882, they opened a branch store at Goodrich, Linn County, with a stock of $3,000 to $4,000, that portion of the business being under the management of J. W. Harrison.

GERARD HOLLEY, meat market and dealer in live-stock, hides, etc., was born in Western New York, November 13, 1849, and reared on a farm. Some years later he moved to the city of Rochester, where he was for two years employed as a bookkeeper. He came to Anderson County, Kan., in October, 1878, located at Central City and for two years followed gardening; afterward moved to Greeley and engaged in agricultural pursuits. In August, 1881, he purchased the meat market of M. Staley, which business he continues and in connection with the same business buys and ships cattle, hides, tallow, etc.

SMITH LATHEN, dealer in stoves and tinware, was born in Franklin County, Kansas, in April, 1860, and four years later accompanied his parents to Greeley. He learned the trade of harness-maker with his father, M. W. Lathen, and followed that occupation for several years. He purchased his present business from T. Z. Stephenson in February, 1882. Mr. Lathen carries a nice stock of about $600 to $1,000. He manufactures tinware and is building up quite a nice trade. He is the only one here engaged in this special line of business.

ROTH & LYON, general merchants. This firm is composed of W. G. Roth and C. H. Lyon. The business was established in 1874 by Henry Calvert and in 1877 Mr. Lyon was admitted as a partner. Two years later Mr. Calvert sold out his interest to W. G. Roth and the firm changed as above. The firm do a large and increasing business, to supply the demands of which they carry a stock of about $9,000. W. G. Roth, of this firm, is a native of Allegheny County, Pa., where he followed agricultural pursuits. He came to Greeley, Kan., in 1878, and previous to entering into the business was employed in the Greeley Mills. C. H. Lyon, his partner, was born in Mercer County, Pa., in 1856. Came with his parents to Franklin County, Kan., in 1858. Ten years later they removed to Mount Gilead, Anderson County. He followed mercantile pursuits (as a clerk) at Greeley for several years and in 1877 embarked in this business. Both members of the firm are young and enterprising business men, and they have the oldest continuous business in Greeley.

HON. WILLIAM H. McCLURE, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Greeley, was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, in 1829. He learned the trade of tinner in Germantown in that county, and followed that occupation in various parts of that State until June, 1857, when he came to Anderson County, Kansas. He pre-empted 160 acres in Monroe Township, and improved the same, residing there about five years. In 1862 he went to Paola, where he engaged in hardware business, continuing there until 1869, when he returned to Anderson County and located on his present farm. He has about 300 acres, 200 acres of which are under cultivation. Mr. McClure is making a specialty of wheat growing, in which he is quite successful, and is also raising considerable live-stock of the Durham and Short-horn breed. In 1867 he purchased the east half of Section 30, which included the original town site of Greeley consisting or 90 acres, a large portion of which he has since disposed of. Mr. McClure was a member of the last Territorial legislature of Kansas. He is one of the enterprising and successful farmers in this section of the country.

EDWARD A. MOREY, dealer and manufacturer of harness, saddlery, etc., was born at Cairo, Ill., January 17, 1860. His parents emigrated to Miami County, Kan., in July, 1869, and located at Paola. Here the subject of this sketch attended school for some years. His father removed to Baldwin City some years later and opened in mercantile business, his son assisting him in conducting the store. In April, 1880, Edward Morey went to Garnett, where he learned the trade of harness-maker. In September, 1882, he came to Greeley and purchased the business from W. T. Weldon. He carries a stock of about $800 to $1,000, has a nice trade and employs two men in the manufacturing department.

SMITH, real estate, etc., was born in Butler County, Ohio, December 6, 1820, and twelve years later accompanied his parents to Preble County, where after reaching the age of maturity he followed agricultural pursuits. He came to Kansas in October, 1859, and located in Walker Township, Anderson County, and for fifteen years followed farming. In 1863 he was appointed postmaster at Greeley, which position he retained until 1869, and in the fall of 1870 was re-appointed and still retains the office. In connection with this he conducts a real estate and insurance business and carries a stock of stationery, etc. He has also a good farm of 140 acres adjoining the town. Mr. Smith was first elected Justice of the Peace in 1860 and held the office off and on up to 1880. He has been notary public for the past fifteen years.

DELOS WALKER, M. D., was born on a farm two miles south of Conneautville, Crawford Co., Pa., October 19, 1837. He received his preliminary education at Conneautville Academy. He having manifested an inclination for medical pursuits, his education was conducted with this object in view, but when the war of the Rebellion broke out he deferred his studies. On April 27, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Colonel McLean's regiment, and was made Orderly Sergeant. He served three months, and on returning home, entered the Medical Department of the Michigan University. At the end of one term the call for Volunteers became more urgent, and he enlisted for nine months in the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Pennsylvania Infantry, and was given the rank of Captain. In the following year he was elected Major, in which he continued for his full term of service. Participated in the battles of South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and Chancellorsville. At the expiration of the term for which he had enlisted, Major Walker again returned to Michigan University, graduating with the class of 1864. He first began the practice of his profession at Medina, Michigan, afterward going to his former place of residence, Conneautville, Pa., and was soon appointed Examining Surgeon of the Twentieth Provost District, which he retained until February, 1865, when he again entered military service, and taking charge of eight companies of Infantry, went to Roanoke Island, and completed the re-organization of the old One Hundred and Third Pennsylvania Regiment. He was Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment at the close of the war. He settled at Union City, Pa., and again entered upon the duties of his profession, and was appointed United States Examining Surgeon, and also Surgeon of the Philadelphia & Erie Railroad. In February, 1867, he came to Kansas and settled at Greeley, Anderson County, where he has a large practice, and enjoys an enviable reputation. The Doctor was married in 1860, to Miss Emerette Greenfield, of Crawford County, Pa.

HON. JOHN D. WAIT, merchant, was born in Delaware County, N. Y., January 3, 1836, and was reared on a farm. In 1856, he removed to Pike County, Ill., where he followed agricultural pursuits, and also worked as carpenter. In August, 1863, he enlisted in Company E, Ninety-first Illinois Infantry. Was promoted to Second Lieutenant in the following December, and resigned in March, 1864, after which he followed agricultural and mechanical pursuits in Pike County. Mr. Wait came to Kansas in the spring of 1869, and located in Liberty Township, Linn County, where he improved a farm, and followed agricultural pursuits for about twelve years. In the fall of 1879, he was elected to the State Legislature, to represent Linn County. Mr. Wait came to Greeley in November, 1881, and purchased his present business from H. Decanniere; he has increased his trade largely since that time, and carries a nice stock of about $7,000 to supply the demand of the same. Mr. Wait is an enterprising merchant, displays considerable energy, and is building up a fine business in this locality.

WELDA.

This thriving little village is situated on the gently rolling upland prairie, on the line of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Kansas Southern Railroad about eight miles south from Garnett.

The history of Welda begins with the year 1870, when the railroad company established a station of that name. But the town was not surveyed and platted until 1873.

The first settlers were J. M. Kauble and family, who located in August, 1873. The next to locate was John Hogan, in 1875, and D. H. Morey in 1876.

The post-office was established June 23, 1874, and J. M. Kauble appointed postmaster.

The first birth was that of Harry, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kauble, April 20, 1875.

On December 23, 1876, T. J. Gilmore was united in marriage to Miss Mary Kauble. This was the first marriage in Welda.

The first store was opened in May, 1879, by D. H. Morey.

During the earlier years, the schoolhouse was located at some distance from the town, but in the fall of 1879, a schoolhouse was built in the northeastern part of the village, and a term of school taught therein the same fall, by G. W. Patterson.

The first sermon was preached at the schoolhouse, soon after its completion, by Rev. Hanson.

The first death to take place in the town site was that of Daniel Lovell, in October, 1882.

The town made no progress until within the past three years. There are now two stores, a schoolhouse, railroad depot, a blacksmith and wagon shop, two hotels, a post-office, and a few dwellings. The population is now about one hundred and fifty. The principal industry is the baling and shipping of hay, which amounts to several thousand tons annually. There are two large steam-presses in operation, one started in 1879, and the other in 1881.

There are no church buildings, though religious services are held regularly. The United Presbyterian Church was organized in September, 1879, Rev. C. H. Strong officiating. Soon afterward the Methodist Episcopal Church organized a society and built a parsonage. The Presbyterians are now making arrangements to organize a society.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH.

B. F. HENRY, stock-raiser, Section 30, P. O. Garnett, is a native of Clarke County, Ohio where he was reared on a farm. In 1872 he moved to De Witt County, Ill., where he followed agricultural pursuits for two years. He came to Anderson County, Kan., August 21, 1874, and located at Central City, and was for three years engaged in buying and shipping live-stock. He then went to Garnett, clerked for M. L. White, in the grocery business, and in 1878 entered into partnership with him; a year later he sold out his interest and moved on to his present farm, which consists of 1,200 acres, 320 of which are in cultivation, the balance he uses for stock purposes. His principal business is fattening cattle for the Eastern markets. He carries on an average about 250 head. His land is located near the head of Cedar Creek, has abundance of water, and his stock-raising facilities are second to none in the county.

COLONY.

This thriving village is situated on the high upland prairie, in the southern part of Anderson County, on the line of Kansas City, Lawrence & Kansas Southern Railroad, about sixteen miles from Garnett. The location is a pleasant one, but situated as it is on a spur from the Ozark Mountains, it is impossible to obtain well-water, and rain water has to take its place altogether.

The population of Colony is about 400, and is made up of an exceptionally enterprising class of people. The business houses represent nearly all branches of trade, and are all doing well. The adjoining country is fast being settled, and the land brought under cultivation, in consequence of which the town is growing very rapidly.

The history of the village begins with the year 1870, at which time the railroad was completed through the county. A town was laid out, and a depot built on Section 6, Township 22, Range 19. This was done by the railroad company, who named the new place Divide. The plat was recorded August 2, 1870.

It was not long until a post-office was established at the depot and kept by the railroad agent Wyman. He was succeeded by D. O. McAllister, who was also depot agent.

Owing to the difficulty in obtaining water, no improvement in the town was made until 1872. A colony had been formed in Ohio and Indiana by Col. Henry Wilson, Col. N. Bostwick, J. J. Fairbanks, J. G. Norton and others, and after examining Colorado and Kansas, Divide station was chosen as the most favorable point at which to locate. The colonists began to arrive early in the year, and by the middle of May, fully one hundred had selected land and most of them began making some improvements. On their arrival they elected Col. Wilson President; J. J. Fairbanks, Vice-President; J. P. Ewing, Secretary; and D. W. Ream, Treasurer. Though at first so large, the colony soon disbanded and the greater number of the settlers returned to the East, some abandoning land on which they had made a payment. A few families remained, however, and have all done well and accumulated property. Of this colony now living on the town site, are only the families of A. G. Perkins and Thomas Bell.

The station and town was named Colony in 1872, from the large settlement by the above named colonists.

The first store was opened early in 1872 by Fairbanks & Reams in what is now the Grandview Hotel.

The first birth was that of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Reams, in August, 1872.

The first sermon was preached by Rev. Travis, Sunday March 31, 1872.

The second birth was that of Matilda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Thomas Bell, and occurred on December 12, 1872.

The first marriage took place on July 3, 1879, and was that of Frank P. Ewing and Narcissa Fullenwider.

The first death occurred in August, 1875, and was that of Minnie May Fairbanks, child of J. J. Fairbanks.

As only a few of the colony remained the town did not improve any until about the year 1879. Up to that time it contained only a store, post-office, blacksmith shop, hotel, and a few other buildings. About the above date the lands adjoining the village were fast being settled and improved, therefore the town began to build up, and has continued to progress until the present time. The greatest growth was in the years 1881 and 1882.

About the middle of August, 1881, a number of the best buildings in the town were swept away by a conflagration. The fire broke out at about half-past six o'clock in the evening in a meat market, between the hotel and a large store. The building was soon in flames, which was rapidly communicated to others, and in a short time the Empire House, Roberts' meat market, Buford's store, Dr. Malone's office, Yokum & Matthews' furniture store, and Matthews' grocery store were in ashes. But little was saved from any of these houses. Though a hard blow to the losers, it was not long until most of the buildings were replaced.

In the early history of the town, the schoolhouse was about three miles distant, but in 1876, the present school building was built on the town site, and in the fall of the same year a term of school was taught therein by Frank P. Ewing. The school has always been well conducted and now has two departments.

The only newspaper published in the village is the Colony Free Press, J. J. Burke, editor and proprietor. It was established January 5, 1882, and is a bright and newsy paper. In size it is a seven-column folio.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.—This church society was organized in 1877, from what was then known as the Deer Creek circuit. The church was built in 1880. The society has about sixty members. Rev. N. T. Ryne is pastor. J. McD. Martin is superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

The Baptist Church.—This church society was organized in 1881, and the church was erected in 1882. The society is in a prosperous condition. Rev. C. J. Coulter is pastor, and C. B. Randall superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

The Catholic Church.—Services are held here by the Roman Catholics, but they have not yet erected a house of worship.

One of the chief industries of the town is the baling and shipping of hay. There are in operation three portable presses, besides two large ones operated by steam-power. The steam presses are owned and operated by Hall & Rogers, who ship fully 15,000 tons of hay annually.

Olive Branch Lodge, A., F. & A. M.—This lodge was instituted in April, 1882, under dispensation. The first officers were: S. C. Varner, W. M.; E. F. Ewing, J. W.; J. M. Axtell, Treas.; Samuel Mooberry, Sec.; Thomas Church, S. W.; J. K. Corbin, S. D. The other members were J. M. Savage, Obid Newcomb and Sylvester Durall. The lodge now numbers sixteen members and is in a prosperous condition.

Knights of Pythias, Prairie Lodge, No. 49.—This lodge was instituted in March, 1882, with J. J. Burke, C. C.; T. P. Turner, K. of R. & S.; James McCartney, P.; E. D. Thomas, V. C.; R. A. Gant, M. at A. The other original members were C. P. Walker, James Walker, W. S. Roberts, W. N. Marshall, J. McD. Martin, J. Biben, C. P. Richardson E. E. Varner, and J. O. Smith. The lodge now numbers twenty-three members and is in a flourishing condition. The present officers are: Dr. E. D. Thomas, C. C.; T. J. Turner, V. C.; McD. Martin, P. J.; J. O. Smith, K of R. & S.; J. L. Bibens, M. of E.; R. M. Gaut, M. of F.; J. F. Walker, M. at A.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

GEORGE EDWARDS, agent for S. A. Brown & Co., lumber dealers, was born in Miami County, Ind., October 4, 1846, where he learned the trade of carpenter and cabinet-maker. In 1869 he came to Kansas and remained for a year in Marshall County. Returning East, he located at Mexico, Ind., and followed his trade. In 1878 he went to Glencoe, Minn., where he was employed in a lumber-yard and also worked at his trade, returning to Marshall County, Kan., in April 1880. He was for a few months employed on a farm. Then he went to Atchison, where he worked at his trade in a furniture establishment. In June 1882 he came to Colony and entered upon his present duties.

T. L. ELLIOT, merchant, was born in Steuben County, N. Y., December 29, 1836, and was reared on a farm in Wayne and Clinton counties, Mich., where his parents were engaged in agricultural pursuits. In May, 1857 he came to Kansas, locating in Allen County and remaining there in camp until December with the Union Settlement Company. He assisted in laying out the town of Geneva, and was a member of the Town Company. Removing to Woodson County, he took up a farm and followed agricultural pursuits. July 24, 1861, he enlisted in Company C, Tenth Kansas Infantry, and was discharged in August 1864 and returned to his farm, but remained there only a short time, removing to Allen County, where he purchased a farm. This he traded two years later for a stock of goods at Geneva, and continued to carry on business there until January 1882, when he came to Colony and opened a general merchandise store. He carries a good stock of about $5,000 and is building up a nice trade.

ED. F. EWING, salesman, with T. L. Elliot, was born in Licking County, Ohio, June 22, 1839. There he was educated and for a time attended the Denison University at Granville, Ohio. In September 1861 he enlisted in Company H, Thirty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was appointed Second Lieutenant, serving eighteen months. He then re-enlisted in the Tenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, was appointed Regimental Sergeant, and served until September, 1865. He afterward followed mercantile and agricultural pursuits in Licking County. He came to Anderson County, Kan., in May 1872, and located in Ozark Township. There he improved a farm of eighty acres, which he still owns. In 1879 he came to Colony and has since followed mercantile pursuits as a salesman. He was Clerk of the township three years and Trustee one. In 1880 he took the United States Census of Ozark Township, and in 1881 he was Secretary of the Republican Central Committee of Anderson County. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity for twenty-one years and at present is J. W. of the lodge.

JOHN L. HALL, of Hall & Rogers, balers and shippers of hay, was born in Bartlett, N. H., in March 1831, and removed when young with his parents to Portland, Me., where he learned the trade of carpenter. He was then employed in that occupation, and as engineer in various parts of the State of Maine. In March, 1856, he came to Kansas, located at Wyandotte, and was for several years employed as carpenter. In 1857 he engaged in the furniture and undertakers' business, and while so engaged, he located a fine cemetery in Wyandotte. During the early part of the war he began to run steamers on the Missouri River, between Leavenworth and Lexington, Mo., and carried on that business for about fifteen years. He built five new steamers, and lost while engaged in the river business seven boats. He was then engaged in milling for several years, in Wyandotte and Leavenworth, also followed that business at Spring Hill, Kan., for two years. He came to Colony May 25, 1882, and engaged in the present business with R. H. Rogers. They run two steam presses of ten horse-power each, employ twelve men and bale from 15,000 to 20,000 tons of hay per annum.

JOHN HOLZAPFEL, postmaster, was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, April 11, 1856, and in May, 1858, his parents emigrated to Douglas County, Kan. His father, Nicholas Holzapfel, was one of the pioneers of Baldwin City and resided there seventeen years, during which period the subject of this sketch was for a few years employed in agricultural pursuits. In March, 1875, he came to Colony, several years he followed farming and was also for a time employed in the real estate office of C. P. Walker. In March, 1882, he, in company with the Bush Bros., purchased the general merchandising stock of J. B. Rhodes. The business is conducted under the style of Bush Bros. & Co. They have a large trade and carry a stock of about $6,000. Mr. Holzapfel was appointed postmaster at this place June 7, 1882.

JOHN McD. MARTIN, of Martin & Shockey, merchants, was born in Jackson County, Ga., November 24, 1836. He came to Kansas in the spring of 1857 and located in Bourbon County. During the troubles prevailing at that period he was a supporter of the Free-State party. In the spring of 1859 he removed to Pike's Peak, Col. Returning the following fall, he pre-empted 120 acres in Allen County, and at once engaged in agricultural pursuits. He enlisted, August 29, 1862, in Company B, Tenth Kansas Infantry, and was discharged at the close of the war, having served in all thirty-five months. In 1866 he sold his farm in Allen County, removed to Anderson County, purchased land in Deer Creek and once more embarked in farming and stock-raising. In 1877 he moved to Colony and engaged in the general merchandise business, and has followed it, off and on, since. On December 15, 1881, he became associated with his present partner, M. Shockey. The firm do a large business and carry a stock of $6,000 to supply the demands of their trade. Mr. Martin owns 487 acres of land in Anderson County and is also engaged in the grain business with S. C. Varner. He has held the offices of Clerk and Treasurer of Ozark Township several times.

GEORGE W. MATTHEWS, merchant, was born in Illinois in 1844 and when young his parents moved to Macon County, Mo., and in 1860 he accompanied them to Kansas. His father, P. T. Matthews, located on Deer Creek, Anderson County, and practiced medicine, while the boys conducted the farm. He has continued to practice his profession ever since until the present time, but his physical strength having failed, he has at length been obliged to give it up. The subject of this sketch enlisted, in November, 1861, in Company F, Eighth Kansas Infantry, served three years, and was wounded at the battle of Chickamauga, September 19, 1863. He then resided with his father at Greeley and attended the school there and at Garnett. In 1866 he engaged in agricultural pursuits on his own account, carrying on a farm on Deer Creek until the spring of 1881, when he came to Colony and was engaged in the grocery business. He was burned out in the summer of 1882, and in October started again with a general stock, of which he carries about $2,500.

JOHN B. RHODES, farmer, was born at West Stockbridge, Berkshire Co., Mass., April 8, 1839. A year later his parents emigrated to Wyoming County, Pa., and he assisted his father in milling and farming until he arrived at twenty-one years of age, when he attended the Luzerne Institute, Pa., for some time. Afterward he read law at Wilkesbarre with S. P. Longstreet, and was admitted there to the bar in 1864. He then practiced in Wyoming County, at the town of Tunkhannock. He was appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction for Wyoming County in 1867, and again in 1869. This position he resigned and came to Anderson County, Kan., in the spring of 1870. He located in Ozark Township and engaged in agricultural pursuits. He had charge of the post-office at Elizabethtown from 1874 to 1879. In March of the latter year he removed to Colony and embarked in the general merchandise business. He built up a large and lucrative trade and disposed of the same to Bush Bros. & Co. in March, 1882, since which time he has given his attention to his farm, etc. Mr. Rhodes has 245 acres of land, 140 acres of which he cultivates, and also raises considerable live-stock. He has held the offices of Treasurer and Trustee of Ozark Township and was in 1880 elected a member of the County Board of Commissioners of Anderson County for a term of three years.

SAMUEL C. VARNER, dealer in grain and implements, was born in Monongahela City, Penn., December 10, 1845, ten years later his parents removed to Fulton County, Ill., and he was employed as a clerk in mercantile business at Canton, for several years. In May, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, Sixty-seventh Illinois Infantry, served one year, re-enlisted in the One Hundred and Forty-eighth, and was elected Second Lieutenent of Company B, was promoted to First Lieutenent in April, 1865, and mustered out in September following. In 1867 he moved to Des Moines, Iowa, clerked a year, and then engaged in grocery business, a year later he sold out and went to Adair County, where he followed agricultural pursuits. In 1876 he moved to McLean County, Ill., where he carried on a farm of 800 acres. Mr. Varner came to Colony in April, 1879, and established a lumber-yard, this he sold out in June, 1882. In 1881 he embarked in hardware business, built up a nice trade and disposed of that business in October, 1882. In 1880 he engaged in agricultural implement business, he is the only one engaged in that line of business at this place, and has a nice trade. He is also engaged in grain business in company with John McD. Martin.

JOSEPH WALKER, carpenter and builder, was born in Crawford County, Penn., June 17, 1829, there he learned the trade of carpenter, and followed that occupation and boat building until he came to Kansas in September, 1866. He located in Garnett and followed contracting and building. In July, 1868, he purchased a farm on Deer Creek, Anderson County, and farmed in connection with his trade until March, 1881, when he moved to Colony, since which time he has given his sole attention to building, etc.

CHARLES PORTER WALKER, real estate, was born near Conneautville, Crawford County, Penn., May 11, 1849, and came to Anderson County, Kan., in April, 1866. He located on Deer Creek and four years later homesteaded eighty acres, there he followed agricultural pursuits. In July, 1876, he moved to Colony and engaged in the real estate business, he was at that time appointed local land agent for what is now the K. C. L. & S. K. R. R. Co., and the M. K. & T. R. R. Co. Both positions he still retains and in connection he conducts a general real estate and loan business.

WESTPHALIA.

Westphalia is a thriving village in the midst of a German settlement, situated in the western part of the county. Its location is on the gently sloping upland prairie, not far from timber, and on the line of the Arizona Division of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, about seventeen miles west and south from Garnett.

The present population of Westphalia is about one hundred and fifty. There are altogether, including shops, etc., seventeen business houses, with an aggregate annual trade of $120,000. The hay trade is a profitable industry, and several thousand tons of baled and pressed hay are shipped annually.

The first settlement in the vicinity of the present town was made in September, 1879, by Smith P. Cornell, who then located on his farm. He was soon followed by J. Critchlow and P. Hartmann.

After the completion of the railroad a town was surveyed and platted, in the spring of 1880, and called Cornell, in honor of S. P. Cornell.

In November, 1879, a post-office had been established at the residence of Mr. Cornell, who was appointed postmaster and the office named in his honor. On July 1, 1880, the post-office was moved to the town site, and the name changed to Westphalia, this name having been selected by the railroad company as the name of the station. Anthony Flusche, who had located at the new town a short time before was appointed postmaster as well as depot agent. Some time afterward the name of the town was changed to Westphalia that it might correspond with the name of the post-office and railroad station.

On May 15, 1880, the first store was opened by Flusche Bros., on Lot 2, Block 4.

The first hay press was established in 1881, by J. D. Hawes.

The first birth was that of Anthony, son to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Flusche, on March 16, 1881.

On January 20, 1881, Anton Berles and Katherine Schmitt were united in marriage. This was the first marriage in the village.

The first death took place on May 20, 1881, and was that of Mrs. Eva K. Flusche, an old and respected lady.

The first sermon was preached at the residence of A. Flusche, by Rev. P. A. Peters, on April 12, 1880. In the spring of 1881, the first church—the Roman Catholic—was built. It is a well furnished building, 22x40 feet in size. Services are held regularly therein.

The first school taught in Westphalia began May 1, 1881. It was kept in the Catholic Church. Rev. P. Brocarde was the teacher. The schoolhouse was afterward moved in from the country, since when the school has been kept in it.

The only mill is a corn-mill, opened in the fall of 1882, by Thomas & Hawes, in the large hay-press building, south of the depot.

The town is peopled by an energetic and intelligent class of people, principally Germans. The school is a good one, having about fifty pupils. The Roman Catholic is the only church organization. There is a Literary Society which is in a prosperous condition.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JACOB AFFOLTER, M. D., was born in Switzerland in 1831. He studied medicine at Berne College, and graduated there. In 1852 he came to America, traveled for some months then settled at Davenport, Iowa, where he was employed in drug business. He attended Humboldt Medical College, St. Louis, graduating August 13, 1862, and was immediately appointed First Assistant Surgeon, Fourth Missouri Cavalry, serving in that capacity over two years. Then practiced in Milwaukee for a few months, afterwards located at the town of Breese, Clinton County, Ill., where he continued to practice his profession until January 1882, when he immigrated to Westphalia, Kan., since which time he has practiced in Anderson County.

C. C. ELKINS, of C. C. Elkins & Co., dealers in lumber, building material, etc., was born in Greene County, Ind., in 1850, and for some years was employed in teaching school in that State, Missouri and Colorado. In 1876 he came to Kansas and located in Rich Township, Anderson County, where he was engaged in farming and raising stock. He still owns his farm, which consists of 200 acres. In February 1882, he came to Westphalia and embarked in this business under present style. He carries a nice stock of about $5,000, and is building up a good business. During his residence in Rich Township, he was Justice of the Peace for five years, and Trustee of the Township for one year.

ANTON FLUSCHE, of Flusche Bros., merchants, was born in Westphalia, Germany, in 1847. There he was for a time employed in the drug business. In 1871 he emigrated to St. Louis, Mo., there he followed the drug business, and in 1874 moved to Westphalia, Iowa, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In April 1880, he came to Kansas, located at Westphalia, and embarked in mercantile business in company with his brothers Emil and August, on the following May. They carry a stock of about $5,000. Mr. Flusche was appointed postmaster at this place, April 28, 1880, and has retained the office since.

EMIL FLUSCHE, of Flusche Bros., merchants, was born in Germany in 1849, and he was employed for some years in the capacity of book-keeper. In 1872 he emigrated to Shelby County, Iowa, there he established the town and German Colony of Westphalia, and while residing there carried on a real estate and insurance business, and also followed farming pursuits. He came to Kansas in March, 1880, located in Anderson County, and established the town of Westphalia. Mr. Flusche is engaged in the land and insurance business and is also engaged in general merchandise business in company with his brothers August and Anton, besides which he has a farm of 300 acres adjoining the town site. The subject of this sketch was married in Westphalia, Kan., November 23, 1881, to Annie Heese.

RUDOLPH F. GRAUPNER was born in Radibor, Prussia, Germany, August 12, 1845. His parents emigrated to America, when he was about three years of age. Located at Manyouk, Mass. He has lived in different portions of Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana. Enlisted in the Federal army at Davenport, Iowa, October 1, 1861, in Company B, Sixteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served during the Rebellion to the end of the war under Gen. Sherman. Re-enlisted as a veteran in the same company and regiment at Vicksburg, Miss., in 1864. Served an apprenticeship as druggist at Augusta, Ill., in 1867, from which time he adapted himself to different occupations, whichever proved the most lucrative and afforded him the best means of support. Was married at Muscatine, Iowa, in March, 1872. In 1874 served an apprenticeship as barber at Waterloo, Iowa, after which followed the tonsorial art at Greene, Iowa, until 1876; purchased a quarter section in Floyd County, Iowa, and farmed two years, after which moved to Missouri, where he sojourned about two years. In February, 1880, took a flying trip to Kansas and purchased some lots in the then town of Cornell, since changed to Westphalia, in Anderson County, Kan., and the following August, moved his family from Winston, Mo., here, but not finding the prospects very encouraging, decided on locating at Le Roy, Coffey Co., Kan. May 1, 1882, he moved his stock of drugs and druggists' sundries to Westphalia, since which he has added general merchandise. Carries stock of about $5,000 to be increased and enlarged.

J. D. HAWES, dealer in hay, grain, farm and mill products and live-stock, Westphalia, Kan., was born in Sherman, Fairfield Co., Conn., July 17, 1835. When quite young took charge of his father's large dairy, shipping and selling the product in New York City. In 1853 he moved to Bradford, Chickasaw Co., Iowa, and was commissioned by Governor Grimes as a notary public, and engaged in the banking and real estate business. In 1858 he married Miss F. M., the youngest daughter of Colonel Alvard Fuller, and soon after moved to East Temple, where milling and real estate speculation occupied his attention until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when he was conscripted into the Rebel service, but escaped to the Union lines in Kentucky; received a recruiting commission and was also sutler for the First East Tennessee Cavalry, Col. Robert Johnson. He also opened a wholesale store at 46 Public Square, Nashville, Tenn., from which he supplied a large number of sutlers, keeping up his stock by shipping from Cincinnati, Ohio, by the steamboat load. His attention was also turned to photographing and Harper's and Leslie's monthlies are indebted to him for many of their views of battle scenes and historical localities. He employed twenty-seven artists, and there is scarce a Union soldier that does not remember the gallery of the Cumberland and the many photograph tents of Hawes Brothers. In 1864 he turned his attention to railroading and was for twelve years in the employ of the A. & M. Railroad, Missouri Pacific and other lines as conductor. It was during this period that he conducted a large commission house in Cincinnati, keeping his brother, G. W. Hawes, in charge of the same. In 1876 he moved to Kansas. Purchased a large tract of land and tried his hand at farming. This proved to be too slow to suit his high pressure ideas, and he engaged in baling and shipping hay and general merchandise at Leloup. Soon after selling out to Purdy & Scott, he entered the service of the Hannibal & St. Joe Railroad as conductor, but after a year resigned and put in steam hay presses at Colony, Iola, Humboldt, Mount Ida and Westphalia. Was elected President of the Valley Hay Company, a corporation that for a season greatly influenced the hay and grain trade in Southern Kansas, and giving the towns where his presses were located new life and energy. After the season of 1881 he disposed of all interest except in the presses and mills at Westphalia, where he is still doing a large business as indicated above, furnishing employment to from 80 to 300 men and paying the farmers of this and adjoining counties over $100,000 per annum.

J. R. McCORMICK, proprietor Westphalia House, was born in Bourbon County, Ky., July 27, 1824, and reared on a farm. In 1847-48 he served in the Mexican war in the Third Kentucky troops, after which he was engaged in general trading. On July 16, 1862, he enlisted in Company E, John Morgan's Squadron, Confederate troops. Early in 1863 he was promoted to Captain of Company B, Ninth Kentucky Infantry. In July of that year he was captured by the Union troops, and not released until May, 1865. He returned to Kentucky and conducted a hotel at Carlisle for ten months; at Blue Licks Springs for four years, and carried on the Southern Hotel at Lexington for two years; afterward engaged in general trading, speculating, etc., until November, 1877, when he came to Kansas. Mr. McCormick farmed for over two years in Anderson County. In March, 1880, he went to Coffey County, where he continued to farm up to March, 1882, when he came to Westphalia and at once opened his present hotel. He keeps a good house and has accommodation for sixteen guests.

MONT IDA.

Mont Ida is a very small town situated about nine miles southwest from Garnett, on the line of the Arizona Division of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. The location is a fine one on the nearly level high upland prairie.

Surrounded as it is by an old and well developed agricultural country, a great deal of business is done. Besides the trade in general merchandise, the baling and shipping of hay is a profitable industry. There is also a railroad depot, schoolhouse, post-office, and blacksmith shop.

The land on which the town is located was settled in 1857, by E. J. Broomhall, who still resides there. The town was surveyed and platted in 1880, by the railroad company. It was named by them, and it is said the name was selected in honor of a daughter of Mr. Broomhall.

The first settlers to locate on the town site were J. D. Huffman, J. A. Stoner, and Frank Gray. The first named settled in September, 1880.

The post-office was established January 1, 1882, and Frank Gray, who still retains the office was appointed postmaster.

The first store was opened December 1, 1881, by Frank Gray, in a stone building.

The first blacksmith shop was opened by J. A. Stoner.

The schoolhouse was built in the spring of 1882, and after completion the first term of school was taught by Maggie Moore.

The first sermon preached on the town site was by Rev. Mr. Huffman, at the new school-house, in the spring of 1882.

The town starts with the prospect of soon making a thriving village.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

WM. R. BORROW, farmer, Section 7, P. O. Garnett, was born in West Virginia, April 14, 1818, where he followed agricultural pursuits. He emmigrated to Kansas, Nov. 7, 1859, and located on his present farm. He has 522 acres of land, of which he cultivates 120, and is an extensive breeder of cattle and hogs. On August 14, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, Eleventh Kansas Infantry, and was discharged May 24, 1864.

JOHN B. CAMPBELL, farmer, Section 20, P.O. Garnett, was born in Scotland in 1838. At the age of sixteen years he emigrated to Syracuse, N. Y.; was for a time employed at farm work, then moved to Herkimer County, where he worked eighteen months at the trade of tinner. He emigrated to Kansas, April, 1856, resided a few months at Osawatomie, and participated with the Free-State party in the troubles prevailing at that period. In the fall of that year he enlisted in the militia attached to the Sixth United States Infantry, and served two months. Early in 1857 he came to Anderson County, resided at the village of Hiatt, and in the summer moved to Washington Township, since which time he has followed agricultural pursuits. On September 8, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, Eleventh Kansas Infantry and served three years. Mr. Campbell has 410 acres of land, 100 of which he cultivates. Has a nice orchard of four acres, and raises considerable live-stock. On his place is a fine stone residence. He was Justice of the Peace at this place for three years. The subject of this sketch was married at Garnett, Kansas, in the fall of 1860, to Melissa Smith, who died in July, 1870, leaving two children. He was married again October 12, 1871, to Rebecca Hopkins. They have four children.

JACKSON TOWNSHIP.

ROBERT H. MOORE, farmer, Section 6, P. O. Garnett, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, December 11, 1827. There he learned the carpenters trade, and followed that occupation for thirteen years in that and adjoining counties. He emigrated to Anderson County in 1857, and pre-empted 160 acres on which he still resides. He has now 331 acres, all improved, and is quite an extensive raiser of live-stock. In August, 1862, He enlisted in Company F, Eleventh Kansas Infantry and served three years. Has been Trustee of this township two terms, and is the present incumbent. He was elected Vice-President of the Anderson County Savings Bank in 1880, and still retains that position. Mr. Moore was married in Muskingum County, Ohio, in 1853 to Martha Hutton. They have six children.

A. A. ADAMS, fruit grower, Section 18, Township 20, Range 19, P. O. Garnett, was born at Holiday's Cove, Hancock County, West Virginia, September 21, 1839. Was reared on a farm and also for some years was employed on boats running from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati on the Ohio River. In the spring of 1857, he came to Kansas with his father J. W. Adams, who located in Franklin County. In August, 1861, he enlisted in the Kansas Home Guards, was mustered into the Ninth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry and served seven months. In the spring of 1863, he went to Lawrence, where he began the study of photography, and also traveled a few months in the Eastern States perfecting himself in that profession. Afterwards conducting an extensive gallery at Lawrence. In 1867, he came to Anderson County, purchased a farm in this township, to which he has since given his main attention. He has 170 acres of land, all highly improved, thirty-five acres of it he has set out in fruit trees, grape vines, berries, etc., and has one of the best fruit-producing farms in the county. In November, 1880, he established a photograph gallery at Garnett which he proposes to conduct but a short time as his farm requires his whole attention. He is also a breeder of Ayrshire dairy cattle, of which he has made a success. Has traveled in the United States from New York to San Francisco, and from Dakota to the Gulf of Mexico, now lives, and expects to die in the faith that Kansas is the best State in the United States.

JACKSON COUNTY.

LOCATION AND NATURAL FEATURES.

JACKSON County (formerly Calhoun), was one of thirty-three counties organized by the first Territorial Legislature of Kansas, at its session in 1855, at the Shawnee Manual Labor School, in Johnson County. Calhoun County embraced upwards of 1,140 square miles.

February 11, 1859, by act of the Territorial Legislature, the name of Calhoun—suggestive of treason to the American nation—gave way to Jackson, in honor of the President who boldly denounced nullification, and "by the Eternal" declared "nation" constitutionally written with a big "N."

The lines of Brown, Jackson and Shawnee counties were changed by an act of the Legislature of 1868, and the county-seat of Jackson County was thereby permanently located at Holton.

The northwest portion of the county was government land; from Netawaka east in the northeast part of the county, having for a southern boundary the line of Straight Creek, was the land of the Kickapoos. Their diminished reserve is now entirely within the limits of Brown County. The Delaware lands lay south of the Kickapoo Reserve, in the east part of the county. In the southwest part of the county was the Pottawatomie Reservation, now diminished to a tract eleven by eleven miles, with an area of 121 square miles, leaving some 530 square miles of territory in the county available for settlement.

The Delaware lands were brought into market July, 1857, at a public sale held at Osawkee, prior to which time settlements had been made on these lands, and the appraisements were from $1.25 to $2 per acre, where the occupant had a cabin and slight improvements on a quarter section. The Kickapoo Reservation was purchased or granted as a subsidy to the Central Branch of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1867, and settlement commenced on these lands in June of that year.

The Diminished Pottawatomie Reserve has long been looked upon as a section exceedingly fertile, and highly desirable for settlement, but since 1875, there has been but little expectation that it would become a part of the taxable domain of Jackson County, until at a somewhat distant period. State Senator John S. Hopkins, at Topeka, February 15, 1875, wrote to Frank A. Root, then Editor of the Holton Express and News, as follows:

> The prospect is good for the early selling out of the lands and removal of the diminished reserve band of Pottawatomie Indians, located in the bowels of our county. No fact will be left unpresented by those having the matter in hand, showing the situation of our county—the demoralizing effects, both upon the Indians and settlers, of the policy of surrounding a band of Indians by white settlements, the willingness on the part of the reserve band to remove beyond the white man's plow. Earnest work in the right direction is now being performed.

The general surface of Jackson County is undulating; the rolling prairies rising and falling in gentle swells; the elevation averaging about thirty feet in a distance of a mile or more. These crestlines of motionless waves are intersecting each other at every conceivable angle, which brings into view the most extensive landscape, and shows the light green of the prairie grasses in pleasing contrast with the dark green foliage of the forest trees of greater or less size, which skirt the many streams of running water that pass through the county. Of upland prairie there is 87 per cent, of bottom land 13 per cent, of timber land 7 per cent. The average width of the creek bottom lands is one mile, of timber belts one-half mile.

Lime and sandstone exist in large quantities. A most excellent whitish magnesian limestone is found in different portions of the county, which though easily worked when first quarried, becomes hard and exceedingly durable when exposed to the air. The Linscott Bank building on the west side of the public square at Holton, and the Campbell University building, furnish excellent specimens of this choice material for public and private structures. To the northeast and south of Holton, on the Elk and Barmer creeks, may be found the best specimens of brick-clay, and large quantities of brick have been made therefrom. Coal has been discovered in some parts of the county, but few mines have as yet been opened; the thickness of the veins not warranting the expense of excavating for it.

In the bottom lands the soil is a rich sandy loam: it is a heavier black soil on the upland prairie, but it is all easily cultivated, and there are scarcely any untillable lands in the county. The depths of soil varies from eighteen inches to four feet. Stagnant pools, common to extensive bottoms along rivers and near the mouth of large creeks, are unknown in this county, hence the easy and rapid drainage of the soil, and the consequent fertility and the salubrity of the atmosphere.

The supply of timber in Jackson County is hardly surpassed by that of any county in the State, and its area is constantly on the increase caused by the rapid diminution of prairie fires, and the very considerable culture of prairie groves. The streams are so numerous that the distribution of timber over the county is very well equalized; the traveler is hardly ever out of sight of timber. Conspicuous among the native varieties are cottonwood, black walnut, oak of the black, white, red, and burr varieties; hickory, elm, hackberry, linden, sycamore, willow, and boxelder. The cultivated groves are generally soft maple, cottonwood, elm, and black walnut.

MUNICIPAL TOWNSHIPS.

October 16, 1855, by act of the Commissioners' Court, Calhoun County was divided into the three municipal townships of Douglas, Atchison, and Half Day. Douglas, including from the Kansas River northward to the Military road running across the county, known as the Fort Leavenworth and Fort Riley road, forming the southern township. Atchison comprised the northeastern and Half Day the northwestern township.

December 15, 1856, Franklin Township was formed seven miles from north to south; twelve miles from east to west, virtually taking the place of Atchison. March 15, 1858, in a recast of boundaries and change of names, there were three townships, located as follows: Douglas—which was the southern township, its northern boundary being the line between Townships 7 and 8; Franklin, embracing the eastern north part, while the western north part was named Jefferson. The Legislature of 1868, in changing the boundaries of Shawnee, Jackson, and Brown counties, made the line between Townships 9 and 10 the southern boundary of Jackson County, Township 5, in Ranges 15 and 16 was detached from Brown and made the northeastern portion of Jackson County, becoming a part of Franklin Township. In 1868, there were three townships; in 1873, eleven. In 1871, Holton became a city of the third class by an act of the Legislature, and in 1882 there were twelve distinct municipalities in the county.

At an election held for electing a Territorial Delegate, October 5, 1857, Marcus J. Parrott, the Free-State Candidate, was chosen. The first Justices of the Peace in these townships were the following named persons:

(a) Organized in 1873, from part of Douglas; in 1875, part detached to form Franklin. (b) In 1873, parts detached to form Cedar and Washington. (c) In 1871, part detached to form Netawaka; in 1872, parts to form Liberty, Straight Creek and Whiting; in 1875, part of Cedar attached. (d) Organized in 1870, from part of Jefferson. (e) In 1870, part detached to form Grant: in 1872, part to form Soldier. (f) Organized in 1872, from part of Franklin. (g) Organized in 1871, from part of Franklin. (h) Organized in 1870, from part of Jefferson. (i) Organized in 1872, from part of Franklin. (j) Organized in 1873, from part of Douglas. (k) Organized in 1872, from part of Franklin.

Half Day Township, George L. Young; Atchison Township, Richard Reese; Douglas Township, Perry Fleshman and Samuel S. Lockhart; Franklin Township, Nathaniel Boydston.

The census taken April 1, 1857, showed a population of 885; voters, 291; yet at the election June 1, 1857, for Lecompton delegates, Oden received 23; Kuykendall, 20 votes.

Following is the early history of the municipal townships, as at present constituted:

Douglas.—It was meet that the great representative of popular sovereignty—Stephen A. Douglas—should have his name perpetuated in Jackson County. In its southeast corner is an irregularly shaped township by that name, containing sixty-five sections of land. It is watered by the Little Soldier Creek and by branches of the Muddy. Its population in 1875 was 589; in 1880 it was 1,051. Its present boundaries were fixed in 1873.

J. W. Williams, a native of Ohio, settled upon Section 10, Township 9, Range 16, in 1858, one of the first settlers upon the high prairie. He has a hedge enclosing twenty acres, that was planted in 1859. He has been county Commissioner, Representative to the Legislature, and his son, A. H. Williams, has been Sheriff of Jackson County for four years.

John Rippetoe, a native of Kentucky, settled on Section 20, Township 9, Range 16, April 3, 1855, the first settler in the township. He was County Commissioner in 1868 and 1869. Rev. Byron Steward settled on Section 28, Township 9, Range 16, June 21, 1855. He was one of the Board of County Supervisors in Territorial times, and has been in the House of Representatives. Other early settlers were A. W. Bainbridge, William Cunningham, Hugh Piper, John Piper, David R. Rice, Rufus J. Rice, Josiah Seal and John N. Willard.

The first schoolhouse in the township was built in 1858. It was made of logs, 16x18 feet, by the inhabitants of the vicinity, and Miss Harriet Warfield, of Clay County, Missouri, taught the first, a subscription school, in 1857. School District Number 12, was organized November 5, 1859, the first in the township. A. W. Bainbridge was Director; John Rippetoe, Clerk; J. J. Grooling, Treasurer. There are now two stone and four frame school buildings in the six organized school districts in the township. Dr. J. W. Pettijohn is the physician of the township, and Byron Steward is a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. Eli H. Robinson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preached for the settlement in the winters of 1855 and 1856. There are many church members in this township, of different denominations, but no church edifices as yet.

The wife of Alfred Ferrell died in June, 1855. O. F. Cunningham was born in July, 1855. Peter Steward and Lucinda Drum were married in the spring of 1856.

Cedar takes its name from a small lot of cedars found on the banks of the North and South Cedar creeks, which flow in a southeasterly direction out of this township into Jefferson County. The area of the township is 50 sections.

Luther M. Myers settled upon the northeast quarter of Section 33, Township 8, Range 16, in April, 1856. He was Treasurer of Cedar Township in 1874 and 1875, and ended a four years' service as County Treasurer in October, 1882. George Coleman, born in Sussex County, England, November 27, 1815, lived in Canada and in Illinois twenty-two years, and in 1856 settled upon Section 21, Township 8, Range 16. He was three years Township Treasurer; was Treasurer of Douglas Township in 1871 and 1872; its Trustee for 1868 and 1869; Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners in 1874 and 1875.

Stephen J. Elliot came to the township in 1855, and was its earliest settler. James McLellan, a native of Maine, settled upon Section 7, Township 8, Range 16. He was in the Kansas House in 1865 and 1866; in the Senate in 1871 and 1872. At the election in 1874, as a candidate for Senator, he had 203 majority in Jackson County. R. S. Gillies, a native of Scotland, a County Commissioner in 1876 and 1877, settled upon Section 33, Township 7, Range 16. B. H. Bradshaw, a native of Kentucky, a breeder of Short-horns and Norman horses, prominent among the Patrons of Husbandry, settled upon Section 17, Township 7, Range 16.

John Coleman and Phœbe Hastings were united in the bonds of matrimony by William Cornforth, Esq., January 1, 1857. Viola Luddington was born in the spring of 1857—the first birth in the township.

At Tippinville there is a Union Cheese Factory, owned by a joint stock company. It is doing a very good business and is the only one in the county. John Dult and John Chestnut each have a blacksmith shop; Joseph Kevan, a wagon shop; A. J. Parker, a harness shop; George Warck, a shoe shop; Mrs. J. Bradley has a millinery store, and there has been a firm doing a big business in a general store, whose operations ceased in 1882. The town took its name from Welwood Tippin—its first merchant—but the people have sought to have it named Bloomfield. The post-office here is North Cedar. There are three organized churches in this township—the United Presbyterians, the Christian and the Reformed Presbyterian. This organization at North Cedar was formed on April 1, 1880, with twenty-two members. June 1, 1881, a neat and substantial house of worship, 32x42 feet was erected. Its present membership is about fifty. The Reformed Presbyterians or Covenanters organized their church October 16, 1871, by a commission of Kansas Presbytery, of which the Chairman was Rev. Josiah Dodds. The elders chosen were John M. Law, John L. Wright and Hugh Woodburn; the deacons, Andrew M. Law, Simon McCrory and Samuel W. Patterson. Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, a resident missionary from March 11, 1871, on April 19, 1872, was elected and installed pastor of the congregation. He has been thirty years in the ministry of the Reformed Presbyterian Church. The membership of the church is one hundred and twenty. Its Sunday-school numbers about two hundred. Their church edifice is a nice frame building, 45x63 feet. This body believes the authority of God, Christ and the Bible should be acknowledged in the constitution of the United States of America, and because of its non-acknowledgment they neither vote nor hold office under the constitution, and they thereby rest in the belief that they avoid responsibilities for the sins of atheism and infidelity in the American nation. August 30, 1881, they organized the National Reform Association. Its officers are as follows: President, John Wright; Vice-Presidents, James Keers and Hugh Woodburn; Secretary, John A. Kirkpatrick; Treasurer, Matthew Brown; Corresponding Secretary, James Barnett.

John Early, in 1862, made an appointment for a meeting to organize a Methodist Church, and the first one was held at the house of William T. Butson, then living on Section 2, Township 8, Range 13. The organizers of the church were L. Elliot, Luke Finacum, Orlan Jones, Walter Parmenter and H. Mitchell. In 1879 the first steps were taken toward erecting an edifice; in 1880 it was finished, at a cost of about $1,200. The preachers here have been Rev. John Early, Rev. A. G. Channell and Rev. W. G. Campbell. W. C. Jones was the Sunday-school superintendent in 1882.

Washington.—In the southwestern part of the county the name of the "Father of his Country" is given to a municipal township. Up to 1864 it had been included in the Pottawatomie Indian Reservation. It was organized February 21, 1873. In 1875 its population was 330; in 1880 it was 723. It embraces 84 sections of land.

Edward McNieve, the first settler, purchased several Indian head rights. He was Township Trustee three years; Richard Reddy, five years; H. Holligan, one year, and Michael Brown is the present Trustee.

E. L. Stalker and four others built the first schoolhouse in 1870, in the county without any tax levy. Mr. Stalker is from Indiana. He entered upon the duties of County Commissioner in January, 1878, and was Chairman of the Board for four years. He is located upon Section 19, Township 8, Range 13. W. H. Chase is located upon the north half of Section 22, Township 9, Range 14. He is a native of Maine; has been County Commissioner four years; was Chairman for two years; a Representative to the State Legislature in 1877. Adrian post-office, in this township, is located on Section 32, Township 8, Range 13. Sullivan is upon the southeast quarter of Section 17, Township 9, Range 13. The population of this township is largely of Irish origin, and the Roman Catholic religion is the prevailing one in the township.

Franklin.—In the east central portion of the county is the township named after the statesman and philosopher—Benjamin Franklin. When organized, December 15, 1856, it contained 84 sections; its present area is 48. In November, 1853, N. D. Lewis, a native of Ohio, but a long-time resident of Platte County, Missouri, laid a foundation for a claim on Elk, near the mouth of Bill's Creek. April 2, 1854, he landed with his family, his children consisting of one daughter and four sons, and now where there was then a howling wilderness, with red men as companions, Mr. Lewis has a magnificent farm of some 600 acres, over 350 of which is in a high state of cultivation, the whole enclosed with good rail and hedge fences. His dwelling is worth $5,000, and his barn nearly as much. In the summer of 1855 Michael Baker and a partner, a Mr. Smythe, brought in a stock of dry goods and groceries and put them in a log building owned by Mr. Lewis, and for a few years this was quite a trading point for the settlers and Indians. In the autumn of 1855 Phineas Skinner, from near Camden Point, Platte Co., Mo., drove a large lot of hogs from his home to this township, and butchering them sold the pork to the Indians, and while here he decided upon locating here with a colony. Returning to Missouri, he came out in the spring of 1856 with quite a number of colonists, and had arrangements made to improve several quarter sections of land, proposing to divide accumulations at the end of five years. A widow, by the name of Cole, and her family were among the immigrants. For her Mr. Skinner built a house, and the men he employed boarded with her. He laid out a town two miles west of Holton, called it Elk City, built a stone house, placed in it goods to the amount of $4,000, and put a son-in-law—Mr. Croysdale—in charge of it. He had not been in very good health, and one day starting out for a ride on his mule, for the apparent purpose of looking after his varied business, one of the farm hands, going to the spring for water, saw the mule tied to a bush on the bank of a ravine near the spring, and found the body of Mr. Skinner lying dead at the spring, his face submerged in the water. His death caused a change in the plans that had been so extensively made, and the agreements he had made were brought to an end. His remains were taken to Missouri for interment. Some of the store goods were taken back; tradition has it that some were used by the Lane troops, and Dr. Henry Dent Oden made a purchase of the remainder, and with John J. Preston, his son-in-law, the store was continued at this place. Dr. Oden was a native of Kentucky, and had settled upon a farm four miles west of Holton. He was a member of the Lecompton Constitutional Convention, and was one of the leading Pro-slavery men. He went to California and Oregon, and died in 1879.

Mr. Preston was a native of Indiana. Emigrated to Kentucky; from there he came to Platte County, Mo., in 1843, and first settled in Kansas in Nemaha County, on the old Ft. Leavenworth and Ft. Laramie road, northwest of Granada, and came to Elk Creek in April, 1856. He ran a saw-mill at Elk City for a few years, and furnished the lumber for the first shanty that was built on the town site of Holton, which was a store building, put up by Capt. William, F. Creitz and his brother Lewis. This mill was afterwards purchased by Peter Reiderer, who moved it to the northwest quarter of Section 1, Township 7, Range 15, where now, as proprietor of the Elk Mills, he has a property assessed at $10,000, having both steam and water-power.

Among the early settlers of the township are George Bainbridge, Chauncey J. Cowell, George W. Drake, Simeon Fees, Garret Groomer, Godfrey Hafer, W. K. Lutz, Jacob Morrold, Walter Parmenter, George Smith, Cyrus G. Waynant, John Arnold, W. D. Barnett, Thomas Fennell and B. Hafer.

William D. Barnett was born at Barnett, Caledonia County, Vt., April 1, 1820, and at seventeen years of age came to Alton, Illinois, and, at Brighton, Macoupin County, taught school, having Ex-Governor John M. Palmer one of his pupils. Leaving St. Louis in 1840, on April 1, he reached Fort Leavenworth, and was there for a few years as steward. Settling in Platte County, Mo., in April, 1854, he built a cabin back of the city of Kickapoo, but settled a short time after on the Delaware, in Atchison County, and in April, 1864, he settled on Section 6, Township 7, Range 16, and is now an extensive nurseryman and fruit grower.

Rev. Pardee Butler, of Atchison County, assisted by Rev. J. W. Williams, of Douglas Township, held the first religious services in the township at Elk City in the summer of 1857. South of Holton, School District No 1, was organized in 1859; the school building had been built of logs in 1858, and in 1869, a brick structure took its place costing $1,500. The population of Franklin Township is the densest of any in the county, as it embraces the county-seat, Holton, and Larkin on the eastern border.

Larkin is a little hamlet on the county line of Jackson and Atchison. That portion of it in Jackson County is situated on the southeast quarter of Section 1, and on the northeast quarter of Section 12, Township 7, Range 16. It was laid out in 1880, and took its name from Hon. M. E. Larkin, an extensive farmer, dealer in cattle and hogs and breeder of Durham cattle. The town has several stores, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop and livery stable. Dr. G. W. England is their physician. It has a schoolhouse costing about $1,200.

I. C. Hitchcock was the Trustee of Franklin Township in 1868; H. J. Snyder in 1876 and 1882. J. A. Scott, the County Treasurer, was Township Treasurer for five years. Elk, Banner and Bill's creeks furnish excellent timber and a fine supply of water for this township.

Jefferson.—March 15, 1858, the name of Thomas Jefferson suggested itself to those who were making a new township in the northwestern part of the county, and so to the satisfaction of all concerned, Jefferson was properly given as the name of the township. Originally large, the township is now Township 6, Range 15. In 1868 R. M. Cook, one of the prominent educators in the county, six years County Superintendent of Public Instruction, was its Trustee; its present one is G. R. Sharp. In 1875, its population was 583; in 1880, it was 826. Its post-offices are at Circleville and Ontario. The township is mainly watered by the Elk and its tributaries. Among the settlers that came in 1856–57, were James H. Baxter, W. H. Chapman, John Deardorf, Aaron Foster, W. S. Hoaglin, S. W. McComas, Charles Poppy, S. W. Richardson, J. B. Sympson and Thomas Taylor. Rufus Oursler, the first member from this district in the Kansas State Senate, had the first store in the township; Mrs. H. S. Hart taught the first school, one of her patrons paying her tuition with a flat-iron; Rev. William Knipe, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held the first religious meeting in a saw-mill, where now stands Henry Stanley's fine flouring-mill and carding machines.

Grant.—September 6, 1870, this township was organized from the southern portion of Jefferson. It embraces sixty-two sections, and takes its name from the "Captain of the Age," who was then serving his first term as President. S. Stephenson, the first and present Trustee, has served five years. There are post-offices at James Crossing and at Avoca. Among its early settlers are Peter Bryant, William Cruzan, Peter Dickson, J. P. Faidley, R. P. Hamm, John James, T. Keir, J. F. Pomeroy, Abraham Ray and S. Stephenson. The first schoolhouse was built on the farm of Mr. Keir in 1860; Mr. E. S. Hulan taught the first school in 1858. School District No. 5 has one of the finest schoolhouses in the county, built of the fine, white magnesia limestone common to their region. There was an organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church here in 1858; Rev. E. H. Robinson preached the first sermon at the log house of Abraham Ray, on which site a neat church was built in the autumn of 1880, and dedicated in the spring of 1881, by the Rev. S. D. Madison of Leavenworth. Its cost was about $1,600. Rev. Mr. Gray was the pastor in 1882; Mrs. Hollis superintends the Sunday-school work. This township is well watered by Banner, Cross and Soldier creeks. George Groomer, an early settler, gave his name to what is now Banner Creek, but as Groomer was a somewhat distasteful name, and this was a Banner Republican locality, the name became changed. There is a Methodist Episcopal Church organization at Buck's Grove, but it is not numerically strong. There are a few Dunkards scattered in the township, but they have no church organization. J. F. Pomeroy, born in Hampshire County, Mass., 1832, settled on Section 23, Township 7, Range 14, in 1859. He has a large tract of land and usually winters about 200 head of cattle. He has been County Commissioner and Township Treasurer, and has wielded large influence in the community. Rev. R. P. Hamm, a native of Kentucky, has been County Commissioner, and is a local preacher of considerable prominence. The first marriage in the township was between Dr. Francis and Maggie Ray in 1858.

Liberty.—"Where liberty dwells there is my country," was probably the sentiment that animated Mr. J. W. Taylor as he named this township at its birth, January 19, 1872. It is watered by Spring and Straight creeks, and by branches of the Elk. Its population in 1875, was 515; in 1880, it was 646. Among the early settlers were A. Ash, a native of Pennsylvania, a farmer and breeder of draft horses; J. H. Bateman of Ohio, the present efficient Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, and James Piper from Ohio. Sophia Lattimer taught in a log schoolhouse, the first school, which was supported by subscription. School District No. 15 built the first school house, in 1861. In February, 1858, the first marriage occurred, which was that of W. T. Wilcox to Lucretia Green. W. R. Hodges was its first Township Trustee; Edson Wolverton is the present one.

The southeast quarter of Section 10, Township 6, Range 15, was historic ground in February, 1859. Here was the home of Albert Fuller, a native of Lebanon, Conn. His wife, the daughter of Deacon Joel Button, of Griswold, Conn., had for her guests old John Brown, Aaron Dwight Stevens, other free persons and nearly a dozen of sable hues, in whom a title of ownership had conventionally vested in American citizens residing in Missouri. Here was New England Congregationalism, proving true to the immortal declaration of nearly a century previous made in the home of old Ben Franklin: "All men are created equal; endowed with the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Captain John Brown, with his precious freightage, had successfully passed his Concord—Holton—on his northern march, and high waters at Straight Creek Crossing at Fuller's Place had unwillingly detained him. The marching of a Marshal's posse on the part of the Federal Government, and an opposing force on the part of Free-State Topekans, have been chronicled by the historian.

The Battle of the Spurs, the ironical martial history of a memorable though unsanguinary battle, has been so well described by the fertile pens of James Ridpath and others that it were a work of supererogation to further elucidate any incidents of the conflict that ensued on the high prairie north of Straight Creek, between Holton and Netawaka. But, as "One shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to flight," these knights of chivalry furnished in themselves a forcible illustration of the couplet:

> He who fights and runs away,
> May live to fight another day.

Old John Brown's body and soul went marching on, with his little band of emancipated slaves, to pass into Nebraska, move across Iowa, and through Illinois and Michigan, go over into the Queen's Dominions, where Cowper says: "Slaves can breathe the air of freedom." Liberty Township had a fresh baptism of its gospel, and it might be said of the whilom brave, though vanquished foe:

> Not a drum was heard, nor a funeral note,
> As this corpse of slavery, here was buried;
> Quoth many a fellow, "Hard is my lot,"
> As on horse, or with heels, he quickly hurried.

Straight Creek.—This township takes its name from the creek which runs in a northwesterly to a southeasterly direction across it. It is Township 6, Range 16. The northeastern portion of the township was a part of the Kickapoo Indian Reservation until 1869, when the reservation was diminished and the land was opened to settlement. The municipal township was organized April 15, 1872. G. A. Waynant was its first Trustee; T. W. Easly is Trustee in 1882. In 1875 its population was 359; in 1880, it is reported 976, which must be too large by a few hundred. J. H. Thompson laid claim to a piece of land on Section 26 in 1854, and settled in 1855; John Hibbard in 1856, and S. J. Rose and R. L. Thompson in 1857. Mary, daughter of S. J. Rose, was born in 1857, the first birth in the township. James B. Hastings' wife and child died in 1857, the first death in the township; and his marriage to a second wife, was the first one; and he was the first teacher in the township. The first schoolhouse was built in 1859, in what is now School District No. 4, on the southwest corner of Section 22. George W. Weister, on the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 17, has a water-power grist-mill, which is valued at $3,000.

Soldier.—This township takes its name from the creek that runs through it, and which, with the Elk, makes it well watered. It was detached from Jefferson Township July 4, 1872. Its first Trustee was P. M. Hodges; its present one is John Nuzman. William Cline was the oldest settler; he came here from Illinois in 1857, and bought a claim of a man by the name of Smithland, and here was the first post-office, now the same name, removed to Soldier City, on the Kansas Central Railway. W. Branham, E. Fairbanks, William Knipe and Henry Rancier, were among the early settlers. The first death was that of Louisa M. Cline, in May, 1857. She was the daughter of William Cline. He died in January, 1882. In the fall of 1857, was the first child born in the township, a son to David Rancier and wife. The marriages of John Rancier to Emily Reynolds and a Mr. Dean to Hannah Rancier, were the first in the township.

Netawaka.—This word signifying "fine view," is the only township of Indian name in the county. Its east part belonged to the Kickapoo Reservaltion unti it came into possession of the C. B. U. P. R. R. Company. The township was organized October 4, 1871. Among the early settlers are Jacob Kern, Roger O'Meara, P. B. Rust, D. H. Sutherland and I. Travis. The first township election was held November 7, 1871; L. D. Nichols was elected Trusee; Ralph Westover is the present one. New Eureka, situated three miles at little west of south of the village of Netawaka is where the first post-office in the township was, and I. N. Seaman and P. B. Rust, were the oldest settlers about that point. Daniel H. Sutherland, a resident of Section 20, Township 5, Range 15, was in the Kansas House of Representatives in 1865. This territory was then in Brown County.

Whiting.—The maiden name of the wife of ex-Senator Samuel C. Pomeroy was Whiting, after whom this township was named. Until 1867 this territory Township 5, Range 16, was included in the Kickapoo Reserve. When obtained by the C. B. U. P. R. R. Company, it was opened for homes. Among it sfirst settlers were Andrew Brown, John M. Duff, Henry Haub, Michael O'Neill, George T. Watkins, George C. Weibles and D. R. Williams. The township was organized January 1, 1872; its first Trustee was Charles Shedd, who held the office six years; its present one is D. J. Nash. The first schoolhouse in the township was built in District Number 38. George T. Watkins, a native of New Hampshire, now living in Whiting, was in the Kansas House of Representatives in 1877 and 1881. This, the last settled section of the county, improves relatively faster than any other part of the surrounding country.

THE PRAIRIE BAND OF POTTAWATOMIE INDIANS.

In the south central portion of Jackson County is the Diminished Pottawatomie Indian Reservation, embracing in round numbers 77,400 acres of land. Here are located 440 Pottawatomies; 280 being in Wisconsin, 80 in Iowa, and 24 in the Indian Territory.

The Pottawatomies came from the islands near the entrance of Green Bay, and were a branch of the Chippewas or Ojibways, who held the country from the mouth of Green Bay to the head-waters of Lake Superior.

The word Pottawatomie is said by some authorities to signify the act of blowing out the cheeks, as in kindling a fire, and is supposed to refer to the facility which the nation possessed in kindling the ancient council fires of their forefathers. The word is also rendered by some, "I am a man."

Mention is made of the early history of this tribe in the "Sketches of Indian Tribes," in this work. The three bands of Pottawatomies.—The Pottawatomies of the Woods, the Christian or Mission band, and the Prairie band occupied the reservation of thirty miles square on the Kansas River from 1847–48 until November 15, 1861, when under provisions of a treaty made and concluded at the Pottawatomie Agency on Cross Creek, now Rossville, the Mission and Wood bands elected to become citizens of the United States, receive patents in fee simple for their allotments of lands, their pro rata shares of the cash credits of the tribe amounting to about $685 for each allottee. There were then about 1,650 allottees. At that time the Prairie band consisted of 780 persons. They elected to hold their lands in common, and accordingly there was set apart for them an undivided quantity, sufficient to allow one section to each chief, half a section to each head man; 160 acres to each head of a family, and 80 acres to each other person, which aggregated 77,357.57 acres.

In 1866, George W. James, born in 1842, in Baltimore County, Maryland, starting for California, was detained at Rossville on account of sickness, and, on recovering, he became identified with the interests of these people, and has ever since devoted his attention to them. Dr. H. C. Linn, their present agent, regards him as standard authority on any mattter connected with them. He is general clerk. In 1874, there were but five houses on the Reserve occupied by Indians; in 1882 there are 105, all of which are habitable, and some of which are very comfortable. In 1875, the Indians thought they could not live in dwellings like white people, they could not get air, and the cyclones would sweep them away. In 1882, they cannot be supplied with the amount of timber they desire and could make a good use of. They have 105 fields, ranging in area from 3 to 150 acres. Surrounding them are some of the very best rail woven fences in Kansas, made of good oak and walnut, eight rails high, staked and double ridered. Forty per cent of them have good gardens, in which they raise a great variety of vegetables in their season. They raise corn and hogs for market in considerable quantities, and they sell other products. There are some 20 mowing machines on the Reserve, and the average Indian has skill to that degree that he can properly use one. In 1880 they had herds of cattle; 1,150 horses; 10 mules; 1,275 swine; 65 sheep; hundreds of fowls.

The Indian boarding school located at the new mission, fifteen miles southwest of Holton, opened in 1875. The grounds embrace 63 acres; and on the farm here opened, the Indian children are taught to labor, and are instructed in good methods of husbandry. The school building, boarding-house, barn, laundry, etc. cost $12,000. Consequent upon the last treaty made, November 15, 1861, the Prairie band was entitled to 39-100 of the entire assets of the Pottawatomies, which has been set apart for them, and on the books in the Interior Department, their credits are as follows: Permanent annuity, $395,636.42. For support of blacksmith shop, $20,179.86. For support of school, $80,000. Improvement fund, $18,000. General fund with accrued interest, $122,000. Total amount, $635,816.28.

The Prairie band still maintain a tribal government. After the death of Se-noge-wone, his son Wab-sai became head-chief, which he held until his death in 1872. The present head-chief is Sough-nes-see. The first speaker is Masqui, the second, Pis-she-quin. August 5, 1878, the matter came before them in regard to transferring the control of the Indians to the War Department, and the sense of the tribe was expressed by Masqui, who said:

> Chiefs and others have stated: "We feel happy and pleased to have a choice to elect how we shall be controlled." I have heard the opinions of the chiefs who say that at the time peace was made with us, they were glad that we inferred from them (the President and Commissioners) that we would be as one people as long as the earth should exist; the President would be our father, who promised to look after our rights; that the day would come when his wars would be settled all over the face of the earth, and for all time the President would protect us in the possession of our property. Therefore the chiefs were satisfied, and are satisfied that such acts have been done. I am indeed ignorant as to how we should be treated if turned over to his (the President's) braves for protection, therefore I would remain as at present, under the care of the Interior Department. I will receive full protection and encouragement, and where my property will not be squandered; but will be saved to our children and our children's children, for all time to come. I do not wish to make new rules or contracts, but desire to remain under the guardianship of the government as stipulated in our treaties, and as have been exercised in the past.

At a recent funeral occasion, the speaker alluding to the deceased woman said substantially: "The person now before us, but a few days ago was walking around with us. We may learn from this that we should truthfully speak of, and kindly treat, our fellows; we should be charitable, for as this one needs our charity, so ere long, will we need some of yours."

"The noble red man" does not alone exist in song and story; for among these created intelligences, residing on this Diminished Reservation, are those who have chords, which, if properly touched, are susceptible to that kind of vibration, that this race, the Aborigines of America, may come to the noble Caucasian, and teach him perhaps not wordy lessons so much as worthy examples.

This Prairie band of Indians are many of them, resolutely cultivating the arts of peace. They are just and honest with the whites and themselves; they are developing the holy love of a personal, permanent home; they are comprehending subjects of business presented to them; they are substituting for the sixteen English letters they have heretofore used in their Indian language, all of the English alphabet found necessary to express vocal sounds; they are learning to acquire property; in fine, they are making gradual progress, and their permanent location in Jackson County may bring mutual compensation to themselves and the "superior race."

Jackson County, with a little over one-half of the original territory embraced in Calhoun, when organized in 1855, in 1882 presents herself, when viewed in a physical aspect, as regards the natural wealth of her soil, enhanced as it is by the hand of art and the skill of man; in the inherent richness of manhood, fostered by the generous culture of her schools, churches, societies and the press; in the free and ready commingling of so many of the different races and nationalities of the earth, as the peer of her sister counties, and all these furnish for coming time, much interesting food for the historical student, who, ever and anon, is impressed with the truth of the declaration, "History is philosophy teaching by examples."

Towns of the County.—In the ante-bellum days, Elk City, Calhoun, Silver Lake, St. Mary's, Indianola, Rochester, Holton, New Brighton, Smithland, Ontario, and New Eureka, were the centers; though the three last named places were little else than post-offices. Elk City, two miles west of Holton, had a short existence. Calhoun, in the extreme southeastern portion of the county, became defunct in October, 1858, when it ceased to be the shire town. Silver Lake is now a thriving town in Shawnee County, and St. Mary's is in Pottawatomie County; both on the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific. Indianola, near where the State Reform School is located, now exists in story. Rochester retains a few of its old dwellings on the east side of the highway; it has a nice brick schoolhouse, and is now a voting place in Soldier Township, Shawnee County. New Brighton has now become Circleville, a place of some importance on the Kansas Central Railroad. Smithland has gone down to Soldier City on the Kansas Central. The post-office at New Eureka has gone to the high divide, Netawaka. Whiting, on Central Branch of Missouri Pacific, six miles east of Netawaka is thirty-one miles west of Atchison, the main grain-shipping point of the county; in population next to Holton. Larkin, laid out in 1880, near the Kansas Central Railroad, is situated on the county line of Jackson and Atchison counties, the larger portion being in Jackson County. Tippinsville, sometimes called North Cedar, and again Bloomfield, is a few miles southwest of Larkin, an important center in Cedar Township.

In the spring of 1857, Bellevue was laid out as a prospective county-seat town on the southeast quarter of Section 17, Township 8, Range 16, and on its site was a frame house and blacksmith shop. Its life was very short.

CALAMITIES AND CRIMES.

The struggling pioneers of Jackson County in 1860, as the heavens refused to furnish the seasonable rains for the sustenance of the seed that had been planted and sown, in the later summer days, began anxiously to inquire, "What shall we eat, and what shall we drink, and wherewithal shall we be clothed?" But a Territorial Relief Committee at Atchison, reported January 18, 1861, goods received to the amount of 1,062,552 pounds, besides articles for wear; and the people of this county went with their teams during the winter and obtained their supposed quota; their greatest relief being the seed that the obtained, from which they received a bountiful harvest in 1861. The personal donations from friends in the East, blessed what had been otherwise many a famished home.

Chintz Bugs and Grasshoppers pestered the people, specially in 1862, 1866, 1867, 1874, and 1875. The most serious damage done was by the grasshoppers in the summer and autumn of 1874, and the spring of 1875. To supply the needs of the people of the destitute in that county, the Commissioners sought systematically to ascertain through the Township Trustees, what families were in need, and a "County Warrant Bill," not exceeding $15,000, was passed to furnish necessaries, seed, etc., to destitute inhabitants under the provisions of an act of the Legislature, approved February 18, 1875. This act was a matured bill of Senator Hopkins, of this county. The maximum for each head of a family was fifty bushels of corn, fifteen of oats, ten of wheat, and five of potatoes, for which mortgage notes were required, due in one year, at 10 per cent. interest. This was a serviceable measure.

Grocery, tavern, and dram shop licenses were granted in the Territorial days. The Calhoun County Commissioners, had authorized David Milne, February 23, 1856, to take out a tavern license, he paying therefor $20; April 21, James Kuykendall, had one; August 9, C. A. Fulton, a grocery license; August 18, Andrew Johnson, a tavern license; April 8, 1857, David Milne, John Kennedy, and John F. Cailoz, had dram shop licenses, paying each $30; September 5, 1857, two others were issued, and on October 18, 1859, an applicant's petition for license, was held under advisement at the Commissioners' Court at Holton; Aaron Foster being in favor of the petitioner paying $495 a year, Byron Stewart, $250, C. J. Cowell, $75.

The Holton City Council, June 20, 1872, fixed the license for a dram-shop keeper—to be paid in advance—not less than $100, nor more than $300 per year. The vote of Jackson County, November 2, 1880, on the Prohibition Amendment to the State Constitution, was 1,056 votes for, and 1,098 against, whole number, 2,154; on Governor, 2,317; on President, 2,370 votes were cast. Under the Prohibitory Liquor Law, druggists have taken out licenses as follows: May, 1881, M. M. Beck, Holton; Love & Green, Whiting; F. T. Brown & Co., Circleville; July, M. A. Funchess, Netawaka; August, J. W. Fleming, W. W. Naylor, and A. H. Williams, Holton; September, J. D, Pruett, Circleville.

Brown & Co., Circleville were succeeded by Pruett; Messrs. Beck, and Naylor & William, and Love & Green have made a renewal of their permits.

The last dram-shop license granted by the municipal authorities of Holton, was June 10, 1875. The amount of license was $200 per year.

On the vote on the Prohibition Amendment, Grant gave the largest majority for it, 47; Washington Township, the largest majority against it, 87. Six of the townships gave majorities for; four, against the amendment.

The first settler known to have been murdered on the soil of Jackson County, was Felix G. Braden, who came from Jackson County, Mo., in 1854, and located near Easton, in the County of Leavenworth. He came out west of Holton and obtained a claim, early in 1857, and on the night of April 10, 1857, he was shot through the head with a musket ball and three buckshot. It is supposed the murderer was Martin Thomas, a nephew, who probably obtained some $100 in money. Mr. Braden was a Free-State man; Thomas was Pro-slavery. David Coffin arrested Thomas, but in absence of any direct proof of his guilt, and of courts, he was not detained. Thomas was killed in 1858, at Atchison, in some altercation that arose between him and another outlaw.

The family of the deceased man reached the claim the day after the murder, and Mr. Braden's remains were entombed on what he had struggled to obtain for a home for his family, which consisted of a wife, two daughters, a son, and step-son, all of whom have done most commendable work in the great battlefield of life.

RAILROADS.

The voters of Jackson County, August 22, 1871, by a vote of 750 to 501, adopted a bond proposition aggregating $160,000 to aid the Kansas Central; $60,000 to be paid when the road reach[illegible]lton, $50,000 for a connection at Netawaka with the Missouri Pacific, $50,000, when the road was completed and in running order to the west line of the county. May 4, 1872, by a vote of 555 to 544, the county donated its railroad stock of $160,000 to the company. August [illegible] the road was completed to Holton, and a depot built at the point most available to the city, and the County Commissioners at their session, September 4, 1872, regarded $60,000 in bonds as their due. The delay to go on from Holton on the part of the Railroad Company, caused a forfeiture of the balance of the bonds voted, and subsequently the townships of Jefferson and Soldier each voted $18,000 in bonds to aid the road. The bonded railroad indebtedness amounts, therefore, to $96,000, for the county and township; the bonds run for thirty years, and bear interest at 7 per cent, interest payable semi-annually.

August 22, 1872, the first passenger train came over the Kansas Central from Leavenworth to Holton. It was the occasion of a great railroad excursion from Leavenworth, and the Holtonites were very much rejoiced to have a railroad connection with the largest town in the State, and with the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railroad, at Valley Falls.

The stations on the road in the county are Kimball (formerly Larkin—just on the county line), Elk, Holton, Circleville, Lawndale and Soldier.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND COUNTY BUILDINGS.

At a joint session of the Council and House of the first Territorial Legislature in August 1855, county officers for Calhoun County were elected as follows: James Kuykendall, Probate Judge, who was ex-officio Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, William Alley and Richard P. Beeler, Commissioners; James T. Wilson, Sheriff.

The first meeting of the County Commissioners, September 24, 1855, was at Calhoun, which was in the southeast corner of the county, north of the Kansas River, seven miles from Topeka. It lay up the bend of the river, northwest of Tecumseh, and was on the East one-half of Section 14 in Township 11 of Range 16. It is now described as Lot Number 3, and is in the name of L. R. Taylor, a tax-payer of Shawnee County. At this meeting Messrs. Kuykendall, Beeler and Wilson, were present, and William L. Kuykendall was appointed Clerk of the Commissioners' Court.

By order of the Board, the election provided to be held for Delegate to Congress, October 1, 1855, was to be at the house of James M. Houds, and Perry Fleshman and Samuel S. Lockhart, were elected as the Judges. There were no Free-State votes cast, and John W. Whitfield received twenty-nine votes for Delegate to Congress.

The following order was adopted: "Ordered that we resolve to build a Court House out of brick, and that we adjourn until Saturday next, at which time we request the attendance of William Alley, our Associate Justice, and that the Court of Calhoun County be held at the house of James Knykendall until otherwise ordered by the Court."

September 29, 1855. William Alley met with the Board and Judge Kuykendall swore him to the following oath of office which was politically orthodox at that time:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA } ss
Territory of Kansas }

I William Alley do Solemnly Swear upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that I will Support and Sustain the Constitution of the United States and that I will Support and Sustain the provisions of an Act Entitled an Act to Organize the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska and the provisions of the Laws of the United States commonly known as the Fugitive Slave Law, and faithfully and impartially and to the best of my ability demean myself in the Discharge of my duties in the Office of Commissioner in the County of Calhoun in Said Territory So help me God.
William Alley.

Sworn to subscribed before the undersigned this 29th day of September A. D. 1855.
James Kuykendall.
Judge Probate Court of C. C. K. T."

Governor Shannon commissioned Raleigh J. Fulton, Constable of Douglas Township, November 24, 1855; he took the oath of office, December 28, 1858; gave his official bond January 21, 1856.

The following order, relating to the Court House and Jail was passed: "Ordered that the Court House and Jail be built on Court House Square, and that sealed proposals for the stone work be received at the Clerk's office near the town of Calhoun, until the 15th of October, 1855, and that the same be inserted in some weekly newspaper published in the Territory of Kansas, for two successive weeks."

October 15, 1855, it was ordered by the Commissioners' Court, "that the plans and specifications of the Court House of the County of Calhoun be placed on the records of said Court." Elaborate specifications were presented as to stone work, brick work, hall doors, height of rooms, stairway, doors, windows, amphitheatre platforms, bar, ring for bar, Judges' seat, floors, etc., Court House to front 50 feet by 55 feet deep. October 16, 1855, the Court ordered the time extended for receiving proposals, until October 27, 1855. April 21, 1856, proposals were submitted for bids for building a Jail 16x24 feet, 8 feet high. May 19, 1856, the order heretofore made concerning proposals for a Court House was rescinded and it was ordered that James Kuykendall, Commissioner of Public Buildings: "Be authorized and required to let the building of a frame Court House, thirty-five feet square and two stories high, either by public outcry to the highest bidder, after advertising ten days or by private contract, provided said building does not exceed in cost $2,500."

December 15, 1856, it was ordered by the Court that James Kuykendall be allowed the sum of $90 for rent and use of house for office of Probate, and Commissioners' Court, also office for the Clerk thereof from September 24, 1855, to December 31, 1856, at $6 per month, and October 25, 1857, he was allowed $60; October 8, 1858, the last rent paid by Calhoun County, $78.

Concerning the Jail, January 9, 1857, the following order was made: "Whereas the building of a Jail for Calhoun County was let to Perry Fleshman on or about the First of January, 1856, at and for the sum of $2,000, and said undertaker having given his bond to the County aforesaid in the penal sum of $4,000 for the faithful performance of the contract, it is now ordered that the contract and bond be rescinded."

It appears that Judge Kuykendall had made persistent efforts to have the County supplied with a Court House and Jail, and the matter having failed, he complied with the Territorial Statute in having the County pay rent for office room.

October 4, 1858, was the time for an election of members of the Territorial House, and Golden Silvers, whose name suggests the proverb, "Speech is silver, silence is golden," was chosen the member for Calhoun County. At the same time a vote was had on county seat, and Holton had a majority of seventy-nine votes over all competitors. The glory of Calhoun City had thus passed out forever, and in a few months later, the name of Calhoun County had ceased to exist.

Mr. Silvers, as a legislator, had the honor of having Jackson as the new name of the County, for February 11, 1859, the bill passed providing for the change, the law going into effect immediately after its passage. Though Calhoun, Calhoun County, had given way to Holton, Jackson County, yet for many months thereafter conveyances were made, the instrument reciting, "Territory of Kansas, County of Calhoun, ss.," and county officials recognized Calhoun County into the midsummer of 1859.

The building once occupied as the Court House is now the property of Schillinger & Meck, and is a furniture establishment. Its original dimensions were 20x26 feet, two stories high, a modest wooden structure. The lot on which it stood was conveyed November 12, 1859, by William F. Creitz, James Walters and Edward A. Squire, Trustees of the Town of Holton, to Chauncey J. Cowell, Byron Steward, and Aaron Foster, Supervisors in and for the County of Jackson. It was Lot 48, Pennsylvania Avenue, and is situated a little south of east of the present Court House. The consideration was $1, and the property was to revert to the grantors or their successors in office, should the county seat be removed from Holton.

The county by its Board of Commissioners, E. L. Stalker, John Deardorff, and J. H. Bateman, conveyed the property to Jason Dickey, August 30, 1879, for the consideration of $491; Mr. Dickey having leased the same July 6, 1875, of the county for a yearly rent of $50.

A vote was had April 5, 1870, on the erection of public buildings and levy of tax, and the vote stood 396, for, and 350, against; May 20, 1870, the Board of County Commissioners having visited Oskaloosa and Leavenworth, for the purpose of examining their Court House, decided to adopt the plans and specifications as drawn by John S. McKeen, of Leavenworth, and decided to receive sealed proposals for bids up to June 16, 1870. As an appropriation was made of $16,000 for Court House purposes, and as the several bids received exceeded that amount, there was an order for modifying the plans, time for completion of the building, and amending the bids, and a contract was finally made for the erection of the building at a cost of $21,000. June 17, 1870, the contractors being Joseph Hockham, Amos A. Fenn, Van Liddell and John S. Anderson, of Leavenworth, their sureties on the $42,000 bonds being W. P. Borland, H. L. Bickford, H. L. Newman. The structure was built in the center of the public square, which is a beautiful tract of ground, 320 feet from east to west, 450 from north to south, having an area of 3 and 30-100 acres, the main slope being from southwest to northeast. The tract was conveyed by the Trustees of the town of Holton to Jackson County, and the following is a copy of a receipt on file in the County Clerk's office: "Holton, November 12, 1860. Received of Jackson County, $1, by W. S. Hoaglin, in full of considerations of deed to Public Square, from Trustees of Town of Holton, Ed. Vetter Treasurer." The Court House is a neat brick structure 40x60 feet, two stories high, with a basement, which is used for the storage of coal, and for jail purposes when necessary, there being cells for the accommodation of prisoners. Entering the building from the west, is the Treasurer's, Judges of Probate's and County Clerk's offices, on the north side of the hall; on the south side are the offices of Clerk of the District Court and Sheriff, the Register of Deeds and the County Attorney. The last named office is unoccupied; County Attorney Hopkins having an office over the City Bank, at the northeast corner of the Public Square. The Superintendent of Public Instruction has an office in the southwest part of the upper story. The court room is 40x40 feet; in height 20 feet. The grounds are covered with a bountiful growth of clover and other grasses, and there are a considerable number of thrifty trees growing on the same; many of them being the enduring elm.

At each corner of the Court House Block, on the outside of the same, is a public well. These wells prove a general benefaction to citizens and strangers. The Court House has a bell which is often utilized

Jackson County has had but a small number of its citizens who have been "held in durance vile," neither has it had a large pauper list; eight persons in 1882 being the number that the county provided for. In January 1876, the county made purchase of the west one-half of Section 14, Township 7, Range 16, the consideration being $2,500; the grantors were William A. Allen, and Lewis Sarbach. Upon consideration this was not deemed an eligible site for a Poor Farm, and on August 30, 1879, the county exchanged this half section with W. R. Wright for the southwest quarter of Section 25, Township 6, Range 15, receiving in exchange $250. Soon thereafter a dwelling was erected on the farm, the contract price being about $825.

The first Superintendent of the Poor Farm was A. C. Blankenship, who took possession in March 1880, at a salary of $350 a year, and living found. In 1881, M. B. Parrott succeeded him, at an advance of $100 per year, and in 1882 at an increase of $150. Everything about the farm indicates good management.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

James Kuykendall, the pioneer man in county business in the old County of Calhoun had held the office of Sheriff in Platte County, Mo., for four years; had been Probate Judge for a decade, and a public man generally. Here he was Probate Judge, Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, Register of Deeds, County Clerk, and Prosecuting Attorney, having performed his last official duties as prosecutor, receiving $80 for such service, in October 1859, in July 1860, $25. January 21, 1856, Anthony S. Wilson was appointed County Treasurer, Albert Fuller was elected in 1857, and Edward A. Squire was Treasurer, when Kansas became a State. Raleigh J. Fulton succeeded James T. Wilson as Sheriff, April 22, 1856; in November 1857, William Owens succeeded Fulton; in March 1859, Henry S. Westlake succeeded Owens, and Amos Landon held the office when Kansas was admitted as a State.

January 21, 1856, Thomas Jenner was appointed Public Administrator; January 18, 1858, George W. Brassbridge was appointed. Garrett S. Cozine was appointed Surveyor, June 16, 1856; J. B. Parrott, November 16, 1857; Thomas J. Anderson, November 25, 1859. The early Assessors were Perry Fleshman, Joseph M. Cole. John J. Preston was appointed June 25, 1859; Alfred Richards, April 5, 1860: Golden Silvers was the first under the State Government, appointed June 18, 1861. Ira I. Taber organized the first dozen school districts of the county; he resigned the office May 28, 1859; George W. Packard succeeded him; December 10, 1860, Stephen E. Olmstead was appointed. Mr. Taber was the first under the State Government. After the Kuykendall regime had ceased to be, Samuel Branham was County Clerk, but his duties were performed mainly by Lewis Stafford, Deputy. Mr. Stafford afterwards became Clerk, and was succeeded by Ira I. Taber, who held the office in 1862. Samuel Ashmore, of murder wife fame, was Clerk for a time in 1859. Isaac T. Hite succeeded Richard P. Beeler, May 12, 1857; Alfred Matthews and Cyrus G. Allen succeeded Messrs. Alley and Kuykendall; Jesse Hendrickson was elected October 5, 1857. Chauncey J. Cowell, Robert C. Callahan and J. B. Parrott, were of the Board of Supervisors in 1858, and at the first term held at Holton, October 18, 1858, Mr. Cowell was Chairman and Lewis Stafford was Clerk. In 1859, the Supervisors were C. J. Cowell, Aaron Foster, and Byron Steward; in 1860, Mr. Cowell, William Cline and George Coleman, were the Commissioners; Mr. Cline, R. S. Craft, and J. W. Williams were the first under the State rule. Under the Territorial rule, the Clerks of the District Court for the greater part of the time were James R. Whitehead, of Leavenworth, and Laomi McArthur, of Topeka, represented almost wholly by Deputies, who were quite numerous. Martin Anderson succeeded Judge Kuykendall, and Judge Anderson was succeeded by Ward S. Hoaglin, who was the first Judge under State rule.

In the old court house at Holton, the officers were apportioned among the county officers July 7, 1860, in the following manner, as appears of record: Southeast room as the District Clerk's and Sheriff's office; the west room as the County Clerk's, Probate Judge, and Register of Deeds' office, and the northeast room as the office of the Treasurer and County Attorney. Following is a complete roster of the county officers since 1861:

County Commissioners, R. S. Craft, J. W. Williams, William Cline, 1861. J. W. Williams, S. J. Rose, N. Tolbert, 1862-63. J. G. Erwin, S. J. Rose, S. Fairbanks, 1864. J. G. Erwin, S. J. Rose, R. P. Hamm, 1865. Jacob Hixon, J. Loughmiller, A. McKeeber, 1866-67. C. J. Waynant, William Cline, J. Rippetoe, 1868-69. J. F. Pomeroy, G. W. Drake, W. H. Chase, 1870-71. William Cline, G. W. Drake, W. H. Chase, 1872-73. G. T. Watkins, D. Blosser, Geo. Coleman, 1874-75; F. Stephenson, H. Kirkpatrick, R. S. Gillies, 1876-77; John Deardorff, J. H. Bateman, E. L. Stalker, 1878-81; E. W. Kenyon, J. H. County Treasurer.—Edward A. Squire, 1861; Hugh McBride, 1862-63; R. S. Craft, 1864-65; W. F. Creitz, 1866-69; G. Leeper, 1870-73; W. A. Allen, 1874-77; L. M. Myers, 1878-81; J. A. Scott, 1882.

Register of Deeds.—John B. Coffin, 1861; J. P. Irwin, 1862-63; Thomas G. Watters, 1864-65; George L. Hamm, 1866; L. V. Bryan, 1867-75; M. H. McCormick, 1876; Mrs. E. L. McCormick, 1877; John Q. Myres, 1878-81; W. H. Webster, 1882.

District Judge.—William C. McDowell, 1861-63; Jacob Safford, 1864; Charles K. Gilchrist, 1865-68; John T. Morton, 1869-80; Robert Crozier, 1881-82.

County Attorney.—R. C. Callahan, 1861-62; C. K. Gilchrist, 1863-64; R. C. Callahan, 1865-66; M. L. Snyder, 1867-68; W. S. Hoaglin, 1869-70; John S. Hopkins, 1871-73; Charles Hayden, 1874; J. H. Lowell, 1875-76; Case Broderick, 1877-80; John S. Hopkins, 1881-82.

District Clerk.—Aquila J. Reid, 1861; William H. Dodge, 1862; Aquila J. Reid, 1863-64; M. L. Snyder, 1865-66; J. L. Peck, 1867-68; Ira I. Taber, 1869-74; A. D. Walker, 1875-80; E. E. Birkett, 1881-82.

Probate Judge.—W. S. Hoaglin, 1861-66; S. J. Foster, 1867; C. J. Cowell, 1868; Case Broderick, 1869-76; A. D. Stone, 1877-78; J. T. Price, 1879-82.

Surveyor.—C. N. Johnson, 1862-63; John McCrury, 1864-66; Peter Bryant, 1867-73; Peter Dickinson, 1874-82.

Superintendent of Public Instruction.—Ira I. Taber, 1861-62; Jacob B. Waynant, 1863-64; William D. Bassett, 1865-66; James Telfer, 1867-68; R. M. Cook, 1869-73; T. W. Ramey, 1874; Mrs. O. E. Stout, 1874-82.

October 9, 1857, Martin F. Conway was elected to the Topeka convention which met October 23. June 15, 1857, Henry D. Oden, of Elk City, and James Kuykendall, of Calhoun, were elected as delegates to the Lecompton convention which convened September 7, 1857. February 15, 1858, William E. Bowker, of Rochester, and Adam Fuller, of Franklin Township, were elected delegates to the Leavenworth convention which convened March 25, 1858.

In June 1859, Ephraim Moore, then and now living near Circleville, was elected from Jackson County over Aaron Foster as a delegate to the Wyandotte Constitutional Convention, which met July 5, and adjourned July 29, having adopted the Constitution, which with sundry amendments is now the organic law of Kansas.

The total vote of Jackson County cast October 4, 1859, on the Constitution, was 224 for, and 170 against. The vote in Calhoun County on the Lecompton Constitution, as submitted by the English bill, August 2, 1858, was 32 for it, and 250 against it. Jackson County, March 28, 1859, on the vote for or against a Constitutional Convention, gave 107 for, and 47 against. In June 1859, Mr. Moore's majority over Mr. Foster was 41 in a vote of 321. Mr. Moore acted with the Democrats in the convention and did not sign the Constitution. He was returned as a native of Ohio, a manufacturer, 38 years of age; hence in 1882 is 61.

At the State election, December 6, 1859, under the Wyandotte Constitution, the vote was evenly divided on State officers as near as might be. Root, Lieutenant Governor; Robinson, Secretary of State; Thoman, Treasurer; Griffith, Superintendent of Public Instruction; Ewing, Chief Justice; Simpson, Attorney General; Conway, Congressman;—these seven Republicans each had one majority. Governor Medary, Democrat, had one majority over Governor Robinson; and for three State offices there was a tie vote. The highest vote polled on any office was 339. The vote on Senators was for Holliday and Buck, Democrats, 168 each; Lynde, Republican, 168; Farnsworth, Republican, 167. Ever since then Jackson County has been Republican at State elections, it having sent only one Democrat to the State Legislature. In 1874 its vote was the closest; in a vote of 1,130, Governor Osborn had a majority of 136.

In its county offices, since Kansas became a State, there have been Democrats in the offices of County Commissioner, Treasurer, County Clerk, Register of Deeds, County Attorney and Superintendent of Public Instruction. In the first Presidential election in which Kansas participated—that of 1864—Jackson County polled 870 votes. Sixteen years later on President it cast 2,870, a gain of 2,000.

The Territorial Legislature of 1855 had no Representatives in either the Council or House who were residents on the soil that was organized into Calhoun County by that body. But on October 6, 1856, James Kuykendall and George L. Young were elected Representatives, and Francis J. Marshall, Councilman; Calhoun County giving a vote of 30 for Kuykendall, 22 for Young, 19 for Marshall and 52 for John W. Whitfield, for Territorial Delegate. Mr. Marshall lived at Marysville, and the counties of Arapahoe, Calhoun, Davis, Marshall and Riley voted for him, being in the Council district.

October 5, 1857, A. G. Patrick was elected Councilman, the district being Calhoun and Jefferson counties. Asa Reynard, of Holton, was elected Representative. This was the beginning of Free-State triumphs. Marcus J. Parrott had for Delegate to Congress from Calhoun County 205 votes; E. Ransom, 39. Golden Silvers was elected Representative in 1858; Byron Steward in 1859. The counties of Atchison and Calhoun at that time constituted a Council district, and William J. Marion was returned as Councilman, but Milton R. Benton was admitted on a contest. Martin Anderson was elected Representative in 1860, and when Kansas was admitted as a State, January 29, 1861, Mr. Anderson was serving as such, his labors terminating February 2, 1861. He was the only State officer Jackson County ever had, having been State Treasurer in 1867 and in 1868.

State Senators and Representatives.—The first State Legislature, met March 26, 1861. Jackson County, which formed a part of the Sixth Senatorial District, was represented by Edward Lynde, of Jefferson, and H. W. Farnsworth, of Shawnee.

Under the Wyandotte Constitution the Sixth Election District was composed of the counties of Shawnee, Jefferson and Jackson; entitled to two Senators and eight Representatives. The Senators were H. W. Farnsworth, of Shawnee, and Edward Lynde, of Jefferson; the Representatives from Jackson County were William E. Bowker, of Indianola, and Abraham Ray, of Holton. These gentlemen were in the first State Legislature in the spring of 1861. In the winter of 1862 Senator Farnsworth's place was filled by Cyrus K. Holliday; Mr. Farnsworth having been appointed Kaw Indian Agent. Golden Silvers and Martin Anderson were the Representatives.

The Legislature of 1862 made the first State Legislative apportionment. Jackson County was the Eighteenth Representative District, and Jackson and Pottawatomie counties were the Sixth Senatorial District. Ever since then these counties have been a senatorial district, remaining as the Sixth ten years; as the Fifth, four; as the Fourth, eight, and in 1885 becoming the Seventeenth.

The Senators have alternated between the two counties, and in twenty-two years its eight Senators have been as follows: 1863-1865, Rufus Oursler, of Jackson; 1865-1867, O. J. Grover, of Pottawatomie; 1867-1869, William H. Dodge, of Jackson; 1869-1871, O. J. Grover, of Pottawatomie; 1871-1873, James McLellan, of Jackson; 1873-1875, Luther R. Palmer, of Pottawatomie; 1875-1877, John S. Hopkins, of Jackson; 1877-1881, Welcome Wells, of Pottawatomie; 1881-1885, Case Broderick, of Jackson.

Jackson County under the first State apportionment had one member in the House; under the second, two; under the third, one; under the fourth, two; under the fifth, one—which gives her but one member in the Legislature of 1883. Electing twenty-five Representatives since 1862, only three have been chosen for two terms, and but two for three terms each. The Representatives to the State Legislature have been as follows: R. S. Craft, J. W. Williams, James McLellan, Peter Bryant, J. B. Oliver, J. L. Williams, Norman J. Allen, D. W. C. Locke, George W. Miller, J. L. Williams, Byron Steward, J. L. Williams, C. R. Burns, Jacob Loughmiller, P. M. Hodges, John Birkett, J. W. Williams, George T. Watkins, W. H. Chase, J. H. Keller, W. H. Wilson, George T. Watkins, W. H. Wilson.

In January 1877 the biennial legislative system commenced, therefore at the election in 1876 members for the House were elected for two years; for the Senate, four years.

Organization of the Republican Party.—February 11, 1859, Calhoun County became Jackson. March 12, 1859, a meeting was held at Holton for the purpose of organizing the Republican party. This was some two months before the Territorial organization of the party at Osawatomie, where Horace Greeley said: "I often regard the struggle of 1860 with less hope than apprehension." Jackson County Free-State men had presumed that they might meet in peace and organize a political movement at that late day, with "none to molest or make afraid"; but, they were destined to be mistaken. For an opposition element met thereafter and presented resolutions in antagonism to those adopted by the Republicans. Judge Martin Anderson suffered violence, and was for a time senseless. Thomas Keer and others were wounded, revolvers were discharged, but fortunately none were killed. It was the last blow struck in Jackson County by the Slavery Propaganda against Free thought and Free speech.

MILITARY RECORD.

The record of Jackson County in the war of the Rebellion is worthy of its name. It furnished commissioned, non-commissioned officers and privates.

The number of volunteers furnished was 175, and they were mainly in the Kansas Eighth and Eleventh regiments.

Thomas J. Anderson was commissioned by President Lincoln, Assistant Adjutant-General on the staff of Major-General Blunt.

Martin Anderson was mustered as Major of the Kansas Eleventh, November 22, 1863.

Ira I. Taber was mustered as Adjutant of the Kansas Eleventh, October 12, 1864.

John B. Parrott was mustered as First Lieutenant, Company B, Kansas Eleventh, December 15, 1864.

James B. Hastings was mustered as Second Lieutenant, Company B, Kansas Eleventh, December 30, 1864.

Milton Rose was mustered as First Lieutenant, Company E, Kansas Eighth, November 5, 1864.

Elisha D. Rose was mustered as First Lieutenant, Company E, Kansas Eighth, December 6, 1864.

Robert J. Waterhouse was connected with the Commissary Department by appointment from Gen. Thomas Ewing, Jr., and held commission to recruit loyal Arkansans and others.

William Henry Dodge and many others might be named as among the gallant band from the county.

James K. Burnes, William L. Wendall, and Woodward Hindman were killed in battle at Chickamauga, September 19, 1863. William M. Thompson was drowned off the steamer "Prairie Rose", February 28, 1863. James H. Thompson died of fever at Cairo, Ill., January 1, 1866, before receiving his final discharge. Volney N. Brown, Cyrus Grant and Abraham Stanley died of disease. These soldiers had friends in the vicinity of Holton and Indianola. The Thompsons were sons of Mr. John H. Thompson, of Holton.

Twentieth Regiment, Kansas State Militia.—This regiment was organized in June 1864, and made up of 340 men, nearly all of whom were from Jackson County. There were a few of the citizens in the southern part of the county who joined a company in Jefferson County. The officers of the regiment were: John R. Hubbell, Colonel; James McLellan, Lieutenant-Colonel; William Knipe, Major; W. L. Burns, Adjutant; P. M. Hodges, Quartermaster; B. F. Fuller, Surgeon. J. F. M. Walters, W. S. Hoaglin, S. J. Foster, J. L. Finnicum, R. J. Tolin were among the captains of the companies. The military service rendered by this regiment in October 1864, when Gen. Sterling Price with his Rebel force menaced the peace of the State, is an excellent subject for the annalist. Governor Thomas Carney issued an order, October 10, 1864, summoning the militia to rally for the defense of Kansas and the Nation. This regiment at once prepared to march for the field of battle, and on October 22, it was in the State of Missouri. The services rendered by this body of men were appreciated by those in command, and, after eighteen days' absence, they returned to their homes, fortunately without a list of killed or wounded.

George Washington Myers, a settler at Holton, in 1882, is a veteran in the service of his country. Entering the navy in boyhood, he has gone under his country's flag to many a foreign port. He has been with Walker's Nicaragua Expedition, in the South American waters, and in the late Rebellion he distinguished himself by many a brave and hazardous exploit, and he carries on his body visible evidences of severe warfare.

SCHOOLS AND COUNTY SOCIETIES.

The State of Kansas is challenged to find another county surpassing Jackson in its zealous devotion to educational matters. The first school building erected in the county was south of Holton, in the year 1858. It was a structure of logs, and gave way to a good brick building in 1869, costing $1,500. The territory in which this was located, was organized as District No. 1 in 1859. No. 2 is Holton. No. 3 is on North Cedar; the building is one mile south of Tippinville. No. 4 is the most easterly district, on Straight Creek. No. 5 is Banner, situated in the east part of Grant Township. The cost of the house, furniture and apparatus was $2,000; the house, for a long time, was also used for religious worship. No. 6 is in Liberty Township, north of Holton. No. 7 joins Holton on the east, No. 8 adjoins Banner on the west. No. 9 is on Straight Creek, west of No. 4. No. 10 is the most easterly district on South Cedar. No. 11 is on both sides of the Big Soldier, about twelve miles west of Holton. No. 12 is the Star schoolhouse in the southeast corner of the county. This section furnishes pupils for the Campbell University. No. 13 is located on both sides of East Muddy, near its source. Hon. J. W. Williams, for a long time its District Clerk, may be called the father of it, and for several terms he "taught the young idea how to shoot" in the original log structure in which the school was taught. Hon. John Rippetoe was for a long time school officer in District No. 12 and may be entitled to be named as its father. No. 14 is at the head of South Cedar, its western boundary being the eastern line of the Pottawatomie Reserve, four miles south of Holton. No. 15, the second district north and northwest of Holton, bounded on the north by the parallel, located in Jefferson Township, has a model frame school building, costing $1,300. No. 16 is the Circleville District; having no school building, it occupies what was erected as "the North Kansas Male and Female Seminary" in 1865 and in 1866, at a cost of $10,000. It is a most beautiful limestone building, standing on the rolling prairie so as to command a fine view of the surrounding country. The late Rev. D. P. Mitchell was one of the Committee on Location.

In 1860, Jackson County, with a population of 2,297, had 806 persons of school age,—between the ages of five and twenty-one. In 1872 the number was 2,587; males, 1,390; females, 1,197. In 1880 the number was 3,855. In 1872 the number of districts was 51; joint districts, 6; in 1882 it was 70; joint districts, 6. Total, 76. There is one joint district with Atchison County; one with Brown; one with Nemaha; three with Pottawatomie. Seven teachers are employed in the school at Holton, two at Circleville, two at Netawaka, two at Whiting, two at Drake's (No. 49), two at North Cedar and two at Soldier, and there would be two at Banner, were there more school room. Some of the districts have libraries, notably that of Holton, having the ample gift from Hon. E. D. Holton, besides encyclopedias, etc. Mrs. Olive E. Stout and R. M. Cook, Esq., have done the larger part of County Superintendent work.

Campbell Normal University.—This school was opened in September, 1882. The building is an admirably planned school edifice. It is built of magnesian limestone, and has a splendid external appearance. The internal arrangement is very complete; the office, the library, the different study and recitation rooms are well arranged to suit the needs of the pupils and the convenience of the instructors. It stands on a commanding eminence, just north of the city of Holton. The grounds embrace some eleven acres, on the north part of which is one of the most beautiful natural groves that can anywhere be found. From the top of the building can be seen one of the most beautiful sections of country anywhere in the State—fine prairie-land connected with large belts of excellent timber. The cost of ground, buildings and all appurtenances will exceed $25,000.

To Hon. A. G. Campbell, an early settler in Jackson and Nemaha counties, who has amassed wealth through large mining interests in the Rocky Mountains, and who was supported by the Gentile element for Delegate to Congress from Utah in 1880, is this munificent work primarily due. He was seconded in his efforts by public-spirited citizens of Holton and other portions of the county. Its Board of Directors are as follows: T. P. Moore, President; S. K. Linscott, Treasurer; J. A. Scott, Secretary; Dr. A. Y. Hanson, Peter Bryant, James Baxter, Henry Stanley, W. W. Naylor; Charles Hayden, Attorney. The school has a teachers' course, a scientific, a classic, a business, and a course in music.

Agricultural and Mechanical Association.—Alfred Gray, the late honored and efficient Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, February 27, 1873, issued a call for a Farmers' State Convention, at Topeka, March 26, 1873. This was in obedience to many calls from agriculturists that there should be a delegate convention, and that the Kansas farmers should organize themselves into district clubs. March 22, 1873, Jackson County responded, and at a Farmers' Convention held at Holton, of which Hon. James McLellan was chosen President and J. W. Taylor, Secretary, William Cline and S. J. England were elected delegates; A. L. Stevens and Hon. D. H. Southerland, alternates. One of the resolutions adopted at the State Convention is as follows: "That we earnestly request the Legislature of our State, at its next session, to enact a law regulating freights and fares upon the railroads, upon a basis of justice; and that we further request our members of Congress to urge the favorable action of that body, where the full power exists beyond all doubt, to the same end, and, if need be, to construct the National highways at the expense of the Government."

April 5, 1873, the Jackson County farmers met, and approving of the action of the State Convention, formed a County Farmers' Co-operative Union, the objects of which were stated to be as follows: "The collection of statistics relating to the products of the county—their amount, cost and value; to assist the farmers in securing just compensation for their labors; to co-operate with similar organizations of the counties and States in procuring cheap transportation and remunerative prices for surplus products, and act generally in the interest of the producing classes."

Officers of the Union were elected as follows: President, James McLellan; Vice-President, S. J. England; Secretary, A. L. Stevens; Treasurer, D. Blosser; Directors, J. Hixon, E. L. Shields, R. J. Tolin, D. H. Sutherland and B. H. Bradshaw. June 7, 1873, a committee, consisting of B. H. Bradshaw, W. J. England, D. H. Sutherland, William Cline, R. J. Tolin and D. Blosser, were appointed to canvass the county and organize farmers' clubs. J. L. Williams, George Smith, W. T. Scott and A. L. Stevens were appointed a committee to procure Fair grounds at or near Holton. Grounds were purchased July 12, 1873, one-half mile north of Holton for this purpose, of Mr. F. H. Inland, twenty acres, at $80 per acre.

The Association held its First Annual Fair September 30, and October 1, and 2, 1873. Its officers were; A. L. Stevens, President; David Blosser, Vice-President; Ira I. Taber, Secretary; J. W. Williams, Treasurer. The premium list was $1,000. The Fair was a complete success, and there was a grand display of fruit. At the grand exposition at Leavenworth, October 6, 1873, fruit exhibited at the Jackson County Fair took the first and second premiums, it being the best and largest display of Kansas fruits, and the best collection of Kansas apples. There were over one hundred varieties, raised by some twenty fruit growers of the county. This was in competition with fruit from Missouri and Michigan.

Granges.—In the autumn of 1873, B. H. Bradshaw, a farmer living near North Cedar P. O., received a commission as deputy organizer of granges and he organized the first one in the county, which was properly named Jackson Grange—B. H. Bradshaw, Master; W. A. Dodson, Secretary. Then came sixteen others as follows: Holton Grange—D. W. C. Locke, Master; John Edwards, Secretary. Cedar Grange—C. B. Monroe, Master; Ed. F. Jones, Secretary. Hoyt Grange—George I. Mosher, Master; W. W. Fish, Secretary; Pleasant Grange—G. A. Wynant, Master; E. E. Rafter, Secretary. Circleville Grange—James Baxter, Master; James Thompson, Secretary. Jefferson Grange—E. B. Clowe, Master; William A. Allen, Secretary. Whiting Grange—George T. Watkins, Master; George W. Bailey, Secretary. Star Grange—J. B. Hodges, Master; John Rippetoe, Secretary. North Cedar Grange—J. B. Moore, Master; L. Y. Bradshaw, Secretary. Liberty Grange—Joseph W. Taylor, Master; G. W. Todd, Secretary. Carbon Grange—M. Easley, Master; John J. Preston, Secretary. Little Cross Creek Grange—Wilson Bowen, Master; Lewis Smith, Secretary. Netawaka Grange—D. H. Sutherland, Master; J. A. Kennedy, Secretary. Social Grange—John King, Master; E. T. Hibbard, Secretary. South Cedar Grange—James McLellan, Master; John Q. Myers, Secretary. Smithland Grange—C. W. Branham, Master; R. B. Francis, Secretary.

Central Council of Patrons of Husbandry.—The following are the names of the principal officers of the Jackson County Council, April 3, 1874: Worthy Master, D. W. C. Locke; Overseer, Joseph W. Taylor; Lecturer, S. J. England; Steward, C. B. Monroe; Chaplain, W. H. Jones; Treasurer, N. Kline; Secretary, G. A. Wynant; Gatekeeper, J. J. Preston; Ceres, Mrs. E. A. Monroe; Pomona, Mrs. J. W. Taylor; Flora, Mrs. H. Jones; Business Agent, G. A. Wynant.

The Second Annual Fair was set for September 2, 3, and 4, 1874, and extended to the 5th, and was quite a success considered with reference to the grasshopper raid. George Coleman, William R. Baxter, William D. Barnett, Alfred Dodson and J. W. Williams were the main fruit exhibitors at the Fair. Neither Shawnee, Jefferson, Atchison, Brown, Nemaha, Pottawatomie nor Riley counties deemed it wise to hold Fairs in 1874, and Jackson indeed excelled them all.

In May, 1881, the Directors of the Agricultural and Mechanical Association sold the Fair Grounds to a company of ten gentlemen who intended to convert them into a driving-park. In 1882, most of these gentlemen have disposed of their interests,—the driving-park has been abandoned, and the grounds have become private property.

Horticultural Society.—Taking a high rank among the fruit-growing counties of the State, the fruit growers of Jackson County are displaying a commendable zeal in their persistent effort to encourage and promote the growth of fruit and shrubbery, shade, ornamental and forest trees, and hedging for fencing.

At Boston, in September, 1878, this county had a fine display of fruit; C. C. Grubb, living four miles north of Netawaka, had there fifty-one varieties of apples on exhibition.

The State Horticultural Society in 1873 held its third semi-annual meeting at Holton, June 10 and 11, than which none of its meetings have ever proved to be of more general interest.

In 1882 meetings of the county society have been frequently held and committees have reported upon the conditions of the orchards of many of the fruit-raisers of the county. Under the auspices of the society a County Fruit Show was held at the court house, September 8, 1882, at which there was a fine display of fruits and vegetables. The finest specimens were taken to the State Fair at Topeka. Mr. W. D. Barnett accepted an invitation from the State Horticultural Society to act as one of the judges on the fruit there exhibited. The President of the county society is Jacob Thornburgh; Vice-President, Jacob Hixon; Secretary and Treasurer, V. V. Adamson. Post-office address of all, Holton. Quite a majority of the local granges have ceased to be. There are still in existence the Holton, Whiting, Netawaka, Jefferson and Soldier granges. William H. Jones, of the Holton Grange, for six years was Chairman of the Executive Board of the State Grange. He has been in charge of the Holton Grange Store for seven years. This store in 1882 ceased to run under the auspices of the grange. No more active work in the interest of agriculture has been done in Kansas than in this county at times, and a revival in that line is one of the signs of the times.

The Jackson County Medical Society.—June 14, 1872, a number of the physicians of the county met at the office of Dr. V. V. Adamson, of Holton, and formed a medical society; their objects having been stated as follows: "The advancement of medical knowledge, the elevation of professional character, the extension of the boundary of medical science, and the promotion of all measures adapted to the relief of the suffering, and to improve the health and protect the lives of the community." Dr. L. S. Paddock, of Netawaka, was its first President. Its present officers are: President, J. A. Rafter, Holton; Vice-President, G. W. England, Larkin; Secretary, John T. Scott, Holton; Treasurer, V. V. Adamson, Holton; Censors, J. W. Love, Whiting; R. J. Dodds, North Cedar; T. H. Murray, Circleville.

HOLTON.

Hon. Edward Holton, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has his name perpetuated, in what, in 1856, was but a howling wilderness, but in 1882 is one of the most quiet, beautiful and substantial inland cities in Kansas.

Milwaukee, in common with the rest of the country, in 1854 and 1855, had her share of excitement over the passage of the Nebraska Bill, and the troubles in "bleeding Kansas." A Kansas society was organized as the outgrowth of this sentiment, and for its support several hundred dollars was raised, and in May 1856, a train composed of six wagons, with two yoke of oxen to each wagon, left Milwaukee for Kansas. The emigrating families were those of John B. Coffin, consisting of four members; Edmund G. Ross's, six; John B. Hutt's, four; Mr. Earl's, eight; Mr. Lathrop's, four, and there were six single men in the "Bachelor's wagon." Mr. Ross was chosen captain of the train. On arriving at Janesville, Wis., the band was joined by the family of the father of Mr. Ross, five members; Andrew Smith's family, five; Mr. Lyme's family, five.

Iowa City and Oskaloosa were made objective points in Iowa; Nebraska City was the point made west of the Missouri River, and Kansas was entered at Range 15, and Plymouth soon reached, at which place Mr. Stowell of Massachusetts, had a colony of about thirty. Lexington was the next point after leaving the headwaters of the Pony, and the "Lane road" was then followed southward. The party met on the route Gen. James H. Lane, John Brown and S. C. Pomeroy. Arriving at Elk Creek, they occupied nearly a day in bridging it, and after crossing it they struck a beautiful location, and having with them a civil engineer, a survey of the outlines of a town, which they named Holton, was made.

A hewed log building, 20x20 feet, was commenced; the logs were laid close to each other so as to make a good place of defense, and it was afterwards known as "Jim Lane's Fort." All the heads of families had selected claims, and laid foundations on the same.

One rainy morning, about four o'clock, General Lane and another man came into camp and informed them that Captain Shombrey had been killed at the fight at Fort Titus. Captain Shombrey had met them in Iowa and Nebraska, and he was leading a brave band of emigrants from Bloomington, Indiana, to Kansas.

They were told by General Lane that it was unsafe to stop at Holton, and the families had better be taken to Topeka, but some of the men should come back and stay at Holton, so as to keep the road open, this being the only way that provisions or emigrants could get through; the border ruffians having guarded the other routes.

Decison and action in two hours time took the party southward. South of town they stopped and, taking a backward glance remarked: "What a beautiful site for a town, and what a pity to leave it; but we will come back."

The Kaw River was crossed at the Pappan Ferry, and Mr. E. C. K. Garvey, of Topeka, was with other citizens waiting for them, who invited them all to his house to dinner, the first meal they had eaten inside a house since leaving Dubuque, Iowa. After dinner they drove out east of town, and went into camp, and here the company broke up; but it may be said that there was hardly a skirmish in the Territory but that some members of this company were engaged in it. In December, 1856, a meeting of the remaining forces was held in the office of Dr. Penfield, in the "Old Constitution Hall," of Topeka, and re-organized. Additions to the original force having been made, a committee was appointed, consisting of Dr. E. H. Grant, Dr. Penfield and Capt. W. F. Creitz, who came up to Holton and reported everything "all right," and the land was soon after filed upon as a town-site at the land office at Lecompton. In February, 1857, J. B. Ingersoll surveyed the town into lots, and soon after William F. and Lewis Creitz built a house on part of Lot Number 1, and opened a small grocery store, selling the first goods at the town of Holton.

During the summer, Thomas G. Walters, coming to Holton, had a man come from Iowa and put up the building known as the "Holton House," which was on the site of the "Commercial." Soon afterwards E. M. Parks put up the "Banner Hotel," which has been greatly enlarged into what is now the "City Hotel." On the south side of the Square was a building erected known as "Old Uncle Tom's Cabin," built by Henry S. Westlake for a grocery and a saloon."

Robert J. Waterhouse, who had been in Northern Wisconsin, managing certain interests of William B. Ogden, of Chicago, returned to Chicago in the spring of 1858, and resolving to come to Kansas, landed at Leavenworth in the month of May, came to Valley Falls, from there to Holton and bought one of the claims that Phineas Stewart had improved in 1855, of a Mr. Woodruff, who had been shot in the neck by the party claiming said quarter section. Mr. Waterhouse erected a store-building in Holton, which was occupied as a store by Edward A. Squires and Lewis Stafford. Ira I. Taber and Edward Olmsted built a small building on the south-west corner of the Public Square, and they erected the first schoolhouse, in which Miss Anna Parrott taught the first school, teaching two terms.

William Morrison, in 1858, put up the first steam saw and grist-mill, in the northwest corner of the town. He moved the mill from Tecumseh, and was given five shares in the town, but after obtaining the deeds the mill was moved to Southern Kansas. Dr. R. S. Craft moved his steam saw-mill from Missouri to this place, and attached to it a pair of burrs, and after operating it for some years, sold it to parties, who have changed it to a first-class flouring-mill, which now does a large business. J. W. Gordon, in 1860, opened a stock of general merchandise in a 13x14 feet room, and his business increased to large proportions. The building is a store room in the rear of L. Sarbach's store.

Holton, when pre-empted as a town-site by the Town Association in 1859, had seven dwellings, one store, a steam saw-mill, and a blacksmith shop. Several of the early builders have moved to other places, some have gone to that "bourne from whence no traveler returns."

At an early day, Holton made some attempts to develop a municipal government, but by an act of the Legislature of 1871, it was organized as a city of the third class; its first Mayor being T. J. Adamson; its Councilmen. Ira I. Taber, Ed. Vetter, M. M. Beck, J. T. Scott and H. P. Bishop; Clerk, H. J. Ransom; Treasurer, H. P. Bishop; Marshal, R. G. Waterhouse; Police Judge, J. H. Lowell; Attorney, Charles Hayden. Since then its Mayors have been: T. J. Adamson, E. F. Perley, E. D. Rose, Case Broderick, Martin Anderson, A. D. Walker, M. B. Smyth, A. H. Williams and T. P. Moore.

The city officers for 1882 are as follows: Mayor, T. P. Moore; Police Judge, E. E. Rafter; City Attorney, Sidney Hayden; Treasurer, C. H. Williams; Clerk, W. W. Sargent; Auctioneer, W. R. Fisher; Fire Warden, R. E. Smithers; Marshal and Street Commissioner, M. C. Mowry; Councilmen, Ira I. Taber, J. A. Scott, C. H. Williams, Ed. F. Jones, A. W. Post. Mr. Taber is President of the Board.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The Methodist Episcopal Church.—In 1858, the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized by Rev. Eli H. Robertson, preacher in charge, assisted by James Lawrence, and at the time formed a part of a very large circuit; but in 1879, Holton was made a station. The first parsonage was built in 1866, the present one in 1870. The church edifice was commenced in 1868, and dedicated in 1871. In March, 1877, the North Kansas Conference was held with this church, the venerable Bishop Simpson, and Chaplain McCabe being present. Ira I. Taber has been Sunday-school Superintendent since the school was organized in September, 1868, and it has in 1882 an average membership of 200. Under Mr. Taber's skillful management it has become one of the best organized in the State. The value of the parsonage is $1,000; of the church edifice, $4,000. The church has had the brothers Green, Nehemiah and Lewis F., Joseph Dennison and other distinguished preachers among its pastors. In 1882, the Pastor was Rev. J. A. Motter.

First Presbyterian.—Rev. Charles Parker organized this church March 9, 1867. Its first members were: J. B. Waynant, Mary M. Waynant, Jacob Hixon, Casandra Hixon, R. M. Kennedy, Nancy Kennedy, John McCreary, Mary McCreary, Frederick Seele, Catharine Seele, William Boettcher, Herman Boettcher and John Edwards. The elders were: Jacob Hixon, and J. B. Waynant. The church edifice was erected in 1868, the first one in Holton. Its value is $2,000. In 1869 a parsonage was built. In 1880 a new one, costing $1,200. The membership of the church is 180; of the Sunday-school 150 (in 1882). Mr. J. A. Scott is superintendent; Dr. D. W. Havens is pastor of the church, one of the most scholarly theologians there are in Kansas. His predecessors were: Rev. Charles Parker, Rev. S. A. Stoddard, Rev. A. Thompson and Rev. M. Wade. Hon. E. D. Holton, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, presented the church with its nice clear sounding bell.

Church of Christ.—The Christian Church was organized here by Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Scholes, Mr. and Mrs J. P. Nichols, Miss Jane Walters and two others, July 13, 1862. The first services were held in the old court house, by Elder A. J. Francis, in 1862. In 1872, a church was built at a cost of $2,000. Its membership in 1882 was 755. The Pastor is Rev. J. H. Bauserman; Matthew Jacobs, elder; Oscar Williams and Mr. Goodrich, deacons; Charles Morris, clerk.

Baptist Church.—The Baptists of Holton, in March, 1872, met at the Christian Church and organized with seven members. Rev. Granville Gates, State Missionary, was the organizer, and Rev. S. Colton and wife, Mr. and Mrs. C. Farr, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Monroe, and Mrs. Mary Clement were the members. Its pastors have been: Rev. Mr. McCreary, Rev. S. Cozard, Rev. S. Taylor, Rev. A. B. Abrams, and Rev. N. P. Hotchkiss. The membership of the church and Sunday-school in 1882, was each about seventy-five. George Barker was Sunday-school superintendent. The organization in 1880, erected a nice frame church edifice at a cost of $1,000.

Reformed Church.—This church lays claim to priority of all the Protestant Evangelical organizations in coming out from the "Mother Church." Ulrich Zwingle, of Switzerland, was one year in advance of Martin Luther Frederick the Great summoned before him these reformers, that he might know their creeds, and Ulrich Zwingle presented the Heidleberg Catechism in 1563, and the "Reformed Church" stands upon the doctrine therein contained.

The Holton church was formed in April, 1880, with a membership of about twenty. Rev. J. Roach was the organizer. The congregation worship at the court house. Rev. H. Shumaker was pastor in 1882.

African Methodist Episcopal Church.—In 1874, Rev. A. H. Daily organized this church with eight members. Its church edifice, formerly a saloon, cost $350. Its Sunday-school is prosperous, and its pastor in 1882, Rev. F. M. Dale, is an untiring worker. It has one local preacher, one exhorter, thirty-two members, six probationers.

Colored Baptist.—Rev. Dennis Young, of Missouri, organized this church in June, 1880, with thirty-seven members. Not having stated preaching, they worship with the First Baptist Church.

Roman Catholic.—The Catholics have a good-sized frame building located in the east part of the city, which was erected in 1873. Rev. Father Begley is the Pastor. Mrs. H. P. Bishop is one of the pillars of the church. Services are usually held the first Sunday in each month. The congregation is largely from the surrounding country.

The Public Schools.—The graded school is the great pride and glory of the city. It has seven departments, and is under the management of Prof. C. Y. Roop, a most skillful instructor and thorough disciplinarian. He has a very efficient corps of assistants. Prof. Roop is a weekly contributor to the educational department of the Holton Recorder, and the matter is valuable alike to teachers and pupils. Hon E. D. Holton contributed a good library to the school. The edifice is a neat two-story brick. It has an excellent bell.

The Holton Cemetery.—One mile west of Holton is the Cemetery. It contains six acres, and in 1867, it was surrounded by a nice board fence, neatly capped. In the southwest corner is a natural forest, and evergreens and beautiful shrubbery exist here in considerable profusion, evidencing the tender affection which is maintained towards those who but a short time ago were in the flesh, and whose daily walk among their associates was of that character that prompts a beautifying of the grounds where reposes their sacred dust.

The site is a nice dry locality sloping to the south. There is a small building near the entrance where all requisites for excavation are safely stored. Ira I. Taber is President of the Cemetery Association, and W. T. Scott has charge of the grounds. The lay-out into lots and drives is admirable.

Holton Lodge, No. 42, A., F. & A. M.—This lodge was organized October 20, 1863 with twelve charter members. Its first officers were as follows: N. Tolbert, W. M.; J. B. Hubbell, S. W.; George Smith, J. W. The lodge owns the building which contains their hall. The officers in 1882 were as follows: Charles Hayden, W. M.; I. T. Price, S. W.; A. W. Post, J. W.; V. V. Adamson, Treasurer; C.C. Free, Secretary; J. W. Patten, Tiler; Frank Craig, S. D.; E. F. Jones, J. D.

Independent Order of Odd Fellows.—Holton Lodge, No. 34, was organized May 1, 1869. Its charter members were as follows: J. H. Keller, N. G.; A. W. Moore, V. G.; Victor Sarbach, Secretary; Dr. V. V. Adamson, Treasurer. Its membership in 1882 is about 150. Its present officers are: John Q. Myers, N. G.; Carl Wagner, V. G.; C. Y. Roop, Corresponding Secretary; J. H. Keller, Financial Secretary; Edward Vetter, Treasurer. The lodge is in quite a flourishing condition. It owns a fine hall, costing $4,000.

Knights of Pythias.—Friendship Lodge, No. 15, of this order, was organized May 6, 1875, with thirteen charter members. The first officers were as follows: H. D. Sprague, P. C.; V. Sarbach, C. C.; C. A. Walker, V. C.; L. V. Bryan, K. of R. & S.; T. J. Scott, M. at A.; J. Dickey, M. F.; E. D. Rose, M. E.; W. W. Naylor, Prelate; A. H. Williams, I. G.; A. Roberts, O. G. The following are its present officers: W. L. Hoaglin, P. C.; E. E. Rafler, C. C.; F. H. Stout, V. C.; F. S. Scott, P.; C. E. Rose, K. of R. & S.; C. H. Farr, M. of F.; W. W. Naylor, M. of E.; J. C. Weiss, M. at A.; Charles Bateman, I. G.; J. M. Fisher, O. G. Trustees: John Q. Myers, E. E. Rafler and A. H. Williams. The present number of members exceeds fifty.

Knights of Honor.—Jackson Lodge, No. 1769, was organized August 30, 1879, with twenty-one charter members. Its first officers were as follows: H. Tucker, Dictator; J. H. Lowell, Vice-Dictator; J. A. Scott, Assistant Dictator. Ira I. Taber, Chaplain; W. W. Naylor, Reporter; T. P. Moore, Financial Reporter; J. Q. Myers, Treasurer; M. H. Larkin, Guide; Sidney Hayden, Guardian; C. C. Free, Sentinel; John Davis, Past Dictator. Its present officers are: T. P. Moore, Dictator; Ira I. Taber, Vice-Dictator; Dr. M. B. Smyth, Assistant Dictator; C. H. Williams, Chaplain; J. P. Moore, Reporter; S. H. Scott, Financial Reporter; W. W. Naylor, Treasurer; R. C. Moore, Guide; D. U. Townsend, Guardian; C. H. Farr, Sentinel; John Q. Myers, Past Dictator. The membership is about forty. Its meetings are held in Masonic Hall.

Grand Army of the Republic.—The Will Wendell Post, No 46, G. A.R., organized April 11, 1882, with fifteen members. Its corps of officers are as follows; Ira I. Taber, Commander; E. D. Rose, Senior Vice-Commander; E. F. Jones, Junior Vice-Commander; R. N. Adamson, Officer-of-the-Day; George H. Barker, Quartermaster; T. T. Spence, Officer-of-the-Guard; John F. Fuller, Adjutant; V. V. Adamson, Surgeon. Its present membership is about thirty.

United Order of Ancient Templars.—Holton Temple, No. 26, was organized by Mr. H. C. W. Deshler, of Topeka, Associate Past Supreme Templar, June 2, 1881, with forty charter members. Its officers were as follows: C. C. Free, Templar; C. H. Williams, Past Templar; Mrs. J. K. Bethel, Vice-Templar; Rev. John Wuerth, Lecturer; E. E. Birkett, Recorder; L. E. Ashton, Financier; Ira I. Taber, Treasurer; S. B. McGrew, Marshal; J. M. Ferguson, Guard; C. G. Townsend, Watchman. This order has a mortuary fund, and M. B. Smyth M. D. is the Medical Examiner for the Holton Temple. Its officers for 1882 are as follows: I. T. Price, Templar; C. C. Free, Past Templar; Miss Adda Adair, Vice-Templar; Edward E. Birkett, Recorder; Thomas E. Ashton, Financier; Dr. E. A. Junkin, Treasurer; Rev. John Birkett, Lecturer; S. F. Richardson, Marshal; S. B. McGrew, Guard; G. C. Jacobs, Watchman.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen.—Holton Lodge No. 107, A. O. U. W., was organized by Dr C. H. Gilman, Instituting Officer, August 31, 1882, with twenty-one charter members. Its officers are as follows: C. H. Gilman, W. M.; N. C. Boles, Recorder; Dr. V. V. Adamson, Financier.

Holton Choral Society.—September 19, 1881, this city of sentiment and song, organized the above named association, choosing its officers as follows: Ira I. Taber, President; Miss Eddy, Vice-President; E. A. Junkin, Secretary; T. C. McConnell, Treasurer; J. C. Chase, Conductor; Edward Chase, Organist; M. C. Mowry, Mrs. A. H. Williams, Mrs. Dr. Scott, J. C. Chase, E. A. Junkin, Executive Committee. The membership is about sixty.

Holton Cornet Band.—The present leader of the band is Professor Graves. It has a corps of ten performers. The band has given splendid concerts, and has performed the spectacular tableau of "Andersonville Prison."

Eastern Star Lodge, A., F. & A. M.—This has been a very prosperous organization in the city. It contained in 1882, about forty members.

Daughters of Rebecca.—This band of workers here has quite a good membership.

THE PRESS AND OTHER BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The many intelligent inhabitants of Jackson County are a well-read people and they handsomely sustain papers at home and give good support to many abroad In the fall of 1858, Thomas G. Watters, without possessing either type or press, started the Cricket. It ran about two months. The articles were written in ink, and political events were illustrated with colored pencils. In October, 1867, Mr. A. W. Moore brought to Holton the first press and type, and commenced the publication of a seven-column paper, Republican in politics, called the Jackson County News. Mr. Frank H. Stout became a fourth-owner in October, 1871, but he sold out his interest. January 4, 1872, Mr. George S. Irwin became a half-owner in the News which he sold November 7, 1872. June 4, 1872, the paper was enlarged to eight columns and its name changed to the Holton News. After Irwin's withdrawal, Moore continued the publication of the paper until February 6, 1874, when Frank A. Root purchased the good-will and consolidated it with his paper, the Express, which had been in existence nearly two years. Mr. Moore moved his printing materials to Dodge City, and began the publication of the Messenger.

The Jackson Democrat.—In May, 1868, this paper was commenced under the auspices of a stock company made up of Democrats, with T. G. Williams as editor. J. W. Fox purchased it in 1869, and published it as an independent paper for about a year, when he moved it to St. Mary's. Mr. Fox had changed its name to the Holton Leader.

The Holton Express.—Mr. Frank A. Root brought the material for a newspaper from Seneca to Holton, April 13, 1872, and started the Holton Express, Republican in politics. Having purchased the News, on February 6, 1874, he consolidated it with the Express, and continued to publish the paper until March 26, 1875, under the title of the Express and News, when he sold it to Messrs. Beck & Shiner. Messrs. Moore, Root, and Irwin are all in the newspaper business at Gunnison, Colorado. Root & Irwin were, after leaving Holton, publishers of the North Topeka Times.

The Holton Recorder.—J. W. Shiner and Edward C. Laithe, March 2, 1875, started the Recorder. Two weeks later Mr. M. M. Beck purchased the interest of Mr. Laithe. March 30, 1875, Messrs. M. M. Beck and J. W. Shiner began the publication of the Recorder and Express; Mr. Frank A. Root having sold them the Express. January 1, 1877, the word "Express" was dropped from the heading. Mr. Beck became sole editor and proprietor, in April, 1881. It is now a well-managed, eight-page paper, and the official one of the county. Mr. Beck has the post-office and an excellent drug store He is a member of the State Republican Central Committee for the First Judicial District.

The Holton Argus.—Mr. J. C. Lillie, of Leavenworth, started this as a Democratic paper, April 1, 1867, and it was published for eight months.

The Real Estate Bulletin.—Mr. Ira I. Taber published this monthly in 1871 and in 1872, devoting it to the landed interests of Holton, and Jackson County.

The Daily Express.—During the three days of the Jackson County Fair in 1874, Frank A. Root published the only daily ever in the county.—The Express.

The Holton Signal.—January 16, 1878, Messrs. Thomas A. Fairchild and W. W. Sargent commenced the publication of an eight-column Democratic paper with the above name. Mr. Fairchild severed his connection with it January 1, 1879, since which time it has been under the creditable management of Mr. Sargent. It is the official city paper. Mr. Sargent is the City Clerk. His paper commands an influence at home and abroad, and he is one of the rising journalists of the State. Mr. Fairchild has been connected with the North Topeka Times, the Topeka Daily Post, the Leavenworth Standard and the Burlingame Chronicle, of Osage County. He is now at the State Printing Office at Topeka.

Holton, from the rude hamlet of two decades ago, presents in 1882 a very metropolitan aspect, and is in fact a beautiful, progressive city. A great variety of trades, professions and branches of business are represented in the place, and they are of that nature that assures a very general permanency. There are now located at Holton seven physicians, of whom Dr. V. V. Adamson has been longest a resident in the city, having settled in 1859.

There are numerous law firms; Judge Hoaglin, whose office is on the west side of the Public Square, being one of the very early settlers and attorneys of Kansas, and formerly Probate Judge and also District Attorney. John S. Hopkins, of the firm of Hopkins & Hunter, was also six years County Attorney, and two years State Senator; and Case Broderick, of the firm of Broderick & Rafter, now member of the State Senate, has filled the office of Probate Judge and County Attorney. Sidney Hayden, of the firm of Hayden & Hayden, is now City Attorney.

The Farmers' Bank and Saving Institution was the first bank established in Holton. Martin Anderson was President; William Cline, Vice-President; H. J. Ransom, Cashier. It was established in 1872. In 1874, H. P. Bishop became President. It became a Loan Agency and finally went the way of all the earth. Its location was west of the Square, now the office of C. C. Frae, Esq.

The Exchange Bank.—On the northeast corner of the Public Square, F. P. Moore and S. K. Linscott made excavations for this building in June, 1873, and the structure, costing $6,000, was ready for occupancy September 1, 1873. The front room of the bank is 20x30 feet; the rear room is 12x20 feet. In its strong and handsome vault, which has an entrance door of chilled steel, is one of MacNeale & Urban's fire and burglar-proof safes, costing $900, which has a "Yale Time Lock." The bank first commenced operations in 1872. S. K. Linscott was its first President; T. P. Moore its Cashier. Mr. Moore is now President and T. P. Moore, Cashier. Its correspondents are the First National Bank, Leavenworth, Kansas; the Ninth National Bank, New York.

Holton City Bank.—This bank now doing business in a nice brick structure situated diagonally from the Exchange Bank, has everything fixed up with reference to completeness in running a banking institution. George W. Drake is President; Ira I. Taber, Cashier. This building was first occupied in November, 1880. Before that, the business was done in a wooden structure, directly north of the court house. The bank safe has "Hall's Double Chronometer Lock."

Linscott's Bank.—The finest structure in Holton is the building in which this bank is located. It was erected in 1881, and the bank was opened in November. North of the banking department is a fine store occupied by McGrew & Williams; in the basement is a barber's shop and laundry; the upper story contains two law offices, and the offices of two dentists: C. H. Gilmore and Frank M. Davis. The building cost $18,000. It is directly west of the court house. S. K. Linscott is President; S. B. McGrew, Cashier. The bank has a new patent steel dove-tailed burglar-proof safe with a "Hall's Double Chronometer Lock" that has an additional safety, in that, when the movements stop from any cause, there is a combination attachment by which the safe can be opened as any other. Mr. Linscott severed his relations with the Exchange Bank, January 1, 1875. He started a bank in a wooden building where the new one now is.

The City Mills.—A. W. Post & Co., proprietors, are adequate to the wants of the city and county, as there is here manufactured all fancy and straight grades of flour, and everything in the way of meal, chop-feed, etc. This mill was owned by Dr. J. L. Williams, Sewart, and Nixon, and it has had a large outlay made on it.

Elk Flouring Mills.—Peter Keiderer, one of the pioneer's of the county, has a mill two miles east of the city which does a large business and excellent work.

The hotels of the city have undergone very many changes since the town began to be; the names of the houses have been changed, and there has been a large number of proprietors.

The City Hotel was opened eight years ago by William Yeer, formerly a thrifty merchant tailor of Holton. His patronage permanent and transient is very large. Commercial travelers find here a neat well-ordered hotel, and the house is largely advertised through Northeastern Kansas. Mr. Yeer took possession of the house in 1874.

The Commercial.—This is the original hotel of 1859. It has been very successfully run and inside of its walls have been performed heroic and semi-tragic acts. There have been many different proprietors. The present manager, Thomas Sumner took possession August, 1880, and is doing a good business.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

WILLIAM D. BARNETT, deceased, was born at Barnett, Caledonia Co., Vt., March 1, 1820. His education was received at the Concord schools and the Peacham Academy. When seventeen years of age, he removed, with his parents, to Macoupin County, Ill. One year later he began the study of medicine in the office of his brother-in-law, at Rock River, Ill., and in 1839 he attended medical lectures at St. Louis. With the preparation thus made, Dr. Barnett was enabled to accept the position of hospital steward and meteorologist at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he remained in active service until 1844. Going from there to Weston, Mo., he engaged in the drug business, and also taught school a portion of the time. In 1854 Mr. Barnett became the first settler in Muscotah, Kan., naming the town, and erecting the first wooden bridge in Atchison County. Among the pioneer accomplishments accredited to him are the burning of the first kiln of lime and the setting out of the first orchard. He also organized the Jackson County Horticultural Society, of which he was Vice-President at the time of his death. In 1854 he was appointed Justice of the Peace for Muscotah, and held the office several years. During the political troubles which agitated Kansas at an early day, Mr. Barnett took positive stand with the Free-State party. He was elected a member of the first Free-State Legislature, which met at Topeka, in 1856, and was dispersed by the United States troops. His experience at that period was fraught with danger. In 1857 he was elected County Commissioner of Atchison County, and in 1866, he was chosen Superintendent of Public Instruction of Jackson County. In 1864 Mr. Barnett located upon the northeast quarter of Section 6, Township 6, Range 16, in Jackson County, where he resided at the date of his death, which occurred in March, 1883. For about four years after his arrival here he owned and operated a grist-mill and saw-mill, but of late years was engaged in farming. He owned the largest nursery in the county, and probably no man contributed more to the pomological interests of the region than he. The deceased was a man of more than ordinary natural intellectual abilities, which, in the absence of educational advantages, he had improved by reading and study. Had he been placed in more favorable conditions and circumstances, he would have been a man of marked influence. As it was, what he did entitles him to the grateful remembrance of the people of his county. Mr. Barnett was twice married, first to Miss Roach, by whom he had four children—Samuel, William, Albert and Ella. His second wife was Miss Ewell, of Kentucky, by whom he had five children—Emeline, Lucy, Belle, Clara and Cora.

PROF. E. GRAVES, bandmaster of the Holton Cornet Band, was born in London, England, and comes of a family of remarkable musicians. His father, William Graves, himself a fine musician, is the father of ten children, and each and every one of them are performers of far more than ordinary merit. John, the eldest, has played in the band of the Grenadier Guards and others of note, and is now leader of the orchestra in the Alhambra Theatre, London. W. T. Graves is undoubtedly the first cornetist in England to-day, as he took Levy's place in the Argyle Rooms, and as a musical composer has few equals in that city. John Graves went through the Indian mutiny in the band of the Seventeenth Lancers, and is now bandmaster of the Cambridge Volunteers. Charles Graves is one of the band in Inns at Court, one of the finest in London, and W. W. Graves and the father are at Watford. E. Graves came to America in 1871, and soon won a fine position. His solo instrument is the slide trombone. In his opinion the Americans are bright, smart, and quick to learn music He has taught the Holton band for about eighteen months past and made it one of the popular institutions of that city, and likewise organized a fine band of sixteen pieces at Tippinsville in Jackson County, and the Netawaka and Wetmore bands have both been thoroughly re-organized and trained by him. His duties as teacher prevented his acceptance of the proffered judgeship at the State band contest held in Topeka during the fall of 1882. The Professor is about to take charge of the Seneca and Sabetha bands, and is probably the only professional band instructor in Northeastern Kansas.

MADISON GREEN JACOBS, farmer, Section 18, P. O. Holton, came to Kansas in March, 1868, settled near where he now lives and has been engaged in farming ever since. He bought the farm, which he has ever since occupied as a home, in the spring of 1869, cleared, fenced and improved it. He has been closely attentive to his farm and family, having in fifteen years been away from home but twice, once in 1880 and once on a visit to his old home in Kentucky, leaving home September 12, and returning October 29, and recently on a visit to friends and relatives in the State of Illinois. He has never aspired to office, but has always been regarded as a useful man in his neighborhood, serving as Road Supervisor four years and a member of the School Board four years. He was born in Lawrence County, Ky., May 20, 1837, son of Carter H. and Mary Jacobs. His parents were natives of Virginia. At an early age he removed with his parents into the woods of Carter County, Ky., where they cleared and improved a new farm. He was reared and schooled in this county until sixteen years of age, and from childhood was inured to labor and hardships. In the spring of 1853 he moved with his parents to an improved farm on the Little Fork of Little Sandy River, and again in 1856 to Tygert's Creek, same county, and in June, 1857, his father, aged sixty-six, died of fever. He was the father of fourteen children, one of whom preceded him to the spirit world and two others shortly followed. When the estate was finally settled up the mother and children were scattered and Madison Green Jacobs moved to Kansas in the spring of 1868. He was married in Carter County, Ky., December 9, 1858, to Zerilda E. Riggs, a native of Kentucky and daughter of George W. and Delilah Riggs. They have ten living children—George C., Joseph S., Clarinda A., Delilah M., William M., James T., Nathan A., Charles Q., Arthur G., and Ida May, and one son who was twin of Charles Q., deceased. Mr. Jacobs was baptized in Carter County, Ky., in the year 1853 by Henry Mavity, a minister of the Christian Church, and has ever since been a faithful and consistent member of the Church of Christ. He has served during the last nine years as elder of the Holton City Christian Church and bears an unblemished reputation as an honest man and zealous Christian.

L. M. MYERS, County Treasurer, was born in Shenandoah County, Va., in 1828, receiving his education at the academy at New Market. In 1852 when twenty-four years of age he went to California, where he remained until 1853, when he went to Iowa, and then to Kansas in 1856, being one of the earliest settlers in Cedar Township, Jackson County, and has lived on his place continuously until 1878, when he was elected County Treasurer and re-elected in 1880, serving two terms. He has a farm of 327 acres all well improved. He was married at Weston, Mo., in 1858 to Miss Anna Rightlinger and has four children—Emma F., Laura, Frank and Alice.

SAMUEL N. NEWMAN, of Holton, is a native of Fleming County, Ky., who came to Kansas as a young man with "everything to get and nothing to lose," about sixteen years ago. His first venture was to make the acquaintance and win the friendship of the Sheriff of Jackson County and was by him appointed Deputy Sheriff, which office he held for two years. He had not a dollar in the world, but the duties incident to his office led to his forming and keeping a host of valuable acquaintances. His first investment was a pony, worth $50, for which he gave his note, paying it at maturity. This and other like transactions established his credit and since that time he has been enabled to do an unlimited amount of business so far as capital was concerned. During 1868 he married Miss Libbie McCoy, formerly of Oskaloosa, Iowa, bought a small pair of horses and a cow and began farming. His wife and himself were enabled to retire from the farm at the end of ten years the owners of a splendid 600-acre farm five miles west of Holton, 100 head of cattle, all necessary improvements and teams, and a comfortable competence in cash. Mr. Newman is a true son of Kentucky, and of course he intuitively knew all about horses and cattle from the outset. Together with his farming he has followed auctioneering ever since living in Kansas and has become as well known as any man in Northeastern Kansas in that connection. Since 1878 has resided in Holton, where he has built an elegant residence costing $3,000, and to-day we find him a partner in the mercantile firm of T. D. Bradley & Co., the owner of the finest livery stable in Jackson County, a stockholder in Holton City Bank, and worth about $31,000. But few men have done better in the same time, even in Kansas. He is a Knight of Honor in Holton Lodge and is independent in religion and politics.

MADISON WOODS, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Larkin, was born in Clay County, Mo., in 1830. He lived on his birthplace until his removal to Kansas in 1857, when he settled in Jackson County and has lived on the same place and within a few rods of his first cabin ever since. He was brought up on a farm and has always followed that calling. He was married in 1855 in Clay County, Mo., to Miss Anna Hamon, and has five children—William, Mary A., John W., Simon H., Emma. He is a member of the Holton Lodge, A., F. & A. M. He has always been a Democrat and is at present the nominee for County Commissioner on that ticket.

CIRCLEVILLE.

This thriving village, situated on the Kansas Central Railroad, eight and one-half miles from Holton, was surveyed in 1863, by Thomas Jefferson Anderson. A Town Company, prior to this, had filed on the half section north of this, for the town of New Brighton, but the Land Agent refused to let them pre-empt it, and Mr. Rufus Oursler started the town of Circleville. It received its name from a suggestion that as the town had been circling round the prairie Circleville would be a fitting name. Mr. Oursler started a store, and purchased a saw-mill that had been erected there, and converted it into an establishment for grinding wheat and corn, carding wool, and sawing lumber. In the middle of 1880 Mr. Henry Stanley completed one of the best mills in the country on the site of the old one.

Circleville proper contains fifteen blocks. The Kansas Central Railroad passes through the southwest corner of Block 11, which lies in the southwest part of the town. The railroad depot is just south of Block 11, the Augusta Flouring Mills of Henry Stanley, on the Elk, being west of the depot. The village contains a hotel, bank, Methodist Episcopal Church and parsonage, and the usual number of general stores and workshops that make a flourishing Kansas town.

The Circleville Hotel, Dr. A. Y. Hanson, proprietor, is situated in the south side of Cain's Addition, a block east of the central part of the town. North of Cain's Addition and extending five lots further east, is Nazman's Addition.

Oursler's Bank is on the southwest corner of Block 3. Rufus Oursler attends to the banking business, and C. A. Oursler is postmaster of the place.

Circleville Lodge, No. 20, A., F. & A. M.—This lodge is large and prosperous. James H. Baxter is W. M., and C. A. Oursler Secretary. T. J. Anderson, present postmaster of Topeka, and who surveyed this town in 1863, located with his father near its site in December, 1857. March 12, 1858, he and his father went to Holton to assist in the organization of the Republican party there. Attempts were made to mob the members of the convention by the Pro-slavery party, and in the melee, the elder Mr. Anderson had his skull broken. He recovered from the injury, however, and is now a resident of Topeka, coming first to that city as State Treasurer, and afterwards living in Holton.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JAMES H. BAXTER, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O., Circleville, was born in Campbell County, Tenn., in 1830. In 1859 he moved to Platte County, Mo., and in 1858 to Jackson County, Kan., settling about a mile from his present location on Section 32, Township 36, Range 14. He has been twice married, first in 1852, in Platte County, Mo., to Miss Eliza McClair, who died in 1870, and by whom he had eight children, Allison W., Thomas, Franklin, William H., William P., Levi G., Matilda, E. and John. In 1874 he married again to Miss Lucy A. McComas, and has five children by this marriage, Clarence, Edwin, Fanny, Lloyd and an infant. He has served one term as Trustee of Jefferson Township. Is a member of Circleville Lodge, No. 20, A., F. & A. M.

EBER L. BROWN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 5, Township 6, Range 14, P. O., Ontario, is the son of Zara and Nancy E. Brown, and was born in Iroquis County, Ill., November 24, 1854. In the spring of 1859 the family removed to Kansas, locating on the farm on which Mr. Brown now resides. His father died February 20, 1864. Subsequently his mother married M. Blue. She has been the efficient postmistress of Ontario for eight years. The family ranks among the old, prominent and prosperous settlers of the State. Mr. Brown was married near Independence, Mo., in 1878, to Miss Isabella Dalton, a native of Missouri. They have three children who are named Dora Josephine, Gracie Isabel and Frank Lorenzo. Mr. Brown owns the farm on which his father located in 1859. It is fine second bottom, contains ninety acres, is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation and has plenty of timber and water. The improvements are first-class and embrace among others, a spacious and elegant eight-room frame dwelling, a frame barn twenty-four feet square, and other out buildings Mr. Brown grows 1,500 bushels of corn, keeps half a dozen milch cows, thirty to fifty stock hogs and six head of fine horses. Mr. Brown is an industrious, economical and thoroughly practical farmer, is popular among his neighbors and is accumulating a handsome competence.

JOSEPH COOK, farmer, P. O. Circleville, was born in Ross County, Ohio, in 1813. He was brought up to the carpenter trade. In 1858 he moved to Kansas and located on his present location, Section 9, Township 6, Range 14. He worked at his trade for some twelve to fifteen years after his removal to Kansas, since which time he has turned his attention to farming. He was married in 1845 at Circleville, Pike Co., Ohio, and has one child living, Ellen E. Myers. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Is also a member of Exchange Grange, No. 1,202.

JOHN DEARDORFF, farmer, Section 20, Township 6, Range 14, P.O. Circleville, was born in Greene County, Ohio, in 1827. In 1833 his parents moved to Indiana, and shortly afterwards to Iowa, locating first in Henry and then in Mahaska County. In 1856 he moved to Kansas Territory, settling within one half mile from where he now resides. He was married in Mahaska County, Iowa, in 1851 to Miss Mary A. Gorsuch, and has six children, Joshua Mary, William, Laura, Effie and Hugh. He was the first Justice of the Peace elected in Jefferson Township, and was first elected in 1859 and served some years. In 1879 he was elected County Commissioner, and served two terms. He has also served as Township Trustee. He was a member of the Twentieth Kansas Militia, and was called out during Price's raid in this State, in 1864.

GEORGE KARNS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 5, Township 6, Range 14, P. O., Ontario, was born in Morrow County, Ohio, in 1843, and lived in his native State until June 16, 1861, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company I, Third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, enlisting at Cardington, Ohio, and was discharged at Camp Dennison, Ohio, June 21, 1864. He participated in the battles of Rich Mountain, Va., Perryville, Murfreesboro, and numerous minor engagements. On the "Streight Raid" he was captured by the Rebel forces under Maj.-Gen. Forrest, near Rome, Ga., and after being held a prisoner about a month, part of this time being confined on Belle Isle, he was paroled. After his release he was on detached duty at Chattanooga, Tenn., until the final muster out of his regiment. After his discharge from the Third Ohio, he proceeded to St. Louis where he joined "Merrill's Horse," becoming a member of Company M of this regiment. He enlisted in September, 1864, and served until the close of the war, being finally discharged at Chattanooga, Tenn., in June, 1865. In the spring of 1866 he became a resident of Kansas, locating in America, Nemaha County, where he resided eighteen months and then returned to Ohio where he resided but three months and then returned to Kansas and located on his farm in Jefferson Township, Jackson County, where he has since resided. He is a demitted member of Nemaha Lodge, No. 13, A., F. & A. M., and of Graham Post of Wetmore, G. A. R. Mr. Karns was married in Cardington, Ohio, January 23, 1868, to Miss Caroline Kehrwecker, a native of Ohio. They have seven children whose names are Mary Francis, John Wesley, Anna Bell, Albert Clay, Maude May, Sarah Catherine, and William Edward. Mr. Karns is the fortunate owner of four fine farms which together contain 720 acres. These farms are all enclosed, are in a high state of cultivation, are well supplied with timber and water, and rank among the best in Nemaha and Jackson counties. The home farm is well improved by a neat and cosy residence, a good barn and outbuildings and handsome groves and orchards. Mr Karns grows 3,000 bushels of corn, 500 bushels of small grain, and cuts 200 tons of hay yearly, has 300 acres in pasture, feeds three car loads of cattle, keeps 100 fine grade cattle, 100 to 150 stock hogs, eight head of horses and in connection with Mr. M. Worthy has 700 choice merino sheep. At the head of his fine herd of cattle is "Little Oxford," a thoroughbred Short-horn bull, a magnificent animal and of undoubted pedigree. Mr. Karns is an intelligent, enterprising and thorough farmer and stock-raiser and a prosperous, popular and trustworthy citizen.

THOMAS F. LAMAR, farmer, P. O. Wetmore, was born December, 19, 1833, in Frederick County, Md., where his father and grandfather were born. The family settled in 1846 or 1847, in Champaign County, Ohio, and from that State, in April 1861, T. F. Lamar enlisted in the Thirteenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, served out three months, and re-enlisted in the Twenty-sixth Ohio. Was in the Army of the Cumberland, and with the gallant General Nelson, whose advance succored Grant's army at Pittsburg Landing. Fought at Shiloh and Corinth, and pursued Bragg into Kentucky, and was under Rosecrans at Stone River, where for seven days and nights he did not divest himself of overcoat or boots. Was then in camp till June, 1863, and after the Cumberland Mountain Campaign, took part in the bloody Chattanooga Campaign, and the terrible slaughter at Chickamauga, September 19, 1863, when he was captured by the Confederates and held prisoner in prisons in Danville, Va., Richmond, Andersonville, and Florence, S. C., until April, 1865. Was in the Andersonville prison pen from April to September, 1864, witnessing and experiencing all the horrors, beyond the power of human tongue or pen to describe, of that awful place. He, with 6,000 others, was placed therein, kept there six months, and not over 500 ever came out alive. Released on a parole of honor at Salisbury, N. C., he came north about the close of the war, remained about two years in Ohio, and in 1867, brought his wife, (nee Emma I. Reid, of Liberty, Champaign County, Ohio), to Kansas and settled on the farm where he now lives. Mr. Lamar has made good improvements and reared a family of six children —Robert, Bennie, Charles Wm. (now deceased), Jennie, Schuyler Colfax, May R., Hamilton Grant, all born in Kansas.

WILLIAM S. LEWIS, farmer, P. O. Circleville, was born in Harrison County, Ky., in 1833. In 1856 he went to Platte County Mo., and in 1861 to Jackson County, Kan., locating on Elk Creek, two miles northwest of Circleville, and in 1879, to his present location on Section 5, Township 6, Range 14. In 1864, he was a member of the Kansas Militia. He was married in 1858 in Platte County, Mo., to Miss America J. Treble, and has five children—James A., Robert D., Richard D., Margaret A., and Missouri E. He was Clerk of the School Board for three years.

G. W. LOGAN, farmer, Massillon, Ohio, came to Jackson County in 1868, and bought southeast quarter Section 2, Township 7, Range 16, which he intends to make his future home. He was born in Beaver County, Pa., in 1838, where he was raised. In 1859 he went to Ohio, and engaged in farming near Massillon. In 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Forty-eighth Ohio Infantry, but after three months service he was discharged for physical disability. He returned to Ohio and to his farm, where he has since lived. He was married in 1860 to Miss Clara Barber, of Beaver County, Pa., and has three children—John M., Edwin E., and Clara B. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

MOSES W. MYERS, farmer, P. O. Circleville, was born in Hancock County, Ohio, June 4, 1845. In 1860 his parents moved to Jackson County, Kan. In 1862 he enlisted in Company B, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and was in the battles of Prairie Grove, Cane Hill, and all the engagements of his regiment, and was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, in 1865, when he returned to Jackson County, and engaged in farming. He was married in 1867, to Miss Ellen E. Cook, and has one child—Martha M. He is a member of Circleville Grange, No. 1,202.

F. C. NUZMAN, dealer in hardware and lumber, was born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, in 1834. In 1855 he emigrated to America, and settled near Westville, La Porte County, Ind., where he engaged in farming until 1860, when he removed to Jackson County, Kan., settling on a farm one mile west of Circleville. In 1862 he enlisted in Company B, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and was at the battles of Cane Hill, Prairie Grove, Fort Wayne, and all the engagements of his regiment. He was mustered out at the close of the war in 1865, and returned to his farm in Jackson County, where he remained until 1881, when he engaged in the hardware and lumber trade at Circleville. His sales amounted to $21,000 the first year. He has been twice married, first in 1857, in La Porte County, Ind., to Miss Catherine Hendricks, who died in 1866. He was again married in 1868, to Miss Mary J. Anderson, of Jefferson township, and has five children, four living, viz.:—Elsie, Nora, Fred and Scott. He has at different times held the offices of Township Trustee and Clerk. He is a member of Circleville Lodge, No. 20, A., F. & A. M.

HON. RUFUS OURSLER, banker, is one of the earliest settlers of Jefferson Township, and the founder of Circleville, was born in Brown County, Ohio, in 1826, and is the fourth son of John Oursler. In 1830 his parents moved to Putnam, and shortly after to Hendricks County, Ind., settling near Plainfield, where the subject of this sketch received his education, and where he lived in 1853, when he went to Indianapolis and engaged in the mercantile business. In May, 1857, he located at Leavenworth, Kan., and engaged in general merchandising. In 1858 he moved to New Brighton, about one mile from the present site of Circleville, and opened a general store. In 1860 he laid out the present town site of Circleville, starting a grist and saw-mill, a carding machine and a general store. From 1865 to 1867 he was in the wholesale dry goods business at Leavenworth, still retaining his business interests at Circleville. In 1868 he sold out his store and mill and engaged in the stock business until 1876, when he started the bank of Circleville. He was united in marriage to Miss Pheba A. Worth, at Plainfield, Ind., in 1849, and has three children—C. A., Alphonso, and Florence. In 1863 he was elected to the State Senate and served one term. He is a member of Circleville Lodge, No. 20, A., F. & A. M.

HENRY STANLEY, proprietor Augusta Mills, was born in Campbell County, Tenn., in 1826. In 1830 his parents moved to Putnam County, Ind., and in 1839 to Dallas County, Mo., and subsequently to Ray County. He learned the carpenters' and the wagon makers' trade. In 1859 he moved to Kansas Territory, and located in the southern part of Nemaha County. In 1860 he moved to Leavenworth County, and in 1867 to this place. In 1880 he built the Augusta Mills, at a cost of $8,000. In 1846 he was married to Miss Sarah A. Campbell, in Dallas County, Mo., who died in 1872, leaving Edwin J., Laura E., Julia A., John J., and William B. In 1873 he was married to Miss Letitia Baxter, of Jackson County, Kan., by whom he has five children—Elizabeth, Laura M., Stella M., Lulu, and Allen C. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was a member of the State Militia during the war, and was called out to repel Price when on his raid in 1864, and was taken prisoner at Westport, but escaped through the hurry of Price's movements.

GEORGE W. WHITE, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Circleville, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1807. In 1822 he went to Huron County, Ohio, and in 1837 moved to Tazewell County, Ill., and in 1840 to Arkansas, and in 1852 to Dade County Mo., and in May, 1861, he located in Jackson County, first on Soldier Creek, then at Tippinsville, and in 1877, to his present location on Section 34, Township 6, Range 14. He was married near Fremont, Ohio, in 1834, to Miss Margaret Minter, and has twelve children—Mary, Henrietta, Margaret, Emeline, Julia, Elizabeth, and Lucy, James P., John M., Daniel W., Henry C., and George V. Mr. White served in the Mexican war, enlisting in Company B, Second Arkansas Cavalry in 1846, serving one year, his term of enlistment. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

NETAWAKA.

This village is situated ten miles north of Holton, on the Central Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, thirty-seven miles west of Atchison, and was laid out in 1866. The railroad runs from southeast to northwest, and the town is blocked out to adjust itself with the same: the railroad running on Commercial Street and Main, on which the bulk of the business is done, being parallel thereto on the north.

B. F. Baughn was the first settler on the town site. He commenced the first building, which he called the Netawaka House, and partially finished it. The original proprietor of the house was Mrs. Brown. The building is now the property of P. G. Kinney, and its present proprietor Mrs. L. D. Nichols. The City Hotel is under the management of Mrs. Amanda Bibb.

Edward W. Kenyon, the pioneer merchant, is a native of Windham County, Conn. In the autumn of 1867, he built the first store in Netawaka, and in January, 1868, opened the first stock of goods. He was the first station agent and land agent for the Kickapoo lands in charge of the C. B. U. P. Railroad. He was appointed postmaster in 1868, and still holds the office. The office at New Eureka, in the south part of the township, has been discontinued since 1870. The Kenyon Hall, which is used for public purposes, lectures, concerts, etc., is in the second story of Mr. Kenyon's store.

The Grangers have a hall and a store in the town, but their meetings are irregularly held.

The grist-mill was built in 1881, by A. J. Evans & Sons. It is a fine mill; value, $11,000, and is a great acquisition to the town. The Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists have each church organizations, but the Baptists are few in number, and without a pastor. The other denominations worship in a church edifice, in which they both have interests. The Presbyterian Church has about twenty members. Its pastor is Rev. D. R. Todd. The organization was commenced in 1878. The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1876 with ten members. Rev. Mr. Mayer is the present Pastor. The Protestant Episcopalians organized a church in 1870. Rev. Mr. Turner, pastor; but a removal of some of the members to other sections has weakened the church so that it rarely holds service. In March, 1881, the Liberal Lecture Association was organized. Hon. D. H. Sutherland, who lives some two miles southwest of Netawaka, was chosen President, and E. W. Kenyon, Secretary. Their meetings are held at Kenyon's Hall, from time to time.

In 1870, Mr. Frank H. Stout, who is now connected with the Holton Recorder, started the Netawaka Herald, but in October, 1871, he sold the paper to parties from Irving, who removed it to that place.

June 4, 1872, George S. Irwin commenced the publication of the Netawaka Chief, but September 24, 1872 he sold it to A. J. Best and H. D. Sprague. Messrs. Best & Sprague in January, 1873, sold the Chief to H. L. Roberts, who published it till July 14, 1874, when he moved to Hiawatha, and there established the Herald, and has now associated with him in its management, T. L. Brundage.

Netawaka has a good schoolhouse costing $2,000, and ten teachers are employed. The Masons have a thriving lodge, of which Mr. John Gibbons is the present W. M.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ADAM AMON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 2, Township 5, Range 15, P. O. Netawaka, was born in Germany in 1842. When six years old his parents emigrated to America, settling near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. In 1852, they moved to Marshall County, Illinois. On becoming old enough to work, Adam found employment at coal mining which he followed until 1867, when he engaged in farming. In 1870 he moved to his present location in Jackson County, Kansas, where he bought eighty acres, and now owns 320 acres, 170 being under cultivation, with excellent buildings, orchard and other improvements. His attention is largely turned to stock-raising. He was married April 5, 1866, to Miss Elizabeth Bennett, of Marshall County, Illinois, and has four children: Ella, Charles, Clara and Roscoe.

THOMAS DAILEY, farmer, P. O. Netawaka, was born in 1830, in Grand Isle County, Vt. The family removed in 1844, to Licking County, Ohio, then to Miami County where his mother died in 1853. The father and his sons came to Kansas in 1860, and settled near the line of Brown and Nemaha counties. Thomas Dailey remained in Atchison County during 1860, and settled where he now is on Spring Creek in 1862. He began with raw prairie, the only improvement being a new frame house. He now has good buildings, an apple orchard of 200 trees, and is in good circumstances. His father, Thomas Dailey, born in 1789, in Ireland, died July 24, 1865 in Kansas. His son and namesake married Anna E. Davidson, a native of Pennsylvania, as a second wife. He has a daughter Alice, by this marriage; by former marriage has two children, Charles Dailey and Mary A. Dailey.

M. A. FUNCHESS, dealer in drugs, stationery and jewelry, was born in Copiah County, Mississippi, in June, 1854. In January, 1871, he moved with his parents to Netawaka, Kansas, where he attended the public schools. In 1873-74 he attended the Normal School at Lawrence, Kansas; in 1875-76 he attended the University at Highland, Kansas. In 1877-78, was principal of the Netawaka high school. In 1878, on a limited capital opened a drug store and now has a large stock of goods and a prosperous trade. He was married in 1880, to Miss Rosa Hoaglin, a daughter of Judge Hoaglin, of Holton, Kansas. They have one child, Clyde.

E. W. KENYON, dealer in general merchandise, and postmaster, was born in Plainfield, Windham County, Connecticut, in 1838. Here he attended the commercial schools, then the Plainfield Academy. At the age of eighteen he taught his first school. In 1856, he attended the high school in East Greenwich, R. I. and the Suffield Academy until 1860, when he went to Illinois, where he engaged in farming and teaching school until 1864, when he enlisted as a recruit in Company C., Fifty-ninth Illinois Infantry, joining the company at Pulaski, Tennessee, and took part in the battles of Nashville and Franklin, and was discharged at Nashville, Tennessee, June 14, 1865 when he returned to his old home in Connecticut where he remained for a short time; going in the fall of the same year to Vineland, New Jersey, where he engaged in general merchandise, until the fall of 1867, when he came to Kansas and opened the first stock of general merchandise in that place, and during the early days his sales ran as high as $30,000. In 1868 on the establishing of a post-office, he was appointed postmaster which position, with the exception of two years he has since filled. He was station and express agent from 1868 to 1870. He has been prominently identified with the settlement of Netawaka and has been foremost in everything that would add to the place. He was married in 1865 at Waltham, La Salle County, Illinois, to Miss Susan Lathrop, of Griswold, Connecticut. They have three children: Julia A., Allie E. and Arthur E. In politics Mr. Kenyon has always been a Republican and has always been an active worker for that party. He has been Justice of the Peace and member of the School Board for some years and is at present one of the County Commissioners.

ROBERT LITTLE, farmer, Section 32, P. O. Netawaka, was born in Hendricks County, Indiana, in 1819, and was raised a farmer. In 1860, he moved to Kansas and located near Circleville for one season, when he moved to his present location then a piece of raw prairie. He now owns 540 acres of Kansas soil, 200 of which are under plow. In 1860 he was married to Miss Maria Worth, of Hendricks County, Indiana, and has six children: Mary A., Harriet A., Lawrence, Charles, Alice and Emma.

HENRY LUECK, farmer, P. O. Netawaka, was born in 1843, in Pomerania, Prussia, and came with his parents to the United States in 1856. In April, 1857, the family came to Kansas buying for $50 a 160 acre claim 80 acres of which are part of the Lueck farm of to-day. A clapboard-roofed log house was built here and for two years the family lived on the bare ground; no doors or windows save apertures cut in the log sides of this indeed primitive habitation. The father, Daniel Lueck, died January 18, 1881, and the two sons, Ferdinand and Henry, are both wealthy farmers, the former owning 640, and the latter 400 acres. Louisa Lueck, a sister, married Fred Mell who owns eighty acres of the original claim. Henry Lueck has first-class buildings and improvements, as have his brother and brother-in-law. His wife was Elizabeth Porr, a native of Rhenish Bavaria, and they have six children all born on the Netawaka farm. Mr. Lueck served as a Kansas volunteer in the Civil war from 1862 to 1865, serving in the pursuit of the Rebel guerrillas Quantrell and Price, in Arkansas and the Cherokee country, losing part of his hand in January, 1863.

ANDREW NEAL, law and real estate, is one of the pioneers of Kansas, coming to the State in 1856, and settled in Ellwood, Doniphan County, where he obtained a clerkship in a general store, which position he held until 1866, when he went to Wathena in the same capacity, remaining until 1869, when he went to Missouri. In 1870 he located in Netawaka and engaged in the mercantile business with T. D. S. McDonald under the firm of McDonald & Co. In 1870 the firm became Riggs & Co., and in 1874 he sold out to his partner, when he opened a law and real estate office and has since followed that calling. In addition to his profession he has devoted a portion of his time to the successful raising of all kinds of fruit grown in the State and now has forty acres in bearing condition. He was born in New Brunswick, B. P., in 1831. In 1839 his parents moved to Eastern Maine where he was raised, and lived until 1856, when he came to Kansas. He was married in 1855 at Gardiner, Maine to Miss Mary A. Olives, and has three children: Florence, Cora and Nora. His politics are Republican, and he has always taken an active part in local issues. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace for nine years. Is a member of Polar Star Lodge No. 130, A., F.& A. M., Netawaka.

L. P. PADDOCK, physician and surgeon, oculist and aurist, was born in Herkimer County, New York, in 1828, and was raised in Monroe County, where he attended school and graduated at Genesee College. From 1853 to 1856 he was a teacher in Penn Yan Academy. In 1857 he was chosen principal of Henderson College, Mendota, Illinois, remaining in that position until 1861 when he returned to New York and was appointed principal of Avon Springs University where he remained until 1864, when he began the study of medicine at Rush Medical College, Illinois, graduating in 1867, when he came to Kansas, locating in Leavenworth where he remained three years, coming to Netawaka in 1870, where he has since been engaged in the practice of medicine and the treatment of eye and ear diseases, at which he has been remarkably successful. Mr. Paddock has been twice married: in 1855 at Mendon, New York, to Miss Elizabeth S. Wood who died leaving one child, Elizabeth A.; in 1866, he was married to Mrs. Josephine A. Bowen, at Morrison, Illinois. He is a member of the Jackson County Medical Society and also of the State Medical Association, and takes an active part in all the meetings of the societies.

H. H. POSTON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 4, Township 15, Range 15, P. O. Netawaka, was born in Athens County, Ohio. In 1852 his parents moved to La Porte County, Ind. In May, 1862, when but twenty years old, he enlisted in Company A, Eighty-seventh Indiana Infantry, and took part in the battles of Crab Orchard, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge and in all the battles of his regiment, and was with Sherman on his march to the sea. He was not absent from his regiment from the time of his enlistment until his discharge at Indianapolis in June, 1865. After the war he returned to La Porte County and engaged in farming until 1868, when he came to Kansas, homesteading forty acres on Section 4, Township 5, Range 15, Jackson County. Coming here with no capital but energy, he has added to his original homestead until he now has 410 acres, all under fence and 200 acres under cultivation, with good orchard, buildings and other improvements. He was married in 1870 to Miss Lydia Grubb, of Brown County, Kan., and has three children—Walter, Ernest and Leonard, the latter twins. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

A. P. RIDER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 27, Township 5, Range 15, P. O. Netawaka, was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., in 1835, and was educated in Perry Centre, N. Y. In 1855 he went to Calhoun County, Mich., where he engaged in farming until 1865, when he moved to Jackson County, Kan., and engaged in stock-raising and farming and was at one time a very large buyer and shipper of stock. He has 320 acres of land finely improved. He was married in 1865 in Calhoun County, Mich., and has two children—Ida and Hattie. He has served one term as Township Trustee.

J. F. SMITH, farmer, P. O. Netawaka, came to the State in 1860, settling at Atchison, where he engaged in freighting across the plains until 1869, when he purchased and moved to his present farm in Jackson County. He now owns 700 acres, 400 acres under cultivation, and is largely engaged in stock-raising. Mr. Smith is a native of Ireland and was born in 1835. His parents emigrated to America in 1845, settling at Evansville, Ind.; thence to Warren County, Ind., where he lived until 1852, going to Kentucky, where he stayed one year, moving to Burlington, Iowa. He was married in 1859 at Burlington, Iowa, to Miss Bridget Reagan, and has ten children, viz: Annie M., John T., Nellie, Eliza, Kate, Phenie, Maggie, Mathias, James and Rophie. During the war Mr. Smith was a member of the State Militia and took part in the battle of Westport during Price's raid.

GEORGE SPRAGUE, livery stable and drug store, was born Beardstown, Cass County, Ill., in 1853. In 1864 his parents moved to St. Louis, Mo., where he attended school until 1868, when he came to Kansas and located in Jackson County three miles west of Netawaka and engaged in farming until 1874, when he moved to Netawaka and engaged in the drug business and shortly afterwards in the livery, and has since followed the same. He was married at Netawaka, Kan., September 8, 1873, to Miss Lavina Winlan, and has four children—Grace, Harry, Frank and Vina.

I. TRAVIS, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Netawaka, was born in Fayette County, Pa., August 14, 1820. In 1828 his parents moved to West Virginia, settling below Wheeling; here he lived until 1852, when he went to Van Buren County, Iowa, and engaged in farming until 1859, when he moved to Jackson, then Calhoun County, settling on Straight Creek five miles north of Holton. He was one of the pioneers of this county and was an active member of the Free-State party in Territorial days. September 11, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, Fifth Kansas Cavalry and was wounded at Barnesville, in 1861, in the hand, so badly that an amputation was necessary. On his recoveay he was discharged on account of disability, at Fort Scott, Kan., March 17, 1862. He was united in marriage with Miss Harriet Safeman, at Wheeling, W. Va., August 25, 1844, and has two children—F. G. W. and Eliza J. He is a member of Will Wendell Post No. 46, Holton, Jackson Co., Kan.

WHITING.

This village, the second in size in the county, located thirty-one miles from Atchison on the Central Branch of the Missouri Railroad, was first platted in 1866, but was re-surveyed in 1872, and another plat was recorded May 31, 1882. In November, 1869, A. D. Stone settled on the town site. He was joined early in 1870, by Charles Shedd, and together they opened the first store in the village, which was the only building on the town site for two years.

Mr. Shedd was for six years Trustee of Whiting Township. Mr. Stone, for six years Clerk of the District Court of Jackson County, is a law partner of Judge James H. Lowell. He was for some time a resident of Socorra, New Mexico, but is now at Holton. Mr. Stone's family was the first in Whiting.

Messrs. Shedd and Marshall established themselves in business in 1871, in a small building north of the railroad, which was built by P. B. Rust and in 1882 is occupied as a shoe store by C. A. Heeins. In 1881, they built south of the railroad a very beautiful substantial building of Bigelow stone, from the Frankfort magnesian limestone quarry. The building is 28x80 feet, the second story finished and furnished as an elegant public hall, with accommodations for about 500 persons.

The Baptists organized a church in 1880. A Sabbath-school is connected with the church, which hold's services in Love & Green's Hall. The pastor is Rev. Mr. Abrams.

The Methodists own a church building which cost $1,700. Their pastor is Rev. T. J. Mayer.

The Presbyterians worship in the Methodist Church building. Pastor, Rev. D. R. Todd of Netawaka.

There is a good graded school; the building estimated at $3,000.

The Whiting House was first kept by William H. Sumner, succeeded by John Campbell The present proprietor is H. A. Lewis. The Commercial was established in 1878, as Bull's Restaurant, by J. F. Bull. Charles B. Hayes is proprietor.

The Independent Order of Good Templars was organized in the spring of 1877, with twenty-two members. Its membership in 1882 is some sixty. It is considered the second best lodge in the State.

The Knights of Honor. This association was organized May 1, 1882, at Shedd & Marshall's Hall, with thirty-one members. It meets the first and third Fridays of each month. Its officers are as follows: H. E. Turner, Dictator; William H. Hedge, Past Dictator; J. F. Wheeler, Assistant Dictator; S. J. Dowd, Vice-Dictator; F. M. Morgan, Recorder; J. W. Fritz, Financial Recorder; A. T. Brown, Treasurer; Reuben Matthews, Sentinel.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

C. H. EVANS, farmer, P. O. Whiting, was born in Brown County, Ohio, in 1854. In 1857 his parents moved to Atchison County, Kan., settling near Good Intent, and at this place the subject of this sketch was reared and lived until 1881, when he moved to Whiting. Was married in 1879, to Miss Lillie Harris, of Brown County, Kan., and has one child.

C. B. HAYES, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, was born in Griggsville, Pike County, Ill., in 1842. In May, 1861, at the first call for volunteers, he enlisted in Company G, Eighth Illinois Infantry. At the expiration of his term of enlistment, August, 1861, he re-enlisted in Company I, Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, and took part in the battles of Fredericktown, Mo., Cache River, Ark., Port Gibson, Champion Hill, Black River, siege of Vicksburg, and Jackson, Miss., and with the exception of two months during 1863, which were spent in the hospital at St. Louis, he was in every skirmish and engagement of his regiment until the expiration of his term of enlistment. He was mustered out at Oldtown Landing, Texas, and discharged at Springfield, Ill., October 11, 1864, when he took charge of a commission and storage house at Griggsville Landing, Ill., until 1868, when he engaged in farming near that place for one year. In 1869 he came to Kansas and settled on the southeast quarter of Section 29, Township 5, Range 16, and engaged in farming until January 1, 1882, when he leased the Commercial Hotel at Whiting. He was married, November 15, 1867, at Griggsville, Ill., to Miss Mary A. Thackmay. They have two children—Birdie and Eva. Is a member of Whiting Lodge No. 153, I. O. G. T.

SAMUEL RICHMOND, farmer, P. O. Whiting, was born in Ohio in 1817, and was brought up a farmer and has followed that pursuit all his life. In 1844 he went to Steuben County, Ind., where he remained until 1870, when he moved to Kansas. He was married in 1844 to Miss Caroline Kline of Butler County, Ohio, and has four children; two are now living, Elizabeth and Caroline. Mr. Richmond is a member of the Lutheran Church.

G. T. WATKINS, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O Whiting, was born in Warner, Merrimack County, N. H., but was reared in Lowell, Mass., where he attended school; the last two years of his school life were spent at Andover, Mass. In 1841 he went to his birthplace and engaged in general merchandising, which he followed until 1859, when he moved to Madison County, Mo., settling near Fredericktown, where he purchased a large tract of land and engaged in farming. In 1864 he moved to Griggsville, Pike County, Ill., where he followed the same pursuit. In 1869 he came to Jackson County, Kan., settling on the southeast quarter of Section 4, Township 5, Range 16, and engaged in stock-raising and farming. He was married January 1, 1843, at Warner, N. H., to Miss Abbie C. Bean; they have six children. Previous to 1861 Mr. Watkins acted with the Democratic party and held the office of Township Clerk at Warner, N. H., from 1854 to 1859. In 1874–75 he was one of the Commissioners of Jackson County. He has represented the county in the Legislature for two terms, the sessions of 1877–81. In 1878 he was elected Township Trustee of Whiting Township. He has always taken an active part in Kansas politics. He is a member of Whiting Grange No. 1,027.

HENRY YEAGER, proprietor of Commercial Hotel, was born in Clinton County, Pa., in 1840, and lived in his native State until the fall of 1861, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company A, Seventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, enlisting at Lockhaven, Pa., and was discharged at Louisville, Ky., in June, 1862, for disability contracted while in the service, from which he suffers to-day. After his discharge he returned to his home in Pennsylvania where he remained until he had partially regained his health, and in the fall of 1863 re-enlisted in the United States service at Williamsport, Pa., as a member of Company I, One Hundred and Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, being discharged at Philadelphia, Pa., at the close of the war in July, 1865. Owing to the state of his health, Mr. Yeager was kept constantly on detatched duty while a member of the last named regiment. After his final discharge he again returned to his Pennsylvania home where he resided until the spring of 1867, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Monrovia, Atchison County, where he resided about six years. Thence he removed to Arrington, in the same county, where he lived two years and then returned to Monrovia where he lived until the winter of 1882, when he removed to Whiting, Jackson County, where he took charge of the Commercial Hotel, of which he is now the proprietor. Mr. Yeager was Constable of Center Township, Atchison County, five years, and held the same office in Kapioma Township, in the same county, two years. He is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is also a member of the Page Post, No. 136, of Whiting, G. A. R. He was married in 1860, in Clinton County, Pa., to Miss Delilah Dobson, a native of Pennsylvania. They have had eight children, six of whom are living. The Commercial Hotel, of Whiting, under Mr Yeager's able management, assisted in no small degree by his capable wife, has a large profitable patronage and is steadily growing into favor. Mr. Yeager is an agreeable and obliging host, provides the best the markets afford, is reasonable in his charges (in this respect differing in toto from most of the small landlords in the small towns of Kansas who appear to think that the poorer their accommodations are, the higher they should charge their victims), and so, consequently, highly popular with the traveling public who quite frequently fill his house to overflowing.

SOLDIER CITY.

Soldier City, in the central portion of Soldier Township, is a nice thriving village of four blocks, with twenty-four lots each, situated on the Kansas Central Railroad, fifteen miles from Holton. It was laid out in September, 1878, and F. M. Wilson, the oldest settler erected the first building, which was a store in that year. January 9, 1879, Wilson Bros. opened the first stock of goods, their trade having now increased to large proportions. The town is rapidly growing, its population being now about 130. The Methodist Episcopal Church has an organization and own a good house of worship. There is a graded school, the cost of the school building being $2,000, two hotels, the Wilson House and Thompson House, and a large number of general stores and shops.

Francis' Addition to the town was filed August, 1881. It lies south of the original plat and is about 325x1,100 feet.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

HENRY B. BAIR, Justice of the Peace, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 2, Township 7, Range 14, P. O., Holton, was born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in 1837, and lived in his native State until April, 1879, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has been an efficient member of the Board of School District No. 5, Jackson County, for three years, Treasurer of Grant Township two years and at present is Justice of the Peace of his township. Mr. Bair has been married twice. The first marriage occurred in 1859, in Westmoreland County, Pa., to Miss Amanda E. Baker, a native of Pennsylvania. Four children were the fruits of this marriage whose names are: A. Otilia, Samuel M. S., Jesse M. and George B. The second marriage took place in 1870, in Westmoreland County, Pa., to Miss Margaret M. Lotta, a native of Pennsylvania. They have six children, named: Thomas L., Edwin A., John L., Harry B., Richard D. and Hattie L. Esquire Bair is the fortunate owner of a fine upland farm containing 183½ acres—100 acres lying in Grant and the remaining 83½ acres in Jefferson Township. The farm is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivaton and is well supplied with timber and water. The improvements are good and consist in part of a cosy and comfortable frame dwelling containing five rooms, a frame barn, 22x42 feet, fourteen feet high and other outbuildings, a young and thrifty orchard, etc. Esquire Bair, grows 1,000 to 1,800 bushels of corn, 200 to 600 bushels of wheat, 400 to 600 bushels of oats, and cuts 40 to 50 acres of hay yearly. In addition to the splendid crops he grew on his own farm, he also raised last year, 2,400 bushels of corn, 200 bushels of flax seed, 400 bushels of oats and 40 tons of hay on land rented from other parties. He keeps forty head of stock cattle, twenty-five stock hogs, and eight head of fine horses. Esquire Bair is an honest, upright and prominent citizen, a thorough and prosperous farmer, an honored magistrate of his county and he and his estimable wife are well pleased with this country.

P. BRYANT, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 24, Township 7, Range 14, P. O. Holton, is the son of Cyrus and Julia Byrant, early settlers of Bureau County, Ill. Cyrus Bryant was a brother of William Cullen Bryant, the poet. The subject of this sketch was born in Princeton, Ill., in 1837, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1859, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He was a member of the Kansas House of Representatives, sessions of 1866-67, and Surveyor of Jackson County ten years. He participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company K, Ninety-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was enlisted in Princeton, Ill., in August, 1862, and was discharged at Memphis, Tenn., for disability contracted while in the service, in January, 1863. Mr. Bryant was married at Hennepin, Ill., September 1, 1862, to Miss Henrietta Bacon, a native of Massachusetts. They have five children, whose names are: William C., Marcus, Julia, Emma, and John. "Oakdale," as the magnificent estate of Mr. Bryant is called, contains 420 acres. It is all enclosed by substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with timber and water—Bryant's branch of the Banner flowing through the farm in a northerly direction. The property is handsomely improved by a spacious and elegant residence, a large and convenient frame barn 30x50 feet, granaries, cribs, splendid groves and orchards, etc., etc. Mr. Bryant devotes his attention almost exclusively to raising corn, fine cattle and hogs. He grows from 4,000 to 6,000 bushels of corn, and cuts 200 tons of hay yearly, feeds two to six car loads of cattle, keeps 100 head of grade and thoroughbred cattle 100 to 200 stock hogs and fourteen head of horses. A Victoria bull called the "Second Duke of Lawndale" is at the head of his fine herd of cattle, and is an animal of superior personal traits and pure lineage. Mr. Bryant is an old Kansas settler and relates many graphic tales and incidents that occurred in his neighborhood during the border troubles, some of which would be repeated here did not a lack of space forbid. One incident as possessing some historical value may be, however, here related. It has reference to how Banner Creek and Precincts received their name. This precinct having given in 1860, the largest Republican majority given by any precinct in Jackson County, was presented with a flag or banner by the ladies of Holton, friends of that political party, and from that day forth was known as the "Banner Precinct," subsequently shortened to Banner, which name was also given to the Creek, replacing that of Groom by which it had been known before. It having been so called after an old Missouri Rebel of that name who had lived previous to this time, on its banks. Mr. Bryant is a veteran of the last war, an honored and respected citizen, and an intelligent, earnest and progressive farmer and stock-raiser, of liberal views and decided public spirit.

H. C. CARTER, farmer, Section 5, Township 6, Range 13, P. O. Holton, was born in Geauga County, Ohio, in 1852, where he lived until 1876, when he came to Kansas, locating on his present place and has it now well improved. He was married in Marion, Ohio, in 1875, to Miss Harriet Snow and has two children: Harvey and Jane. He is a member of the Holton Lodge I. O. G. T., also belongs to the Baptist Church.

WILLIAM CRUZAN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 14, Township 7, Range 13, P. O. James' Crossing, was born in Rush County, Ind., in 1827, and lived in his native State but a short time, when his parents removed to Coles County, Ill., where Mr. Cruzan resided until April 5, 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in the following August on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He participated in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid as a member of Company D, Twentieth Regiment Kansas Militia, enlisting in Holton in the fall of 1864, serving eighteen days and being discharged at Holton, Jackson County. He took part in the engagement at Westport, Mo. He has been married twice. The first marriage occurred in Coles County, Ill., in 1848, to Miss Mary Bennett, a native of Illinois. Four children were the fruits of this marriage, three of whom are living and who are named: Hiram (married to Miss Katie Meek, a native of Kansas), Sarah Jane (married to Phillip Claypoole, a native of Ohio), and Kansas (married to M. B. Meek, a native of Missouri). The second marriage took place in 1864, in Grant Township to Miss Elizabeth Bowen, a native of Ohio. They have three children, whose names are: Ross, Nettie and Robert. Mr. Cruzan owns a magnificent estate of 1,300 acres, lying on Soldier Creek, divided into bottom and upland. It is all enclosed except fifty acres in timber, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by wells and springs and the creek which flows in a southeasterly direction through the farm. The improvements are first class and embrace among others an elegant residence containing eight rooms, a frame barn 30x50 feet, and other outbuildings. There are two orchards on the farm—one covering three acres and containing 250 apple trees, and the other covering one acre and having 100 fruit trees of different varieties. Mr. Cruzan devotes his attention chiefly to raising corn, cattle and hogs. He grows 4,000 bushels of corn, 700 bushels of oats, cuts 150 tons of hay and millet, and feeds three car loads of cattle yearly, keeps 125 head of fine grade and a few thoroughbred cattle, 100 stock-hogs and fourteen head of excellent horses. At the head of his herd of fine cattle stands the "Prince of Kansas", a thoroughbred Bates' bull, an animal of faultless pedigree and superior personal traits. Mr. Cruzan is an old Kansas pioneer, an honest, unassuming, straight-forward and practical farmer and stock-raiser, and a good and useful citizen and man of high standing and respectability.

A. A. GORDON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 21, Township 7, Range 14, P. O. Holton, was born in Greene County, Ohio, in 1828, and lived in his native State until the spring of 1858, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he resided one summer and then returned to Champaign County, Ohio, where he resided until March, 1871, when he returned to his farm in Kansas, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He has been an efficient and valued member of the Board of School District No. 20, Jackson County, five years. He was married in Xenia, Ohio, in 1859, to Miss Lydia A. Gallaway, a native of Ohio. They have one child, a son, whose name is George A. Mr. Gordon is the fortunate owner of a choice upland farm of 440 acres. The farm is all enclosed except ten acres of timber, is in a good state of cultivation and well supplied with water. The improvements are first class and consist in part of a comfortable and cozy dwelling containing five rooms, a large frame barn 36x80 feet, stock sheds and lots and magnificent orchards and groves. Mr. Gordon grows 2,000 bushels of corn and 500 bushels of small grain, and cuts 200 tons of hay yearly, has 240 acres in pastures, feeds a car load of cattle annually, keeps 100 fine grade cattle, 75 to 100 stock-hogs and ten head of horses. He is an old resident of the State, a thorough, energetic and practical farmer, a good citizen and neighbor, and he and his amiable wife are well pleased with the country.

THOMAS KEIR, farmer and stock-raiser, northwest of Section 13, Township 7, Range 14, P. O. Holton, was born in Rasharkin, County Antrim, Ireland, July 16, 1826, and lived in his native country until his seventeenth year, when he went to the city of Glasgow, Scotland, where he lived three years and then removed to Dumfrieshire, in the same country, where he also resided three years, and then emigrated to America, landing in the city of New York, February 2, 1852, from whence he proceeded to Cayuga County, N. Y., where he resided two years, and then removed to Rock Island County, Ill., where he resided until the spring of 1856, when he joined Gen. James H. Lane's emigration party and proceeded to Kansas. He arrived in Topeka on August 15, 1856, remaining there, meantime taking part in several contests between the Free-State forces and border ruffians, until the spring of 1858, when he located on his farm in what is now Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has since resided. Mr. Keir participated in the war of the Rebellion, during the Price raid, as a member of Capt. Dan. Horn's Company of Kansas Militia, enlisting at Holton, serving three weeks and being discharged at Topeka. He was married, March 14, 1869, in Grant Township, Jackson County, to Mrs. Rebecca Talbert, a native of Washington County, Pa. They have one child, a son, whose name is Frank O. Mr. Keir owns two fine farms in Grant Township, one containing 160 acres and the other, the home farm, embracing 133 acres. These farms are all enclosed, are in a good state of cultivation, are well supplied with timber and water, and have magnificent groves and orchards. The improvements on the home farm are good and consist among others of a large stone house, 17½x35 feet, with a "T" 17x15 feet, stock stables, sheds and lots, granaries, cribs, etc. Mr. Keir grows 2,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 bushels of small grain, cuts 200 tons of hay and feeds a car load of cattle yearly, keeps from forty to fifty fine grade cattle, thirty to forty stock-hogs and half a dozen head of horses. Mr. Keir also owns a choice farm of 160 acres in Grant Township. It is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation, is well supplied with timber and water, and has good improvements. Mr. Keir is an old Kansas pioneer, a prominent and prosperous farmer, a good citizen and neighbor, and has a high standing in his community. Mr. Keir has two brothers and four sisters living somewhere in the United States, whose whereabouts he is anxious to find out. His brothers are named John and William, and his sisters are named Lena (married to James Irvin, a native of Rasharkin, County Antrim, Ireland), Margaret Jane (married to Thomas Webb, who is supposed to reside somewhere in Illinois), Eliza and Hester. His eldest brother, John, went with a party of gold hunters from near Brantfort, Canada, in the spring of 1852, to California, since which time Mr. Keir has had no tidings of him. Should any one acquainted with any of these parties, chance to read these lines, they will do Mr. Keir a great favor which will be duly reciprocated, by addressing him at Holton, Jackson County, Kansas.

J. F. POMEROY, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 23, Township 7, Range 14, P. O. Holton, was born in Worthington, Mass., in 1832, and lived in his native State until his twenty-second year and then removed to Hartford, Conn., where he resided two years. Thence he removed to Bureau County, Ill., where he resided two years, and in July, 1859 became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Grange at Holton. He was Trustee of what was then Jefferson Township in 1860, and one of the Commissoners of Jackson County in 1870-72. He participated in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid, as a member of Capt. Hoaglin's Company of Kansas Militia, enlisting at Holton, Jackson County, served eighteen days and was discharged at Holton. Mr. Pomeroy has been married twice. The first marriage occurred at Circleville, Jackson County, in December, 1862, to Miss Martha J. Blake, a native of Putnam County, Ind. She died in January, 1872. Four children were the fruits of this marriage, only one of whom is living and who is named Charles William. The second marriage took place in September, 1872, in Grant Township, Jackson County, to Miss Isabella C. Clark, a native of Indiana. They have five children living, whose names are Frank C., Horace G., Alice, Hattie and Clara Bell. "Banner stock farm", as the magnificent 730 acre estate of Mr. Pomeroy is called, lies on Banner Creek, six miles southwest of the city of Holton. It is one of the largest and finest stock farms in Grant Township and is nearly all enclosed by about ten miles of fine hedge, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with timber, and with water by means of springs, wells and the creek which flows in a northeasterly direction through the farm. The improvements are costly and extensive and embrace, among others, a spacious and elegant residence, a large frame barn, 45x50 feet, granaries, cribs, wagon and stock sheds, stock lots, etc. There are superb groves and orchards on the property—the orchards alone covering eleven acres and containing 650 fruit trees of various varieties. Mr. Pomeroy grows 8,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 bushels of small grain, and cuts 300 tons of hay yearly, has 160 acres in pasture, feeds three car loads of cattle annually, keeps 200 head of fine grade cattle, 150 stock-hogs and twenty-five head of horses. Mr. Pomeroy is an old Kansas pioneer, a prominent, prosperous and intelligent farmer, has an estate fit for a prince, is well and favorably known, and is an honored citizen of his county. Coming to Kansas with but $300 in his possession, he has since that time made every dollar he now possesses by his untiring energy and legitimate farming. It is scarcely necessary to say that he is more than pleased with his adopted State.

LORENZO D. STEPHENSON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 3, Township 7, Range 13, P. O. James' Crossing, was born in Mercer County, Ohio, in 1841, and lived in his native State until his twenty-second year, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company A, Seventy-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, enlisted in Salina, Ohio, October 9, 1861, and was discharged at Gallitin, Tenn., in February 1864, re-enlisting the same day in the same company and regiment, and was finally discharged at Columbus, Ohio, January 6, 1866. He participated in the battles of Shiloh, Fort Donelson, Jonesboro, Atlanta, Nashville and numerous minor engagements. After his discharge he returned to his Ohio home, where he resided nearly one year, and on the 17th day of December, 1866, became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was married in Soldier Township, Jackson County, April 29, 1875, to Miss Mary Tolin, a native of Indiana. They have four children, whose names are: Lorin, Albert, Walter and Naomi. Mr. Stephenson is the fortunate owner of a fine farm lying on Soldier Creek, containing 720 acres. It is all upland but 160 acres, which is bottom land of the finest quality. It is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation, and is well supplied with timber and water. The improvements are good and consist in part of a comfortable and cozy dwelling containing six rooms, a fine barn, 32x30 feet, stock stables, sheds and lots, and handsome groves and orchards. Mr. Stephenson grows 6,000 bushels of corn, 2,600 bushels of small grain, and cuts 100 tons of hay yearly, keeps seventy-five fine grade cattle, 100 stock hogs and fifteen to twenty fine horses and mules. Mr. Stephenson is an energetic, industrious and model farmer, an honorable and straight-forward man, and a good citizen and neighbor.

SAMUEL STEPHENSON, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 10, Township 7, Range 13, P. O. James' Crossing, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, in 1834, and lived in his native State until April, 1860, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Miami County, where he resided one year. He then removed to Fort Scott, Bourbon County, where he resided until February, 1863, when he settled on his farm in Grant Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the German Baptist Church. He has been a member of and Treasurer of School District No. 11, Jackson County, about ten years, and has served as Trustee of Grant Township five terms. He participated in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid, as a member of the Kansas Militia, enlisting at, and being discharged at James' Crossing, Jackson County, after serving eighteen days. He was married January 2, 1870, in Washington County, Kan., to Miss Katie Burr, a native of Indiana. They have four children, whose names are: Nellie Blanche, Mary May, Mary Elizabeth and Etha Lucretia. Mr. Stephenson owns a fine farm of 340 acres lying on Soldier Creek. The farm is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by means of wells, springs, spring branches and the creek which flows through the centre of it. The improvements are first class, embracing in part an elegant new, modern residence containing seven rooms, surrounded by handsome grounds. The dwelling is erected on an elevated site which commands a magnificent view for miles of the surrounding country. The property is also further improved by two tenant houses, a frame barn, 20x40 feet, a large new granary and other outbuildings, two fine orchards covering ten acres and containing 1,000 fruit trees of various kinds, etc. Mr. Stephenson grows from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 bushels of oats, 125 bushels of flax seed, cuts 100 tons of hay yearly, keeps 75 to 100 head of stock cattle, 75 to 100 stock hogs and twenty head of horses. Mr. Stephenson is a thorough practical farmer, a prosperous and substantial citizen and enjoys the confidence of the people.

MRS. MARY WEST, widow of Frederic West, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 24, Township 7, Range 14, P. O. Holton. Mr. Frederic West was born in Berkshire County, Mass., in 1809, and lived in his native State until his twenty-second year, when he removed to the then Territory of Iowa, where he resided two years. Thence he removed to Knox County, Ill., where he resided until September 1857, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in what is now Grant Township, Jackson County, where he resided until his death in December 1881. He was a steadfast and consistent member of the Congregational Church. He was one of Jackson's representative and honored citizens and was, one of the Commissioners of this county in 1861-62. He was a prominent pioneer of the State, an honorable, upright man and was well and favorably known. He was married in 1852 at Knoxville, Ill., to Miss Mary Shannon, a native of Jefferson County, Ohio. They had one child, a daughter, whose name is Jennie, and who is married to Alfred Peace, a native of England. Mrs. West owns a fine upland farm of 160 acres. It is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation, is amply supplied with timber and has plenty of water, having wells, springs, the Banner Creek and the west branch of the Banner, which flows through the farm in an easterly direction. There are splendid groves and a young and thrifty orchard on the property, which contains 300 fruit trees of various varieties. There is also an abundance of small fruits on the farm. The improvements are good and consist in part of a comfortable and cozy home, a frame barn, 36x25 feet, granaries, cribs, etc. The farm is under the able superintendence of Mr. Alfred Peace, Mrs. West's son-in-law, a young, energetic, practical and thorough farmer. He grows yearly from 2,500 to 3,000 bushels of corn, 300 bushels of small grain, keeps fifty head of fine stock cattle, forty to fifty stock hogs, and nine head of horses. The farm is well known for its productiveness and fertility and ranks among the best in Grant Township.

HON. J. W. PETTIJOHN, physician and surgeon, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 21, Township 9, Range 15. P. O. Hoyt, Jackson County. The subject of this sketch is now a resident of Jackson County, Kan. He was born in Brown County, Ohio, October 27, 1833, and is the son of William B. and E. Pettijohn, who were Virginians by birth. He was raised under the strict Presbyterian code, but belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church in which faith he was brought up, and joined in his early youth, and is still a member of the same. His father was among the early abolitionists of Southern Ohio, and as a boy, J. W. was often called upon to make a trip on the "Underground Rail Road," as it was called in that day. He has always been an advocate of reform, and has been connected with all the great leading reforms of the day. The temperance question has always received his sanction and support, from the day of the Washingtonian pledge, down along the line of temperance societies to the present day, excepting the crusade, as inaugurated a few years ago in Ohio. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., and also of the Masonic fraternity, having attained the distinction in the latter as a Sir Knight. He received a common school education, and studied medicine with his uncle, A. L. Pettijohn. Matriculated in the University of Michigan, in 1855, and graduated in the Georgetown Medical College, District of Columbia. He was married November 1, 1860, to Miss Frank E. Ridings, of Hillsboro, Ohio. Her parents were also Virginians and identified with the early history of Hillsboro, Highland Co., Ohio. Their only son, William R. was born October 10, 1863. Dr. Pettijohn commenced the practice of medicine with Dr. Jno. Buchanan, in 1857, and continued in active practice until the spring of 1863, at which time he accepted the position of a surgeon in the United States army in the department at Washington, D. C.. In the fall of the same year, by order of the Secretary of War, he went before the medical examiners then sitting in Washington City, and after a thorough examination of six days, received a commission as surgeon, and was assigned to the Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry. Not being able for active campaign work, he was forced, after some months, to resign, and was again assigned to duty at the hospital on Arlington Heights; from thence he went to Anticosta Island, and from there to Patuxant River, remaining in the service until the spring of 1866. The war ending, he returned to his native State and engaged in the practice of his profession in the town of Lynchburg, Ohio, situated on the Miami River, forty miles east of Cincinnati.. He continued in active business for twelve years, when, being admonished by failing health, he sold out, gave up a pleasant home, resigned a lucrative practice, and started West in quest of health, which he has found in the pure air of Kansas. He is now comfortably situated, enjoying the fruits of his labors, on the sunny banks of the Little Soldier, engaged in growing stock and farming and administering to the wants of the sick in his immediate neighborhood. Dr. Pettijohn was elected by the Republicans, as their Representative to the last legislature from the Forty-ninth district. He has always affiliated with that party, (it being the champion of advanced ideas and reform) but reserves to himself the right of a free thinker. His sympathies are always with the weak and oppressed.

A. A. POWERS, farmer and stock-raiser, P. O. Hoyt, was born near Hackettstown, Warner County, N. J., May 5, 1842. His parents were both natives of New Jersey. When three years old his father died; he received a common school education in his native county. In 1856 he went to Indiana and farmed for two years. In 1861 he enlisted in the Eighth New Jersey. He was in the army [illegible] the Potomac from its organization till the battle of Petersburg and was engaged in twenty-eight important battles of the war. Returning to New Jersey he found employment on the Morris and Essex Railroad, and was afterwards agent for a wholesale house. In 1872 he came to Kansas, settling first in Reno County. In 1876 he moved to Jackson County, where he has since resided. His politics are Republican and he has been twice elected Trustee of Douglas Township.

AMELIA V. RICE, widow of David S. Rice, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 29, Township 9, Range 16, P. O. Meriden, Jefferson County. David S. Rice was born in 1828, in Scott County, Ind., where he resided until nineteen years of age. Thence he removed to Trimble County, Ky., where he was engaged in farming and where he resided for seven years. He then removed to Platte County, Mo., where he resided one year. On the 9th day of April, 1855, he became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Douglas Township, Jackson County, where he resided until his death, August 18, 1877. He was a consistent member of the Church of the United Brethren. He was an efficient member of the Board of School District No. 4, in Jackson County for four years. He took part in the late war during the Price Raid, as a member of the Kansas Militia, enlisting in the fall of 1864, at Leavenworth, and serving eighteen days and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth. During his life Mr. Rice was extensively engaged in feeding and dealing in live stock and managing his large farm. He also owned and operated a steam saw-mill for a number of years. He was an honorable, upright, Christian man and highly respected and esteemed in his neighborhood. Mr. Rice was married to Miss Amelia V. Pennington, a native of Garrard County, Ky., September 30, 1847, in Trimble County, Ky. They had nine children, eight of whom are living, named : William E., married to Miss Melinda Sherman, a native of Indiana; Mary W., married to William Kemp, a native of Maryland; Rachael E., married to William F. Cunningham, a native of Missouri; John Wesley; David S., married to Miss Josephine Miller, a native of Kansas, who died December 10, 1882; Amelia V., married to Thomas Hutchinson, a native of Ohio ; Annie E., married to Matthew Cole, a native of Ohio; Charles Ellsworth, died December 11, 1882 and Ida J. Mrs. Rice is the owner of a farm of 316 acres lying on West Muddy Creek. The farm is under the able management of her son John Wesley, who is a thorough and practical farmer and a young man of indomitable energy and perseverance. The farm is all enclosed with substantial fences, is in a high state of cultivation and is well supplied with water by wells, springs and the creek which flows through the south part of the farm. The property is as well adapted to a stock farm as any in Jackson County. It has eighty acres in timber and the same number in pasture and has good improvements, embracing a large and elegant residence containing eleven rooms, stock stables, sheds and lots, a large stone granary and handsome groves and orchards. Mrs. Rice grows 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of corn, 1,000 to 1,500 bushels of small grain, cuts 100 tons of hay yearly, keeps from sixty to seventy-five fine grade cattle, twenty-five to thirty stock hogs and a dozen head of horses and mules. The farm is noted in the neighborhood for its fertility, its fine meadows, its well sheltered and convenient stock lots and its abundant supply of pure water.

JACOB SEAL, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 34, P. O. Meriden, Jefferson County. The spring of 1855 the subject of this sketch located on Muddy Creek, where he now resides, being one among the first in that region. He has since been a constant resident and few persons have been more closely identified with the development of Jackson County. Mr. Seal is a native of Ohio, and was born in Crawford County, January 16, 1834. When eleven years of age he came to Missouri with his parents and was there educated and reared. He has been three times married, his first two wives being dead, their names were respectively Bradshaw and Bainbridge. His present wife's maiden name was Susan Michael. By his first marriage he has two children: Theodore B. and Julia A. By the second union he has four children: William E., Mary M. C., Josiah D. and Almira D. By the latter union he has two sons: Ulysses A. and Elmer F.

D. W. STANLEY, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 3, Township 9, Range 15, P. O. Hoyt, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, in 1840, and lived in his native State until his twenty-first year, he then removed to Jefferson County, Wis., where he resided until August, 1862, when he entered the Union army as a member of Company D, Twenty-ninth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged at Madison, Wis., June 9, 1865. He participated in the battles of Port Gibson, Miss. and Champion Hills. In the last named engagement Mr. Stanley, was wounded and taken prisoner and being paroled a short time after was sent to the United States general hospital at Memphis, Tenn., where he was confined suffering from his wounds for over six months. After his recovery he rejoined his regiment at New Ibera, La., where he did duty with his regiment, taking part in the interim, in the battle of Sabine Cross Roads, and a number of minor engagements until the 9th day of June, 1865, when he was taken sick suffering from general disability, and allowed leave of absence to go to his home in Wisconsin, where he remained until his discharge from the United States service. After his discharge he removed to Howard County, Iowa, where he lived one year and then returned to Wisconsin, where he resided until the spring of 1870, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Douglas Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is also a member of Holton Lodge, No. 1,769 K. of H. He has been Justice of the Peace of Douglas Township five years. He has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis., in 1866, to Miss Anna D. Rutherford, a native of Wisconsin. She died in 1867. They had one child, a daughter, whose name was Anna D. The second marriage took place November 2, 1868, in Lake Mills, Wisconsin, to Miss Elizabeth Philips, a native of Pennsylvania. She died September 28, 1881. They had five children three of whom are living and whose names are Dan, Frank and Willie Case. Esquire Stanley owns a large and choice upland farm of 258 acres lying on Stanley's branch of the Soldier, and also owns five acres of timber lying in Cedar Township, Jackson County. The farm is all enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with water. The improvements are good and consist of a comfortable and cozy dwelling, stock stables, sheds and lots, corn cribs and handsome groves and orchards. Esquire Stanley devotes his attention exclusively to raising corn, hogs, cattle and fine horses. He grows from 1,000 to 1,200 bushels of corn, cuts 250 acres of hay yearly, keeps 100 choice grade cattle forty to fifty hogs and half-a-dozen head of horses. He is an honored magistrate of his county, a veteran of the last war, a thorough and practical farmer and an honorable and upright man.

P. H. STEWARD, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 15, Township 9, Range 15, P. O. Hoyt, was born in Delaware County, Ohio, in 1832, and lived in his native State until his eighth year, when his parents removed to Jasper County, Ind., where Mr. Steward resided until his twenty-first year, when he removed to Jones County, Iowa, where he lived one and a half years. In February, 1856, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Jefferson County, where he resided until 1863, when he removed to his farm in Douglas Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He holds demit of Holton Lodge, A., F. & A. M., and Meriden Lodge, A. O. U. W. Mr. Steward has been married twice. The first marriage took place in Jefferson County, May 15, 1856, being the first marriage recorded in that county, to Miss Lucinda Dunn, a native of Indiana. They had two children whose names are Columbus and Marcus. The second marriage occurred November 25, 1873, in Jackson County, to Mrs. Cornelia Vennard, a native of Illinois. They have one son whose name is Walter. Mr. Steward owns a fine farm of 240 acres. It is second bottom, is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with water, Steward's branch of the Little Soldier flowing through the centre of the farm. The improvements are good, and consist of a neat and cozy home, a frame granary, corn cribs, stock sheds and lots and a young and thrifty orchard. Mr. Steward grows 1,000 bushels of corn, 500 bushels of small grain and cuts 100 acres of hay yearly. Has been quite an extensive stock man though at present is building and improving a quarter Section, which has previously been used for grass purposes. Keeps a few cattle and hogs and seven head of horses. He is an old Kansas pioneer, and was among the number that helped to defend their homes in early troubles, is a practical and thorough farmer, an honorable, upright man and is well and favorably known.

EZRA K. SWARTZ, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 34, Township 8, Range 15, P. O. South Cedar, was born in Indiana in 1839, and lived in his native State until his twenty-ninth year and then removed to Champaign County, Ill., where he resided nine years, and then removed to the city of Peoria, in the same State where he lived one summer, thence removed to Kansas City where he resided about six years, and then removed to his farm in Douglas Township, Jackson County, where he has since resided. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the McPherson Post No. 4, G. A. ,R, of Kansas City. Mr. Swartz participated in the war of the Rebellion as a member of Company I, Twenty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and was enlisted August 19, 1861, at Camp Morton, Indianapolis, Ind., and was discharged at Chester, Pa., in November, 1862, for disability contracted while in the United States service, from the effects of which he suffers to-day. He was married in Putnamville, Indiana, in 1866, to Miss Amanda Mangun, a native of Maryland. They have two children whose names are Carrie and Freddie F. Mr. Swartz owns a fine upland farm of sixty acres. It is all enclosed, is in a good state of cultivation and is well supplied with water. The improvements consist in part, of a comfortable dwelling, a stock stable, sheds and lots, etc. Mr. Swartz has thirty acres in corn, five acres in oats, and fourteen acres in flax. He is a thorough and practical farmer and a brave veteran of the last war. He is a good citizen and neighbor.

J. W. WILLIAMS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 10, Township 9, Range 16, P. O, Cope. Among the prominent men of Jackson County, who have risen to places of influence and honor, from the smallest beginnings may be classed the gentleman whose name stands at the head of this article. Mr. Williams is the eldest son of Richard Williams, who was a native of Virginia, but removed to Ohio in an early day becoming one of the pioneer settlers of that State. The subject of this sketch was born in Belmont County, Ohio, on the 7th day of October, 1819. When ten years of age he moved with his parents to Morgan County, Ohio. His education was received in the common schools of Belmont and Morgan counties, and one year's attendance at Marietta College. In 1856, he took a trip through the West, and on his return settled in Hocking County, Ohio, where he remained until 1858, when he came to Kansas, arriving on the site of his present home on the 7th day of April. His object in coming to Kansas was to secure land for his children and to make for himself a home in the great West. Although he has met with some misfortunes, and endured many of the hardships incident to a new country, he has, in the main, been very successful. He was the first to settle on the open prairie in his neighborhood. He now possesses a farm well improved and cultivated. Since coming to Kansas his business has been farming, and his well-tilled fields are convincing proofs of his proficiency. His political views have been in sympathy with the Republican party, since 1856, previous to which time he acted with the Democratic party. Although in no respect a professional politician, his fellow citizens recognizing his merit, have elected him to various important positions. Was elected, and served nine years as Justice of the Peace,—seven years in Ohio, and two years in Kansas. He was one of the Commissioners of Jackson County in the years 1861, 1862 and 1863, and Trustee of Douglas Township, in 1873 and 1874. Was one of the Enumerators, and took the Census of Douglas Township in 1880. In the years 1864, 1875 and 1876 he represented his county in the State Legislature. He has filled all these offices with credit to himself and to his county. He was married in 1842, in Morgan County, Ohio, to Miss Elizabeth McKeever, by whom he has had ten children, eight of whom are living whose names are: Alonzo H., married to Miss Hattie Jones, a native of Illinois; Margaret J., married to A. H. Black, a native of Ohio and a resident of Jackson County; S. Matilda, married to W. O. Brown, a native of Indiana and a resident of Jackson County; William Hollis, married to Miss Mary A. Herr, a native of Illinois; Richard A. T. W. Sherman; Mary, married to Newton Z. Fulton, a native of Ohio; and Charles Sumner. Mr. Williams participated in the war of the Rebellion during the Price raid, as Lieutetant of Company A, Fourth Kansas Militia, and was enrolled at Meriden, Jefferson County, in 1862, and was discharged in Oskaloosa in the same county in October, 1864. He took part in the battle of Little Blue. Has been a member of the Christian Church since his eighteenth year, and has led a consistent life, and is well known as an honest and upright man. Mr. Williams is to be classed among Jackson County's pioneer settlers, and as such, he has watched the development of its resources with much interest. In public improvements he is ever ready to lend a helping hand, and where donations are required for the furtherance of such improvements he is never less generous than his neighbors. During his long residence in the county he has shown himself worthy of the esteem and confidence reposed in him by his fellow citizens.

CEDAR TOWNSHIP.

MICHAEL BAKER, farmer, P. O. North Cedar, was born in Greenbrier County, Va., November 15, 1813. In 1833, he went to Saline County, and afterwards Platte County, Missouri, where he was engaged in selling goods and farming, remaining until 1856 when he came to Kansas with a stock of goods and started a store at the mouth of Bill's Creek. In 1858 he went to Pike's Peak and engaged in mining for two years, returning to Jackson County where he has since resided. In 1840 he was married to Miss Julia Ann Mayo; she died in 1842 leaving one son. In 1862 he was again married to Sarah Isaacs. He has always been an out-and-out Democrat.

B. H. BRADSHAW, farmer and breeder of Durham cattte and Norman horses, P. O. North Cedar, is a native of Kentucky and was born and raised in Adair County. He was born September 1, 1822. In 1840 he entered a store at Columbia as a clerk where he remained until 1845, when he went into the cattle business. In 1848 he moved to Vernon County, Missouri, and was one of the pioneers of that county, and was one of the Board of Commissioners that located the county-seat at Nevada. He took an active part in politics, and was for six years a Justice of the Peace and County Judge for four years. In 1863, owing to his Union sentiments he was compelled to leave the State with only the clothes on his back. He came to Jackson County, Kansas, and located on North Cedar Creek, where he remained until 1867, when he moved to his present location, then a piece of wild prairie. He now has 200 acres under cultivation, 100 acres being in tame grass, and devotes his time to raising blooded stock. He was married in 1843, to Miss Belinda Collins, a native of Virginia. They have eight children: Lafayette Y., Henry C., Mary E., Jasper N., Sarah U., Lucretia A., Diana J. and B. H., Jr. In the temperance movement Mr. Bradshaw has always taken an active part. While in Missouri, he was Deputy District Grand Master of the I. O. G. T. Lodge, and for two years lectured and instituted lodges. During the Grange movement he was District Deputy Grand Master, and organized and instituted all the Granges in Jackson County, Kansas. He is an active member of the Christian Church and has been an Elder in that church for the past twenty years.

J. BUCKINGHAM, farmer, Section 15, Township 7, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar, was born in Platte County Missouri, in 1830. In 1864 he came to Jackson County, Kansas. In 1865 he was married to Miss Mary Hopkins, of Platte County, Missouri, and has two children, Julia and Josie. His politics have always been Republican.

JOHN BOOTH, school teacher, Section 11, Township 8, Range 15, P. O. South Cedar, was born in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, in 1828, and lived in his native State until May, 1864, when he removed to Tama County, Iowa where he resided about five years. On the 14th day of May, 1869, he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Cedar Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He has been Trustee of Cedar Township four terms in succession. During the greater part of the time that Mr. Booth has resided in Kansas, he has been engaged in teaching in the public schools of Jackson County. He is an able and popular teacher and educator of rare merit and thorough culture. Mr. Booth was married in the city of Topeka, May 29, 1878, to Miss Caroline Williams, a native of Ireland. She died July 5, 1881, leaving behind her a daughter whose name is Nannie Jennie Caroline.

GEORGE COLEMAN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 21, Township 8, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar. There are few sketches of the representative men of Jackson County that will be read with more interest and pleasure than that of George Coleman or "Uncle George" as he is familliarly called. He may justly be called a self-made man, being a man who by his own determination and energy has risen from a small beginning to a place of influence and honor, and who to-day commands the respect and admiration of his fellow citizens. He was born in Sussex County, England on the 27th day of November, 1815. He passed his childhood days in his native country, when, as his parents were not in affluent circumstances, his school advantages were necessarily somewhat limited; but this did not prevent him from acquiring a good, practical education, which, with his surroundings, has been of more value than any other. When nineteen years of age he came with his parents to America and settled in Upper Canada, where he remained three years. Here his father died, and as he disliked the climate and the government of Canada, the subject of this sketch determined to try his fortune in the United States. He accordingly moved to Illinois and settled about twelve miles south of Chicago, which he describes as being at that time a small village. After a residence of nineteen years in Illinois he decided to come to Kansas in order to obtain farms for his children. He came to Jackson, or as it was then called Calhoun County, in July, 1855, and took up the claim which he now occupies. He then returned to Illinois and sent out his son, and in October he moved with his family in wagons, arriving on the 20th day of October, 1856. Since that time Mr. Coleman has remained in Kansas. He has been successful in the object for which he came to Kansas. He has one of the best farms in Cedar Township, and has lived to see all his children very prosperously situated. Politically, he has always affiliated with the Democratic party. Although never an office-seeker, his fellow citizens have had such confidence in his ability and honesty that they have elevated him to various important positions, both Township and County. He was one of the County Commissioners of Jackson in the years 1860, 1873, 1874. He has been at various times elected to the office of Treasurer of Cedar Township, and has long been Treasurer of his school district. He was married in 1835 to Miss Elizabeth Voice, a native of Sussex County, England. They have seven children, five of whom are living, whose names are: Cornelius, married to Miss Sarah Renfrew, a native of Kentucky; Daniel, married to Miss Celia Sanderson, a native of Vermont; Edwin, married to Miss Mary Miller, a native of Ohio; Walter and David. As one of the earliest settlers, as an able writer in Bird's Historical Plat Book of Jackson County, (from which work most of this article has been drawn), applicably says: Mr. Coleman has taken a deep interest and pride in the growth and development of Jackson County. His life has not been tarnished by one unworthy act, and his private character has been equally blameless. He is a generous, kind-hearted man and a good neighbor, and in his declining years enjoys the love and confidence of all who know him.

W. A. DOUGLAS, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 32, Township 7, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar, was born in Ritchie County, W. Va., March 3, 1841. In 1851 his parents moved to Buchanan County, Mo. In April, 1862, he enlisted in Company A, Fourth Missouri Cavalry, Missouri State Militia, and took part in the engagements of Springfield, Newtonia, Humansville, Marshall, and the battle of Price's raid; in fact all the skirmishes and battles of his regiment. After an active service of three years, he was discharged at Warrensburg, Mo., April 30, 1865, when he returned to Buchanan County, Mo., and engaged in farming. He was married in Buchanan County, Mo., on February 22, 1866, to Miss Elizabeth McConnell, and has five children—Alonzo C., Joseph R., Cora B., John McC., and Winifred. In 1876 he moved to Jackson County, Kan., locating one mile north of his present location, where he lived one year, when he moved to his present location. He has 160 acres, well improved, with good building, orchard, and fences. Mr. Douglas has always taken a live interest in school matters, and he has been a member of the School Board of his district since his advent to the State.

JOHN R. DUTT, blacksmith, North Cedar, was born in Lancaster County, Pa., in 1844, where he learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, and where he worked at his trade until he removed to Jackson County, Kan., in 1877, and engaged in farming on South Cedar, for one year, moving to North Cedar, where he built a blacksmith shop, feed stable, and hotel, and has since followed that business. He was married in Lancaster County, Pa., in 1870, to Miss Emma Masterson, a daughter of John Masterson, and has six children—David, John, Samuel, Zachariah, Lizzie, and Mary. He belongs to the I. O. O. F. Lodge, at Mount Joy, Pa., and to the Order of Red Men at Renova, Pa. Is School Director of his district.

R. L. FIPPIN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 20, Township 7, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar, was born July 10, 1826, in Washington County, Ind. He was brought up on a farm, and on reaching manhood he bought a farm near his native place, where he remained until 1836, when he moved to Morning Star, Des Moines Co., Iowa, eighteen miles northwest of Burlington, where he bought a piece of wild land and commenced to improve it, remaining on this place until 1873, when he came to Jackson County Kan., and located as above stated; that he has been prosperous his many fine improvements fully testify. He was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Rock, in 1849, at Washington County, Ind., and has six children—E. R., G. G., Nancy A., Elizabeth T., Cassa J., and Edwin B. He is member of the Reformed Presbyterian Church at North Cedar.

A. A. GATES, proprietor of cheese factory and feed-mill, was born in Lawrence County, N. Y., in 1850, and was raised on a farm. In 1871 he commenced to learn the butter and cheese business, and followed that business since. In 1881 he came to this State, and started a cheese factory at North Cedar, and has been only moderately successful. In 1882 he added grinding machinery to his factory, and will engage in grinding feed. He was married in 1872, to Miss Frank C. Bacon, at Morrison, Ill.

R. S. GILLIES, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 33, Township 7, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar, is a native of Scotland, and was born in Ayrshire, in 1823, and was raised to the life of a farmer. In 1855, he emigrated to America, and settled in Chicago, Ill., where he found employment in a machine shop. In 1861 he moved to Aurora, Ill., where he worked in the railroad machine shop until 1865, when he moved to Jackson County, Kan., locating on his present homestead, and engaged in improving it. He has ninety acres under cultivation, and good building, fences, orchards, etc. He was married in Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1840, to Miss Agnes Blair, and has three children—John, Elizabeth, and James. In 1876, he was elected County Commissioner of Jackson County, serving one term.

S. R. JONES, postmaster and dealer in general merchandise, was born in Warren County, Ohio, in 1840, and lived in his native State until his tenth year, when his parents removed to Parke County, Ind., where the family resided until August, 1855, when they settled in Kansas. The long distance from their former home, Indiana, was traveled by ox-teams. The family located near Kickapoo, Leavenworth County, where they resided nearly two years. On the 5th day of May, 1857, they removed to Cedar Township, Jackson County, where Mr. Jones has resided with the exception of four years, continuously since. Mr. Jones' family were pronounced Free-State advocates, and suffered considerably at the hands of the Pro-slavery faction, many interesting and graphic tales being related by different members of the family of these troublesome times. Mr. Jones is a member of Holton Lodge, No. 42, A., F. & A. M. He has been the accommodating and efficient postmaster of South Cedar, Jackson County, for nine years. He was married at Oak Mills, Atchison County, in 1863, to Miss Sarah J. Johnson, a native of Missouri, by whom he has had seven children, whose names are—Permelia J., Lucy N., Harriet Adeline, Nora, Ruth, Samuel R., Jr., and Albert Jesse. Mr. Jones has been engaged in the general mercantile business at South Cedar, for ten years. As he is the only merchant in the place, and is kind, genial, and courteous in his manner, he does, and is deserving of a thriving trade. He attends closely to business, is very popular in his neighborhood, and has a high social and commercial standing.

SIMON McCRORY, farmer and stock-raiser Section 8, Township 8, Range 16, P. O. North Cedar, was born November 12, 1845, in County Antrim, Ireland, and lived in his native country until his twelfth year, when his parents emigrated to America, locating in Gentry County, Mo., where they resided three years, and thence removed to Page County, Iowa, where the family still reside. In March, 1870, Mr. McCrory became a resident of Kansas, locating on his farm in Cedar Township, Jackson County, where he has since lived. He is a prominent and zealous member of the Reformed Presbyterian Church of North Cedar. He was married in Page County, Iowa, October 13, 1870, to Miss Agnes Stevenson, a native of Ohio. They have seven children living—Maggie, Robert, Samuel, Mary, James, Thomas, and William. Mr. McCrory owns a fine upland farm of ninety acres, ten acres of which is timber land. It is enclosed by substantial fences, is in a good state of cultivation, is well supplied with water, and handsomely improved by an elegant new frame dwelling, stock stables, lots, sheds, granary, corn crib, and splendid groves, and orchards. Mr. McCrory devotes his attention to raising corn, cattle, hogs, and horses. He grows 1,000 bushels of corn, 300 bushels of small grain, keeps twenty-five choice stock cattle, twenty-five stock hogs, and six head of fine horses. Mr. McCrory is an industrious, practical and thorough farmer, a good citizen, and honorable, high-toned man. He and his amiable wife are highly pleased with this country.

JOHN HENRY MILLER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 12, Township 8, Range 15, P. O. South Cedar, was born in Wayne County, Ohio, in 1841, and lived in his native county until his fourth year, when his parents removed to Holmes County, in the same State, where Mr. Miller resided until December, 1869, when he became a resident of Kansas, locating in Leavenworth County, where he lived two years, and then removed to his present farm in Cedar Township, Jackson County, where he has resided since. He was married in Holmes County, Ohio, in 1861, to Miss Sarah Combs, a native of Holmes County, Ohio. They have three children— William O. E., Mary H., and Robert Long. Mr. Miller owns a choice upland farm of 200 acres. It is all enclosed, is in a high state of cultivation, and is well supplied with water and timber. The improvements are first-class, and consist of a new and comfortable cottage, a large frame barn, 40x42 feet, and other outbuildings. There is a fine young bearing orchard on the farm which covers seven acres, and contains 500 apple, and a number of pear, plum, Siberian crab, quince, and cherry trees. Mr. Miller grows from 2,500 to 3,500 bushels of corn, 2,000 bushels of small grain and cuts 100 acres of hay yearly. Keeps eighty to one hundred stock-cattle, forty to sixty stock-hogs, and 15 head of horses. He is a hard-working, practical and thorough farmer, and a prominent and prosperous citizen.

G. W. MYERS, carpenter and farmer, P O. North Cedar, was born in Jefferson County, Ohio, in 1831. He learned the carpenters' trade at Steubenville, Ohio, and in 1856 he came to Kansas, and located at Leavenworth, where he worked at his trade. In 1868 he moved to his present location on the northeast quarter of Section 28, Township 7, Range 16, which he has now finely improved, although he has followed his trade the greater part of his time since his removal to his farm. Mr. Myers has been twice married, his first wife to whom he was married in 1866, being a Miss Elliott, who died in 1867. In 1870 he was married to Miss Eliza Cody, a sister of "Buffalo Bill,", and by this marriage he has four children—Nellie M., Harry C., Charles Lulo, and Roy George. Mr. Myers has always been a Republican, and in the early days of Kansas was three times driven from the territory for his "Free State principles. PRESTON M. HUMPHREY, retired farmer, was born in Trumbull County, Ohio, November 7, 1820. His father, Theron Humphrey, and his mother, whose maiden name was Harriet Miner, were both natives of Connecticut, but moved to Ohio in an early day. The subject of this sketch began life on a farm in his native county in Ohio, and there passed his boyhood days. At the age of twenty, feeling that he should begin life on his own account, he set out for the far West. He passed the winter of 1840-41 working near St. Louis. In the spring of 1841 he went to Platte County, Mo., where he engaged in farming. In 1846, during the Mexican war he was in the employ of the Government, he drove team to New Mexico, arriving at Santa Fe on August 18, 1846. He remained at Santa Fe and its vicinity nearly a year, when he returned to Platte County, Mo. In 1857 he took up the claim in Jackson County on which he now resides. In 1858 he pre-empted a claim in Johnson County, Kan. In 1859 he moved to the farm on which he now resides. Mr. Humphrey's business has always been farming, as the fine improvements on his farm fully testify. In 1881, in company with S. T. Mulligan, he engaged in general merchandising at Larkin. On June 15, 1865, he was united in marriage to Miss Drantha D. Hubbel, a native of Bradford County, Pa., and has two children—Charles P. and Hattie. He was a staunch supporter of the principles of the old Whig party till its dissolution; since that time he has been identified with the Democratic party. He held the office of Trustee of Kapioma Township, Atchison County, one term.

J. JOHNSTON, farmer, P. O. Larkin, was born in Ireland in 1838. At ten years of age his parents emigrated to America, settling in New York City, where they lived until 1858 when they moved to Michigan, locating near Jackson. In 1860 young Johnston entered a dry goods store at that place, where he remained until 1865, when he went to Linn County, Iowa, and engaged in stock-raising and farming. In 1879 he moved to Kansas and located at Valley Falls. In 1881 he moved to Larkin and engaged in general merchandising. In 1882 he sold out and is now engaged in farming and stock-raising.

In 1839 he engaged in the manufacturing of tobacco which he followed until 1845, when he was appointed Deputy Sheriff of Green County, Ky., which office he held until his removal to Buchanan County, Mo., in 1849. While in Kentucky he held the rank of Colonel of militia. On his removal to Missouri he engaged in farming for one year. 1850 he bought a large flouring-mill near St. Joseph, but shortly afterwards it was burned, devolving on him a considerable loss. In 1852 he bought a mill in St. Joseph. In 1855 he built a mill at Stewartsville, Mo. In 1857 he was engaged in milling at Elwood, Kan. In 1854 he took up a claim near Wathena, Kan., but shortly afterwards sold it. In 1860 he moved to Arrington, Kan., where he engaged in teaching school and farming until 1864 when he went to Montana, but returned in 1866 to Arrington, where he remained until 1874 when he went to Georgia but returned in 1875 to Larkin, Kan., where he has since resided. In 1880 he was appointed postmaster of the place. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace at various times and holds that office at present. He was married in Russell County, Ky., in 1844, to Miss Caroline McCraven, and has had fourteen children, two only are now living—Robert M. and Rosilla.

PAWNEE COUNTY.

PAWNEE County was a part of the original hunting grounds of the once powerful tribe of Pawnee Indians, and after them it was named. There are two counties between it and the Indian Territory; four between it and Nebraska; five between it and Colorado; nine between it and Missouri. Its present area is 756 square miles, in Ranges 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20. As first constituted in 1868 it contained 540 square miles, being eighteen miles from north to south; thirty miles from east to west.

The Arkansas River running through from the southwestern to the northeastern portion of the county, has on it and on its main tributary, Pawnee Fork, which passes through the central portion of the county and empties into the Arkansas at Larned, a body of bottom land, which makes about 25 per cent of the county. There is also a small tributary of the Arkansas in the northeastern part of the county, and there is Big Coon Creek coming in from the southwest, from Edwards County, emptying into the Arkansas at Garfield. Four miles is the average width of the bottoms; the general surface of the 75 per cent of upland is gently undulating. About 1 per cent of the county is forest, by government survey.

Sandstone of excellent quality abounds in the county; it is specially abundant on Pawnee Fork. Magnesium limestone is found in the northwest part of the county. In Pawnee Township, gypsum is reported; in Larned Township, fire and pottery clay and ochre are found; in Pleasant Valley Township, fire clay and ochre. There are some indications of coal in the high lands between the Pawnee and Arkansas. The county is well supplied with springs, and well water is obtained at an average depth of 15 feet. The leading varieties of timber are ash, box-elder and elm.

GENERAL HISTORY.

In 1872, George B. Cox settled in Larned Township; a colony from Geneva, Ohio, settled in Garfield Township in May, 1873; Adams Peabody in Pleasant Valley Township in 1873; Gallatin Brown in Brown's Grove Township in 1875. Colegrove & Russell established a general store at Larned in June, 1872; E. W. Grover, at Garfield, in 1873. He was postmaster at Garfield, June 14, 1873; George B. Cox, at Larned, in 1872; in 1862 a post-office was established at the military post at Fort Larned. D. A. Bright and Emma Post were married at Larned, September 15, 1873; a daughter was born at Larned February 22, 1873, to Mrs. R. J. Garrison; to Mr. and Mrs. William Cary, at Garfield, in August, 1873. It is said that there are only six persons in Pawnee County who were living there in 1872, to wit: Henry Booth, A. H. Boyd, F. S. Burleson, F. C. Hawkins, T. McCarthy and George Nolan. Messrs. Booth, Boyd and McCarthy were there in 1871; Boyd and Booth in 1869; Mr. Booth in 1864.

A greater number of counties were organized in Kansas in the year 1872, than there had been in any year since 1855. Reno County was organized January 1, 1872; Smith, February 1; Harvey, April 10; Barton, May 16; Russell and Phillips in July; Norton, August 22; Pawnee, November 4; Rooks, November 26; Pawnee being the eighth one of the year, and as then existing, the sixty-fifth in order, in the State. Its special County Commissioners were A. H. Boyd, (Chairman,) George B. Cox and W. A. Russell and D. A. Bright, Special County Clerk. These officers were in power by virtue of a proclamation, issued by Governor James M. Harvey, fixing the date of county organizations, November 4, and Larned as temporary county seat. At this meeting Larned Township was formed, with voting place at Boyd's & Cox's hotel; Pawnee Township voting place, at Booth's sutler store.

June 4, 1873, three municipal townships were established. Pawnee in the northwest; Larned in the southeast; Garfield in the southwest. At the election November 4, 1873, in Larned 38 votes were polled; 26 in Pawnee; 16 in Garfield Township. August 1, 1876, Plum Township was formed; afterwards it was changed to the name of Pleasant Valley. August 7, 1877, Walnut Township was organized. August 27, Brown's Grove Township; in 1878, Pleasant Ridge Township was formed; in 1880, Grant Township; in 1881, Ash Valley and Conkling townships. Pleasant Valley in the southeast, contains something more than four Congressional townships. Brown's Grove in the northwest has four; Grant lying east of it has two; Pawnee east of the south part of Grant has two; Larned and Pleasant Ridge on the east and south, are of Pawnee, are more or less irregular in their shape; Garfield on the south, contains a little more than two Congressional townships; Walnut is Township 20, Range 16; Ash Valley is Township 20, Range 17; Conkling is Township 20, Range 17.

ELECTIONS.

The first general election occurred November 5, 1872; the canvass of the vote showed that A. H. Boyd, George B. Cox and W. S. Patton were elected County Commissioners; George Nolan, County Clerk and Clerk of the District Court; D. A. Bright, Register of Deeds, County Attorney, and Probate Judge; F. C. Hawkins, Sheriff; W. A. Russell, County Treasurer; Henry Booth, County Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The county has never had a court house. Its yearly rentals for offices amount to about $475. May 10, 1873, the County Commissioners contracted with Cox and Boyd at $350 a year for county offices at their hotel.

The record of the votes cast by Pawnee County, at the Presidential elections during the last ten years, is as follows: 1872, Grant, 22, Greeley, 27; 1876, Hayes, 369, Tilden, 49, Cooper, 9; 1880, Garfield, 697, Hancock, 235, Weaver, 17. The following has been the Gubernatorial vote: 1872, Osborne, Republican, 20, Walker, Liberal, 17; 1874, Osborne, Republican, 110, Cusey, Liberal, 64; 1876, Anthony, Republican, 355, Martin, Democrat, 129, Hudson, National 9, Paulsen, Temperance, 1; 1878, St. John, Republican, 647, Goodin, Democrat, 196, Mitchell, National, 30; 1880, St. John, Republican, 689, Ross, Democrat, 243, Vrooman, National, 14; 1882, St. John, Republican, 427, Glick, Democrat, 308, Robinson, National, 3.

The vote on the Prohibition Amendment in 1880, was 604, for; 218, against. On the proposition for a Constitutional Convention, the vote was 406, for; 349, against; the only county in the State giving a majority for it.

Legislative Representation.—The county has been represented in the Senate by M. M. Murdock, of Sedgwick; Henry C. St. Clair, of Sumner; Thomas T. Taylor, of Reno; J. C. Strang, of Pawnee; and Simon Motz, of Ellis. Its Representatives have been Henry Booth, J. M. Miller, William White, Nelson Adams, David H. Waite, John Bennyworth and William Rhea.

Pawnee County is the One Hundred and Sixteenth Representative District by the Apportionment Act of 1881, and a part of the Thirty-fifth Senatorial District. Its Judge of the District Court was Samuel R. Peters when it was a part of the Ninth Judicial District; since it has been in the Sixteenth Judicial District, J. C. Strang is its Judge.

Its list of county officers has been as follows:

Its Coroners have been J. C. Tousley, Gallatin Brown, W. H. Brown, W. H. Hardison, R. A. Trimble, J. M. Cummins.

Henry Booth was Chief Clerk of the Kansas House of Representatives in 1875 and in 1876. Gilbert Bedell was Assistant Postmaster of the House, at the session of 1881; he was Postmaster at the session of 1883.

J. C. Strang resigned his position as State Senator to become Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District.

STATISTICS.

The assessment of property in the county for, 1878, was $992,543; for 1882, it was $1,092,869.23. The railroad assessment for 1880, was $215,775 94; in 1882, it was $298,643.23. Of its taxable lands, 35,101 acres are under cultivation; it has 461 improved town lots; 259,976 acres of its unimproved land are taxable.

In 1882, by the returns of the Township Assessor, the population of the county was 4,823.

In 1874, the first farm was cultivated in the county. There was that year in crops 5 acres of Hungarian, 10 acres of millet, 33 of spring wheat, 45 of oats, 59 of Irish potatoes, 83 of old land corn, 1,217 acres on sod.

Of swine, there was 26; sheep, 110; mules, 29; horses, 138; cattle, 320; in orchards, 61 acres; 3,050 pounds of butter. In 1875 there were 1,561 sheep; 7,095 pounds of butter; 2,660 acres in corn; 748, in winter wheat; 556, in oats; 94 in rye. In 1876 there were 3,415 sheep; 3,131 acres in winter wheat; 239 acres, in barley; 39 acres in sorghum; 16 acres, in broom corn. In 1877, there were 5,208 sheep; 8,908 acres in winter wheat; 5,768 acres in corn; 1,501, in Hungarian and millet; 534 horses. The wool clip from Pawnee County for the year 1881, of 75,940 pounds, and its increase of 13,090 sheep—nearly 100 per cent—from 1881 to 1882, is an earnest of the great development of this interest in the county in the future. The high dry land away from the valleys is especially adapted to this branch of business, and the climate is almost unexcelled. Among the large sheep owners of 1882 were the following: G. H. Wadsworth, 3,300; J. Huddlestone, 3,100; G. Wright, 1,400; Joshua Smith, 1,100; William Crosby, 600; Carter & Lewis, 400; H. A. Smith, 300; E. Rogers, 164; D. T. Sabin, 108.

In 1872 there were 3 organized school districts; in 1875, there were 11, with a valuation of school property of $650; in 1876, there were 15 school districts and 9 school buildings, which with grounds, furniture and apparatus were valued at $10,120; in 1877, there were 22 districts, valuation of school property was $24,886; in 1878, there were 38 districts, valuation of school property $32,103; in 1879, there were 50 school districts; in 1880, 53 school districts, valuation of school property $39,867; in 1882, there were 54 organized school districts. The school building at Larned is a neat brick structure, situated at the north part of the town on quite a commanding eminence. Six teachers are employed; Jonas M. Ross is the principal. The present County Superintendent of Public Instruction, Mrs. Bedell, was Superintendent six years previously as Miss Emma Johnston.

LARNED.

The southeast quarter of Section 32, Township 21, Range 16, was laid out as a town site, December 15, 1873. It was proved up as such before D. A. Bright, the Probate Judge.
